FOLK MUSIC'S TIN PAN BEAT

Jerry Lewis: TV Spoiled Audience Taste; People Take Anything for Free

Montreal, July 2.

Jerry Lewis, here on a one-day personal appearance Saturday (29) to promote his "Nutty Professor" now at the Capitol, proved amid flying sparks at a press conference that he's neither nutty nor a professor.

Lewis met the press, radio and tv reps in his Queen Elizabeth Hotel suite, and after handling with ease more curves than are pitched in a World Series game, impressed his inquisitors with reasons and logical views on a number of points, including:

1. His lack of interest in producing any kind of films "except those that make people happy, because it makes me happy. I can recognize my limitations in the field of comedy, and I didn't take the intellectual approach."

2. American audiences have been "spoiled" by television, accepting inferior entertainment "just because they are getting it for nothing. People should pay

Bar of Faith

During month of July scaffolding occupies the auditorium of Philharmonic Hall as the acoustics are corrected. This has thrown the regular Sunday morning Church of the Truth (New Thought) tenant down onto the so-called Plaza level, also known to many concertgoers as the bar.

During its present conversion into a church, the bar is artfully camouflaged with appropriate floral decor, just as if hymn books were stored there.

Fla. Univ. Band Cancels 140 Tooter Reservation At 'Segregated' Atlanta Hotel

Atlanta, July 2.

Richard W. Bowles, director of the U. of Florida's Gator Band, last week cancelled a reservation for 140 tooters because of Henry Grady Hotel's policy on segregation.

Bowles told Atlanta Chamber of Commerce in a letter that the mass reservation for Sept. 14 weekend of football game between U. of Florida Gators and Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets was canceled because "our reservations there were being accepted only on a segregated basis."

In his letter, band director asked Chamber to send him a list of hotels, motels and inns which do not have a segregation policy.

Opie Shelton, executive v.p. of C. of C., confirmed that he had received the letter and said "a list of the desegregated hotels and motels was mailed to Bowles Wednesday."

(Only last week most of Atlanta's hotels, motels and inns announced that they were planning "partial" desegregation as an opening move leading to complete integration. Henry Grady Hotel, which belongs to State of Georgia, and is leased to an operating company, was not a party to the agreement.)

Emory Crenshaw, manager of Grady said he has a weekend reservation for the Florida U. Band for Sept. 14 and has not received any cancellation to date. Crenshaw added: "The reservation was confirmed by telephone on a segregated basis. We told him our policy. We serve a segregated clientele."

AFTRA Collects $5-Mil. in N.Y.

The N.Y. local of the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists collected $5,091,798.93 in claims against producers and residuals on transcriptions and recorded tv commercials during the period from June 1, '62 to June 1, '63.

The intake, comprised of 36,664 individual payments to members, is roughly $2,000,000 more than the local collected the previous 12 months. Union says the increase is partly due to the "intensified" system of collection.

The figure given by AFTRA does not include original program fees and only about $90,000 in program residuals, those apparently not having been paid on time.

Nixon's Travel Eye On Yank Films' Influences

Madrid, July 2.

Richard M. Nixon said here last week that his study of foreign reaction to American policies and of American prestige abroad would include a close look at the influence of Hollywood films and American entertainment generally on foreign minds.

Nixon felt that no accurate estimate on how the rest of the world sees the U.S.A. could overlook the screen. Nixon is primarily talking to heads of state and foreign ministers about American foreign policy.

Asked to comment on U.S. film production abroad, Nixon said he could understand how tax and cost factors contribute to this trend. What came as a surprise was the production programming of big budget projects such as "The Fall of the Roman Empire." "If 'Cleopatra' can make it," he said, 'Fall of the Roman Empire' can make it, too." Nixon thought, "Even without Richard Burton and that girl."

MASS MARKET YENS NEW SONGS

By MIKE GROSS

The current spillover of folk music into the pop field is creating a new folk literature. Having virtually tapped the bottom of the folk repertoire barrel, many of the folksters are now writing original material that's folk-styled but based on contemporary ideas.

The song accents now are more on entertainment values than on ethnic sources. Show biz's influence on the folksters, and vice versa, has disturbed the purists who are pointing to commercialism as the corruptor of an art form. But the big demand for the folk performers in virtually all areas of show biz (records, concerts, college dates, tv, pix) is stimulating a new folk form that can appeal to a mass audience.

Whether the new form is folk or not doesn't militate against the impact this new material is having on the music business. Many tradesters agree that these "original folk songs" have a truth and sincerity that win mass audience support. And on the college level, especially, the trend appears to be for songs that are stimulating and pertinent to the times. The collegi-

Pa. Schools Axe Blackface Shows On NAACP Beef

Philadelphia, July 2.

Minstrel shows without the blackface will be the new order in Pennsylvania schools. The old-style "Bones and Sambo" frolics have been officially frowned on by Charles H. Boehm, state superintendent of public instruction, following a complaint that a minstrel show was being rehearsed in a suburban Montgomery County school.

Move was triggered by a protest from the Norristown Chapter of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, which complained that a minstrel show was being rehearsed at the Schwenksville Union High School. Boehm urged local school officials to ban the minstrel or other blackface-type shows and to refrain from allowing use of public buildings for entertainments of this variety. State law doesn't give him the authority to ban such shows, Boehm told the NAACP.

The action was taken on a recommendation by the State Human Relations Commission that "it would help reduce the amount of distorted information Pennsyl-

Broadcasters Want Cig Cos. to Filter Their More Controversial Ad Pitches

Washington, July 2.

Broadcasters hope that the cigaret industry will filter out ad messages in radio and tv which have become controversial since the cigaret-cancer issue has arisen. Robert Swezey, chairman of the Code Authority of the National Assn. of Broadcasters, is understood to have reported to the NAB board of directors meet here of informal meetings he has held with some of the cigaret companies.

According to reports of Swezey's confabs, the hope of broadcasters is that the cigaret industry itself will establish new guidelines for their tv commercials. (Cigaret companies spend over a $100,000,000 in tv alone.) Under attack is the use of sports and other personalities, endorsing a particular brand of cigarets. Appeal of some commercials is to youngsters to take up the cigaret habit as a symbol of virility. There are other commercials, too, which have been subject to a barrage of criticism.

It's understood that the tobacco industry here, like the cigaret companies in Canada and the United Kingdom, is in a turmoil, with some companies seeking a total reassessment of their ad campaigns, with others more reluctant to give up selling approaches which have proven effective, in the face of the cigaret-cancer controversey.

Report of the U. S. Surgeon General on the cigaret-cancer controversey, which had been expected this summer, is now seen delayed until late this year.

NAB prexy LeRoy Collins, in the face of bitter opposition among broadcasters, first publicly raised

Rabbi-Turned-Show Biz

Rabbi - author - playwright Herbert Tarr, whose first novel, "The Conversion of Chaplain Cohen," was bought by Samuel G. Engel for independent filming, will also have his first play, "The New Frontier," produced on Broadway next spring. It is also under indie sponsorship.

Rabbi Cohen who, incidentally, has decided to leave the pulpit (at least for the time being) in order to devote himself dominantly to authoring, heads for Hollywood this week to write the screenplay of his "Chaplain Cohen" best-seller, published by Bernard Geis (Random House).

Need for Global Show Biz Union

Herman Kenin, president of the American Federation of Musicians, planed to Brussels last Wednesday (26) for four days of discussions under the aegis of the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions. The principal subject for Kenin and the officers of the European entertainment unions meeting there will be Telstar.

Advances in the technology of instantaneous broadcast across international boundaries emphasize the need for a world secretariat under ICFTU embracing all free-world entertainment unions, Kenin said. The AFM prez launched this project two years ago in Europe and more recently has been active in the creation of such an entertainment secretariat for South and Central America, now headquartered in Mexico City.

'Le Western' Steakhouse On Paris' Champs-Elysees

Paris, Jan. 2.

Restaurant Associates, the New York class eatery chain, which already owns Devonne-les-Bains, a casino resort in southwest France, is invading the grand boulevards of Paris with an American steakhouse in the new Time-Life Bldg., on the Rondpoint, off the Champs-Elysees. It's sole deference to the Gallic environs will be the billing for the steak joint—Le Western. Opens in late fall.

RA has two restaurants in New York's Time-Life Bldg., in Rockefeller Center—the Tower Suite on top and La Fonda del Sol, Latin American class eatery on the street floor.

Argentine Anti-Semitism; One Scene Snipped From Film Shown in Berlin

Berlin, July 2.

At the request of festival director Alfred Bauer, Leopoldo Torre Nilsson deleted a scene from his Argentinian film, "The Roof Garden," which illustrated the trend towards anti-Semitism, recently rumored in Buenos Aires.

The eliminated scene, which ran for about two-and-half-minutes, showed a group of neo-Fascist youths urinating on a picnic luncheon prepared by a party of Jews. Bauer felt that it would be an error of judgment and taste for such a scene to be shown in Berlin, and the director readily agreed to the cut.

Torre Nilsson told VARIETY that the last two years had seen a resurgence of fascism and anti-semitism in the Argentine, and was due, he felt, to the current economic crisis. Taking a leaf out of the Nazis book, the local Fascists blame the Jews for their present difficulties.

N.Y. Hilton Preem Puts $50,000,000 Icing on Gotham's Phenom Hotel Boom

Series of festivities celebrating the opening of the New York Hilton at Rockefeller Center—the official billing of this, the 60th link in the international chain—climaxes the biggest hotel-building boom New York has had in 30 years. It provided four new hotels and a spate of in-town and suburban motels, totaling nearly 5,000 rooms in midtown Manhattan alone.

Latest unit in the Hilton chain, on the heels of Conrad N. Hilton debuting new hostelries this year in London, Amsterdam, Rome, Athens, Tokyo and Hong Kong, has 2,153 rooms, the largest in Manhattan, and its 5,000-capacity grand ballroom (capable of sitting 3,000 at tables), exceeds both the grand ballrooms of the companion Waldorf-Astoria (Hilton's flagship), Astor, Commodore and Americana hotels, in capacity. It is five stories less than the nearby 50-story Americana Hotel (Loew's-Tisch) but has some 300 more rooms. Both cost about the same to build —$50,000,000.

Inevitably the comparison between the two practically across 53rd St. hostelries is in order and

La Dietrich's $6,250 Pay At German Fest Spins Up Sour Slugfest Notes

Baden-Baden, July 2.

A slugging ended the Baden-Baden Record Festival here, as a singer and an agent exchanged blows over the salary paid to Marlene Dietrich for her guest participation in the hit music fest.

Singer Gerhard Wendland and Miss Dietrich's manager, Werner Plack, planted a couple of punches on each other that were not part of the scheduled performance. The fisticuffs allegedly followed an argument that all the participants in the fest received a flat fee of $250 for singing—while Miss Dietrich earned $6,250 for her two numbers, money for all coming from the German TV network.

The German Hit Festival, which also was carried on the German television net, was won by 16-year-old Danish singer Gitte with her tune, "I Want a Cowboy for a Husband."

Jimmy Savo Art Centre

Rome, July 2.

The Jimmy Savo Art Centre, named after the late American entertainer and comedian, will be opened to visitors July 4-28. Fifty works by U.S. and foreign painters and sculptors will be on display.

The foundation is a non-profit setup run by Savo's widow, Nina. Peggy Wood of ANTA and Lloyd Goodrich of New York's Whitney Museum are advisors.

ERIC JOHNSTON VERY ILL; AWAIT DECISION

Washington, July 2.

Eric Johnston, Motion Picture Assn. prexy, is gravely ill in Doctor's Hospital here. He was admitted June 17 for what was described as "a complete physical examination." His condition is considered to be very serious, although the ailment has not been diagnosed yet.

Later: Johnston has been moved to his home.

'Little Black Book' Gag On Steve Allen's Show Leads to 200G Law Suit

Los Angeles, July 2.

Invasion-of-privacy suit demanding $200,000 damages has been filed by actress Eva Norde in Superior Court against Steve Allen for allegedly using her name, address and unlisted telephone number on his tv program. Named as defendants with comedian were Meadowlane Enterprises Inc., Paramount Television, Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. Productions, Mel Brooks and Don Alberta.

Actress in complaint stated that when Allen asked if anybody in the tv audience had a "little black book," Alberta allegedly told Allen he would give him the phone number of one of his "swinging girl friends." This, asserted actress, caused her much embarrassment and she had been forced to change her phone exchange, contending she consequently had lost a number of jobs.

JFK'S TOURING STYLE A HIT IN GERMANY

Frankfurt, July 2.

Curt Jurgens and Horst Buchholz, and even top American idol Rock Hudson have been eclipsed by a new favorite in West Germany—President John F. Kennedy. The three-day "Kennedy Spectacular" was a show to be remembered.

Appearance of the President on the international television screens, carried by Eurovision into 8,000,000 homes throughout the land, and his personals in Hanau, Frankfurt, Wiesbaden and Berlin captivated the West Germans more so than any other modern history hero in any field.

Kennedy's apparently off-the-cuff friendly and humorous comments, plus the occasional use of a German word or phrase, added up to a wow of a crowd pleaser.

Local tv proved a click supplement to Eurovision. West Ger-

Managing Director Holiday House, Pittsburgh, Pa., says:

"Because of the superb business of PAUL ANKA previously, I repeated him last week and to my complete gratification PAUL ANKA was again a blockbuster. Electric, magnetizing performances greeted with the sensational acclaim of both young and old. But—and most important-capacity business at all shows."

Berlin Tunefilm For Power of A 'West Side Story'

Hollywood, July 2.

MGM producer Arthur Freed has his sights on making the upcoming Irving Berlin filmusical "another 'West Side Story'" (which may be the reason he signed Arthur Laurents at a reported $250,000 fee, to write the script) but plans to further insure it with an international cast.

Besides relative newcomers Robert Goulet, Ann-Margret and kindred names, Freed (and Berlin), along with director Vincent Minelli plan to stud the cast with marquee names of the calibre of Sophia Loren, plus others with definitive local musical appeal. This is still in the planning stage, as the script is being authored.

"West Side Story" broke down the international barriers for Yank-made filmusicals, as is attested by the smash grosses around the world. This is in face of how films such as "King and I," for example, were stripped of their soundtracks and played "straight" in some situations. Freed and Metro feel that, with Berlin's cavalcade of international hits—evergreens overseas as in the U.S.—"Say It With Music" can achieve the same worldwide b.o. appeal.

In effect, this is a must in light of the fancy fees being paid Berlin and the top-cost production investiture.

GOLDWYN'S HARDY REPEAT

'Wuthering Heights' Big in 3d Paris Dating

Hollywood, July 2.

"Wuthering Heights," Samuel Goldwyn's 1939 release co-starring Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon, got off to an even better start on its recent third reissue in Paris than it did the second time around when it ran for a year, producer reports.

Pic opened simultaneously at three houses June 14 and in its initial three-days played to 30,710 paid admissions.

'Runaway' Prod.?

Lloyd Shearer of Parade, in London recently to do a story on Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, polled 100 passengers at London Airport with this question: "What do you think will happen to Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton?"

Replied one man, a bookie, "On the basis of his past performances which I've studied carefully, I'm prepared to give 7 to 5 that he won't marry her. When it comes to fillies, Burton rarely finishes the race. But man! What a sprinter at the start!"

THE AGVA MESS

There was rancor in the ranks during the Equity strike in 1919 when brother-actor was pitted against contrary-minded colleague. Much dirty linen then was washed in public. Old friends fell out. A deity of the stage, George M. Cohan, became for a time a fallen idol because he thought "unionization" was beneath an artist.

So troubles of a "fraternal" kind are not new in talent unions. Even further back were the organizational pains of The White Rats (with its George Fuller Golden and Henry Mountford). Actually, criminal corruption showed itself in Hollywood with abject knuckling-under by show business tycoons to the "muscle" of Willie Bioff and George Browne and their Chicago hoodlums in the IATSE mess of the 1930s.

Along the way there was the history of Edward F. Albee and his "company union," the NVA, which had as virtue, at least, a nice-Nellie guarantee of a "decent burial," an insurance policy and the like, providing the National Vaudeville Artists' membership never forgot that laconic NVA intratrade slogan—"Never Vex Albee."

Also, under the paternalism of the B. F. Keith-Ed Albee regimes there existed such sturdy values as (a) "protection" of vaudeville material and (b) regulation of standards in "good taste" so that the Keith-Albee "family" clientele (and also included the Orpheum and other circuits) were spared indigo "humor."

In the heyday of vaudeville there was respect for show business itself. The good repute of the medium with the public was a prime anxiety. "Sick" comics of that era were administered strong medicine lest they infect the industry. Backstage crews of that period cheered the acts that made it on merit, joined in the scandalized reaction to dubious practice.

If, perchance, some upstart comic helped himself to a special bit of business or comedy patter which mayhaps a Frank Fay first introduced, that back-of-the-scenes personnel had an undeniable way of getting the message across to the gag pilferer—or suddenly cues could go awry or even a sandbag could fall "accidentally" too close for comfort.

And then came the American Guild of Variety Artists. A basic fault was figurehead "presidents" who barely telephoned their approval in—selected chiefly for their name-power and preoccupation. The resultant evolution of sloth and "we-boy" operations meant that virtually all the sound traditions of vaudeville went out the window.

This publication frequently reported and frankly deplored the practices of AGVA. AGVA, in turn, cried "persecution." But, if anything, disclosures have since established that AGVA was worse than represented. High among its sins was taking dues for no-talent dames whose livelihood came from lightly-distinguished hustling.

If the tarts and prosties and B-girls are euphemistically called "hostesses," it fools but nobody. But with AGVA it was the payoff alone that ruled no matter that some of the girls, solicited in Canada, found themselves captives of Cicero brothels, and that B-girls and "exotics" and out-and-out clip-and-"roll" joints became "organized" under AGVA regulations so long as there were union dues to match.

The fate of the American Guild of Variety Artists can only depend on a radical housecleaning. However, that clarion call was sounded months ago and even as of last week Senator McClellan's subcommittee found it radically wanting, in fact and in principle.

Clip-strip joints and funny places may seem but a remote form of "entertainment" but to call any of it "show business" is to insult the good name of amusements. The continued scandal of AGVA, the continued stall on reform, the visible evidence of a soft-touch protectivism, all demand, as has long been true, a cleansing.

TRADING-EVEN WITH RUSSIANS

Features Made Directly for TV, At $500,000 Each, Carry Questions; Trade Wonders About U Role for NBC

Universal Pictures itself has been keeping mum as to the plan whereby it will supposedly make a series of two-hour color feature films for NBC web slotting. Only information on the idea has been from the network. Original multi-pic plan now appears to have narrowed to one trial ballon film in any case.

Yet the fact remains that although U hasn't said yes on the story it also hasn't said no.

Informed sources emphasize that the NBC deal is with MCA and not specifically with Universal. That could imply plan may be much more a production scheme involving Revue than U. Universal's name builds up the deal for the web and its affiliates, because of U.'s recent years' prestige at b.o.

Vidfilm production costs as opposed to feature film production costs, are of course cheaper. While it is possible for U to turn out a $500,000 budget pix, it is considerably easier for Revue to do it because, since the product will be aimed at the home tube, it needn't be as elaborate and expensively-mounted as a theatrical feature aimed at the auditorium screens. Either can handle color.

From the talent angle, it will be interesting to see, trade pundits suggest, just which directors, stars and similar talent Universal would be able to sell on made-direct-for-video features. They have several contract players to be sure but they're not stars yet and, besides, most of 'em came from Revue Productions in the first place.

In this era of non-exclusivity of stars with much control in the hands of the creative rather than the business side, Universal might find it difficult to convince a film star of the value of making a film for tv, although some do make guest appearances on vidseries.

How much money could a big name actor or director be paid to work a film aimed for home first-run? With budgets of $500,000 most of the really bigtimers are automatically excluded unless pretty fancy residual deals could be worked out, its believed.

Universal has a rather full schedule of theatrical features. With Revue to handle the tv for MCA, U has until now been free to concentrate solely on theatricals. The one area in which U could readily come into the NBC scheme is in its New Horizons plan which was heralded as a feature production arm to develop new creative talent

Dancing Outbids Pix

Toronto, July 2.

Christie Theatre, three-year-old art house here, will soon be a dansapation palace. Operator Bennet Fode says owners asked a 50% rent hike which he couldn't afford. Refloored and refurbished, it's to become the Maple Leaf Ballroom, run by John Gilligan, who manages New Windsor Hotel and runs a Saturday-night dance at Palladium Hall.

Fode, who runs New Yorker Theatre here (also art) and Roxy Theatres in suburban West Hill and in Cornwall, Ont. (and is half-owner of Tempo Films, a distrib), is seeking a new house to replace the Christie.

See Radio Films In Spain Taking Over From Fox

Madrid, July 2.

What started out to be a close association between 20th-Fox of Spain and Radio Films, with the shelving of veteran manager Pedro Bistagne and his replacement by former Rank manager Ralph Alexander, is gradually assuming the form of a sale of Fox assets in this country to Radio chiefs Jose Garcia Ramos and his partner Rene Beja.

Alexander is reported playing the role of Fox representative in a supervisory capacity with the right

SHOWMANSHIP IN BOTH PLACES

By EDDIE KALISH

Communism or capitalism, Russia or America, theatrical problems for film exhibitors and distributors are much the same. It appears that in the USSR as in the USA television is a plague on exhibs and a headache for distribs.

If anything, the problem could be more acute in Russia than in the States, according to Sig Shore, a Yank film importer who has brought over a few Soviet features, currently "My Name Is Ivan," which opened Thursday (27) at the Murray Hill Theatre, N.Y. He notes that features go to Russian tv about six months after they begin theatrical playoff and that, with climatic conditions what they are much of the year, the home tube is proving a very strong combatant to boxoffice health.

This factor has stirred a stronger interest on the part of Russian showmen to export their product because they are looking for more ways to get negative costs back. Meanwhile the cinematic idiom is changing. Says Shore, "Up until the last few years they worked in the tradition of the Moscow Art Theatre with they're films. They had beauty but the acting was very stylized, especially for U.S. audiences. But the Cinema Institute has provided ways within the past few years for young film makers to move to easier techniques."

Shore reports considerable freedom given picturemakers in Russia today. This improves exportability of more of their features. Pressures, including tv, force the production of big specs in 70m and such.

Attendance is off in Russia, he reports. Russians turn out about 100 features a year, many of which are suitable for export. Britain improts more Soviet films than the U.S. France, Italy and Germany

Easterners Dubious on Natl. Genl. Making Features, Recall Earlier Pledges of Product That Flopped

Waited Too Long to Sue

Los Angeles, July 2.

Yvette Mimieux's $50,000 libel suit against Fawcett Publications Inc., over a picture which appeared in company's July, 1961, issue of Photography Handbook, has been dismissed on grounds she filed suit more than a year after publication of pic and thus exceeded the one-year statute of limitations.

Actress claimed photograph was falsely identified as her's, and allegedly depicted her as 'scantily clad" and "indecently exposed."

Film Aid Plan, Eady Style, In West Germany

Bonn, July 2.

Germany's production industry appears to be on the threshold of Film Aid. Draft legislation, loosely patterned on the British Eady plan, has already gone before the Bundestag here in Bonn, and has now been referred to the Cultural Affairs Committee for detailed examination.

Though investigations are likely to continue during the summer months, it is not expected that further positive action can be taken until the Bundestag is in full session again after the recess, either at the end of September or early October.

Meantime, individual sections of National General Corp. was advised June 25 by the U. S. District Court, of New York that it has been granted approval to engage in production and distribution of motion pictures in addition to exhibition.

Decision, handed down by Federal Judge Edmond G. Palmieri, came after Justice Dept. investigation of National's bid for film production and distribution.

In Los Angeles National prexy Eugene V. Klein termed the court action "an historic breakthrough for the entire motion picture industry at a time when it is laboring under the hardship of a shortage of product."

Legal maneuver by National General to segue into production and distribution has the New York skeptics in the picture business chanting a familiar refrain. Theatremen talk a great deal about making product, and some have accomplished a little—but very little.

As for Nat'l-Gen., the attitude among many is one of wait and see. Theatremen who claim to be starving for heavyweight productions are not rushing in with shouts of Hallelujah! Nat'l-Gen., as headed by Eugene Klein, has got to prove itself. Meanwhile, Klein and his exec confederates are reticent about any specific program.

There's no wave of glee among numerous exhibs because they say they're aware of what's happened in past and what is not happening currently. The latter reference is to Ace Films, in existence over two years, loaded with money, but yet to go anyplace in the way of achieving its objective of fostering more films for all exhibition.

RKO Theatres, Loew's, Stanley Warner and United Paramount each contributed $400,000 to the Ace bankroll. Indie exhibitors ante-ed up more than another $1,000,000. The only financing Ace has done so far was to provide a loan to Allied Artists which in turn put the money into Samuel Bronston product which would have been made anyway.

This is in contrast with Entertainment Corp. of America, which had a short and sad life. But quick casualty that it was, ECA, as headed by Max Youngstein, Jerry Pickman and Charles Simonelli, nonetheless caused three pictures to be made. Three properties, "Fail-Safe," "Third Secret" and "Winston Affair," were taken over by other companies but it was ECA which developed them and got them started toward actual production.

It appears to observers that ECA, without adequate capital, accomplished something substantial, while Ace, which is well-heeled, hardly has been heard from.

A few years ago United Paramount embarked on a production program that appeared promising at the outset. But then only four minor-league pictures were made and project production was dropped.

The United Paramount story is an example of the history of exhibitors in production. Little has come of it so far in the way of meaningful pictures. Thus the wait-and-see about Nat'l-Gen.

Full Year of UA 'Premiere Showcasing' Auspices Sanguine Despite Detractors

A birthday went un-noticed last week by the offspring's parents. Last Thursday (27) marked the first birthday of United Artists' "Premiere Showcase" New York distribution plan, a method that has stirred considerable trade reaction since its inception, but the event passed without a word from the company. And that's unusual for the UA publicity mill which is a verbose one on most occasions.

UA has exhibited 15 features via the showcase route in the past year and 20th Century-Fox has also borrowed the plan from time to time. By coincidence, it was a Bob Hope picture which started the plan off in "Road to Hong Kong" and it is a Bob Hope pic which is leading off the second year with "Call Me Bwana." Of the 15 selections to play the plan, "Birdman of Alcatraz" is the acknowledged top grosser with the recently-exhibited "Dr. No" coming in for a close second.

But the success of the plan has been uneven and sometimes the selection of the pix for saturation drew criticism. As far as the operation itself is concerned, it has two basic problems which decrease its effectiveness as a super saturation method and these are the facts that the theatres used in the plot are often not best around and, perhaps more significantly, the showcase system does not include a break on the circuits as does Universal's "Perimeter Plan," for example.

The showcase plan came up somewhat surprisingly as a topic for brief discussion and rapping at the Paramount stockholders meeting and, of course, was discussed at some length during the course of the UA holders gathering recently. At the latter session, both board chairman Robert S. Benjamin and prez Arthur B. Krim heaped praise on the plan in their introductory comments to the gathering and indicated satisfaction with its performance to date and the intention of continuing the pattern in the future. As far as the choice of theatres in the plan itself, it was admitted that there are better ones around in some cases but that they simply aren't available and, as far as the circuits go, their bosses were said to have made "a business judgment" to skip showcase.

As to why no birthday celebration, it's understood that there has been some disagreement among the UA exec ranks as to how to treat the event which apparently didn't get resolved. Some execs favored a "let's just let it go by silently" idea while others favored a publicized approach. Although showcase has shown results with some pix and in some locations, particularly a couple on Long Island, it has still remained a matter of industry chatter. The plan has also been the recipient of some awards too, having received citations from N.Y. City, Nassau County, the Boro of the Bronx and various shopping centers.

Pix which have played the plan include "Hong Kong," "Birdman," "Follow That Dream," "Judgment at Nuremberg," 'Miracle Worker," "Pressure Point," "Manchurian Candidate," "Two for the Seesaw," "Taras Bulba," "Child Is Waiting," "Five Miles to Midnight," "Love Is a Ball," "I Could Go On Singing," "Dr. No" and now "Bwana."

Figured as probable showcase entries within the next few months are "The Great Escape," "Toys In the Attic," "Stolen Hours," "The Caretakers," "Johnny Cool," "McLintock," "Kings of the Sun," "From Russia With Love" and others.

Regardless of whether or not the plan has been as successful as visualized, the premiere showcase idea did have its effect on distribution thinking in metropolitan areas like New York. UA is planning to put the idea into effect in other large cities. And the mere defection from a completely separated first run engagement followed by multiples plan started lots of folks, distribs and exhibs alike, to thinking—and watching. The showcase plan works in a spread of about 75 houses, followed by a cleanup break, sans circuits.

It's a saturation plan that makes first run houses out of many theatres simultaneously and, except for holdovers, is a quick kill system if the picture is right for this type of booking. Therein UA has drawn some comment from observers, mostly of the Monday morning quarterback variety, who point to pix like "Miracle Worker," "Pressure Point," "Child Is Waiting" and others as possibly faring better under a slower release pattern where the films could be allowed to build instead of hit and run.

In any case, UA is satisfied and is spreading the idea to other markets. It was a change that opened some industry eyes and has been closely watched in these times of changing exhibition and distribution patterns. But nobody at UA seems to want to light any candles for it either.

AMUSEMENTS ALONE FOR SIR PHILIP WARTER

London, July 2.

Sir Philip Warter, chairman of Associated British Cinemas, said "this company will stick to things we understand, which is entertaining the public. Warter was speaking at the annual ABC National Publicity Contest Awards lunch. He stated that the company had over $4,000,000 invested in bowling, was going to continue with its interest in Bingo, would break into the skating side of showbiz and also hinted that something new would crop up soon that was "very exciting."

But he made it clear that ABC's first interest was in presenting good films and promoting them with ideas and energy. Said Warter: "ABC is going to build up, despite the extremely difficult falling off in attendances. There is no need to panic. Many companies have got into difficulties by overdoing diversification." He implied, however, that ABC was very mindful of television. "Carefully, we have quite deliberately reinvested in program making, studios and equipment to build up a business that will impress the authorities who have to arrange for the next 12 years of television."

Twentieth-Fox reports a record rental gross of $3,520,961 for six days, this being the period which ended Monday (1).

Product includes "Longest Day" in 321 theatres on general release and "Cleopatra" in 39 roadshow engagements.

First Assistant's Day Rate Up $5 To $55 As Cameramen Settle With Producers

In a switch from custom, a new labor-production contract involving two major parties was negotiated and set last week before the old one had even run out. The Film Producers Assn. and International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees cameramen Local 644 came to terms on a new pact which went into effect last Monday (1) and gives the cameramen certain wage scale increases.

The union's main aim in the negotiations had been to up the financial standing of the first assistant cameramen and it was successful in gaining a 10% increase in their daily rate, upping the scale from $50 per day to $55. The cameramen themselves got a 6% increase raising to $131 the daily rate for theatrical moving picture cameramen and to $97.50 the rate for commercial movie cameramen. Stillmen also got a 6% increase to $73 a day. Second assistants got no increase over their $42.

Many of the 644 members aren't particularly affected by the scale increases in that several command pay over scale in any case. But for the assistants it does represent a move upward. The union also got a $1 a day raise in pension payments and operators and similar members obtained the 6% hike. In the case of the operators it raised the scale to $68.90.

The FPA got from the union provision for earlier starting time on location shooting and some concessions regarding government film work. The FPA no longer is obliged to pay for layover time which takes place on a Sunday either.

New pact expires Dec. 31, 1965 and is in line with the proposed plan put forth by the East Coast Motion Picture Council, a group of IA film locals, to seek a common expiration date for union pacts. The date being aimed at as a sort of trial engagement is this same one set between 644 and the FPA.

N.Y. READYING FOR FEST

Philharmonic For New, Museum For Look-Backs

New York Film Festival, a first, will be divided between 20 new features and selected shorts showing at Philharmonic Hall and 10 retrospectives at the Museum of Modern Art. At Philharmonic there will be an unreeling at 6:30, another at 9:15, each different. Dates for the festival are Sept. 10-19.

"The Fiances," an Italian film, has been set for Philharmonic. It was directed by Ermanno Olmi. The 1947 work of Luchino Visconti, "La Terra Trema," goes to the Museum.

British Film Institute and the Independent Film Importers & Distributors of America are cooperating bodies with Lincoln Center and the Museum.

DOWN TO 'HARD CORE' SEZ REGENTS CHIEF

Albany, July 2.

N.Y. State Regents Chancellor Edgar W. Couper stated here that U.S. Supreme Court decisions have narrowed down "to obscenity, to hard core pornography" the grounds upon which a state censorship panel is permitted to ban a motion pirture.

Addressing a press conference following the Regents monthly meeting here Friday (28), Couper said Regents are forced to okay some pictures by these court orders, and otherwise this project would be rejected.

Regents upheld a Department of Motion Picture Division's decision withholding approval of the Danish feature, "A Stranger Knocks," unless certain cuts are made.

Monroe Greenthal Dies At 56; Vivid Advertising Personage of Film Biz

Monroe William Greenthal, 56, founder of the advertising agency bearing his name and a veteran film industry advertising-publicity-promotion executive, died in White Plains (N.Y.) Hospital on Saturday (29) of a heart attack. Of robust stature, a lifetime athlete, he had no history of cardiac trouble when he keeled over Tuesday (25), while playing golf at the Metropole Country Club, near White Plains, he was taken to the hospital.

Greenthal was ad-pub-exploitation head of United Artists, later United World Productions (Universal International affiliate) and when he formed his own agency, following discharge from the war with the rank of lieutenant colonel, he numbered among his accounts UA, Columbia Pictures, UI, RKO Theatres and the "Premiere Showcase" theatres. He was a director and a member of the finance committee of the recently formed Madison Life Insurance Co., of New York and also served as chairman of the advertising division of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

He was chairman of the advertising division of the War Aetivities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry and organized shipment of thousand of 16m films to military posts all over the globe.

When he was commissioned a major in 1943 he served as chief of the Army's Motion Picture branch in Washington and upon his discharge Lieut. Col. Greenthal was cited by Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau and Under Secretary of War Patterson for his wartime service.

Greenthal played varsity baseball on the same Columbia Univ. team with the late Lou Gehrig and played golf in the low 70s.

Until he married Ruth Bartson Davey, Greenthal was intratrade for his gregariousness. He was a moving spirit in weekend sports attendance, organizing film industry pals for the games, with hoopla before and after. As soon as he married he "settled down" and raised a family of four; Stanley, now 14; William, 13; David, 10; Paula, 7.

Greenthal was a vital raconteur, many of his reminiscenses dating back to his family's clothing business on the lower east side of Manhattan. Purchases were invariably paid for in grubby $1, $2 and $5 bills, with only occasional 10s and 20s. After the Saturday night sales volume, these bills had to be unraveled, stacked in rows, and put in those oblong suitboxes that went with the merchandise sold. They had to be carefully stashed away for safekeeping until the bank opening Monday morning—and also to make sure the porter didn't throw out these old suitboxes, as had happened with the entire weekend's sales.

Greenthal was a sort of self-appointed d'Artagnan vis-a-vis rude New York cabdrivers. Of normally soft-spoken mien and manner, he was all muscle and there were memorable occasions, upon return from a weekend footbal game or en route to a theatre, when Greenthal would give some of these jehus their comeuppance. He had a rather simple technique—no fisticuffs, but he could reach into the cabdriver's caboose, lift him by his lapels, and thus convey the message that henceforth he had better mind his manners, zip his lip, follow the passenger's instructions, stop being a wiseguy, or whatever the circumstances.

A funeral service was held Monday (1) at Campbell's.

Trade Soars With Heat; 'Cleo' New Champ, 'West' 2d, 'Horn' 3d, 'Irma' 4th; 'Birdie,' 'Arabia' Next

Despite record heat in many key cities covered by VARIETY—this stanza, some strong screen fare is boosting biz generally across the nation. In fact, the top four grossers currently likely will top the $1,500,000, with nearly half of that coming from "Cleopatra."

"Cleopatra" (20th) (2d wk) is new champion by a hefty margin, this widely-publicized opus racking up $725,000 gross in the 17 keys where playing currently. "How West Was Won" (MGM) (19th wk) is finishing second after many weeks in top position. Encouragingly enough for "West" is the fact that in few cities did "Cleo" seem to cut in deeply on its regular trade.

"Come Blow Your Horn" (Par) (4th wk) is moving up to third spot although in only six key cities. "Irma La Douce" (UA) (4th wk), third a week ago, is finishing fourth.

Bye Bye Birdie" (Col) (2d wk) will capture fifth position. "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) (25th wk) is taking sixth money. "Call Me Bwana" (UA) (4th wk) is winding up seventh.

"L-Shaped Room," another from Columbia, is taking eighth spot, the first week out to any extent. "Spencer's Mountain" (WB) (2d wk) is taking ninth place. "Donovan's Reef" (Par), fairly new, is finishing 10th.

"Savage Sam" (BV) (2d wk) is taking 11th position while "Nutty Professor" (Par) (3d wk) rounds out the Top 12 pix. "55 Days at Peking" (AA), long high on the list; and "Mondo Cane" (Times), in a like category, are the runner-up films.

In addition to those fresh entries which had enough playdates to figure in the race for position, two or three others show promise. "PT 109" (WB), strong in N.Y., shapes stout in Boston and good in Detroit. "Gathering of Eagles" (U) looms okay in Balto, great in Chi, lusty in Portland and fair in St. Louis.

"Felini's 8½" (Embassy) hit a wow figure opening week daydating two N.Y. houses. "Ticklish Affair" (MGM), another newie, is rated hep in Chi, fair in Philly and okay in Detroit.

"Sindbad" (MGM) looks torrid currently in L.A. "Wrong Arm of Law" (Cont) still is doing handsomely in four keys.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

Bob Weitman First Metro Studio Chief With Status In Parent Organization

Hollywood, July 2.

The election of Robert M. Weitman to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer board of directors last Tuesday (25) represents the first time in the company's long history that its studio chief also has been a board member.

The late Louis B. Mayer, a founder of the company, did hold a corporate title until about the last five years of his association when he became first vicepresident. The parent then was Loew's Inc. Dore Schary became a veepee upon succeeding Mayer and this title in turn went to Sol C. Siegel. Weitman, in taking over from Siegel, also became veepee of production and, of course, retains that rating in addition to his new board of directors spot.

Legion 'B'-Rates 3 From U, Par, WB

Universal, Paramount and Warners this week were given the back-of-the-hand by the National Legion of Decency, which placed one picture from each company in its "B" category—meaning morally objectionable in part for all.

Catholic reviewing organization branded U's "For Love or Money" as "contrived comedy (wherein) promiscuity and premarital sexual experience are normal." Complaint against Par's "Wives and Lovers" is that "the dialogue is more risque than is necessary and certain situations are coarsely suggestive." WB's "Wall of Noise" was rapped because "low moral tone pervades the development of this film."

'IGUANA' TO 7 ARTS —HUSTON DIRECTING

Tennessee Williams' "Night of the Iguana" will be filmed by Seven Arts Productions starring Richard Burton, Ava Gardner and Deborah Kerr. Pic will be directed by John Huston and produced by Ray Stark, the latter's first since "World of Suzie Wong."

Huston will begin lensing in mid-September on location in Mexico at Puerto Vallerata, near Guadalajara. Williams' Broadway drama is currently being adapted for the filmization by the playwright, Huston and Anthony Veiller. Burton, Miss Gardner and Miss Kerr will play the roles created on stage by Patrick O'Neal, Margaret Leighton and Bette Davis, respectively.

"Iguana" copped the N. Y. Drama Critics Circle Award as best American play of the 1961-62 season.

Foster, Also Fier, In Columbia Pic Exit

Harry Foster is exiting as eastern production manager of Columbia Pictures after a 37-year association, during which time he produced and directed 300 shorts, along with some features and television shows. He goes on a consultant basis.

Disclosure of Foster's bowout, which becomes effective at the end of July, follows by a few days the departure of Jack Fier as Col's production manager on the Coast.

Unter Der Fest

Berlin, July 21.

Though he has visited the city several times in the past, Herman Cohen is paying his first visit to a Berlin festival. He is showing his latest Allied Artists release, "Black Zoo," which he filmed in Panavision and color, to local distribs. He planed back to London on Monday (1) and will stay a fortnight before returning home to Hollywood to prep a new picture skedded to start in the fall . . . Former U.S. ambassador to the Philippines Myron C. Cowen, was the official delegate from Washington . . . George Stevens, Jr. came in for the final weekend, and will be going straight on to the Moscow fest . . . Less activity on the social front here compared with past years. The Argentinians started the ball rolling with a midnight shindig at the American Officers Club after the screening of "The Roof Garden," and the Japanese gave an evening cocktailery at the Hilton preceding the showing of their official contender, but the American Wild West midnight supper party at the Hilton last Sunday (30) remains the social highlight . . . Incidentally, there's keen bidding for the Torre Nilsson film, and one U.S. major is reported to be dickering for the German-Franco-Italo coproduction, "Delay at Marienbornborn," which opened the fest as the official German entry . . . Willi Tremper celebrated his award of $75,000 for the best German film of the year, "The Endless Night," by giving a barbecue party at his home for friends and associates . The town is plastered with posters advertising "Variety." But it's a plug for the Emil Jannings 1925 starrer, not this sheet!

Traditional Willy Brandt press conference which had always been on the festival's first Monday postponed to the second Monday this year, because the Mayor was preoccupied with the visit of John F. Kennedy . . . Richard Nixon has also been around here (as a tourist) . . . Stanley Kramer will come to Berlin two days after the festival is over, on his way to the Moscow film fest, in connection with his United Artists Cinerama film, "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad World." This is the first film festival Karl Malden, U.S. member of the feature film jury, has participated in . . . It seems as though the shorts are getting longer and longer. The running time of the 43 short films entered in the sweepstakes amounts to 785 minutes which means that the average is more than 18 minutes. The longest is Jamaica's "A Nation Is Born" — 37 minutes. 29 of the 43 shorts are in color, 23 of the 29 color shorts are in Eastmancolor . . . The local guest list includes Vera Kalman, widow of composer Emmerich Kalman . . . Artur Brauner has another Mabuse film in the making: "The Death Mirror of Dr. Mabuse." It's his fifth Mabuse feature. With regard to his film "Man and Beast", Germany's invited entry at the fest, he (Brauner) feels that the critics will like the film but the public won't. It's the CCC topper's first film of his socalled "risky wave." Czech Brejchowa (of the Czech "Muenchhausen" film) currently filming in W-Berlin. She's costarred with Walter Giller in the Tucholsky filmization of "Castle Gripsholm" which Kurt Hoffmann is directing at Arca Studios . . Brauner interested in getting the Czech actress for one of his upcoming production . . . Horst Wendlandt, the local Rialto topper, revealed that his next German western, "Winnetou", to be shot in Yugoslavia, will have a shooting time of three months. "Winnetou," the chieftain of the Apaches, will be portrayed by Lex Barker . . . Alfred Weidenmann's next venture is "Reigen 63" (adapted from Schnitzler's "La Ronde"). Rolf Thiele has same subject on his directiorial agenda.

The festival authorities and Reinhard Mohn's Playhouse studio jointly hosted a party to celebrate the 80th birthday of Gunther Stapenhorst, Germany's oldest producer. He's the boss of Carlton Films and the Carlton Studios, Munich The East Germans again cashed in on the influx of Western newsmen and tradesters by organizing a couple of screenings on their side of that wall. They set the shows last Friday (28), the day that Nikita Khrushchev arrived in the eastern part of the city. Invitees were given the choice of seeing either "Das Russiche Wunder" (The Russian Wonder), a documentary by Annelie and Andrew Thorndike, or their latest feature which has been entered for the Moscow fest. Cocktails followed in the local film club . . . Berlin's third international agricultural film fest is to run for a week, starting Jan. 20, 1964. Guests to the feature event were bombarded with literature and invitations to participate . . . In addition to all the other prizes and puries, the Evangelists also got into the act and set up their own panel to eye the Berlin screenings, and to pick the winner for their "Luther Rose."

Kurt Ulrich signed Eddie Constantine for a remake of the 1939 Tobis feature, "Sergeant Berry," which starred the late Hans Albers . . . Will Tremper's next picture is "Das Aergernis" (The Scandal) which concerns an expecting mother who's in desperate search for the father of her illegitimate child. Tremper plans to use a pregnant woman for the leading role . . . Maria Brauner, wife of CCC boss Artur Brauner, has given birth to her third bambino. It's Sammy, another son.

NEAR EAST SELLOFF OF EMBASSY PRODUCT

Embassy Pictures has set a deal calling for the distribution of a group of its features in the Near East. This is in line with the company's continued global expansion which has seen the spreading of its product in an ever-widening pattern in the past year.

Latest deal, the company's first in the Near East, is with Dollar Cedca Film S.A.L. of Beirut and Lebanon. Included in the agreement are four features including "Boccaccio '70" and three coproductions of Embassy prez Joseph E. Levine and Carlo Ponti, "Ghost at Noon," recently completed in and Jack Palance; "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," about to start starring Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni, and "Casanova," also starring Mastroianni.

A Former VP Suing Schine; 49G Pact Breach

J. Benson Faks, a former v.p. of Schine Enterprises, has filed a breach of contract suit against his old employers in N.Y. Supreme Court, charging that the company owes him $48,856 as salary due him via an employment contract.

Faks claims that, on May 4, 1962, he signed a deal with Schine making him a v.p. for two years at $50,000-a-year salary. He took office on May 21, 1962 and claims that, on May 30, 1963, he was fired and refused admittance to his office. His salary was also suspended at that time, in violation of the contract, the former v.p. claims.

LONG STRUGGLE TO AVOID SAGGING

By HAROLD MYERS

Berlin, July 2.

It has taken 13 years, but at long last the authorities have succeeded in eliminating much of the tedium from the Berlin Film Festival. And it's been accomplished by the simple process of restricting the number of competitive entries, thus cutting out much of the dead wood that has beleagured this event in past years.

With competitive screenings held down to a maximum of two-a-day, and with only one of them a gala opening, the number of contenders has been kept down to 23, including three documentary features. Until last year, when the chopper was being applied for the first time (but not so rigorously), there were usually more than 30 features crowded into the 12-day event, requiring a minimum of three daily screenings.

To maintain such a total, the fest had to rely too heavily on young film producing nations which, while deserving of some encouragement, lacked the experience, the expertize, and the know how to produce pictures worthy of festival presentation. The Berlin situation, too, has always been aggrevated by the total boycott of the Soviet bloc countries which always participate in Cannes and Venice, and frequently have some of the strongest pictures on show.

The Russians get invited to Berlin with monotonous regularity, but persistently decline to participate until such time as an invite goes to the East Germans, too. And, natch, all the other Communist bloc nations automatically follow suit. With East Germany unrecognized by the West—a state of affairs which is likely to continue for the foreseeable future—there is little, if any prospect of the Russians and the satellites ever showing here.

By keeping the total down, the fest this year applied the axe to a number of countries which were encouraged to enter shorts in lieu of features. That has automatically meant fewer bad films, eased the strain on the critics who catch all the screenings and made it more worth while for the tradesters who come with an eye on business deals. But one weakness remains. The big contingent of Yank importers, who always turn out in strength at Cannes and Venice, were again conspicuously absent, either because they do not regard Berlin in the "A" league, or because they get their fill of festivals on the Riviera and on the Lido.

Despite the restriction on numbers, there is however an inevitable amount of deadwood in below par entries. One such came from Portugal, and another was the full length Belgian documentary. In the latter case, however, the lapse may be excused, as there are only three full length documentaries in competition, and if the Belgian entry had been eliminated there would not have been much of a contest. As it is, two of the three are bound to get prizes under the rules, unless the jury makes a contrary stand.

On the plus side, however, there have been some pleasant surprises, notably the impact made by the invited American entry, "Lillies of the Field." This United Artist release garnered unanimous rave reviews, and the personal ovation for Sidney Poitier could hardly have been more enthusiastic. Israel, too, came up with a highly interesting film in "The Cellar," and this, too, has received wide acclaim, and Britain's independently made "The Caretaker" (still without a distrib) has also made its mark. France, Italy and Germany, each with two films in contest, have also maintained a more encouraging standard.

Dixie Grows as Exhibition Zone; Paramount Makes It a Division

In a move designed to accommodate more theatres of all types and sizes, Paramount sales chief Charles Boasberg has created a new southern division to be headed by Edmund C. Deberry, heretofore circuit sales head. Previously there had been only eastern and western divisions, headed respectively by Hugh Owen and Alfred Taylor. The southern territory had been divided equally between both.

Boasberg said the exhibition scene has been changed drastically in the past several years. Intimation is that Dixie, with its new firstruns, driveins and subruns, is becoming more important, and consequently there is the desirability of having a division manager in charge.

Deberry, who reports to Boasberg and assistant general sales manager Tom Bridge, will cover Atlanta, Charlotte, Jacksonville, Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Alden's 12½c Divvy

Glen Alden Corp., holding company among whose subsids is RKO Theatres, last week declared a regular quarterly dividend of 12½c per share.

Divvy is payable July 12 to stockholders of record July 5, 1963.

FED Demands Fests Pay Dues

Berlin, July 2.

International Federation of Film Producers is now demanding dues from organizers of international film festivals. It has set the rate at 2,000 Swiss francs (about $500) annually for the major events, and 1,500 Swiss francs for the lesser ones.

The six fests put in the top fee-paying category are Cannes, Berlin, Venice, San Sebastian, Moscow and Mar del Plata, and it's assumed they will all be accorded "A" status. San Sebastian lost its "A" rating recently.

If all the fests pay up it will help the Federation to wipe out some of its losses, though it is recognized it does not have any powers to enforce the payments.

Universal City Plaza Off on a Golden Rivet, Jack Benny Emceeing

Universay City, July 2.

Jack Benny has been tapped to emcee the MCA "Golden Rivet" Dedication Day next Tuesday (9), commemorating the completion of groundbreaking and the beginning of construction on the site of the new Universal City Plaza. Turnout of business, civic, community and picture folks will witness the ceremony and attend a private luncheon on one of the U stages.

Jules C. Stein, MCA board chairman, will set a "golden rivet" in a steel beam, assisted by Los Angeles County Supervisor Warren W. Dorn, president and MCA chief exec Lew R. Wasserman and MCA vicechairman Universal-Decca prez Milton R. Rackmil.

Universal City Plaza is slated for completion in 1964, consisting of four buildings including the MCA Tower. The three other buildings are a U City branch of the Bank of America, a U.S. Postoffice branch and a new commissary with a capacity of over 600. The brokerage firm of E. E. Hutton & Co. will occupy a large portion of the MCA Tower main floor where it will operate its largest branch.

INSTANT RATINGS BY DIAL: BIG WEEKENDS

San Antonio, July 2.

More than 800 people now call the San Antonio Motion Picture Advisory & Reviewing Board's telephone motion picture rating service each weekend, board prez Ralph Langley said here at the group's regular monthly meeting.

The service informs anyone that calls of the Legion of Decency's and Parents Magazine's moral ratings of films appearing at indoor theatres here.

"If we do not want censorship," Langley said, "we must have a discerning public and parents who will supervise their children's film watching." He added that the board fills the need of educating the public to check the types of films by examining qualified ratings.

The ratings are also set to civic improvement, education and/or child welfare organizations represented on the board.

Depinet on New Era for Saranac

Saranac Lake, N. Y., July 2.

"We've started an active new era of growth and service to mankind . . . have created a public relations vehicle that is carrying a brilliant new image of our industry. It's important to our industry—its important to our people—it's important to all mankind that we keep our Will Rogers Memorial Hospital and its O'Donnell Memorial Research Laboratories on the rise."

Thus Ned E. Depinet, president of the film industry-fostered institution, set the tenor for the annual pilgrimage to this northern New York State location. Patient admissions are on the increase due to the expanded number of chest diseases now being treated. This obviously more responsibility, more money.

Receipts in the past fiscal year amounted to $957,645, main source of this being the combined Christmas salute and audience collection which together brought $664,219. The "Cleopatra" premiere netted $71,022, $13,657 of which will be included in next year's report. Motion Picture Assn. of America contributed $50,000.

Eugene Picker, chairman of the fund raising committee, said the company sales managers fired new vitality into the year's program and more circuits participated.

Show business people, mainly from the picture business, 110 in all, left New York City early last Thursday for Whiteface Inn, Lake Placid, where all business activities were conducted. This was the largest attendance of any Will Rogers annual meeting on the books.

Friday was given to the regular inspection of the Rogers facilities, talks with patients, doctors and scientists and the unveiling of a memorial to John J. O'Connor, v.p. of Universal Pictures, who died within the year.

Group returned to Manhattan Saturday.

(In Japanese; English Titles)

"Buddha" is a colorful spectacle; a cinematic story of Gautama Buddha's life from his birth in northern India some 3,000 years ago until his passing. It is skillfully directed, generally well acted and a different, if at times gruesome, artistic story. Boxoffice prospects in the U.S.-Canada market must carry a question-mark. The film needs more trade and consumer selling than it will probably get. There is some latent educational, curiosity and even religious interest since Buddha was one of the great spiritual leaders of history, a figure often mentioned with Jesus, Mohammad and others.

For U.S. audiences, this pic has the added handicap of being subtitled and having two hours and 19 minutes running time. Obviously, this plays better for those understanding the Japanese language, the translation to wooden English phrases losing much. The film's length would hurt its turnover in arty theatres where it will find most of its American bookings.

An excellent all-star cast of Japanese actors means very little to U.S. patrons excepting for Machiko Kyo, who was in "Teahouse of August Moon" film some years back. Basic plot idea has a youthful prince, Siddhartha (Kojiro Hongo) irked at the conditions of the common people, many of them dying from starvation and untreated disease. He also is perturbed by the old religions, and turns away in horror from some of the rites including that of human sacrifice. So one night he deserts his princess wife and goes away for six years of meditations.

He resists demons, sensual dancing girls and semi-nude femmes to attain spiritual enlightenment, being reborn as the Buddha. He gathers many disciples, who carry on his work as word spreads of his miracles and good deeds. The miracle of bringing torrents of rain to a thirst-parched village, and later of halting a huge elephant just as he was about to trample one of his priests bring him thousands of converts.

But there is too much stress on people being killed, dying of disease or being brutally punished. Opening sequences are tediously patterned, to the extent that they become boring. The period in India's history, as depicted, had sexy episodes in the royal palaces. In one of these, the king's wife is shown making a play for the younger son. Rebuffed, she wins over the captain of the guard in order to see that this son is punished—by having his eyes burned out.

Kojiro Hongo gives a superb performance as Prince Siddhartha, who later becomes the Buddha. Shintaro Katsu is his ruthless cousin and makes a vioid, villainous rival in trying to sway the populace. Charito Solis is charming as Siddhartha's wife in the earlier episodes. Miss Kyo, listed as a star, has a more or less lesser role as the sacred Nandabala who brings food to Buddha.

Kenji Misumi's direction is topflight while the lensing by Hiroshi Imai is a highlight of this pic. Screenplay by Fuji Yahiro is good enough considering how much territory he had to cover. Wear.

A Ticklish Affair
(PANAVISION-COLOR)

Flimsy romanticomedy.

Hollywood, June 28.

Metro release of Joe Pasternak production. Stars Shirley Jones, Gig Young, Red Buttons, Carolyn Jones. Directed by George Sidney. Screenplay, Ruth Brooks Flippen, based on story, "Moon Walk," by Barbara Luther; camera (Metrocolor), Milton Krasner; editor, John McSweeney Jr.; music, George Stoll; assistant director, William Shanks. Reviewed at Picwood Theatre, June 28, '63. Running time, 88 MINS.

Policeman	Robert Foulk

Boxoffice prospects look mild to weak for this trite romantic comedy out of Metro. The Joe Pasternak production was incepted in '62, when a story titled "Moon Walk" by Barbara Luther appeared in the Ladies Home Journal. Ruth Brooks Flippen's scenario, which evolved from that yarn and into "A Ticklish Affair," has a naval commander (Gig Young) falling in love with the widowed mother (Shirley Jones) of three male moppets. He meets her when, armed and accompanied by several of his men, he turns up at her house to investigate blinking Morse Code distress signals coming from the upstairs window that have been sighted by the worried fleet in San Diego harbor. As any filmgoer knows at first blink, the signals are being flashed by some fool kid. But does the U.S. Navy suspect? With this kind of fleet, there'd better not be a World War III.

At any rate, Miss Jones enjoys her gigs with Gig but nixes his marriage proposal because she doesn't want her kids to have to live out of a suitcase. The youngest boy resolves the knotty situation by floating up over San Diego attached to some helium balloons so that he can be rescued by the commander. Gratefully, Miss Jones agrees to tie the knot. It isn't clear how Hotel Cluver City got down to San Diego, but it's there, clear as day, as the boy floats over the city.

Miss Jones is peachy keen as the young widder, and Young, a natural born second lead, seems out of his element at the casting summit. Red Buttons and Carolyn Jones adequately pair up as the second romantic team. The three moppets are Peter Robbins, Billy Mumy and Bryan Russell. They strengthen the case in favor of corporal punishment, especially when they occupy the screen together. Edgar Buchanan puts in a few brief, insignificant appearances.

For director George Sidney, a decidedly lowercase effort. Milton Krasner's photography is satisfactory, as are the George W. Davis-Edward Carfagno sets and George Stoll's music. John McSweeney, Jr.'s editing is helpfully snug, although that sudden Culver City locale is editorially expendable. A conventional title song by Stoll and Harold Adamson is sung by Jack Jones. Tube.

Lilies of the Field

Sidney Poitier in charming low-budgeter.

Berlin, June 25.

United Artists release of a Ralph Nelson Rainbow production. Stars Sidney Poitier; features Lilia Skala, Lisa Mann. Directed by Ralph Nelson. Screenplay, James Poe, based on a novel by William E. Barrett; camera, Ernest Heller; editor, John McCafferty; music, Jerry Goldsmith. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 94 MINS.

Homer Smith	Sidney Poitier
Mother Maria	Lilia Skala
Sister Gertrude	Lisa Mann
Sister Agnes	Isa Crino
Sister Albertine	Francesca Jarvis
Sister Elizabeth	Pamela Branch
Juan	Stanley Adams
Father Murphy	Dan Frazer

It is easy to appreciate why the Berlin festival authorities invited "Lilies of the Field." Not only is there a German background to the story, but it is essentially a film which is loaded with charm and which is full of good, clean honest fun. Boxoffice chances should be brisk, even thought it may not qualify for saturation showing.

Made on a modest budget and filmed entirely on location in Arizona, "Lilies" reveals Sidney Poitier as an actor with a sharp sense of humor. His performance is in striking contrast to many of his earlier roles. He is a journeyman laborer, touring the countryside in his station wagon, working when the fancy moves him, and traveling on when he feels the need for a change. That was his philosophy until he stopped one day at a lonely farm to refill his radiator, but he met his match in the five women who ran the place.

They were all members of a holy order from East Germany, and were working arid land that had been bequeathed them. As the Mother Superior sets eyes on Poitier she is convinced that God had answered her prayers and sent a strong, healthy man, to fix the roof of their farmhouse. That was it. From then on, spellbound by the Mother's persuasive powers, he stayed on without payment, and eventually took a part time job so that he would have funds to build a chapel for the community.

Many factors combine in the overall success of the film, notably the restrained direction by Ralph Nelson, a thoroughly competent screenplay by James Poe, and, of course Poitier's own standout performance. There are a number of diverting scenes that remain in the memory, such as Poitier giving the Sisters an English lesson, with gestures to demonstrate the meaning of the phrases, and later leading them in the singing of "Aymen."

To add to the general credibility of the treatment, the Sisters frequently talk in German among themselves, particularly in the earlier sequences, but that shouldn't hurt acceptance of the film. In any event, it could easily be remedied with the aid of a few sub-titles, though that shouldn't be necessary.

Ralph Nelson, who also produced, has got some fine performances from his cast. Lilia Skala as the inspired Mother Superior, and Lisa Mann, as Sister Gertrude lead the firstrate support. This also includes fine performances by Stanley Adams and Dan Frazer.

Though not necessarily a big moneymaker, "Lilies of the Field" is a worthy festival contender, and a credit to United Artists who had the confidence to back such an offbeat subject. Myro.

The Caretaker
(BRITISH)

Berlin, July 2.

Caretaker Films—Lord (Michael) Birkett production (no distrib set). Stars Alan Bates, Donald Pleasance, Robert Shaw. Directed by Clive Donner. Screnplay, Harold Pinter from his own play of same name; Camera, Nicolas Roeg; editor, Fergus McDonell. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 105 MINS.

Mick	Alan Bates
Davies	Donald Pleasance
Aston	Robert Shaw

Harold Pinter has adapted his own three character play for the screen, but has made little attempt to broaden the canvas and its stage origins are barely disguised. Presumably he took the view that it would be folly to interfere with a hit, as the play was a commercial success in London, and was artistically acclaimed across the Atlantic.

This production of "The Caretaker," was financed by 10 prominent show biz personalities, each of whom has a $14,000 stake in it, while the author, producer, director and three stars are all on deferment. Among its backers are stars, film producers and legit impresarios, including Elizabeth Taylor, Richard Burton, Peter Sellers, Noel Coward, Harry Saltzman and Peter Bridge. It was made without a distribution deal, and was the official British selection for the Berlin festival.

The combined and dedicated efforts of the production team have resulted in a highly literate though wordy film, which will have its biggest appeal to arty theatre audiences. With intelligent promotion, it should wind up as a profitable undertaking, yielding fair returns to its backers. But it will need the careful sell, and a thoughful campaign. (The title will inevitably have to be changed in the U.S. to avoid a clash with United Artist's "The Caretakers.")

Instead of using a conventional studio, the unit took over a house in a northeast London suburb, and that provides an ideal, shabby setting for Pinter's offbeat theme. It also must have helped to keep production costs down, but that's by the way. Basically, it's a one-set play, and more or less remains as such in the film, and that made it a tough assignment for director Clive Donner. His fluent treatment, however, makes the most of the macabre verbal exchanges, and overcomes many of the static handicaps of the subject.

The three characters are two brothers and a tramp. One of the brothers, a building worker, owns a house, but it is his brother who lives in it, though just in one room, cluttered with furniture from the remainder of the house. The tramp, homeless and unemployed, is invited to stay the night, and finds himself being tossed around like a shuttlecock, in favor with one brother, and out of favor with the other. It had been suggested that he should remain as caretaker, but he is eventually thrown out, unwanted by either.

Pinter's highly personalized style of dialog is at its best and the three stars, all of whom were in the Broadway production, serve him with distinction. Donald Pleasance's standout performance as the tramp is the acting highlight, but he easily has the choicest role. It is a perceptive and subtle interpretation of a difficult part, brilliantly shaded to reflect the changing attitudes of the two brothers. Robert Shaw gives an intelligent study as the brother who offers the tramp shelter, and in one scene vividly reveals his history of mental illness, while Alan Bates completes the stellar trio with another forceful portrayal. Myro.

The Country Doctor
(PORTUGUESE)

Berlin, June 25.

Doctor	Jorge Sousa Costa
Dr. Valenca	Joao Guedes
Pharmacist	Emilio Guimaraes
Luisa	Irene Cruz

Portugal is in the minor league of European film-producing nations with a minute annual output, and the lack of experience is reflected in this naive feature pic. It's the country's first ever competitive entry at a major international festival, but it won't do much to boost its native film industry. Not likely to be seen outside a few Portugese and possibly a few Spanish-speaking territories.

It's a simple tale of a young doctor who takes over a rural practice from a retiring medico, and meets with opposition from the prejudiced and ignorant peasantry, mainly on account of his youth. Matters are complicated by the weekly visit of the retired doctor who has retained the confidence of the locals although has none of the idealism of his successor.

The yarn unspools leisurely and predictably. And there's no hint of subtlety either in the writing, direction or acting. The young doctor's sincere but amorous glances at a young blonde visitor to the village emphasize the naivety of the treatment. Jorge Sousa Costa is personable young man, and Irene Cruz overdoes the glamour-puss character. Myro.

Bushido
(Oath of Obedience)
(JAPANESE)

Berlin, June 25.

Toei Co. (Tokyo) release of a Hiroshi Okawa production. Stars Kinnosuke Nakamura, Yoshiko Mita, Masayuki Mori, Kyoko Kishida, Ineko Arima, Shinjiro Ebara. Directed by Tadashi Imai. Screenplay, Naoyuki Suzuki, based on an original story by Norio Nanjo; camera, Makoto Tsuboi; music, Toshiro Mayuzumi. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 119 MINS.

Described as a saga of Samurai cruelty, "Oath of Obedience" features nearly all the unpleasant practices known to man, including brutal murder, homosexuality, rape, cruelty and torture, and, of course, hari-kari. And as it is a story of one family though three centuries, there is a repetitive overdose of all these elements. At best, it has limited arty prospects, though some judicious editing would hypo its chances.

The credo of the Samurai is that honor comes before all else. So when at the turn of the 17th Century a man obtains employment with a feudal lord, and signs an oath of allegiance which pledges his descendants for all time, it is an inevitable consequence that there should be a succession of horrors perpetrated in the name of honor. And they follow in monotonous sequence.

The original signatory commits hari-kari when he believes he has let his master down. So does his son. The next descendant is a victim of his master's homosexuality, but is caught in the act with one of the ladies of the court, castrated, and then forced to marry her. It so happens that she was already pregnant, so the succession is maintained and thus the story of torture and cruelty continues, ending with a vaguely analogous present-day situation.

With such emphasis on cruelty, much of it downright unpleasant to watch, the film will only have limited appeal in the West. Nevertheless, it has some commendable qualities, including some fine camerawork, moving and convincing portrayals, and the right sombre note in direction. Myro.

Delay in Marienborn

Berlin, June 25.

Gloria release of a Hans Oppenheimer (Berlin), Hoche (Paris) and Cinematografiche Mediteranee (Rome) production. Stars Jose Ferrer, Sean Flynn, Nicole Courcel. Directed by Rolf Haedrich. Screenplay, Will Tremper; camera, Roger Fellous; editor, Margot Jahn; music, Peter Thomas. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 94 MINS.

Cowan	Jose Ferrer
Lt. Novak	Sean Flynn
Nurse Kathy	Nicole Courcel
Major Menschikow	Joseph Yadin
Refugee	Hans Jochim Schmiedel

Selected to open the Berlin film festival under the German flag, "Delay in Marienborn" is a German-Franco-Italian coproduction, which was shown in the English language version. Although the film deals with the overworked theme of conflict between East and West Germany, it looks at the subject from a new angle and makes a bid to give both sides a fair hearing. It has an international cast to help it at the wickets, and had a good chance to get by as a dualer in the U.S.

One main weakness in the plot is that there are too many unexplained incidents, which may be the fault of the script, but more likely is due to erratic editing. There are also several irrelevant characters which do not help the story and tend to impede the action.

Most of the action is confined to the interior of an American military train which makes the daily journey from Berlin to Frankfurt, passing through the Eastern zone with the approval and co-operation of the East German and Soviet authorities, but which may only carry American nationals.

An East German youth, whose parents already had escaped to the West, had noticed that it is frequently held up to make way for a local train; he waits for his chance and eventually makes his bid for freedom. All doors are sealed, but a nurse spots the refugee and hides him in an empty compartment. At the border town of Marienborn, however, the Russians have been tipped that there is an escapee aboard, and refuse to allow the train to move on until he's handed over. It looks like developing into an international incident, until the Yank train commander, under the orders of higher

NOT CRICKET SEZ STEMBLER

Charging that it is becoming the rule rather than the exception, Theatre Owners of America prez John H. Stembler last week lashed out at distributors for "taking advantage" of exhibitors by forcing them into "blind bidding" for pictures, that is bidding on pix they have never seen.

The occasion for the remarks by Stembler was his keynote speech at the convention of the Northern California Theatre Owners Assn. in San Francisco last week. He reviewed the general industry outlook and TOA's activities and spent a healthy portion of his talk on the "blind bidding" matter.

"It is regretable," Stembler said, "that in the process of the appeals by the government and by the distributor-defendants in the case of U.S. vs. Paramount et al. and of the return of the cases to the U.S. Statutory court for further action, nothing was included in the final decrees requiring the distributor-defendants to afford screening opportunities to competitive bidders before distributors sent out invitations to bids.

"With the creation of a seller's market, consciously or unconsciously, by the distributors and with the urgent need of exhibitors for product, there was a not expected development that distributors would call for bids prior to screening. This pig-in-a-poke type of bidding is unfair, unjust and uneconomic. The exhibitor, sitting without playable product, is willing to bid unrealistically high prices in order to obtain pictures," Stembler charged, adding that "so many times he bids beyond the picture's potential for his theatre."

"The exhibitor who bids 'blind' has to depend on luck to a great extent. In these depressed times this is a gamble that distribution should neither request not expect," he commented. Stembler also said that, although he realized that sometimes circumstances require a distrib to offer a picture sans screening, "the facts presently indicate that instead of this being a rare occurence, it may well be developing into the category of customary practice. Distribution and exhibition alike must not permit this to happen. It would be industry calamity if it did."

Accordingly, the prez told the group that he was planning follow up his remarks with correspondence to distribs who are presently using a "blind selling" policy in an attempt to gain their cooperation in bringing an end to this practice.

'Lassie' Teleseries Put Together As a Feature

Hollywood, July 2.

Wrather Corp., which produces the "Lassie" teleseries, has telescoped five segments of past entries into a theatrical feature for late summer release by 20th-Fox.

Titled "Lassie's Great Adventure," and filmed in color, it will mark the first feature-length appearance of canine star in more than 12 years. Cast toppers are Jon Provost, June Lockhart and Hugh Reilly.

WILL TREMPER FILM COPS $75,000 PRIZE

Berlin, July 2.

"The Endless Night," the film which Will Tremper produced and directed (and also wrote) for Atlas-Film, walked off with the major German Federal cash award amounting to 300,000 D-Marks (about $75,000) and garnered additional Federal Prizes for best acting (Harald Leipnitz), best camerawork (Hans Jura) and best music (Peter Thomas).

The second cash award (also 300,000 D-Marks) went to Ladislao Vajda's "The Lightship" which Columbia has on release. The full-length documentary, "Alvorada," W-Germany's entry at the recent Cannes festival, captured 168,000 D-Marks (about $42,000), while Rolf Strobel and Heinz Tichawsky's short film, "Notabene Mezzogiorno," was awarded with 100,000 D-Marks ($25,000).

More prizes: Elisabeth Bergner received the Federal Film Prize for best performance of an actress in "The Happy Years of the Thorwalds." Michael Hinz ("The Lightship") and Elfriede Kuzmany ("The Black-White-Red Four-Poster") were also given Federal Prizes for outstanding acting.

Still more prizes: three directors and three players of the vet category were honored with Federal Prizes for their outstanding contributions to the German film: The respective prizes went to Fritz Lang, G. W. Pabst and Josef von Sternberg (directors) and Tilla Durrieux, Asta Nielsen and Fritz Rasp. All are above 70 and in the case of Tilla Durrieux and Danish Asta Nielsen even beyond 80.

Fewer Items Per Movietone News But With Broadened Treatment

One of the few remaining theatrical newsreels is in the throes of a fight to survive. Movietone News, historically one of the great ones, is trying to create a new image by way of providing "filmed news in depth."

Joseph Wills, writer, studio manager and producer of special items, disclosed this week that the approach is toward concentration on fewer subjects, perhaps one, two or three per reel. Thus each subject can be explored in greater detail.

This would be in contrast with the standard television news show which, comments Wills, is made up only of a commentator and a few pictorial flashes.

Wills acknowledges that tv nonetheless, with its spot coverage, has been a significant factor behind the drubbing which the theatrical reels have taken.

Survival can come only via recreation of a good image and the hope is to achieve this with the aforementioned news in depth. Upbeat publicity would be helpful, too, states Wills. And, he adds, it's of the utmost importance that exhibs reconsider the values of "modern" newsreel programming.

It's understood Movietone now has about 1,900 theatre accounts, but many of these are second and third run. The revenue is inadequate; Movietone reportedly is losing $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 per year.

Company works in cooperation with United Press International in producing clips for tv. UPI has a block of Movietone stock now and has serious thoughts about buying out the outfit entirely. If this comes to be, there'll be no more Movietone for theatres.

Apparently the only happenstance which would block such demise would be quick success in creating that new image, and acceptance by both the public and exhibitors.

Marie Torre Takes Note Of Films' 'Loose Morals'

Pittsburgh, July 2.

Marie Torre, former N.Y. Herald-Tribune television critic, now a tv newscaster on KDKA-TV turned her notice to the film industry on station's "Saturday Report" (29). She spoke of "the disturbing trend in motion pictures—this preoccupation with undressed women . . . and loose morals" in discussion of "Cleopatra," which she liked in general. "The producers apparently found it necessary to give us an added fillip—namely views of Miss Taylor which would have done justice to any girly girly magazine."

Miss Torre also commented, "The other day an actress named Carrol Baker announced that she had agreed to appear in the altogether in 'The Carpetbaggers.' Not to be sensational, she pointed out, but to lend a touch of realism to the picture. Now how gullible do they think we are?"

In discussing "Irma La Douce," she said "this piece of celluloid is advertised as a story of passion, bloodshed, desire and death—everything, in fact that makes life worth living." She asked, "Who's life?" Continuing on the same film, she said, " 'Irma La Douce' is, in fact, a story about sordid characters, and it is neither worthwhile nor funny."

GRABBED FOR AIRPORT

Ozoner Acre Pays Gunter $21,142.50

Chicago, July 2.

Chi firstrun biz is as torrid as the 90-plus weather with "Cleopatra" heading for smash $80,000 and complete sellout for State-Lake preem. Other newcomers, although overshadowed by this one, are copping sharp tallies, and holdovers are more than doing their share.

"Donovan's Reef" is bowing to a big $19,000 at the Woods. "A Ticklish Affair" looms lusty at Esquire. "L-Shaped Room" is nailing sock $12,000 at World and a very big $8,000 at the Town, where daydating. "Fruit Is Ripe" and "Sinners of Paris" looks frisky at the Monroe.

"Bye Bye Birdie" still is great in second Chicago frame. "A Gathering of Eagles" is smash for same Roosevelt session. Savage Sam" is tame in second Oriental round. "The Law" is brisk in Surf second.

"Irma La Douce" is still socko in third United Artists stanza. "The Balcony" is notching a fine fourth moveover lap at the Carnegie. "David and Lisa" continues potent in its Cinema 20th session.

"55 Days At Peking" is posting a neat fifth hardticket session at the Todd. "How West Was Won" is mighty in its McVickers 18th round. "Lawrence of Arabia" shapes sturdy in its Cinestage 26th week.

Estimates for This Week

'Cleo' Record $45,000 Pitt; 'Reef' 9G; 'Birdie' 12G, 2d; 'West' 11G, 15

Pittsburgh, July 2.

"Cleopatra" is barging in front this week as all-time queen of the hardticket wickets, with near $45,000 for first session, and a continuing advance of $27,000. "Cleo" plus the first night baseball game here in years and unseasonably hot weather, had its effect on other houses.

However, "Bye Bye Birdie" still is socko in second week at Fulton. "Donovan's Reef" rates only fairish in first at Stanley.

"Gathering of Eagles" is just fair on opener at Gateway. "How West Was Won," in 15th week of roadshow run at Warner, seems unaffected by the "Cleo" invasion, and rates powerful again this round.

Estimates for This Week

Fulton (Assoc.) (1,900; $1-$1.50) —"Bye Bye Birdie" (Col) (2d wk). Socko $12,000 after opening week hit $15,500.

Gateway (Assoc.) (1,900; $1-$1.50) —"Gathering of Eagles" (U). Fair $7,000. Last week, "Nutty Professor" (Par), $8,000.

Penn (UATC) (2,039; $2-$3.50)—"Cleopatra" (20th). Record $45,000, biggest for straight film in city's history. Last week, "55 Days Peking" (AA) (4th wk-6 days), $8,200.

Shadyside (MOTC) (623; $1.50)—"Kind of Loving" (Gov) (2d wk). Neat $2,500. Last week, $3,000.

Squirrel Hill (SW) (823; $1.50)—"Wrong Arm of Law" (Cont) (4th wk). Hep $2,700. Last week, $3,800.

Stanley (SW) (3,700; $1-$1.50)—"Donovan's Reef" (Par). Fairish $9,000 or over. Last week, "Savage Sam" (BV), $7,500.

Warner (SW) (1,260; $1.50-$2.75) —"How West Was Won" (MGM) (15th wk). Powerful $11,000. Last week, $11,300.

Estimates Are Net

Film gross estimates as reported herewith from the various key cities, are net; i.e., without usual tax. Distributors share on net take, when playing percentage, hence the estimated figures are net income.

The parenthetic admission prices, however, as indicated, include U. S. amusement tax.

'Cleo' Smash 28G, Cincy; 'Birdie' 15G

Cincinnati, July 2.

Smash entry of "Cleopatra" at the Grand highlights a summer bonanza for Cincy film biz this round. Other flourishing newcomers include "Bye Bye Birdie," great at Keith's. Dualed "Sadist" and "Walk Into Hell" looms big at Twin Drive-In. "Captain Sindbad" is swell at Palace.

"Nutty Professor" rates nice in second at Albee. "How West Was Won" remains strong in 16th round at Capitol. "Lawrence of Arabia" looks fairish in 12th frame at Valley. Suburban arters are in slow trend.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,100; $1-$1.50)—"Nutty Professor" (Par) (2d wk). Pleasing $8,500 after $11,000 opener.

Capitol (SW-Cinerama) (1,540; $1.25-$2.75) — "How West Was Won" (MGM) (16th wk). Holding close to last week's sock $13,000 with inclusion of Tues. and Thurs. matinees for summer.

Esquire Art (Cin-T-Co) (500; $1.25) — "The Law" (Embassy). So-so $1,200. Last week, "Four Days of Naples" (MGM), $1,000.

Grand (RKO) (1,396; $1.80-$3.50) —"Cleopatra" (20th). Smash $28,000, excluding charity benefit Wednesday night (26) preem sponsored by Variety Club Cincy Tent. Mixed reactions expressed by reviewers but Enquirer and Stevens, Post and advance sale is favorable. Last week, "Island of Love" (WB) and "Black Gold" (WB), $5,500 at $1-$1.25 in 5 days.

Guild (Vance) (272; $1.25)—"Dinner at 8" (MGM), "Show Boat" (MGM) and "Great Caruso" (MGM) two days each in windup of vintage series. Mild $1,400. Same last week for "Grand Hotel" (MGM) (reissue).

Palace (RKO) (2,600; $1-$1.25)—"Captain Sindbad" (MGM). Swell $11,000. Last week, "Happened at World's Fair" (MGM), $9,000.

Columbus, O., July 2.

Walt Disney's "Savage Sam" at RKO Palace looks okay. But "Nutty Professor" at the Ohio is only mild. "How West Was Won" continues big in 12th round at RKO Grand.

Estimates for This Week

Grand (RKO) (860; $1.50-$2.75)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (12th wk). Big $11,000. Last week, $11,500.

Ohio (Loew) (3,079; 50-$1.50)—"Nutty Professor" (Par) and "Fancy Pants" (Par). Mild $6,000 or near. Last week, "Stripper" (20th) and "Murder on Campus" (Colorama), $5,000.

Minneapolis, July 2.

A veritable raft of topdrawer newcomers accompanies blockbuster "Cleopatra" to put pix very much in the limelight here. With 'Cleopatra" leading the way by a far margin and with the aid of such staunch long-staying roadshow holdovers as "How West Was Won" and "Lawrence of Arabia," they're doing a bangup job in draining local pocketbooks to the greatest extent in a long time.

Centre of interest, of course, is "Cleopatra," which looks huge at 1,300-seat Century.

Current arrivals that seem capable of keeping the wickets busy include such winners as "Bye Bye Birdie," "Come Blow Your Horn" and "Donovan's Reef." Despite the toughest new competish in many months, holdovers "How West Was Won" and "Lawrence of Arabia" still remain hefty boxoffice clicks.

Paris, July 2.

Only 80 French and French majority coproduction pix were made last year as declining filmgoing and needed detaxation and Film Aid dogged local producers. But with the new hike in Film Aid, 14% compared with the old 5.5% deal, producers took a more solid stand: It appears that 100 pix will be made or undertaken this year.

Even if film attendance was not going up, blockbuster and exploitation pix did better than ever here. Though some of the new productions may be "cheapies" to take advantage of the new aid, most appear fairly ambitious and will have most of the French stars at work. Their salaries mean producers are less bearish.

The 100-pix goal is felt par, and fulfilling local needs. Top star Brigitte Bardot, although she kept talking about a two-year layoff, has just wound "Ghost At Noon," with Jack Palance and Fritz Lang. Jean-Luc Godard directed. Her ex-hubby is now finishing a film version of the Francoise Sagan hit play, "Castle in Sweden," with Curt Jurgens, Monica Vitti, Jean-Louis Trintignant, Jean-Claude Brialy and singing star Francoise Hardy in her first pic. Top disk seller Johnny Hallyday stars in his first pic, "Who Are You Johnny?" being directed by longtime Yank resident Noel Howard.

Jean Gabin Doing 'Maigret'

Vet star Jean Gabin is finishing "Maigret Sees Red" and director Louis Malle likewise is winding "The Maddening Flame," a study of suicide. Anna Magnani is playing opposite Bourvil and Pierre Brasseur in Claude Autant-Lara's "Josefa's Loot," and Michele Morgan has two coproductions, one in Italy, "The Baker of Venice," and in Spain, "Constance in Hell." Both are French coproductions.

New rising star Anna Karina, from the New Wave ranks, is winding up "A Husband at Popular Prices," and Annie Girardot is in "La Bonne Soupe," which 20th-Fox backs. Jean-Paul Belmondo is in Rio De Janeiro doing "The Man From Rio" and Jacques Charrier is in "Conjugal Life," being made as two separate pix via director Andre Cayatte showing both the wife's and husband's sides in two pix around a divorce.

Alain Delon's Swashbuckler

Alain Delon has started a swashbuckler in Spain called "The Black Tulip." Fernandel has plenty of projects and is now finishing "The Good King Dagobert," a comic costumer, Maria Schell comes back to French studios after seven years for a comedy-thriller, "A Hearth and a Murder."

Plenty of gangster and police entries plus a comedy by Yves Robert, called "Bebert and the Bus," and several sketch pix and the return of Mexican director Louis Bunuel to French studios via "Diary of a Chambermaid" will make the coming French fare varied.

French Prod. Wants Christine Keeler For Comedy About Paris

Paris, July 2.

With all that wheeler-dealer talk about film stints for Christine Keeler, the British party girl who brought on a moral crusade in Britain, a local producer and film exporter, Francois Gergely, claims he has her firmed on a pact for a pic he starts here next September, "Champs-Elysees."

Gergely makes it clear she will not play herself, as most other pix projects are aiming for, but an English girl embroiled in situation comedics while on a trip to Paris. Opposite her is to be Sugar Ray Robinson (purportedly this casting has nothing to do with any publicised side of her life either) and ex-dancer Nicolas Darvas (& Julia).

The film's players are mainly from non-film walks of showbiz and life. Film now has French and German coin behind it, and could also extend its coproduction tag to read as a French-British-German-American coproduction. Italy is also reported interested. Package was set up by E. Menzer.

Cinerama Spreads To Key European Cities

Frankfurt, June 25.

By the end of 1964, 20 theatres in West Germany will be equipped with Super-Cinerama, according to Wolfdieter von Stein, chief of the German Cinerama group. First house to be ready will be the City Filmpalace in Munich, due to open in mid-September.

Cinerama is also taking over more houses in Europe, with the second Cinerama theatre in London, the Dominion, opening this fall, the second Cinerama house in Paris the Gaumont Palace, and the largest house in Rome, the 3,000-seat Colosseum being Cinemarized with gala opening late in July. Madrid, Barcelona, Valencia, Lisbon, Nice, Marseilles, Zurich, Geneva, Helsinki, Oslo and other major cities in Europe now have Cinerama houses.

With Government Coin, New Ballet School Puts Existing Ones in Dither

Melbourne, July 2.

Austrilian Elizabethan Theatre Trust decision to establish a ballet school here in Melbourne has been greeted with dismay by two ballet schools already functioning here. Their argument: who needs another?

New school will have as director Margaret Scott, who has danced in London with Sadler's Wells, was principal dancer with The Ballet Rambert on its 1948 Aussie tour. Miss Scott will work in collaboration with Peggy Van Praagh, artistic director of The Australian Ballet.

Strong criticisms of the new school have come from Victorian Ballet Guild and the Australian National Theatre Ltd., which also runs a ballet school.

Alfred Heintz, chairman of the Victorian Ballet Guild, has described it as "an absurd and unnecessary waste of taxpayers' money" whilst Gertrude Johnson, director of the Australian National Theatre, said: "Direct competition of this nature cannot be of benefit to anyone."

The Victorian Ballet Guild have sent telegrams to the Federal Government Treasurer and to Dr. H. C. Coombs, chairman of the Trust, protesting at using public money to establish a third ballet school. Heintz claimed it had taken 16 years of effort and sacrifice to establish the Victorian Ballet Guild.

"Now we fear that the Trust will use the power of its almost limitless Federal Government finance to destroy the work we have already done.

"The Elizabethan Theatre Trust has an annual subsidy of $675,000 from the Federal Government and it is common knowledge that the Trust expects the Australian Ballet Company to show a deficit of more than $112,500 this season.

Mercaton New Prexy Of Int'l Newsreel Assn.

Rome, July 2.

Roger Mercaton has been elected new prexy of the International Newsreel Assn., succeeding Sandro Pallavicini.

Rome assembly of the newsreel group also voted veepee stripes for Hungary's M. Sopronji and Switzerland's M. Moreau. Next assembly will be held in 1964 in Geneva. Italy, Austria, Bulgaria, France, Czechoslovakia, Spain, Greece, W. Germany and Poland are current members of INA.

'Soupe' Shapes As Film With Reel Action

Paris, July 2.

Though adapted from a play, and being directed by a playwright as his first pic, "La Bonne Soupe" (The Good Soup), backed by 20th-Fox for worldwide distrib, will be given plenty of filmic movement to smooth out any theatrical feeling. First shot last week on the Riviera had a helicopter going from a long view of the Cannes beach down to a closeup on a yacht.

Film is being produced by Andre Hakim, who is in charge of securing foreign pix for 20th-Fox or producing them, with producers listed as Belstar Productions, Films Du Siecle and Dear Film of Rome. Film deals with the reminiscences of a woman who had worked her way up the hard way. Marie Bell repeats the role she did on the stage here and Annie Girardot plays the woman when she was younger.

Male cast goes from Yank Franchot Tone to Claude Dauphin, Jean-Claude Brialy, Christian Marquand, Raymond Pellegrin, Sacha Vistel and Felix Marten. They are all the men in the lives of the lead femme.

Director Robert Thomas adapted the play for the film from Felicien Marceau's original. He has two hit suspense legiters to his credit, "Trap For A Solitary Man" and "Eight Women." Former is owned by 20th-Fox.

Thomas shoots two weeks down south and then brings his cast to Paris. Only Hakim is personally supervising the pic for 20th-Fox. The play, "Soupe," was a hit here but flopped on Broadway.

Paris' Gaumont-Palace Signs for Cinerama

Paris, July 2.

Nicolas Reisini, Cinerama prexy, signed an accord with Jean Le Duc, head of Gaumont, to convert the 3,000-seat Gaumont-Palace for Cinerama. It will be ready next September.

New screen will measure over 600 square metres. Other French houses may also go Cinerama via the one-projector system. Talks are also on to make Cinerama feature pix in French. Recent Cinerama pic, "How the West Was Won" (MGM) is doing solid biz at the Empire. It will probably be moved over to the Gaumont-Palace on Sept. 12.

Resisini invited Le Duc stateside to inspect the Cinerama labs. Only other triple projector and screen setup here now, besides the Empire, is the Kinoparama house for the Russo process similar to Cinerama.

Italo Exhibs to Probe Many High Percentage Pix Deals at Nat'l Meet

Rome, July 2.

Several major problems will be examined here by Italo exhibitors when they hold their national meeting this week, notably the current relations with distributors in this country. No exhib-distrib pact exists in Italy since negotiations for one broke down over two seasons ago.

Theatreowners here appear worried by high percentages (from 50% to a high of 73%) being asked for an increasing number of films —over 30 feature pix are cited— slated for release here during the 1963-64 season. Also named among exhib beefs are high advances asked for and long guaranteed booking runs, some of which are said to top two-month strings.

One Italian exhib weekly, Giornale dello Spettacolo, claims theatre men are also worried by the threat of Yank dominance in the '63-'64 setup. Lack of any exhib-distrib discipline, as well as an upcoming product shrinkage, the weekly claims, could result in complete dominance of the local market — and grosses — by foreign product.

Also to be discussed at upcoming meet is telescoping of exchanges by foreign companies for economy reasons.

Negro Spokesman Charges 25-Year Stall on Studio Craft Employment; Scripts Still Stereotype Race

Hollywood, July 2.

Craft unions of Hollywood have systematically excluded Negroes from memberships and accordingly few have found jobs in such studio jurisdictions. IATSE locals have been illiberal on racial matters, unlike the talent unions. Such was the opinion recently expressed here by Herbert Hill, national labor secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. Hill called for the film industry to "stop stalling" on equal job opportunities. He said there has now been some 25 years of "no tangible gains," despite many conversations. Talks amounted to no more than "exercises in futility."

Hill's threat of taking "decertification" proceedings with the National Labor Relations Board was aimed at the craft union's lily-white policies. Negro impatience with promises which do not translate into deeds could also bring mass demonstrations against studios, if there is no mending of the ways, he forecast.

Nor did Hill stop with the craft locals. He charged that producers, directors and writers persisted in keeping colored roles in screen stories confined to "menials." To an inquiry whether he blamed advertising agencies for shutting Negroes out of roles in television drama he replied in the affirmative. Hill felt that white groups, when pressed, gave verbal assurances which were invariably forgotten once the pressures were relaxed. He hinted, as regards tv, that a Negro policy of "selective buying" of groceries, drugs and so on might induce the admen to hire some colored actors, despite Dixie stations.

Asked to comment on possibly future parlays with NAACP reps, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' west coast veepee George Flaherty said, "We're here—let them get in touch with us. We are certainly not afraid to meet with them." He denied charges of discrimination within IATSE ranks, asserting that though there were "not a lot of Negroes" among IATSE membership, there were "a few." On future, possibly greater opportunity for the Negro in Hollywood production Flaherty said, "The time will come when he will get his chance."

Hill fingered 20th-Fox's "The Longest Day" as prime example of film which should have featured Negro actors but didn't He contended that since there were "thousands upon thousands" of Negroes involved in the European theatre of operations in the Second World War, and more specifically in the Normandy invasion, alleged absence of Negroes in "Longest Day" made film "grossly inaccurate."

(Apprised of charge, Darryl F. Zanuck, the producer and also 20th prexy, declared: "Negro Marines and soldiers who were part of the United States forces made available by the government to be used in the battle sequences were used without discrimination or segregation and now are in the film in foreground action." Before pic opened last Oct. in N. Y. NAACP reps met with Zanuck and subsequently withdrew protest. Meanwhile the office of the chief of Military History of the Department of the Army has disclosed that of 60,000 men landed at the Utah and Omaha beaches approximately 1,700 were Negroes, none of them combat troops, though many participated in the landing operations in various support capacities.)

Insisting that the NAACP is not attempting to pressure Hollywood into becoming a "propaganda" medium for the Negro, Hill stated that they merely want Hollywood "to tell the truth."

A recent survey revealed that "less than one percent" of all Hollywood craft unions were Negroes, declared Hill. He further asserted that 15 IATSE shops were "lily-white" and named Studio Grips Local 80, Studio Projectionists, Local 165, Electrical Technicians Local 728, Cameraman's Local 659, Electrical Workers Local 40 and Sound technicians Local 695 as among the 15.

VARIETY asked Hill to specify means his organization might have in mind to implement greater use of the Negro actor. He said that he had none in mind, declaring that the NAACP was working for a "change in attitude" rather than specific casting stipulations. He also declined to go into any greater details on other ways in which organization intends to pursue their Hollywood goals. He said such specifics would be forth coming after the NAACP's national conference in Chicago which convened Monday. Groups reps, it might be noted, met with MPAA June 17 and agreed to huddle again "within 30 days."

Village Showman's Race Dilemma

Oxford, N.C., July 2.

The owner of this racially-troubled town's only theatre is faced with a dilemma besetting hundreds of small Southern Businessmen—the effect integration might have on his livelihood.

"I don't know what would happen if I opened the entire theatre to Negroes, and I don't know what will happen if I don't," said George Duffy, owner of the 400-seat Orpheum Theater. "I'm just a small businessman."

Negroes have always been admitted to the theatre, but had to sit in a segregated section in the balcony.

Racial friction began recently. Whenever the crowds gathered, the film house became center of the disturbance until Duffy closed the Orpheum altogether.

The owner must decide what he will do. Leaders of both white and Negro communities of Oxford will be waiting for his answer, sitting at a conference table in the mayor's office.

Negroes Go to Law On Won't-Sell-Colored Rule Of High Point Theatre

Greensboro, N.C., July 2.

Three High Point Negroes filed a petition here last week in U.S. Middle District Court asking for an injuction against the City of High Point and Key Theatres Inc. to permit them and all other Negroes to attend the Paramount Theatre in High Point.

The plaintiffs are Brenda Jean Fountain, 16, who sued through Mrs. Miriam W. Fountain as "next friend," and Della Mitchell and Edna J. Tomlin.

They asked for a preliminary and permanent injunction to prevent the defendants from enforcing "any policy or practice of racial segregation or exclusion against the plaintiff and others similarly situated in the use of Municipal Hall of the City of High Point, now leased and operated as a theatre called the Paramount Theatre . . ."

They said the hall has been leased to the theatre corporation since Feb. 21, 1950.

Miss Fountain said she had sought admission to the theatre on a number of occasions and was told by the woman ticket seller, "We have no accommodations for colored."

Della Mitchell said she tried to buy a ticket to the theatre last Feb. 8 and was told she could not buy one because she is a Negro. Edna Tomlin said she tried unsuccessfully to buy tickets in April of last year and last Feb. 11.

Hank Saperstein Angle On 'Hours to Darkness'

Hank Saperstein, television packager and show business financier, has acquired a major interest in a package involving Reuben Bercovitch as producer and William Ludwig as screen writer of "Two Hours to Darkness." This is a novel by Anthony Trew published by Random House in the United States and William Collins in England.

Put Negro Exclusion Charge on Docket Vs. Projectionists Local

San Francisco, July 2.

For the first time since its establishment in 1959, the State Fair Employment Practice Commission has filed a charge of racial discrimination against a labor union, Moving Picture Machine Operators Local 162 here.

The charge was formally filed by Commissioner C. L. Dellums, a vicepresident of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, on a complaint by Robert McKnight, a 27-year-old Negro, who said his application for membership in the local was turned down in June, 1962, at the same time three white men were admitted.

McKnight, who now works for the Post Office, was a motion picture projectionist in the Navy, and was a college student when he sought admission to the joint employers-union trainee program.

Union officials and their lawyer would not comment.

A public hearing—the fourth in the commission's history—will be held, but no date has been set. Under the FEPC law, if the commission holds for the complainant it can order the union to admit McKnight. The union then could fight the order in court if it chooses.

Charlotte Latest Dixie Community To Desegregate

Charlotte, N.C., July 2.

Charlotte's picture houses began a desegregation plan on June 18. The plan had been worked out by the Mayor's Community Relations Committee. Under the plan, Negro patrons designated by members of the committee will attend the local theatres in limited numbers during an interim period.

Full desegregation is expected "in the near future," Dr. John R. Cunningham, chairman of the committee, said.

A formal statement by Cunningham said in part:

"In the near future, we will survey the results. If there have been no problems . . . and I anticipate none . . . the theatres will then be opened to the general patronage of our Negro citizens. I am gratified that the theatre owners, like the motel and hotel owners, have been so cooperative in working with our committee. I know that the citizens of our community will accept this plan with tolerance and good will."

Cunningham's statement did not identify the theatres.

He explained that representatives of his committee had held several meetings with the theatre owners and managers since the Chamber of Commerce board of directors adopted on May 23 a resolution recommending desegregation of business establishments catering to the general public.

Screen Publicists Urges Desegregation Nationally

"Speed up desegregation of theatres so that every seat in every theatre in our country will be open to any ticket buyer, regardless of race, color or creed." That's the cry of the Screen Publicists Guild in letters sent to Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Assn., urging exhibitor organizations and their members to take immediate action "in the national interest and in the best interest of the motion picture industry and its reputation."

Guild's action is the result of its membership's unanimous vote at a recent meeting "to support all efforts towards prompt desegregation of motion picture theatres in the South and anywhere else in the nation where theatre segregation still exists."

The union also voted to establish a special committee to meet with film company managements with the object of expanding opportunities fo remployment of Negroes in the film advertising and publicity fields as an extension of the long-standing no-descrimination clause in all contracts between the Guild and pic companies.

Pickets Fail, SDIG Members Cross Line

Wilding Studio Agrees, However, to Meet Broadened Committee — No Discipline Imposed

Chicago, July 2.

Having failed to organize Wilding Inc. film studios in Chi through strike action, Screen Directors International Guild (Midwest) is calling upon the good offices of several other film and entertainment unions to use moral persuasion. The group is tabbed a fact finding committee and will act only as a "friend of the court" in accordance with the Taft-Hartley Act, which forbids secondary boycotts or unions "ganging up" on a company.

Wilding reps agreed to meet with the committee shortly after SDIG revealed a moratorium on picketing and the formation of the fact finding unit. It is composed of reps of IATSE Locals 476, 666, 780 and 732, Screen Actors Guild, American Federation of Musicians (Local 10) and SDIG.

Guild, which has been trying to obtain recognition as bargaining agent for the Wilding directors for several months, abandoned picketing when the studio's directors crossed picket lines to go to work, although they are members of the union. Spokesman said that the union had taken into account that the Wilding directors had worked for the company for many years and many owned stock in the firm through a stock option plan. He said that union discipline was "not advisable" (and probably not enforceable) at this time.

The organizing campaign at Wilding is considered important to Guild since it is the major holdout since the drive began in the spring. Most of the studios that signed with the union have only interim contracts, and the extension of the pacts will depend to a great extent upon what happens at Wilding. Despite the failure of the strike, SDIG expresses itself optimistic about the negotiations, particularly since Wilding has agreed to meet with the committee. A primary handicap before had been the failure of studio execs to show up at scheduled negotiations.

Ducking the Issue

Greensboro, N.C., July 2.

Here's a new angle on the white-Negro theatre integration hassle in the south. A Greensboro theatre man who declined to be quoted said:

"Integration will be handled soon on a gradual basis. If 25 or so show up, we'll admit them. But, we'll lower the price so much on the top balcony that they'll want to go up there."

Amarillo Accepts Token Integration

Amarillo, Tex., July 2.

Two Negroes "integrated" downtown Amarillo theatres Tuesday (25) about three hours after a previous demonstration was staged to protest racial segregation. About 30 Negroes, mostly youngsters, were refused tickets to the State and Paramount here when they arrived earlier en masse.

Jack King, manager of Interstate Theatres, suggested they might get a different reception if they came in smaller numbers. They followed his suggestion.

White and Negro leaders have been negotiating the past 10 days in an effort to determine integration policy, but several young Negroes said the talks had produced nothing.

Kick Virginia Law But Circuit Meanwhile Ends Separate Negro Areas

Washington, July 2.

Virginia's segregated seating laws were ruled unconstitutional Monday by a special three judge Federal Court. The court said the statutes violated the 14th Amendment.

The actual cases involved were already moot since the defendants —neighborhood theatres Inc. of Richmond—agreed later to private negotiations to desegregate their eight theatres in Northern Virginia.

Several other Virginia cities including Richmond also desegregated their houses despite the state seating law.

The suit was brought by two negro women who were turned away from two houses in the Washington suburban towns of Fairfax and Arlington, Virginia.

The now stricken Virginia law required anyone operating a theatre or other public hall to separate the races. It also said patrons refusing to take assigned seats were guilty of misdemeanors.

While tossing out the seating laws, the judges refused to issue a temporary injunction prohibiting houses from turning away negroes. They called it no longer necessary.

Issuing the ruling were Fourth Circuit Judge Albert Bryan and District Court Judges Oren Lewis and John Butzner.

'STUDENT ENGINEER'

Northwestern Film Dept. Shoots It For USIA

Department of Film of Northwestern U's School of Speech at Evanstn, Ill., is in process of completing a 35m documentary under a grant from the U.S. Information Agency. It's designed for showings abroad and intended to enhance understanding of the U.S. in foreign lands.

The film, entitled "Student Engineer," is one of six commissioned by the USIA to describe the varied roles of young people in America, with prints to go to 100 countries abroad.

"Engineer," produced by Northwestern graduates, details a day in the life of an engineering student who divides his time between studies and work at a factory where he gains practical experience.

Jack Ellis, associate professor in the department of radio, television and film, guides the student filmmakers.

A German Eady

the industry are involved in strategic maneuvers. The producers, who naturally regard Film Aid as a life-and-death matter, are out for the biggest slice of cake. German distribs appear to be in agreement on principle, but the Motion Picture Export Assn. member companies have so far reserved their position and not taken sides. They have asked for, and received, an assurance that they will be invited to give evidence before the Cultural Committee in due course. Dr. Martin, who heads that panel, had been set to confer with Eric Johnston last week, but the session had to be abandoned when the Johnston's trip was cancelled on medical advice.

The U.S. majors take the view that as they have 40% of the German market, they are the biggest single entity and will, per se, be the largest contributors to any aid proposal. For that reason, therefore, they have a bigger stake than any other industry, and want to be sure they get a fair crack of the whip from any new legislation, and are not left carrying an undue share of the burden.

There is little doubt that the Hollywood companies will go along with the Film Aid principle, though anxious about some of the details, particularly involving coproductions with other Common Market countries. It is understood, by the way, that the subsidy will apply equally to all German pix, including those financed by the American companies.

Germany, incidentally, represents Hollywood's third biggest foreign market, ranking only behind Britain and Italy. The native producers, who have been facing acute difficulties during the past few years, barely account for 25% of the playing time, and would, consequently, only be responsible for about one quarter of the Film Aid income.

military brass, is obliged to let the Russians have their way.

One of the unusual features of the production is that the Russians are not made the heavies they usually are in such subjects. Admittedly, they put on a show of force and call out the troops to halt the train, but they behave calmly and reasonably, knowing they have some right on their side. And there is also a forceful outburst from Jose Ferrer, a newsman riding on the train, who declares he has little sympathy for the refugee as it was the Germans who started the whole unhappy business, though he later relents when the lad has to be handed over.

Unfortunately, the direction does not take full advantage of the subject matter, and fails to build up either a claustrophobic atmosphere or adequate suspense. The verbal duels between the train commander, Sean Flynn, and the Russians lack the necessary dramatic punch.

The director also has made Ferrer an unnecessarily agressive character, thus diverting much sympathy from his role. Flynn, however, makes a convincing showing. Nicole Courcel is colorless as the nurse while Joseph Yadin (an Israeli) makes a lively Russian officer. Hans Joachim Schmiedel is a typically pathetic refugee. Technical credits are average, and there is a tuneful song over the credit tiles. Myro.

La Rimpatriata

(The Reunion)
(ITALIAN)

Berlin, July 2.

Galatea production and release. Stars Walter Chiari. Directed by Damiano Damiani. Screenplay, Damiani; script collaborators, Vittoriano Petrilli, Enrico Ribulsi, Ugo Liberatore; camera, Alessandro D'Eva; music, Roberto Nicolosi. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 100 MINS.

Cesare	Walter Chiari
Alberto	Francisco Rabal
Carla	Leticia Roman
Sergio	Riccardo Garrone
La Triste	Dominique Boshero
Nino	Mino Guerrini
Toro	Gastone Moschin
Larone	Jacqueline Pierreaux
Livio	Paul Guers

A tragi-comedy, revealing perceptive understanding of human behavior, "The Reunion" is distinguished by a fine stellar performance by Walter Chiari which gives the picture its real character and quality. Film has strong b.o. possibilities which could be hypoed by tightening of a few overdrawn sequences.

Having its world preem as the official Italian selection for the Berlin festival, the pic portrays the reactions of five men, all of whom were youthful friends, who plan a night out on the town. All have done well, with the exception of one who has a job in a picture theatre. But he was the one who was always the life and soul of the party when they were younger. And the others soon discover that he still has a way of charming women, even total strangers, over the telephone.

What starts out as a high spirited spree with girls picked up on the way, gradually imperceptibly but inevitably develops into a disaster. Walter Chiari, as the less affluent member of the group, has his fill of trouble: he's married, but has a mistress on the side, and the latter has decided to accept an offer of marriage to give their child a name and a home. As the night goes on, they move from one escapade to another, ending with a brutal beating up of Chiari after he's been cold-shouldered by a former flame.

The film is at its best when the story is pursuing a gay and lighthearted course, but the more serious incidents are credibly dovetailed into the general theme. There is one diverting scene when a blonde pickup is stretched out horizontally on a billiards table, and one of the men tees off a shot from her breast; and another, when all are driving along a highway, and a handsome negress puts her hand out of the window of a parallel car to flick the ash from her cigaret, only to have it caressed by another of the high-spirited gang.

Aside from Chiari's dominating performance, there is also first rate work from the other members of the cast. Leticia Roman is warmly appealing as one of the girls whose night out for fun ends on a note of sadness. Dominique Boschero is an attractive specimen of female sensuousness while Jacqueline Pierreux gives a forceful display of embittered womanhood. Francisco Rabal, Ricardo Garrone, Mino Guerrini and Gaston Moschin are the other men on the spree, and offer lively and polished aid.

Damiano Damiani has smoothly directed his own screenplay, and has shown a keen appreciation for clearcut characterization. Other credits are up to par. Myro.

Sahib, Bibi aur Ghulam

(King, Queen and Slave)
(INDIAN)

Berlin, July 2.

Guru Dutt Films (Bombay) production and release. Stars Meena Kumari, Guru Dutt, Rehman, Waheda Rehman. Directed by Abrar Alvi. Based on novel by Bimal Mitra; camera, V. K. Murthy; music, Hemant Kumar. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 120 MINS.

This Indian entry at the Berlin festival is a strange, uneasy mixture of moods and styles, which just don't blend into a complete whole. It starts off as a disarmingly naive comedy, played with charm and good humor. Then suddenly it changes to heavy and ponderous melodrama. This is extremely overlong, too, at two hours of running time, so it can only have very slight artie chances in the West.

The period is the turn of the 19th Century. There is an undercurrent of unrest as the peasants lose their land, and the British troops roam through the city looting the shops in the local market. But that aspect is hardly developed. For the first part, the emphasis is on a young country bumpkin who comes to the big city, locates a friend who works in the "big mansion," gets a job and is soon romantically entangled with his employer's daughter, but is too shy and fumbling to make much headway.

Running parallel with that theme is the despair of the lady of the manor who cannot prevail upon her husband to stay home at night, as he seems to prefer orgies with dancing girls and plenty of booze.

In a desperate bid to hold her man, she agrees to take a drink with him, and acts like she is making the ultimate sacrifice. In no time at all, she's acquired a taste for the hard stuff, becomes a confirmed alcoholic and drinks away the family fortune, while, ironically, her husband has become a teetotaller. Inevitably, she comes to a tragic end.

The naive style of the earlier part proves most appealing, and had it kept on that note, the pic might have been more palatable. But the transition to meller throws it off-key, though not, apparently, for local audiences. In India, it is rated among the top 10 films of the last 50 years.

Production is mounted on an ambitious scale, with several lavish sets and a wide range of attractive costumes. The two main femme roles are played by striking-looking actresses, and the male leads by handsome men. Unusual score by Hemant Kumar is mainly fascinating. Myro.

Young Aphrodites

(GREECE)

Berlin, July 2.

Minos Film and Anzervos Studios (Athens) release of a George Zervos and Nikos Kondouros production. Features Helen Prokopiou, Takis Emmanouel, Kleopatra Rota, Vangelis Joanides. Directed by Kondouros. Screenplay, Kostas Sfikas and Vassilis Vassilikos; camera, Giovanni Variano; music, Yian Markopoulos. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 89 MINS.

Apparently the passing of more than 2,000 years has made little change in the pattern of sexual behaviour of the human male or female, according to this Greek picture which based on an ancient myth and is set in the year 200 B.C. A dull, slow but exploitable item.

There's not much in the way of a plot, and what little story there is unspools at a leisurely and monotonous pace. A shepherd meets a married woman (whose husband is away fishing) and a 10-year old boy meets a 12-year old girl. Passion pursues its natural course, though in the case of the youngsters they appear to be groping until they spy the elder couple in the act.

Exploitation comes via the semi-nudity of both females, but some amusing and stimulating elements audiences may resent the continuous upper exposure by a mere child in what, is after all, a commercial pic with little art pretensions. According to a press handout, the cast is composed of non-pros. Their performances will do little to upset their amateur status. Technical credits are adequate. Myro.

Leven En Dood Of Het Land

(Life and Death in Flanders)
(BELGIAN)

Emile Degelin (Brussels) production. Directed by Degelin. Screenplay, Degelin, based on original stories by Karel van de Woestijne and Stijn Streuvels; camera, Paul Defru, Dirk Roelofs; music, Jos Mertens. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 82 MINS.

This Belgian production calls itself a documentary feature. It is divided into two parts and utilizes exceptional amateur players. The first part (based on novelette by Woestijne) concerns a dying farmer, the second one (based on story by Streuvels) has to do with a young worker who's forced to marry an ugly girl because the latter has a child with him.

While the first episode appears overly slow, often not exactly tasteful and neither fish nor fowl, the second one reveals Emile Degelin's directorial talents in several situations. He seems to have well caught the feel of life in the Flemish country and the nature of the people there.

There is some impressive genuineness about this part. Film, however, will have a tough time obtaining many dates. It's too much of an offbeater for any situation. This can be registered as an interesting effort of writer-producer-director Emil Degelin. Hans.

Garrincha — Allegria Do Povo

(Garrincha—Hero Of the People)
(BRAZIL)

Berlin, July 2.

Luiz Carlos Barreto production. Directed by Joaquim Pedro. Camera, Mario Carneiro. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 66 MINS.

This documentary on Garrincha, idolized Brazilian football player, right winger of the Brazilian teams that won the 1958 and 1962 World Cups, primarily is an item for the soccer fan. But it may also please other segments for it gives an interesting insight into Latin American sports enthusiasm. Taking into account that there are millions of football fans all over the world, film may qualify for some special situations, possibly if cut down also for dual programs.

Pic tells how Garrincha climbed up from a poor factory worker to a football (soccer) professional and star of his team, Botafogo, with a monthly income of half a million Cruzeiros. The soccer artist Garrincha is a simple but colorful, likeable fellow who has remained modest despite all the idolization.

Amusing thing about his life is that fate has pulled his leg seven times when it gave him (who wants so badly a son) seven daughters to date. There are some excellent shots which show Garrincha in action and, in all, the fascinating sports atmosphere is well caught. On the negative side, film is not always technically firstrate. Also, it could have shown more footwork of Garrincha. The commentary (in German at the Berlin Fest) bordered sometimes on the silly. Hans.

La Terraza

(The Roof Garden)
(ARGENTINA)

Berlin, June 25.

Internacional Films (Buenos Aires) release of a German Szulem production. Stars Graciela Borges, Leonardo Favio. Directed by Leopoldo Torre Nilsson. Screenplay, Beatriz Guido; camera, Ignacio Souto; editor, J. M. Paleo; music, Jorge Lopez Ruiz. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 88 MINS.

Claudia	Graciela Borges
Rodolfo	Leonardo Favio

Leopoldo Torre Nilsson, one of Argentine's best known directors, takes a long and perceptive look at youth in revolt—against convention, authority and parental control. It is, in fact, a kind of "dolce vita" treatment of the smart young set of Buenos Aires. While it does not make a wholly satisfying picture, it has several intriguing and stimulating elements which should give it fair arty chances overseas.

The roof garden in which virtually the entire story is played out is at the top of a fashionable B.A. apartment house, complete with swimming pool. A dozen or so teenagers, all in bathing suits, have shut themselves off from the outside world and their only contact with their families is through the grandchild of the caretaker, a precocious girl who runs errands and delivers messages. Each time the adults attempt to break into the youngster's privacy, they threaten to toss the child over the rooftops, and one such warning to the elders almost ends in disaster.

The teenagers spend most of their time cavorting in the pool, swilling whisky, pairing off and making love, but their rebellion seems to have little point. It is more in the nature of an escapade in which high-spirited youth is determined to have its fling and defy the conventions, rather than making a stand on any stated principle.

The characters are mainly casually drawn, but Torre Nilsson's perceptive direction keeps them in focus and gives the story some meaning. The youthful rebellion comes to its inevitable end one dawn. And there is a neat touch of symbolism in the final sequences—some months after the spree—as the little girl, now lame from the escapade, plays in the empty pool, with the autumn leaves dropping on the roof garden.

The mainly young cast perform with an appropriate display of high spirits, and there are some interesting cameos, notably from a priest who appeals to the rebellious youth from a helicopter hovering over the roof garden. The two principal roles are played in lively style by Graciela Borges and Leonardo Favio. Belita is suitably precocious as the child while the priest is effectively portrayed by Fernando Vegal. As in all Torre Nilsson's pix, technical standards are okay. Myro.

Tarzan's Three Challenges

age, so, too, have the characters of fiction who populated those places. Even the once pristine real estate of Tarzan, darkest Africa, is now known more for its political upheavals than its primeval splendors.

In an effort, then, to prevent Tarzan from becoming a ludicrous anachronism in a world looking to space geography for its new mysteries and exotic characters of fantasy, producer Sy Weintraub and his creative unit have gradually converted the Edgar Rice Burroughs character from the simple ape man to a globetrotting troubleshooter, a kind of one-man Peace Corps in loin cloth. But, in thus broadening the scope, they have stripped the character of much of its distinguishing identity.

In "Tarzan's Three Challenges," he has been transplanted to Thailand. Filmed there in its entirety, it is, by modern story and production standards, probably one of the best installments in the 44-year-old, 34-chapter-old screen series, and, thanks to the inevitable moppet support, very likely will show a boxoffice profit. Yet the new Tarzan lacks the imagination-stimulating qualities that made this series so successful. Much of the romance has gone out of the marriage between character and audience. The series may be hanging on the thread of tradition, living on borrowed time. Today's Tarzan is a man without a country and with only a shred of his former personality.

In this Berne Giler-Robert Day screenplay, directed skillfully by the latter, Tarzan (Jock Mahoney) is summoned to Thailand to escort a young spiritual heir from a monastery to his rightful throne at the head of an ancient land. To protect his charge, Tarzan must ward off the challenge of the brother (Woody Strode) of the dying ruler, whom he defeats in an impressive two-man tournament of strength and courage. Some interesting socio-political ramifications of the power struggle between Strode, who represents the radical younger faction of the tribe, and the young heir-apparent, who represents tradition, are touched upon but eventually submerged by the requirements of physical action.

For the purists and the kiddies, there are vines in the Thailand jungle for Tarzan to go tree-hopping on. And Mahoney, with his natural athletic prowess, is able to make a gymnasium out of the jungle in the best Tarzan tradition. Strode is a most impressive figure as the antagonist, and also briefly enacts the role of the dying chieftain. Ricki Der does capably as the young ruler and Tsuruko Kobayashi contributes the right note of concern as his devoted nursemaid.

The production is notable for a smattering of culture. In addition to this ethnic flavoring, there are also impressive action sequences, among them a roaring forest fire. Ted Scaife's photography is expert, as is Fred Burnley's editing. Among other outstanding staff efforts, Joseph Horovitz's music plays a vital role in the production with its exotic strains and explanatory emphasis of key dramatic points. Tube.

Trading-Even

also import Russ product. And as far as the actual trading with the Russians is concerned, Shore says "they're easier to deal with than any other country." This is largely because the machinery is already established to trade via the cultural exchange route, terms for which have existed status quo since their establishment in 1958.

Trade Even

The way it works is that an importer pays $60,000 for a standard ratio film or $67,000 for a wide screen pic and Russians pay the same. It's an even exchange. This keeps the dollar balance stable and the flow even. Although it is also possible to deal outside the framework of the cultural exchange setup, neither side is anxious to do so. In the case of his importation of "Ivan," the Russians got "Richard III" and "There Was a Crooked Man," both UA films, at the appropriate price per pic. Shore first had to buy them from UA, of course.

Considering the price paid, some Russ releases garner okay rentals for their importers. In 1958 Shore imported a spectacle exploitation item called "The Sword and the Dragon" which grossed about $600,000, he estimates. "Ballad of a Soldier" grossed about $300,000 just in art house. "A Summer to Remember" should hit over $180,000. The majors have had some too, but haven't done too well primarily because they are less flexible than the indies. Among the Russ film handled by majors have been "Cranes Are Flying," "Othello," "Fate of a Man," "Swan Lake" and "Quiet Flows the Don." Shore also notes that some majors have "a certain reluctance" to deal with the Russians because of fear of stockholders' beefing and other factors which he considers foolish.

Do-It-Yourself!

Shore notes that, because of the reluctance of majors to handle distribution, he must deal with indie distribs of whom he says, "Give 'em a hit and they're all heroes, but give 'em a marginal picture and it dies in the vaults." Instead, he declares, "I'd rather distribute myself in 200 theatres and get the money directly than get a distributor to get me 2,000 theatres and gives me trouble." Accordingly, he has no distrib for "Ivan" but made the deal for the Murray Hill with Rugoff himself. "No distrib would do as well as I did because he's too afraid for his other pictures to press for strong terms."

On July 4 (ironically) he flies to Russia to dicker for the importing of their seven-hour epic filmization of "War and Peace." Among the points in the discussions will be the trimming of the film to three-and-a-half hours for U. S. screening and the bringing of U.S. and British actors to Moscow to dub an English language version. Says Shore of the international film biz, "everybody has a country these days. Joe Levine has Italy and France, Continental has England, UA has Greece. I might as well have a part of someplace too."

Braid for Harold Roth

Harold Roth, general sales manager of Samuel Bronston Distributions, the past week was elected a vicepresident of the organization.

In another move Murray M. Kaplan has joined the company in an exec sales capacity under Roth. Kaplan is a former v.p.-general sales manager of Medallion Pictures and prior to this was with Warners and United Artists.

'Cleopatra' In 106 Heat; Film Social Season Peak Of Arizona's Big Burg

Phoenix, July 2.

Arizona Gov. Paul Fannin, fronted a muster of political, professional, social and other regional V.I.P.'s with their ladies to the blast-off of "Cleopatra" at the downtown 1,400-seat Paramount theatre June 26. This black-tie benefit for the Phoenix Mental Health Assn. was the social bash of the season.

Mrs. Richard F. Harless, chairwomen of the Assn., predicts, after the official audit, a $8,000 contribution to the coffers of this deserving charity. Considering the scant three weeks involved creating interest in this preem, coupled with the stifling 106 degree local heat-wave, the huge success of this affair is an enviable promotion.

The normal Paramount tops for "Cleo" will be $3.75 but for this gala debut the tariff was elevated to a $10 minimum and skyrocketed to $50 for the status-seekers whom Mrs. Harless tabs as "the Golden Bell circle" whose lure for the additional cash was a pre-theatre champagne dinner hosted by Gus Lampe at his plush Arizona Manor's Holiday House.

The pic itself should be a local fiscal blockbuster. Advance sales are hefty and the local press gave this fable the red carpet treatment. The local critics comments approached the can-do-no-wrong stand.

to approve all deals for Fox product. Beja, in effect, has become director general of the Fox-Radio setup with full authority to readjust personnel, merge branches and, in general, exercise complete administrative control.

While sale figures are unavilable in Madrid film circles, reliable reports indicate that Ramos and Beja, backed by a financier combine, shelled out over a million ($) to acquire Fox assets and control.

Official confirmation of the Fox takeover by Radio Films will probably be withheld for at least the 1963-64 distrib season. During that period, Fox will distribute "Cleopatra" and Radio will release "The Leopard." Ramos, who shares one or Spain's biggest exhib networks with his brother Luis, has already earmarked "Cleopatra" for his Madrid showcase, Cine Conde de Duque, having advanced Fox 6,000,000 pesetas ($100,000) in addition to a one-year first-run guarantee.

from all picturemaking areas. The company has yet to make one of these opuses but sources feel that this production arm won't be put to work making vidfilms and that its initial idea will be preserved. In any case, the people involved with these pix aren't big names yet either.

Universal has been building its producer, director and actor rosters heavily in recent months but, the question arises, isn't this being done mostly for its main (and only so far) function — that of making features? Nobody concerned is doing much talking lately about it, not even NBC from whence the first noise came. There have been comments from Allied States Assn. and various exhibs all backing the idea and so Universal can proceed with a clear conscience on that score. But it all bolls down to a practical consideration in the end, observers feel, and that will make the actual working out of the program very interesting to watch they say.

Pitt's 1st Hardtop In 30 Years Among Four New Stearn Openings

Pittsburgh, July 2.

Cousins Ernie and George Stern disclosed last week that their Associated Theatres would unveil four units within the month.

The first will be the Forum in Squirrel Hill, which will be Pitt's first new hardtop in 30 years. It will be an art house, seating 370, and will be in Squirrel Hill where two other art houses, the Squirrel Hill and the Beacon, are now located. Tentatively set to be the opening attraction is "Mouse on the Moon."

Another hardtop, The Monroe, seating 900 will be in the busy suburban area of Monroeville. The other two are combination drive-ins with indoor seats and will be the North Side on Williams Road in Pitt's North Side and The Canal Road Drivein, which will be the firm's first house in Cleveland. These additions will bring the total of Associated properties in the tri-state area to 30.

The Sterns have three other locations set and are still looking for sites in all likely areas on Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio.

"We are not stopping, we believe in the future of the theatre business," Ernie Stern said in his general description of the firm's future plans.

He is the president of the firm and the son of Norbert Stern, who built Pitt's first drive-in (the South Park) which was the third drive-in built in the U. S. The elder Stern was primarily a real estate man and the circuit didn't really start moving until the boys took over in 1959 when the circuit had ten houses.

Along with his cousin George, who is the promotion man and v.p. of the firm, the Sterns moved downtown when they acquired the J. F. Harris along with a few Harris nabe houses. They then took over the Fulton from the Shea circuit.

Wilder His Only Dean; I.A.L. Diamond Scripts Three for Mirisch Co.

Hollywood, July 2.

I.A.L. Diamond stipulates that he'll work only with Billy Wilder, in a three-pix contract he's just inked with Mirisches. Writer, who has been on a pic-to-pic basis on Wilder's last five films, will get a participation in trio, also first time he's ever entered into such an arrangement.

First two pix will be "The Private Lives of Sherlock Holmes" and "Dazzling Hour." "Holmes" is skedded for a summer start in England, but if Peter O'Toole, set for title role, isn't available pic will be postponed in favor of "Hour." Dean Martin and either Jack Lemmon or Peter Sellers—latter slated for Dr. Watson character in "Holmes"—are expected to star in "Hour."

JAMES STEWART DEALS IN TRADE SUNSHINE

Dallas, July 2.

During a brief stopover here en route to Fort Worth to join his family, James Stewart stated that Hollywood isn't making as many pictures but they are better. Stewart has just completed "Take Her, She's Mine" with Sandra Dee and Audrey Meadows for 20th-Fox.

When asked about the studio he noted that the company's stock is on the rise, and expressed belief that it would pull out of its present difficulties in good condition.

Stewart said he has always been optimistic about the future of Hollywood as the world's film capital, and that the city "will come out fine" despite the current rash of foreign based productions.

He declared his conviction that Hollywood would survive the recent blasts directed at overly demanding stars adding new Hollywood is better than the old. He did regret the demise of the studio system which allowed young actors to gain valuable experience in many pictures before attacking a major role.

Mississippi-Louisiana TOA Units Meet Jointly

Mississippi and Louisiana Theatre Owners of America organizations held their 22d annual combined convention in Biloxi, Miss., last week. The meeting, which elected officers for the coming term for the respective exhib groups, was also addressed by Robert Selig, v.p. of National General Corp. who keynoted, and George Roscoe, TOA director of exhibitor relations.

Selig discussed the "audience awards" promotion currently being considered by the Congress of Motion Picture Organizations and Talaria, the closed circuit color theatre tv system leased earlier this year by National Generel from General Electric. Roscoe discussed the program of his organization on behalf of exhibs.

Mississippi Theatre Owners voted another year in office for its present slate of officers, including board chairman Ed Ortte, prez Stanley L. Taylor, veeps B. T. Jackson, John Williams and E. W. Clinton and secretary-treasurer Lloyd Royal Jr. Louisiana TOA elected a new slate of officers which includes L. C. Montgomery as board chairman, Charles Bazzell as prez, Don Stafford as first v.p., Ted Crosby as second v.p., Clare Woods as third veep, Mrs. Gene Barnette as secretary and E. T. Colonge as treasurer.

WB'S 'DISTANT TRUMPET' LOCATIONS AT GALLUP

Albuquerque, July 2.

Stanton Raps House Probe Into Web Coverage of Civil Rights Issue As Perilously Close to Censorship'

Washington, July 2.

CBS prexy Frank Stanton almost got a hotfoot trying to dance around the Dixie segregationist melody.

Testifying before the Senate Communications subcommittee on equal time, Stanton was blasted by Sen. Strom Thurmond (D-S.C.) for CBS' following "the NAACP line" in covering civil rights news.

Thurmond demanded to know why networks gave more exposure to the murder and funeral of NAACP leader Medgar Evans in Jackson, Miss. than to the slayings of white people in Lexington, N.C. and Washington, D.C.

After much prodding by Thurmond, Stanton said he didn't know about the specifics in the Lexington and Washington cases, but promised to write the Senator with details on CBS's comparative coverage of all events.

Stanton repeatedly defended the objectivity and responsibility of his news staff and said CBS doesn't make news judgments on color.

"Don't you care about white people?" Thurmond asked.

"I didn't say that," Stanton replied.

When Thurmond finished another blast, subcommittee chairman Sen. John Pastore (D-R.I.) told Stanton he could have equal time saying "You can make a speech too, if you want."

This set off a wrangle between Thurmond and Pastore. Thurmond said Pastore was trying to justify Stanton's position. Pastore said he was just trying to give Stanton a chance to finish his answer.

Thurmond said he had a right to inject and the chairman "could take it and like it."

Pastore told Thurmond he could "inject but not interrupt."

When that hassle cooled down, Stanton raised the question of a network having to justify its news coverage to a Senate Committee.

Pastore said Thurmond's request was proper. A committee can't tell a network what to do, but like FCC it can ask for information, Pastore said.

Stanton said investigations of how news is handled is getting "perilously close" to censorship.

Pastore agreed but said there was a line of demarcation and the committee had the right to review the record.

NBC board chairman Robert Sarnoff missed Thurmond's anti-web rebukes when he testified earlier in the week. Thurmond was absent when Sarnoff was on the stand, but earlier in the day he made a similar blast about network coverage of civil rights.

In anticipation of possible Thurmond questions, however, NBC staffers had prepared figures in the interim between Thurmond's remarks and Sarnoff's appearance to show NBC was airing both sides of the crisis.

Ed Murrow Presses Attack on House's Cut Of USIA Appropriation

Washington, July 2.

In case anyone didn't hear him the first time, U.S. Information Agency director Edward R. Murrow again attacked the House of Representatives for its hatchet job on his agency's budget.

In comparison with his tempered criticism of last week, Murrow gathered all his phrase making powers to blast the House for its "vote of indifference," the "folly of frugality" and "short-changing" the effort to speak for the U.S. abroad.

Admitting he was departing from tradition in making such speeches, Murrow told the National Education Assn. in Detroit he had the responsibility to warn of the results of "shoe string financing."

Murrow bemoaned the absence of lobbyists and vested interests to push USIA's cause in Congress.

He again pledged to go to the Senate to get the $15,000,000 cut restored.

Rocky Marciano Now TV Exec: Nat'l Telepix VP

Rocky Marciano, former world's heavyweight champ, has joined National Telepix Inc., a producer of children's series, as viceprexy of public relations. Marciano will also concentrate on developing sports programs for syndication.

National Telepix currently is riding with "Mischief Makers," "Comedy Capers" and "Wally Western." Edward N. White is prexy.

NBC-TV Folding Colonial, Bows Peacock Studio

The Colonial Theatre, which until now has been one of NBC-TV's two prime color facilities in N. Y., closes in September when "Price Is Right" leaves for ABC-TV. The closing of the Colonial and the opening of NBC's new giant Peacock Studio in 30 Rockefeller Plaza were planned months ago.

The Colonial, an old RKO vaudeville house, was opened for tv on Nov. 15, 1952 and was described by the company as its own "marvel of electronic progress in every aspect of engineering." In many ways it was. It had a powerful and intricate lighting system — the "most powerful and intricate," NBC said. It's saying much the same thing today: "Latest developed color facilities, two new lobbies, portable seating, 700 kw lighting and ultra-modern decor" go into Peacock. Colonial could only deliver 480 kw at the flip of a button.

The Peacock is actually massive. It has 10,000-square feet of floor space. Even with the loss of Colonial, the size of this new color studio (it'll continue to be used for black-and-white election coverage as it was when it was just plain Studio 8-H) and the continuation of three smaller studios at 30 Rock. and big Studios 1 and 2 in Brooklyn will give the network plenty of room for color in N. Y.

The Peacock Studio was opened formally last week. But instead of being one week old, it is, with 8-H a part of the past, more like 29 years and at least one week old, with a very new face.

SAMMY KAYE SUES BRASSELLE FOR 600G

Sammy Kaye has filed suit in N. Y. Supreme Court against Keefe Brasselle and CBS-TV, for over $600,000 damages.

Bandleader contends he entered into an agreement as performer and musical conductor on the program for 12 weeks. Among other claimed damages, Kaye contends that in order to enter the deal with the defendants, he had to forgo band bookings to the extent of $120,000. He said he was used in only one segment of the series, and attempts to clarify the situation by him for the season, were frustrated by defendants. His solo stint was scheduled for last night (Tues.).

Metromedia Borrows $7.5 Mil. for KTTV Buy

Metromedia Inc., parent company of the Metropolitan Broadcasting radio-tv chain, is floating a 15-year $7,500,000 loan at 5¾% interest to institutional investors.

Coin is being used to pay for the recent acquisition of KTTV in Los Angeles.

MICHEL TO SSC&B AS VEEP OVER RADIO-TV

Werner Michel, at one time tv chieftain at Reach, McClinton agency, will join Sullivan, Stauffer, Colwell & Bayles as veepee and director of the radio tv department.

Harry Ommerle continues as senior veepee in charge of radio-tv and Phil Cohen, manager of the radio-tv department, moves to the American Tobacco account team.

CBS-TV Angling Single Sponsor For 5 Specials

CBS-TV, which is close to 90% sold out on its regular nighttime schedule for next season, now is turning its attention to the sale of its few unsold specials. They number five and they carry a price tag of $2,000,000 in program and time charges. Web is seeking one sponsor, if at all possible to pick up the tab feeling that the variety of the special mix would give the desired sole sponsor a wide range of potential audiences.

The specials include the Ingrid Bergman starrer "Hedda Gabler," the Peter Ustinov original drama in which he stars along with Anthony Quinn, the Robert Goulet-Carol Lawrence outing, the "Man Who Bought Paradise," a vidfilm drama which had been envisioned as one of many dramatic specials last season, and an outing of the British Royal Ballet.

The number of non-news pub-affairs specials on all the networks have declined over the years. CBS-TV, unlike NBC-TV, the past few seasons has been very guarded in telecasting specials. Perhaps because there are fewer specials around on all the networks now, or perhaps for other reasons but there seems to be a greater prospect list of potential advertisers for specials this selling season as opposed to previous seasons. The number of prospects, according to one sales exec, is about 50 advertisers, not bad considering the comparative scarcity of unsold specials making the rounds for next season.

AFTRA MAPPING NEW DEAL FOR SPOT PAY

Hollywood, July 2.

AFTRA is currently evolving a wholly different formula for payments on radio transcription spots, and the new proposals will be presented at the union's national convention, opening here July 10-14. The new format will be hinged on population coverage, it was disclosed by Claude McCue, local exec secretary.

The exec also revealed that there will be demand AFTRA will seek increases in wages in certain categories on commercials one on tv tape. Emphasis this year by committees and caucuses is on teleblurbs.

About 500 delegates from locals throughout the U.S. are expected for the convention which will meet at the Ambassador hotel.

CBS Radio's 6-Yr. High

A six-year high in sales volume for CBS Radio was hit in June.

According to George Arkedis, sales v.p., the web's 63 "Dimension" programs per week are sold out for the seven days ending July 21, 1963. This situation generally holds throughout the summer.

News on the hour weekdays and weekends is also virtually SRO. Renewal and new business signed during June includes Faribault Woolen Mills and Beep Fruit Drink, Church and Dwight, Rexall Drug, Mennen, Emery Industries, Warner-Lambert, and Liggett & Myers.

NBC Renews Leyden

Hollywood, July 2.

Bill Leyden was signed to a new five-year pact as a daytime m.c. with NBC-TV, deal giving Leyden the right to work elsewhere in the nighttime hours.

Still Among the Living

Hollywood, July 2.

In a medium noted for an annual cancellation rate of about 40 shows a year, only a handful of vidpix series—nine to be exact—will head into next season with seven or more years vintage. Kingpin of all the Hollywood film series from a standpoint of age is "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet," heading into its 12th semester on ABC-TV.

Jack Benny is heading into his 14th season on CBS-TV, and Red Skelton into his 13th on the same web, but Benny converted to film only in recent years, still does some shows on tape, while Skelton's is a taped series.

Runnerup to "Ozzie" among the filmed series from the longevity view are "The Danny Thomas Show" on CBS-TV and "Death Valley Days" spot booked, both going into their 11th frames. Next in line among the vets are "Lassie," 10th year on CBS-TV; "Gunsmoke," "The Alfred Hitchcock Show" CBS-TV, and "Walt Disney Presents," NBC-TV, all readying their ninth innings; "Perry Mason," CBS-TV, and "Wagon Train," ABC-TV, going into their seventh years.

ABC-TV's live entry, Lawrence Welk, is going into his ninth year next semester. Of course, the veteran of all is Ed Sullivan's CBS-TV show, a 15-year-old.

There have been a number of changes and shifting in some of the long-runners, with "Gunsmoke," for example, having been expanded from 30 minutes to an hour in recent years; "Wagon Train," from 60 min. to 90 min. next season; the Hitchcock series, from 30 min. to 60 min.

And "Wagon Train" moved from NBC-TV; Thomas from ABC-TV to CBS-TV; Disney from ABC-TV to NBC-TV, in the course of their long runs.

Schoenbrun as Freelance Journalist

Mulls TV Documentary Production, After Book On DeGaulle

Washington, July 2.

Although David Schoenbrun and CBS have parted company after all these years, the former Paris and Washington bureau head and chief European correspondent of the network definitely intends to remain a reporter, using both the written and spoken word.

He has been approached with Governmental and public relations offers and easily could become a fixit man for U.S. firms wanting in on Common Market gravy, but he is turning such suggestions down flatly.

Instead, Schoenbrun is exploring the possibility of producing a few tv documentaries a year, allowing him time also to write a column and/or magazine articles. At the moment he is finishing a book on Charles de Gaulle ("Man on a Dark Horse: The Life and Times of Charles de Gaulle").

Schoenbrun insists there are no hard feelings either way in his bow-out from CBS. And the fact that the net settled generously with him while his lawyer, Paul Porter (former FCC chairman), looked on, leaves him in shape financially to be in no hurry about deciding which job to take next.

He wants to divide his future years into four parts, spending three months in Washington, three in Europe, three in Africa and Asia and the remaining three reflecting on the state of world affairs and writing in depth. This potentially could make him a global know-it-all.

Schoenbrun has sold his posh Washington town house and has rented apartments in both Washington and Paris.

The Inside Story

The true story about his final break with CBS is said to be this:

Schoenbrun wanted to remain as chief Washington correspondent, but his web bosses wanted to take advantage of his European contacts in the Common Market has-

Bill Small New Mgr. Of CBS News D.C. Bureau

Bill Small, director of news of CBS News Washington Bureau, has been named bureau manager and news director.

As bureau manager, Small succeeds Bob Allison, who recently was named producer-director for Europe for CBS News. Prior to joining the CBS News Washington Bureau in July of last year, he had been news director at WHAS and WHAS-TV, Louisville, Ky.

ABC News Inks Bob Drew As 'Outside' Prod.

ABC news chief Jim Hagerty, in the market for documentaries made by freelance producers, has wrapped up a deal with Bob Drew for a 60-minute show on the U.S. racial conflict to be aired in the fall. Hagerty said that all such shows would be produced under the supervision of the ABC News department. ABC is interested in "outside" shows in view of the fact that its own special projects division, under John Secondari, is now preoccupied with producing eight one hour documentaries next season for both Philco and Upjohn.

Drew formerly had been linked up with ABC as producer of the initial "Bell & Howell Closeup" shows. At that time, he was working for Time-Life Inc. Currently Drew is freelancing and will likely do additional shows for ABC-TV.

Hagerty also has his own ideas about the use of Telstar relays in the coverage of events like President Kennedy's European trip. Where feasible, he is asking for the possibility for each network to relay some of its own material rather than using the communications satellites on a strictly pooled basis. He noted that pooled arrangements were preferable on events like the Pope's coronation or a major speech. But where a development permits the use of editorial judgment, Hagerty would prefer each network to feed its own material via Telstar.

Pilot 'Hoofer' Pilot

Hollywood, July 2.

Desilu Studios is plotting a pilot based on "Letters of a Hoofer to His Ma," by Jack Donahue, and production chief Jerry Thorpe has signed Ed Jurist and Bud Nye to script.

Jurist was formerly a producer with Warner Bros. Desilu is projecting the vehicle as a half-hour comedy aimed at the 1964-65 season.

Atlantic City, July 2.

With the Democratic National Convention due to meet here Aug. 24 of next year, AT&T's long lines department has received permission to construct a 200-foot high steel tower and booster station capable of handling five two-way television circuits. The tower will be located in the vicinity of Port Republic, about 15 miles from the city. Construction is to begin immediately. The new facility is a must for the handling of the political convention's communications.

The signal from four television and radio networks, with one channel as a spare, will be handled by the tower. It will also tie into the new trans-Atlantic cable between the United States and

AFFILS KAYO PILOTS IN A POKE

More 90-Min. Shows in Wings

Hollywood, July 2.

Acid test for the 90-minute telefilm series is expected to come next season, when a trio of the elongated skeins will appear on the networks. Mindful of fact that if even one of those series should score a hit, it could presage a trend, a number of telefilmeries are quietly making plans for 90-minute projects—with a big "if" attached.

The "if," of course, is whether or not the trio do well, and on a financial basis, whether or not a network will pick up the tab. While studios will invest in development of such a project, obviously they want a network co-production deal when it comes to a pilot which could be a very expensive undertaking.

Three longies for next season are "The Virginian," due back for its second season; "Arrest and Trial," and the expanded version of "Wagon Train," all from Revue studios. "Virginian" is on NBC-TV, the others on ABC-TV. About a year ago, there was much the same sentiment among the telefilmeries because of the advent of "Virginian," but projects being readied in case that one hit were quietly shelved, since the series didn't really prove anything, one way or another.

However, with a threesome due plus the possibility of a two-hour vidfilm deal from Revue-NBC-TV in 1964-65, the various studios are taking no chances on being caught short.

Thus, there are 90-minute series in the works at Four Star, Desilu, Screen Gems, MGM-TV and NBC-TV, among others. Some of the studios are playing it cagey with a form of "insurance" by plotting longie projects as "either-way" ventures—they could be converted into 60 or 90-minute series, depending on what happens when the new season opens.

Key figures in all this are the networks, of course, since without the co-operation via a financial tie-in plus definite web interest, no 90-minute series has a chance. Pilots are occasionally still made without network co-financing, but that is on shorter length series, and even this practice is vanishing. No company is apt to go ahead on the expensive 90-minute show without network backing.

Run for the Hills, Men, Lee J. Cobb Is Busting Out All Over Against TV

By DAVID KAUFMAN

Hollywood, July 2.

"The theatre is the actor's medium. Movies are the director's medium. TV is nobody's medium." So says Lee J. Cobb, beginning his second season as a star of Revue's 90-min. "The Virginian." Cobb, an outspoken fellow, has no use for (1) Madison Ave.; (2) critics; (3) the present system under which tv operates; (4) "nitwit" Congressmen who complain about too many long-hair shows; (5) sponsor control of program content; (6) ratings; (7) commercials.

On the other hand, Cobb is happy with his deal with Revue, which permits him six months a year to do other media. And, he admits, for the first time in 33 years as an actor, he has security, via his tv compensation.

Cobb, on a p.a. trek east last year to hypo the series, uttered a few choice words anent the quality of the show, which had both NBC-TV and Revue wincing. "I've been a thorn in their (Revue's) side. They suffered; they bit their nails, but never said a word to me. I learned later NBC said 'keep him away from interviews'," Cobb recalls, adding "a sense of decency is involved—you don't undermine what yor are involved in."

'Paid' Enthusiasm

But taking the long look at the medium, Cobb feels "enthusism is paid for in tv. It comes out of Madison Ave., one of the evils of the business. Where are those people when a series is in the throes of

20th-TV Pitches 'Berle On Comedy'

Hollywood, July 2.

Recently formed documentary branch of 20th-Fox TV is in negotiations for Milton Berle to star four one-hour long specials labeled "Berle on Comedy."

Likelihood is if negotiations are finalized, such shows would be on NBC-TV, since Berle is under contract to that web, and he is now discussing it with the network.

Jesse Sandler and Malvin Wald, heads of the Westwood documentary division, have been in negotiations with Berle and his rep, the William Morris agency. Clips of comedians going back 60 years would be utilized in the specials, with Berle as star giving the history of comedy, and interpolating his own analyses of various greats of the comedy world.

MAHARIS MAY TAKE OTHER ROUTES TO WORK

A Lancer Productions motion seeking a temporary injunction to restrain George Maharis from working as an entertainer for anyone but the vidfilmery was denied by Judge Samuel Silverman of the N. Y. Supreme Court last week.

Lancer producer Herbert B. Leonard, who turns out "Route 66," had sought the motion to prevent the thesp from working elsewhere on grounds he is under contract to Lancer, and on suspension for failing to appear and work in the series. As a result of the court decision, Maharis was able to keep a tv guestint Monday (1) on CBS' "Celebrity Talent Scouts."

Racing Assn. Raps FCC Proposal To Curb Turfcasting

Washington, July 2.

The National Assn. of State Racing Commissioners called FCC's proposed turfcasting curbs an attempt to "blackout legimate news to over 61,000,000 horse racing fans."

The Commissioners filed their objection to proposed FCC rules allowing broadcasts only of two special events a year and races with a $25,000 or more purse.

Assn. prexy Neil Curry said the rules discriminate against the best policed and most soundly regulated spectator sport in this country. He said there is more illegal gambling in other sports.

Curry said his group opposes off track gambling but that FCC's attempt to control it "would only serve to cripple the legitimate business aspects of horse racing."

The turfers also submitted a legal memorandum saying Commission lacked legal power and authority to adopt the rules.

WHOO Rejoins ABC-AM

Station WHOO, Orlando, Fla. has rejoined the ABC Radio network after operating independently for the past four years.

The web had been out of the central Florida market since 1961.

WANT SAMPLES TO SATISFY FCC

Hollywood, July 2.

Filmed shows sold to the networks without a pilot have created a vexing problem for the webs. Some stations have notified webs that time won't be cleared until they've seen a "sample" of the series. This could effect up to 10 new shows on the three networks, which are having trouble getting enough ordered stations to satisfy the sponsor. It all stems from the FCC ruling that each station will be held responsible for the shows it broadcasts and is further fortified by the termination of option time Sept. 10. How live shows will be affected is still to be determined.

Sponsors, and there is a multitude of minute buyers, have held off buying into a show that was sold without a pilot. The stations insist that since they are being held responsible for what goes out over their frequency they want to know what they're getting. They have told the networks "either feed it to us or ship the film." The only clearances the webs are sure of are their own owned and operated stations. Yet one such is said to have rejected CBS-TV's 6:30-7 p.m. nightly news strip. The networks are particularly disturbed by the reaction in the two-station markets. There's always the possibility of looking around for something better. The three-channel cities pose less of a problem. Shows held over from last season are in the clear on station clearance.

Among the filmed shows sold to the networks for next season without a pilot are Robert Taylor, Phil Silvers, Richard Boone, "Great Adventure," "Arrest and Trial," Bill Dana, "Bob Hope Anthology," "Kraft Suspence Theatre" and "Petticoat Junction." There's no problem with Hope as Chrysler sponsors all the way. The others are most scatter buys. How live shows will be dealt with is still being studied but it is generally agreed that a presentation on closed circuit would be acceptable, with enough of the show on tape to satisfy even the doubters.

British Associated TV Pushes 'Stingray' Series Despite Threat of Tax

London, July 2.

Associated Television, leading British telefilm producer which is going cold on high-cost film production in view of the proposed tax on ad income, has nevertheless given the go-ahead to AP Films, an independent production outfit, to make 26 episodes of a new puppet series.

The series, "Stingray," is costing more than $12,500 an episode and will run up a total production cost in the region of $350,000. The new skein employs the successful Supermarionation technique — whereby puppet mouth movements are electronically synchronized with the dialog on magnetic tape—as has been pioneered on the "Supercar" and "Fireball XL5" puppet series which emanated from the AP Films stable.

"Stingray" stories deal with the underwater adventures of a submarine and crew and via the discovery of the lost city of Atlantis, yarns will involve explorations of the center of the earth.

According to Leslie Harris, London production executive with ITC — the wholly-owned production-distribution subsidiary of ATV — several production improvements have effected for the new series.

Not only has the AP Films unit moved into a new and specially designed studio which incorporates a 2,000 gallon tank, but the main puppet characters, criticized in the past for their fixed expressions, now have a selection of bodies and heads enabling each one to wear a variety of expressions.

Series is expected to hit the British screens in the fall, although actual production will not be finished until December.

NAB Launches 5-Pronged Drive Vs. FCC's Comm'l Time Proposals, Comm. Ford Defends Self-Regulation

Washington, July 2.

The NAB will embark on a five-point campaign against FCC's proposed commercial time limits.

Strategy, mapped during a two day meeting of NAB's board of directors, is a combination of public relations and practical politics.

NAB board also nixed intra-industry moves to relax its own code provisions regarding commercial time limitations in tv.

On the legal front, NAB's general counsel will develop arguments and take all possible steps to prevent FCC from finally adopting the commercial time limits of the Code or similar restrictions.

Politically, a committee of broadcasters will be formed with reps from each state. They will enlist their fellow state citizens and all will put pressure on their state delegations in Congress. This is the first application of the "grass roots" doctrine of NAB lobbyist Paul Comstock. Since coming to NAB, Comstock has repeatedly emphasized broadcasters exert more political influence in their states and cities than through their Washington office.

On the flackery front, NAB's public relations service will try to garner support for the commercial cause from editorial writers, columnists and business and community leaders.

NAB generally will develop "a continuing public information program to acquaint the American people with the problems and perils of excessive Federal control over broadcasting." Details for carrying out this generalized directive will be forthcoming.

Creates Exec Committee

In a related move, the Board created an executive committee composed of the chairman of the joint board and the chairmen and vice chairmen of the radio and tv boards. While the Committee's general duties include interpreting and initiating policy, it was ordered to give "first priority" to carrying out the commercial campaign.

As the NAB was shoring its defenses against FCC, it received some indirect comfort from FCC Commissioner Frederick Ford who said competition is a more effective safeguard against overcommercialization than regulation.

In a speech to the Wisconsin Broadcasters Assn. in Three Lakes, Ford advocated a revision of FCC's program form giving a percentage breakdown of commercial time over a typical week. By publicizing these figures, FCC would allow the market place to decide "reasonable" commercial time limits.

Ford reiterated his opposition to incorporating NAB Code limits into Federal law. He pointed out the Code limits are somewhat inflexible, especially for smaller market

NAB RADIO BD. REJECTS EASING OF COMM'L CODE

Washington, July 2.

NAB's Radio Board of Directors refused to relax its Code commercial time standards.

Up for discussion were three possible categories of time limits. Stations in different areas could choose the schedules best fitting their areas.

In voting down the proposals, the Board said they weren't the answer to solving the problems faced by different areas.

In other action the Board disclosed radio Code subscribed stations rose from 2,515 to 2,555 since Jan. 1.

ABC-TV Daytime Rides June Boom; Sales Hit $15-Mil.

ABC-TV's daytime billings have been making a powerful surge forward in the last month with sales for next season totaling around $15,000,000. This business represents nearly 40% of the $40,000,000 daytime gross racked up in 1962. The latter figure, in turn, was a 13% spurt ahead of the 1961 daytime gross of $34,500,000.

New daytime business has been paced by major buys by Lever Bros., which bought four quarter hours weekly, and Campbells Soup, which bought a daytime plan. Quaker Oats is bowing on ABC daytime with participations in "Trailmaster," the repeats of "Wagon Train." Seven-up is also making new use of daytime tv on ABC.

American Chicle has also bought into "Wagon Train" and "American Bandstand." Latter show, which has been on the web five-days-a-week, will be switched to Saturday afternoons in the fall from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Also buying into "American Bandstand" are Vix and Chesebrough-Pond. Derby Foods is in for the first time on the "Tennessee Ernie Ford" show.

Other advertisers picking up ABC-TV plans include Golden Grain Macaroni, Pharmaco, Hartz Mountain, Ovaltine, Bristol-Myers, Warner-Lambert Calgon, Bissell Carpet Sweepers and E. L. Bruce Hardwood Co.

CLAMAN TO PRODUCE 'HAWK-EYE' FOR UA-TV

Julian Claman, creator of "Have Gun, Will Travel," has signed a deal with United Artists Television to coproduce a series for the '64-'65 season.

Claman will write and produce the pilot film from an original series idea by David Oppenheim, who will also act as associate producer. Projected series, "Hawk-Eye Inc.," is based on the adventures of a traveling documentary crew. Filming is planned in N.Y., with considerable location shooting involved.

Finger 'Flipper' Flick As Series for MGM-TV

Hollywood, July 2.

Producer Ivan Tors is using his theatrical film, "Flipper," as pilot for a projected MGM-TV series for the 1964-65 series, and discussions have been held with networks on the potential series.

"Flipper," currently in release, stars Chuck Connor. It is being offered as a vidventure on the basis of either a half-hour or hour-long "boy and his dolphin" series.

Purex Picks Up 5-Min. ABC Strip

Purex, which has heretofore confined its tv advertising to the bankrolling of specials on NBC-TV, is diversifying in the fall with its bow on the ABC-TV web as sponsor of a five-minute news strip in the late afternoon formatted around "News with the Women's Touch." It's the first time Purex has come onto ABC-TV and marks the company's first sponsorship of a regularly scheduled network show. Purex will also sponsor documentary shows on NBC-TV next fall on a weekly basis, including alternate sponsorship of the David-Wolper "Hollywood Years" series.

The ABC-TV femme spieler will accent the broad aspects of the news with special angles about fashions, personality profiles and interviews. Benny Blank, ABC-TV graphic arts director, has designed a "feminine-looking" set for the strip.

Outlook Dim for Equal Time Repeal Outside of Presidential Campaigns

Washington, July 2.

Equal time suspension in 1964 will likely be little more than a 1960 repeat.

After three days of hearings by the Senate Communications subcommittee which themselves were reruns of past pleas and perorations, the auguries are dim for any lifting of Sec. 315 except for Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates.

Subcommittee chairman Sen. John Pastore (D-R.I.) was willing to try some gradualism in removing equal time strictures but the political winds will likely cause his group to follow the lead of House and Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark.) and settle for tokenism.

As usual the industry plumped for outright repeal of Sec. 315. They were joined by Sen. Vance Hartke (D-Ind.) who submitted a repealer bill.

But realizing in the words of NBC Board Chairman Robert Sarnoff they would at best have to accept a "half a loaf," they directed themselves to sweetening the bread.

Sarnoff appealed to extend the Presidential and Vice Presidential suspension in time for broadcasters to cover preconvention political maneuvers in 1964 as well as the general election campaign. The House - passed suspension bill would only lift Sec. 315 from Aug. 20-Nov. 2.

CBS prexy Frank Stanton offered his sweetener as a proposed amendment to Sen Pastore's bill to lift the equal time lid from Senatorial, Congressional and gubernatorial candidates. Stanton's proposal would continue equal time rules on paid time for these candidates.

Henry's Position

Favoring only Presidential and Vice Presidential suspension were FCC Chairman E. William Henry, Democratic National Chairman John Bailey and his Republican counterpart Rep. William Miller of New York.

Henry quoted FCC gathered statistics to prove Sec. 315, in and of itself, does not restrict political broadcasting.

He also said exemption of Senatorial, Congressional and gubernatorial candidates from equal time restrictions would throw the whole question of political broadcasting into FCC regulation through the fairness doctrine rather than through Sec. 315.

Miller and Bailey both intimated some distrust of broadcasters in state and local campaigns. Miller said broadcasters in these campaigns would be under great pressures which would result in distortions.

Bailey said there were already complaints of unfair treatment by broadcasters in local and state elections. He also cited FCC statistics to show most stations aren't interested in giving free time to lower level candidates.

Both party toppers indicated they might change their stands if the industry performs fairly under a limited suspension in 1964.

In contrast to the position of the national political chieftains, 15 governors telegraphed their support for further suspension or outright repeal.

The biggest stumbling bloc to accepting broader suspension of Sec. 315 as far as the politicians were

WPIX BUYS CHI'S WGN 'GREAT' MUSIC' SERIES

New York independent WPIX-TV has bought sister station WGN's (Chicago) "Great Music" series for slotting Sundays from 8 to 9 p.m. beginning in October.

So far the only weekly concert hour salted for New York video this fall, "Great Music" will present London's Royal Philharmonic, Paris Societe de Concerts du Conservatorie, the Ruth Page Ballet and the Chicago Symphony under the bation of prominent guest conductors. Guest soloists slated for the Chi production include pianist Andre Previn, Robert Cassedesus, dancer Michael Domonico, Isaac Stern and others.

Show, which previous seasons on WGN presented American concert artists and orchs, this year will vidtape here and overseas.

CBC Puts Radio Web On Crisis-Ready Basis

Ottawa, July 2.

Participating in the federal government's emergency broadcasting plan, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. has resumed energizing its AM webs on a 24-hour basis. Purpose is to be ready to air instructions and information in a national emergency. Key stations will be staffed around the clock and the network feeding CBC and affiliated stations will operate continuously with music.

Low power relay transmitters, never staffed, also will be kept running around the clock. Should an emergency occur requiring the use of these outlets, everything will go off to allow directions and information to have full time.

NTA 6-Mon. Loss Falls to $611,000

Hollywood, July 2.

A loss of $611,000 for the six months ended March 31, 1963 was reported by National Telefilm Associates, Inc. NTA, in its statement, said that before amortization expenses of $913,000, there was an operating profit of $302,000 for the six month period.

It was noted that the loss for the year ended Sept. 30, 1962, according to prexy Bernard Tabakin, was $8,189,000 which included a special inventory write-off of $5,500,000.

FCC Approves Transfer Of KLAC, Metromedia; AM-FM Price $4,500,000

Washington, July 2.

Sale of KLAC-AM--FM, Los Angeles, to Metromedia Inc., for $4,500,000 was approved by the favorable vote of four FCC commissioners. Three others did not participate.

John Kluge's company paid $4,200,000 for the AM and $300,000 for the FM. Metromedia recently acquired a L.A. VHF, KTTV-TV on channel 11.

Hall Broadcasting Co. Inc., the seller, agreed not to compete in radio within a 50 mile radius of L. A. for 10 years.

Chairman E. William Henry and Commissioners Robert T. Bartley and Lee Loevinger did not participate in the 4-0 decision.

In another action where FCC split 4-2, approval was given for the sale of WREX-TV (channel 13), Rockford, Ill., for $3,420,000 to Gannett Co. Inc. (an adjunct to the Gannett newspaper chain). Seller is Greater Rockford Television Inc.

'Ripcord' To Economee For Syndie Market

"Ripcord," which enjoyed a first-run syndication ride for two years, is being taken over for a rerun sales ride by Economee Television, rerun subsid of United Artists Television (UA-TV).

In its first two years in syndication the skydiving series was programmed by more than 100 stations. Series is composed of 76 half-hours (38 in color).

Minneapolis, July 2.

As another step toward devoting its prime programming time largely to feature film reissues, local non-network Time-Life's WTCN-TV just has purchased three important packages of them. One is the Columbia Pictures' 73 "Post-50" group at an undisclosed price. The other two comprise 45 European reissues.

It means that WTCN-TV is going in heavier for feature films programming than ever before. And, of course, it isn't making the area's theatreowners happy to learn that the newly bought features will start going out over the air from WTCN-TV next fall.

In making the announcement, station manager Arthur M. Swift called the Columbia purchase "a logical sequel to the 1961 purchase of Columbia's "Post-48" group which included "On the Waterfront," "All the King's Men," "Caine Mutiny," 'Dealth of a Salesman' and 'Born Yesterday' which have gone over so well for WTCN-TV and brought it so much business."

The new Columbia package, nearly all of which were produced between 1956 and 1961, boast such notables as "From Here to Eternity," "Eddy Duchin Story," "They Came to Cordura" and "Last Angry Man."

Since both its tv and radio ended their ABC network affiliations, which have gone to other local competing stations, WTCN-TV has been dishing out feature photoplays increasingly.

However, among other programs are the exclusively televised 50 (Minnesota) Twins' baseball games which have given the station enormous audiences and heavy advertising income. No other Twin Cities' tv stations are permitted to televise any big league baseball games.

WPIX's 'Debutante Ball'

WPIX-TV, N.Y., will again do a remote from New York's Hotel Astor on the "International Debutante Ball," televising the proceedings December 30 beginning at 11:10 p.m.

Ballcast, featuring debs from 40 countries, will be bankrolled by Clairol via Foote, Cone & Belding.

Editorial Probe Opens July 15

Washington, July 2.

In what could be the liveliest industry session this year on Capitol Hill, a House subcommittee will begin its probe of broadcast editorials July 15.

Though a specific witness list has not been drawn, it is known that several members of Congress and FCC Chairman E. William Henry will testify before the House Communications subcommittee headed by Rep. Walter Rogers (D-Tex.).

The group will discuss legislation of Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.) which would implement the fairness doctrine by stations to give subjects of their critical editorials a chance to reply and prohibit political endorsements two days before election.

Rogers, Moss and Rep. Oren Harris (D-Ark.) are all peeved at editorials opposing them. The flack will likely fly fast on July 15 when they and other Congressmen open the hearings with their testimony.

Among the issues is whether editorials should be put in different categories. "An editorial supporting the Community Chest is one thing," Rogers said, "an editorial supporting or opposing a political candidate is quite another. In still another category are those editorials expressing positions on hotly contested political issues."

The last point was also raised by several members of the Senate Communications subcommittee which was holding hearings on equal time. Senators Hugh Scott (R-Pa.) and Thruston Morton (R-Ky.) both pondered the effect of "hot issue" editorials on candidates associated with one side or the other of question. These and other editorials have more effect in a local campaign than they do in a national race, the Senators said.

The question of editorials is not so much a partisan issue as as a matter of who's ox is being gored. If anything results from the hearings, and some laws very likely will, it will be the lesson to stations not to punch politicians who sit on influential Congressional committees.

King Features Rolls Merchandise Tieups

Merchandising operations on King Features Syndicate's new tv cartoons are now getting into full swing. Licenses have already been concluded with 20 different manufacturers.

Almost all of these licenses cut three ways, since there are three different properties in the new KFS series, "Barney Google an' Snuffy Smith," "Beetle Bailey" and "Krazy Kat."

Principal licensees so far are Ideal Toy and Kenner Products, both of which will have extensive schedules of spots on the local telecasts of these cartoons. Ideal has licensed various kinds of dolls, plus inflatables, banks, cups. Kenner will have slides and paint sets.

Among the other licensees for the new cartoons are Multiple Productions, Colorforms, Sawyer's, Barzim and Louis Marx.

Science Tops ETV Show Fare

Waltham, Mass., July 2.

Science and technology rated tops in program subject of U.S. educational tv in 1962, according to a national survey by Brandeis U. Morse Communications Research Center. The survey also showed a drop in both religious and news programming.

The report, prepared by the center, documents the programs offered by ETV stations in the U.S. and Puerto Rico during a typical week of broadcasting. The period surveyed was March 18-24, 1962, when 62 TV stations were on the air.

According to the report, the second issued by the Morse Center under the title, "One Week of Educational Television," the greatest amount of air time on all ETV was devoted to science and technology with 562 hours and 25 mins. or 21.66% of total ETV broadcasting." Next in order were the social sciences, with 17.21% of total broadcasting; the arts, with 16.40%, language with 11.49%, and children's programs with 8.05%. Religion, which in 1961 represented 1.37% of total broadcasting, declined to .61%, or from 30 to less than 16 hours for 13th place. News, while it moved from 55 hours to 57½, fell from 2.53% to 2.22%, and is tenth on the list. Twenty seven stations have no news broadcasts whatsoever. The report said that "despite the designation 'edueation' only 14% of TV's total broadcasting is devoted to organized courses of instruction for a general audience . . . General broadcasting occupied the majority of air time.

Bill Quarton Named NAB Board Chairman In Round-Robin Shifts

Washington, July 2.

In a series of shuffles, William B. Quarton, prexy of WMT-TV, Cedar Rapids, Ia., was elected chairman of NAB's board of directors. His term in the highest job held by an industry man is for one year. He previously was chairman of the television board.

Succeeding Quarton as TV Board topper is James Russell, prexy of TV Colorado Inc. and general manager of KKTV-TV, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The moves were precipitated by the resignation of NAB board chairman Clair R. McCullough, prez of the Steinman Stations, Lancaster, Pa. He served two terms and was ineligible for a third.

New vice chairman of the TV Board, succeeding Russell is Glenn Marshall, president and general manager of WJXT, Jacksonville, Fla.

British Echo NBC-MCA Film Deal In A-R Move Towards Features Prod.

London, July 2.

A development which could have a profound effect on the local film and tv scene is contemplated by one of Britain's major commercial television operators. It is considering entering feature film production, but—and here's the switch—exclusively for theatrical release.

The idea, which so far has not developed beyond the thought stage, is the brainchild of some of the top brass at Associated-Rediffusion, and it may take a couple of years or more to get off the ground. It is regarded as a longterm project, which would enable the network to capitalise on its technical resources, creative talent and technical knowhow.

The project was conceived before the consummation of the NBC-MCA deal for "A" features which would first get exposure over the air in the United States, and be released theatrically in the rest of the world; and it differs from that deal inasmuch as the ensuing product would exclusively be pitched for theatrical distribution, and not given its initial release over the airwaves.

As an essential prerequisite, A-R want an experienced feature film producer to helm the division, and will not actively pursue the plan until the right man comes along. That, it is recognised, is not something that will happen overnight, and will indeed involve a considerable degree of shopping around for a person with the necessary qualifications, experience and background.

According to one exec, A-R is in a favorable position to contemplate this new, yet allied, form of diversification. The company has had a phenomenal run during the past few years, chalking up annual profits in excess of $20,000,000, and apart from its own resources is linked with one of the most powerful groups in Britain controlled by Harold Drayton. The company, therefore, has its own ready cash available to finance a production program, and would not have to seek bank aids.

Additionally, over the year, A-R has perfected a cost-accountancy system which enables all the managerial and programming brass to have on their desks each morning a detailed breakdown of all production expenditure and overheads for the previous day's programs. Such a tight control applied to feature production would, it is felt, enable the front office to keep a rigid eye on the budget, and thus avoid many of the pitfalls that have beset producers in the past.

'DEFENDERS' AT TV BAR AROUND THE WORLD

"Defenders," the series which is looked upon by civil liberties groups as one of the best reflections on tv of the working of American jurisprudence, has won wide exposure abroad. The Reggie Rose-Herb Brodkin hourlong series, distributed by CBS Films, now has been sold in 23 countries.

Dubbed in Spanish, E. G. Marshall can be found practicing law in Costa Rica, Panama and Puerto Rico. Skein also is playing in England, Canada, West Germany, Argentina, the Philippines, Hong Kong, Nigeria, Kenya, Japan and Denmark.

N.C. Educ'l TV Gets $1,500,000 State Aid

Raleigh, N.C., July 2.

An appropriation of $1,500.000 to exapnd the state's educational television program won the approval of Senate and House appropriations committees. The educational television expansion was recommended by the governor and Advisory Budget Commission.

Hugh Cannon, director of administration, told the joint committee the education television proposal was intended to put into effect a portion of the recommendations of an education television study commission. Cost of the entire program, he said, would be about $5,000,000.

NAB Turns Down Syndicators

Washington, July 2.

Syndicators, seeking to run a Television Film Exhibit in '64, under auspices of the National Assn. of Broadcasters, were understood to have been turned down by the NAB board of directors. Board held its semi-annual meet here.

According to a key exec privy to board matters, it was felt that the syndicators still went in for too much hoopla to be included as part of NAB's official program. The NAB turn down did not come from official sources, but all indications point to TFE-'64 being held again at the Pick Congress Hotel rather than the Conrad Hilton, site of the NAB meet.

'Death Valley Days' Increases Tint; Hike Prod. Budget by $150,000

Hollywood, July 2.

Budget increase of $150,000 over last year's budget has been set for the 26 new half-hour episodes of "Death Valley Days," now being produced for the sponsor-owner of the program, U. S. Borax. Filmaster, prexy of which is Robert Stabler, produces.

Two factors account for the additional $150,000. One is that this season, Stabler will do 10 of the 26 shows in color, with at least eight of these 10 to be filmed entirely on location. First of the color episodes starts filming Friday (5) in Kanab, Utah, with two more to follow there.

Second factor is that greater emphasis will also be placed on name guest stars for the long running series. Stabler is trying to line up 16 major personalities for the current productions. Policy established by U. S. Borax and Stabler is that all stars get the same fee—$4,000. This eliminates dickering, according to Stabler, and names working the show know that no other star got bigger pay. Stars also go for the offbeat casting; for example, last year Tony Martin did an episode playing the role of A. P. Giannini, founder of the Bank of America, first major bank to finance theatrical pix.

Last year, as a test, three "DVD's" were filmed in color and U. S. Borax subsequently ran these back-to-back in a number of markets. Comparison showed that color drew larger audiences in each situation and also enhanced publicity values. These gains led to decision to go to 10 episodes this year, with the possibility that next season all 26 will go tint. It is also felt the color will increase syndication values in subsequent runs.

This is "Death Valley's" 12th year on tv, and 31st on the air, show having started in radio for the same sponsor in 1932. It's the fifth straight year Stabler has been producing and will give him a total of 134 episodes of the 300 U. S. Borax has done.

Agency on the account is McCann-Erickson, L. A.

In the rerun field, distribution of which is handled by Peter M. Roebeck & Co., another 52 episodes have been added to the rerun group, called "Trails West," with Ray Milland as host and narrator. This brings to 104 the number of episodes now available to stations.

Sell Steve Allen In 42 Markets

The station lineup for the "Steve Allen Show," now totalling 42, is increasing at the rate of about one a week. Nine stations have brought the Westinghouse show since May Al Sussman, v.p. and general manager of WBC Sales, noted that though the show was originally slanted for urban audiences, stations in the rural areas are also buying it. The show began last year with a 21-station lineup.

New markets buying the show recently are KWTV, Oklahoma City; KROD-TV, El Paso; KVII, Amarillo; KOSA-TV, Odessa, Tex.; WPTA, Fort Wayne; WQAD-TV, Moline, Ill.; KSL-TV, Salt Lake City; WISC, Madison; and CHAN-TV, Burnaby, British Columbia. The 90-minute taped show originates in Hollywood.

KNXT Buys MGM Pix

KNXT-TV, the CBS o&o in Los Angeles, has bought MGM-TV's latest package of 30 post-1948 features.

The deal brings to 55 the total number of markets licensing the package which was put into release at the outset of this year.

ITC O'seas Sales Hit $1,900,000 In 2-Month Period

Since May 1, foreign sales of Independent Television Corp. has hit $1,900,000, a record for the May-June period.

ITC's new hourlong series, "The Saint' led the sales roster, with deals registered in 34 countries. Most recent sale for the series was to Cockfield Brown, Advertising Agency for all of French Canada. Previously, the series was sold to the CBC for English network telecasting, as has been ITC's "Fireball XL5."

Also sold in Canada to CBC was the one-hour documentary, "Irish Rebellion." The film was produced by Television Reporters International with whom ITC has an agreement calling for that company's production of documentaries for ITC distribution. "Irish Rebellion" is the third TRL documentary to be sold to CBC, the previous two being "Egypt" and "Saudi Arabia.'

ITC's exec v.p. Abe Mandell reported that, with the easing of restrictions in Japan, sales have been progressing at a record-breaking pace with almost $600,000 in contracts signed during a four-week period. ITC, to date, has sold 16 series for Japanese network telecasting. All new series have been sold, including "The Saint," "Fireball XL5," "Man of the World," and "Espionage."

Sales in Brazil also are coming in at a swift pace, despite that country's unsettled economic and political conditions. Recent sales include "Lassie," "Lone Ranger," "Ghost Squad," "Hawkeye,' "William Tell" and "Ramar of the Jungle."

Other recent sales include "Espionage" in Mexico, the Philippines, Argentina, Venezuela and Uruguay; "Fireball XL5" in Mexico and Columbia; "Mr. Piper' in Mexico, Argentina and Uruguay, and "Pursuers" in Mexico.

FCC Revokes N.C. License For Misrepresentations

Washington, July 2.

FCC unanimously revoked the license of WBMT-AM, Black Mountain, N.C., on five counts.

Station licensed by Mountain View Broadcasting Co., was charged with misrepresenting its financial qualifications, concealing the dissolution of partnership, constructing and operating by persons outside the partnership and filing false statements.

BUT GOVT. GETS STIFF AD LEVY

By ROGER WATKINS

London, July 2.

Given that no unforeseen economic, or other major hurdle crops up in the next couple of years, the British Government is prepared to give the green light to the Independent Television Authority to set up a second commercial tv channel. It should be operational by 1966.

Event will bring the ITA camp into line with BBC—whose second outlet, BBC-II, sparks next April—and give the UK viewer a choice of four over-the-air channels. Like BBC-II, it is intended that ITV-II (as it has been tentatively tabbed) will begin in the most populated and most commercially lucrative parts of the country spreading by easy stages to the rest of the nation.

Announcing the Government's intention to the House of Commons during last week's Report stage of the Television Bill, the Postmaster-General, Reginald Bevins, said authorization for the second indie web would be forthcoming as soon as the Government was satisfied that "conditions were such that it could be made a success." He anticipated this would be towards the end of 1965, when the ITA would get a licence to go ahead in order to get the new service on the air during the following year.

Outlining some of the hurdles which now have to be surmounted by the ITA, the PMG said the TV Bill (as amended) will have a considerable effect on the future of independent television. The ITA would be faced with a great deal of work—evolving new contracts covering rentals, control over sale of programs, networking, program standards, reforms in advertising, prepping for the changeover from 405 lines to 625 lines and the introduction of color tv, etc.—for which it should be given reasonable time to sort itself out. He felt it unfair to burden the Authority with organizing a second outlet at this point.

Want New Companies

Additionally, PMG Bevins emphasized, if the Government okayed the second independent channel now, it was virtually certain that no new companies would enter the field. If they waited for some development in the uhf (625 line) viewing market, it was probable that new contractors would come into the field and thus provide genuine competition for the first time.

Hinting that the path for ITV-II would not be easy, he said the most decisive factor is financial. By the end of 1965 he reckoned the number of dual standard (405 & 625 line) receivers in the London area would be between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000, possibly a few more (top figure is roughly half of the estimated total for dual-standard sets in the area in 1965).

Hinting at the keenness of the projected competition, he said he would be surprised if the new ITA service attracted more than a quarter of the potential audience. Production costs and overheads would also be on the increase (for instance: while the present contractors costs amounted to about $100,000,000 a year, by 1965 they might have gone up to $112,000,000). The Minister stressed that at this point it was not known what the new indie service would cost but if it introduced too soon it would certainly cost more to run than it brought in.

Earlier in the debate Tory MP John Rodgers, one of the party "rebels" pressing for the early introduction of a second commercial video outlet, stated that one result of not having competition in commercial television was that small advertisers had been kept off the air and that large advertisers had probably been overcharged. In the absence of competition, there had been no real yardstick for what television advertising rates should be.

In view of the PMG's proposals, the amendment for a second ITA

KNXT, L.A., Claims Another First With 90-Minute 'Big News' Strip

Los Angeles, July 2.

CBS-TV o&o, KNXT, first television station in Los Angeles to broadcast a full hour of news Monday through Friday, claims another upcoming first—this one nationally. KNXT, starting in the fall, will have 90 minutes of news each week night on 'The Big News," 6 to 7:30 p.m., effective Sept. 2.

The hour-and-a-half news format will combine 60 minutes of local, state and national news, plus the web's new half-hour "CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite" from 7 to 7:30 p.m. The expanded "Big News" will continue to present KNXT's team of reporters headed by anchorman Jerry Dunphy, together with what is claimed to be the largest full-time news staff in the west.

New features and personalities also will be added to the daily news broadcast. Additionally, the station will be able to use the new Washington bureau being formed by the five CBS o&o stations to direct specific stories from the nation's capital to specific regions.

Robert D. Wood, v.p. and general manager, in commenting on the move, said "With its wide geographical dispersion and its equally-wide diversification of interests, the Los Angeles market has developed an almost insatiable appetite for topical and timely news.

Heiten Ankles WNBC-TV

Jay Heiten is ankling as sales chief of WNBC-TV. He has been with the N.Y. owned & operated station of NBC for at least a decade. Pete Affe, station's manager, has not chosen a replacement yet, since Heiten is not leaving until the end of July.

Heiten, it is understood, is moving to the Coast where he is to bcome a college professor.

Susskind Sells 'Premise'; WPIX Talks 'Open End'

Is a romance developing between WPIX, N.Y. and David Susskind? For the second time in the last few weeks, the Daily News' tv station is picking up Susskind's "Open End" show, which has been without a New York home since it was cancelled by WNEW-TV in May. WPIX is putting on Susskind's production of "The Premise," the Greenwich Village theatre-nitery revue which he had contracted for before the tiff with WNEW-TV. The deal with WPIX reportedly takes Susskind partially off the hook for relatively high production costs of "The Premise." WPIX also picked up the "Open End" Susskind interview with Rev. Martin Luther King.

"The Premise" will feature the original cast of Ted Flicker, John Darling, Tom Aldridge and James J. Frawley and include takeoffs on "West Side Story" and "David & Lisa," among other spoofs of personalities and current events. The show's producer, Jean Kennedy, taped the show around four weeks ago to run out this season's string of "Open End" shows for the other stations carrying it around the shows.

It's understood that Susskind has been dickering with WPIX about a possible New York berth next season for "Open End." Susskind is confident that the show will get a Gotham showcasing. If it doesn't, then Susskind will probably not be interested in doing the series for which he only received nominal compensation.

Los Angeles, July 2.

Bill Burrud Productions Inc. is named defendant in a $100,000 breach of contract suit filed in Superior Court by Zygmunt Sulistrowski, who also listed station KCOP and Varig Airlines in action involving the tv program, "Wanderlust." Plaintiff, who claims he is a film producer-director-actor, said he produced a feature about Brazil and titled it "Around the World in 30 Days," which he subsequently recut as a featurette for noncommercial use and changed tag to "Brazilian Holiday."

Complaint stated that featurette was shown on Burrud's "Wanderlust" program without Sulistrowski's consent, and title changed to "Salute to Brazil." Claiming he owns property, plaintiff charged film was passed off as Burrud's own, commentary changed and plaintiff was not compensated.

11 Stations Acquire New 7 Arts Pic P'kge

Eleven tv stations have bought the latest group of features released by Seven Arts Associated. It's the distrib's "Volume 7," made up of 20th Fox post-'50s.

Buyers, in the first two weeks of distribution, included: WGN-TV, Chicago; KRON-TV, Frisco; the Newhouse stations in Birmingham (WAPI-TV), Syracuse (WSYR), and Harrisburg, Pa (WTPA).

ABC-TV o&o's Get Local Show Push

Leonard H. Goldenson, AB-PT prexy, called upon ABC's tv o&o stations to develop more local programming at a meeting of the o&o program directors in New York last week. It was the first such meeting held by the o&o's and signaled a move by the top management, under Ted Shaker, prexy of the tv o&o's towards greater coordination of efforts among the stations.

Goldenson pointed out that the local live programming would not only serve the community needs, but also serve as a reservoir for future network programming concepts. Program directors at the three-day sessions were Seymour Horowitz, WABC-TV, N.Y.; Howard Lipstone, KABC-TV L.A.; Daniel Schuffman, WKBK, Chicago; Peter Strand, WXYZ-TV, Detroit; and Calvin Thomas, KGO-TV, San Francisco.

WNEW Radio Launches 30th Anni Celebration With N.Y. Garden Gala

Starting six months early, WNEW Radio opens its 30th anni celebration July 24 at Madison Square Garden with a gala benefit in behalf of the Musicians Aid Society. This live show will launch six months of festivities leading up to the station's birthday on Feb. 3, 1964. On that date, three decades ago, the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt pushed a button that lit up the WNEW transmitter.

The Garden show will have a big lineup of names including Frank Sinatra Jr., making his debut in N.Y. with the Tommy Dorsey orch. Others to appear are the Si Zentner and Sy Oliver orchs, the Dukes of Dixieland, and the Dave Brubeck Quartet. The benefit show has been scaled from $2 to a $5 top.

TV Writers Urge Total Support For Negro Demands on Industry

Hollywood, July 2.

Writers Guild of America West should declare its allout support for virtually any demands made by CORE and NAACP on the film industry for a better break for the Negro, WGAW prexy Nate Monaster asserted before a tv writers' meeting at the BevHilton Thursday night. At the same time, Monaster had some sharp criticism for "father and son" crafts which don't permit "anyone but relatives" in.

The writer's remarks came during a question-and-answer session following a discussion on tv. Asked why WGAW didn't have Negroes in its membership, Monaster quickly replied that the guild has no bars of any kind. On the racial equality sought by the Negro groups of Hollywood, commented "Our guild will lead the way. I have a hunch. The guild should flatly declare this is a conspiracy we have all been a part of, that it's a disgrace to humanity . . that we'll do everything we can, and will support virtually any demands made on the industry by CORE or NAACP. We resist the temptation to say to the Negroes, 'you are going too fast,' instead we admit we all share the guilt. Something should be done quickly. I don't think the guild can wait any longer."

Monaster received a hefty hand from the writer audience, and he went on to say to the best of his knowledge there were one or two Negro writers in WGAW, that there have been others in the past. He said he did not know why there weren't more, since the guild has no bars.

Monaster pointed out the Hollywood craft unions do not have Negro members, and calling them "father and son" unions, caustically observed' "These unions are absolute and total democracy—they let nobody in regardless of race, creed or color—except for relatives." He promised the guild will take action in the racial situation.

The current racial crisis also was a subject of the debate on tv, as writer-panelist David Chandler pointed out there are no stories on tv about the Negro revolution and added he sees no chance of getting such a story on the networks. ABC-TV coast program veepee Ben Brady, another panelist commented I "don't know how well these things could be said, when incorporated into the script of a series."

No Combat On 'Combat'

Chandler complained, "you can't get a real combat story on Combat,' and to this Brady confessed, "I don't know what he means'"

Forum covered the usual assortment of subjects on tv—censorship, control, sponsors, etc. Brady remarked that tv is largely controlled by ad agencies and sponsors, except where the network is in a position of strength, such as CBS-TV today, Tv is an amorphous thing, a market where control goes back and forth, he opined. Chandler asserted the networks have taken over control in the last few years.

Monaster said writers should leave tv to those who consider it "dynamic and vital," adding "tv has been investigated, analyzed, and threatened with bodily harm. Ratings are a fraud accepted by the industry, and the greatest tragedy is that writers have accepted them . There has been too much talking about tv . . . Writers must stop whining about it." His attack on ratings was shared by other panelists, except for Brady, who said it was all tv has to go by.

"The danger is that we will all wake one day and feel tv is glorious. Our protests grow weaker," there was audible skepticism from the audience when Brady said his net did not censor scripts beyond the pale of good taste. Producers have the final say, he declared. Brady challenged them to be specific, and when the case of an execution story seg of "Naked City" was brought up, the exec said "we told producer Bert Leonard we would prefer another show. We didn't ask him to change a thing. What is wrong about continuity acceptance saying it? They didn't ask him to change anything?" The audience laughed at the remarks. It was brought out later the controversial episode was shown, but toned down because the execution sequences were considered too strong.

Writers have been "brainwashed" by so many restrictions, they are now writing blandly to avoid trouble, Monaster said.

Chandler contended today you couldn't get "Judgment at Nuremberg" on tv, and added a story about a "radical" doctor who doesn't subscribe to the shibboleths of the medical profession could never get on "Ben Casey" or "Dr. Kildare."

Monaster said ratings have been discredited by a Congressional committee, and that any writer so discredited would never work in tv again. Instead, the rating services raised their rates, he added.

In response to a question from the audience, the panelists said they were opposed to any Government-subsidized network, Chandler declaring it would inevitably mean interference from politicians and tv would be more "homogenized" than it is now. Commercial tv with all its faults is preferable, he averred.

It all wound up on a fairly harmonious note, with Monaster giving tv credit for having come up with some of the best writing in the past five to 10 years, and Chandler denying that tv is wholly a "huckster's" medium, saying there have been 10 to 20 "excellent" dramatic stories on tv, citing "Marty" and "Patterns" in particular.

Essence of the problem is that when a tv writer does become successful, he leaves it for another medium, said moderator Richard Powell.

NAB's '65 Meet in D.C.

Washington, July 2.

In some possible wishful thinking that there may be a new Administration and FCC chairman to speak to them, NAB will hold its 1965 convention in Washington. NAB's Board of Directors approved the 1965 meet for March 21-25 in Washington.

The 1964 convention will be in Chicago April 5-8. The 1966 and 1967 gatherings will also be in Chicago—the first on March 27-30 and the second on April 2-5. The Chicago meets will be in the Conrad Hilton and the Washington session in the Shoreham and Sheraton Park.

Private French Group To Sift Viewer Opinion Of Govt. TV Operation

Paris, July 2.

A caretaker private organization to lookee the nationalized television, and make suggestions on the part of the viewers, has been set up under the directorship of Emile Servan-Schreiber, managing director of the weekly paper Echos.

A council of names like Jean Cocteau, explorer Paul-Emile Victor and others, will sift suggestions from viewers and present them to the heads of the Radiodiffusion Television Francaise, which runs tv and radio.

Servan-Schreiber points out that the state monopoly on video, without any true existing counter orgs, can only exist if criticism can be liberally expressed to those in charge by viewers. His outfit, the Union Nationale Des Telespectateurs, will undertake to do this.

Aim will be to keep the UNT completely independent politically and set up close ties with the RTF to make the set owner's views clear. With a second web pending, and the possibility of commercial aspects, the voice of the UNT could become fairly powerful in the coming video scheme of things.

Servan-Schreiber recently met with RTF head Robert Bordaz who wished the outfit good luck and promised cooperation. The UNT general secretary is Andre Diligent.

COLGATE, HERITAGE BUY NFL 'FAME' GAME

Colgate-Palmolive and Heritage House Products, plus a number of regional clients have picked up sponsorship of NFL "Hall of Fame" football game, which will be telecast Sunday, Sept. 8, from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

Game to be played at Canton, O., is an exhibition contest between Pittsburgh Steelers and Cleveland Browns, and is the highlight of ceremonies dedicating new NFL Hall of Fame Building in Canton.

In other sales at the web, Mobil Oil bought one-sixth sponsorship in "Rawhide" starting in October. Florida Citrus Commission bought 40 minutes in morning minute plan starting July 8. Heublein bought 80 minutes in morning minute plan, starting in September.

Monroe Auto Equipment bought participations in baseball with Dizzy Dean for 10 ..eeks starting July 7.

Fritz Helms WXYZ

Detroit, July 2.

Charles Fritz, v.p. of Blair Radio and Detroit area manager, has been named viceprexy and general manager of WXYZ, the ABC owned & operated station here.

Fritz replaces John O. Gilbert, who recently was upped to v.p. and general manager of WABC-TV in New York.

Sarnoff Urges Unified Nat'l Policy On Satellites in New Rap at IT&T

RCA chairman Gen. David Sarnoff last week urged members of Congress to call public hearings on finding a "unified national communications policy attuned to the technology of the space age."

Sarnoff's letter to Senator Warren Magnuson and Rep. Oren Harris provided the latest chapter in a disagreement over international space communications. International Telephone & Telegraph's counter-proposal to separate voice and record services was greeted by Sarnoff with some distaste. He wrote the Congressmen that the IT&T plan "would be a disservice to the public and an exercise in futility." He added that the IT&T plan had a "strangely obsolescent ring."

Sarnoff added that the IT&T plan was made "under the guise of strengthening competition" but that instead "it would eliminate competition between record services and create a monopoly similar to that which now exists in telephony."

Sarnoff charged: "The inference (made by IT&T) that RCA would be willing to sell its communications subsidiary to a monopoly of international record carriers under IT&T leadership, can only be regarded as a frivolous presumption. This would truly be the tail wagging the dog. IT&T is a junior participant in U. S. international communications in terms of experience, leadership and profitability."

Sarnoff first proposed a unified global satellite system on April 2 to Leo D. Welch, chairman of the Communications Satellite Corp. He said it would solve two problems.

"International voice services," charged Sarnoff, "are provided by a legally-sanctioned AT&T monopoly, which deals and communicates with foreign monopolies at the other ends of the same circuits. By contrast, international telegraph services are provided by 10 private carriers, on a competitive basis, but they too must deal and communicate with foreign monopolies."

To Sarnoff the other problem is "the uncertainty as to how soon the Satellite Corp., organized as a profit-making privately-owned enterprise, can expect to operate at a profit in view of AT&T's known progress in the development of high-capacity transistorized cables with capabilities claimed to be equal to those of satellites."

Any Bridie Murphys?

Robert Trout, CBS News correspondent who headed up CBS-TV's coverage of President Kennedy's trip to Ireland, sent back this bit of intelligence to CBS News headquarters.

In the Dublin telephone directory he found himself in good company. There was one Robert Trout listed, a showcard and postercard maker, and one John F. Kennedy listed, among the many Kennedys listed. Trout did not note the occupation of the one John F. Kennedy listed in the Dublin directory.

BBC-TV to Move Into Adult Education Via Three Major Series

London, July 2.

Hugh Carleton Greene, director-general of the BBC, has outlined the corporation's plans for moving into the adult education video field. Greene revealed here that BBC intends to begin etv broadcasts with eight programmes a week, starting in the fall.

Programmes will go out on Saturday and Sunday mornings and on three weekday evenings. BBC plans to kick off with three major series—on Italian, human biology and modern scientific ideas, including relativity—and several shorter series ranging from everyday practical economics and dressmaking to landmarks in European art and the development of young children.

Says Carleton Greene: "We shall also extend our radio education programs to an hour on each weekday and hope to extend their range of subjects to include science, current affairs, music, and the arts as well as lessons in five different languages."

Britain's commercial network started adult educative transmissions in January, utilizing Sunday mornings in the majority of the country and one late evening transmission on a weekday in the East Anglia area.

Extend CBC French Web

Ottawa, July 2.

A new French-language television station for Cheticamp, N.S., has been okayed by the Board of Broadcast Governors in Ottawa. Station, operated by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., will be a network repeater and will extend CBC's French web to the Magdalen Islands.

BBC also got BBG's nod for a new AM station at Saint John, N.B. The board also approved a new AM station at Smithers, B.C., for Ronald A. East and a company to be formed, and an FM station at Vancouver for Moffat Broadcasting Ltd.

DAYSTAR DICKERING TWO SHOWS FOR CBS-TV

Hollywood, July 2.

Deal for a pair of vidfilm properties to be produced by Daystar Productions and UA-TV for CBS-TV in 1964-65 season is expected to be finalized this week, following sessions involving brass with the network and vidfilmeries.

CBS-TV prexy James T. Aubrey Jr. and his coast axis of Hunt Stromberg Jr. and John Reynolds met with Daystar topper Leslie Stevens and UA-TV veepee Dick Dorso, to iron out details of the project.

One of Daystar's vidseries will be an hourlong oater based on UA's theatrical film release, "The Magnificent Seven," starring Yul Brynner. Daystar's second property has not been determined.

Ackerman Accents Comedy at Screen Gems

Hollywood, July 2.

Exec producer Harry Ackerman is preparing a number of new comedy series at Screen Gems for the 1964-65 season, including a Budd Grossman vehicle, "Do or Die," and a Zero Mostel series. Ackerman is also in discussions with Dick Murphy and Bill Cowley on other vidventures in a comedy vein.

Producer is winding 13 segs each on the Donna Reed and "Hazel" series, and while Miss Reed and "Hazel" star Shirley Booth vacation, will supervise two other series, "Farmer's Daughter" and "Grindl," each now getting under way for next season.

Ackerman is also preparing an hourlong Air Force series, "The Threshold," for the 1964-65 season.

The Hazards of Telstar

ABC's Bob Quinn Spotlights Problems of Timing In Covering JFK Trip

London, July 2.

Whatever the size of the dispute between ABC News and the other two networks over the Telstar transmissions of JFK's visit to Europe, it is overshadowed—at least from this end—by the problems of getting the news home. According to Bob Quinn, who is helming ABC's newscoverage from Associated TeleVision's Foley Street centre in London, in his 11 years experience as a video newsman, he finds it difficult to remember a tougher assignment.

"Back home," he says, "we know we go on the air at 6 p.m. And we gear our selves ready for that time. But here there is no routine. Telstar transmissions can take place anytime—8 p.m., midnight, who knows. Sometimes, when it is easy for us at this end it is tough for the boys at the other end and vice versa. At no time are both sides happy."

At the cost of $350,000, ABC has mounted six specials on the Kennedy swing through Europe, besides feeding over material for the nightly strip with Ron Cochran. Chore has necessitated Quinn bringing over 17 key personnel which are deployed throughout Europe and, in all, required the impartotion of some 35 ABC news staffers; all of whom incidentally, will be winging from the U.S. within the newt few hours or so.

'Satellite transmissions have thrown up their own set of problems," says Quinn, "but we are learning all the time. At the moment we are combining the old technique of flying tape over to home and pioneering new ones involving Telstar and Project Relay satellites."

He foresees, in about five years time, frequent newscasts from Europe to the US and vice versa but also predicts technical difficulties sizeable enough to make such mishaps as cutting telex cables, film-carrying plane delays and general human fallibility almost amusing.

Ticket to Togetherness

When Walt Disney talks about his weekly television series as "family entertainment," he isn't just whistling past a nursery.

The fact: few, if any, showmen in history have approached his genius for entrancing audiences of all ages.

There'll be no abatement in this spell-weaving come Autumn; from all indications, "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color" may well outdo itself for NBC-TV's '63-'64 season.

Here are a few upcoming attractions:

"Dr. Syn" — The shot-in-England story of the 18th-century vicar who led a nighttime band of masked smugglers (see large photo above) in protest against Britain's high import-taxes.

"Wahu Bobcat"—A fascinating nature tale—filmed in Florida—of an old, Okefenokee swamp cat whose shaky leadership is being menaced by a younger, more powerful member of the species.

"Fly with Von Drake"—An aviation lesson (via cartoon) from Professor Ludwig von Drake, the lovably pompous fowl-of-all-trades who'll also be dispensing advice this season on such disparate matters as cruising on the Mediterranean and physical culture.

"Johann Strauss"—A musical journey into the waltz-world of the two composers (senior and junior); and the drama of the son's difficulties in overcoming the professional opposition of his father. Disney shot this film in Vienna (of all places).

All this and more awaits viewers of "Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color," as the award-winning series that's won millions of new admirers for its creator since its debut on NBC-TV a couple of Septembers ago. As we've been saying, it's a show for the entire family. Indeed, it could be the greatest force for togetherness since the picnic basket.

Look to NBC for the best combination of news, information and entertainment.

THE KEEFE BRASSELLE SHOW
With Ann B. Davis, Noelle Adam, Rocky Graziano, Sylte Sisters; Zsa Zsa Gabor, Fred Gwynne, Barbara Streisand
Producer-Director: Greg Garrison
Writers: Bill Angelos, Bill Brown, Buz Kohn, Allan Manings, Jack Wohl
60 Mins., Tues., 10 p.m.
JOHNSON'S WAX, R. J. REYNOLDS, OLDSMOBILE
CBS-TV, from N.Y. (tape)
(Needham, Louis & Brorby; William Esty, D. P. Brothers)

Without Barbara Streisand's wonderful voice and unique personality the premiere of "The Keefe Brasselle Show" on Tuesday (25) would not be memorable.

This summer replacement for Garry Moore on CBS-TV emulates him but lacks the ingredients that make the Moore show entertaining. Moore can take those loose, semi-funny skits and special material, which today tv gag writers too often mistake as the key to success, and make them sparkle because, at least until now, he has had cast regulars who are strong personalities and excellent technicians.

Were Miss Streisand's presence guaranteed beyond one guest appearance, there would be reason to be hopeful for the Brasselle stanza. Ann B. Davis (the Schultzy of the old Bob Cummings show) is a promising entry, among the regulars, but she didn't really deliver on the preem. Noelle Adam was pretty, The Sylte Sisters, who sing, were just okay, and Rocky Graziano's buffoonery was funny for approximately the length of one ungrammatical sentence.

Brasselle, while he is personable, is not personable enough as a host to overcome his failings in the song and comedy fields.

Miss Streisand, however, was remarkably effective. She looked like a misplaced teenager in a long, would-be sexy tubular gown, but this strangely aided her performance. The high point of the hour was her rendition of "Soon It's Gonna Rain" from the musical, "The Fantastiks." The mugging of other guest Fred Gwynne and the virtual walkon of Zsa Zsa Gabor were of little aid and comfort to the tv stanza. Art.

BLOWUP AT BREEZY POINT
With Jim Burnes
Producers: Edward M. Jones, Herbert Dorfman
30 Mins.; Fri., 7:30 p.m.
WABC-TV, N. Y.

Spotlighting the dispute over the conversion of the Breezy Point area in Brooklyn into a public park, this show was an excellent example of local public affairs programming. It dug deeply and hard into an issue which is heating up a lot of tempers in the New York area, in particular, the present residents of Breezy Point and the advocates of more public recreation areas.

This half-hour documentary was noteworthy for its crisp examination of the issues and its balanced presentation of both sides. Especially standout were the interviews with the beleaguered homeowners in Breezy Point whose future now has become completely unsettled. U.S. Secretary of Interior Stewart Udall made a sober defense of the park project, pointing out that the sometimes individual concerns have to make way for public interest. Jim Burnes handled the interviews in straightforward, effective style.

This documentary carefully took no sides in the issue. However, the station's general manager, John Gilbert, has gone on the air to editorialize in favor of the park project. Herm.

THE HOODS IN OUR MIDST
With Jim McGovern, others Producer-Writer: McGovern
Director: Guy Galante
30 Mins.: Sun. 9:30 p.m.
KMSP-TV, Minneapolis, (tape)

In view of public concern about crime there's little wonder that 20th-Fox's KMSP-TV, Twin Cities' ABC affiliate, turned the attention of its own "Pursuit" documentary series to one of the most important aspects of evil-doing, organized hoods, and their current principal operating technique.

Titled "Hoods in Our Midst," this documentary seemed particularly apropos coming shortly after the increase in local crime was an issue in a mayorality campaign and at a time when the state's crime has risen 271% since 1953 despite a population gain of only 14%.

In his usual triple producer-writer-narrator role, Jim McGovern again distinguished himself

PICTURE THIS
With Jerry Van Dyke, host; others
Producers: Art Baer, Ben Jocison
Director: Gil Gates
30 Mins.; Tues., 9:30 p.m.
GENERAL FOODS, STATE FARM MUTUAL
CBS-TV, N. Y.
(Young & Rubicam, Needham, Louis and Brorby)

For summer fare, this new game show offers a pleasant divertisement. There's sufficient fun in it for a pleasant half-hour and Jerry Van Dyke, as host, underplays in good fashion.

Where CBS-TV might be faulted, along with the other networks, is not using the summer period for more experimental outings, formats which have yet to hit the commercial groove, but which might win a following if exposure was gained.

For its preem outing Tuesday (25), guest celebs were Orson Bean and Gretchen Wyler. Jerry Van Dyke, brother of Dick, let the spotlight and the gags fall on their shoulders for the most part. He played the amiable host, struggling with his first weekly show. Show, as sampled, may have sufficient legs for daytime in a year-round run. For nighttime, it looks too derivative.

Game resembles charades with pictures. Two teams, each composed of a celeb and a screened average citizen, vie with one another. Object is to guess simple pictures drawn at the direction of one's partner, within a time limit, and within prescribed clues. The by-play and the emerging picture draws the laughs. Prizes aren't big. Horo.

PEOPLE WILL TALK
With Dennis James Producers: Merrill Heatter, Robert Quigley
25 Mins.; Mon.-Fri., 2 p.m.
NBC-TV

Replacing "Ben Jerrod," a soap opera, "People Will Talk" changes pace with a game show format that may be good for some laughs if its complexity can be mastered. This show is based on a man-in-the-street debate format, but being a daytime show, the controversy is hemmed in to such questions as "should we kiss in public?" or "are men better cooks than women?" or "should bald men wear toupees?" Not exactly United Nations calibre, but par for the afternoon course.

The show brings together two parficipants who debate a specific matter with the aim of convincing a panel of 15 judges. If the participants can guess how the individual panelists react on the question under discussion, they win all sorts of prizes, like mink stoles, frozen tv dinners and up to a $100 in cash.

Pope's Coronation Gives Webs Another Workout In Satellite Technique

What with the European junket of President John F. Kennedy and the Sunday (30) coronation of Pope Paul VI in Rome, the Telstar satellite has been getting its heaviest workout to date.

All three networks presented delayed Telstar feeds on the outdoor coronation ceremonies. ABC-TV was first with the most, devoting an hour from 4 p.m. to the crowning of the Holy Father and related commentary. NBC-TV, which will present an hour Shell news special tomorrow night (4) on the new Pope, gave the coronation a half hour at 7 p.m., and CBS did the same at 6 p.m.

ABC News wrapped commentary around the Telstar footage on the actual coronation ceremonies, which the web had on the air two and a half hours after the event.

Preceding the ceremonies, ABC Rome correspondent John Casserly conducted a relayed interview with American Msgr. John Gregory Clancey, who sketched in the new Pope's personality from first-hand observance. Following the Telstar coverage, with Rome newsman Bill Sheehan narrating, New York anchor Robert Sharp hosted a discussion with Catholic editor Philip Scharper, Rabbi Maro Tanenbaum, and Religious News Service reporter Dr. Claud D. Nelson. Panel probed the matter of the new Pope's personality (which seems to have become a major issue in the light of "Good Pope John") and how Paul VI fits in with the forwarding of the late Pope John's liberal policies.

NBC bagged a sponsor for its half hour. Alitalia-Italian Airlines, via Gardner agency, bankrolled in its first use of network tv. Merrill Mueller was the network's commentator. He did fine, except that he kept repeating the warning to the Pope, "Pater Sancte, sic transit gloria mundi" (Holy Father, thus passes the glory of the world,"), which is repeated three times enroute to the coronation, as merely, "sic transit gloria," dropping the "world."

CBS commentater was Rome newsman Winston Burdett. Technically, the Telstar pickup was excellent pictorially, providing several interesting close-ups of Paul VI that, as one commentator suggested, allowed viewers across the Atlantic a better view of the Holy Father than most of the thousands crammed into St. Peter's Square.

Sound, however, was something else. NBC, for one, had a pickup of the Pope speaking in English, but it was as inscrutable as the foreign tongue. Bill.

Tele Follow-Up Comment

DuPont Show Of the Week

Al Wasserman accomplished what he evidently set out to do—give a moving study of the theatre, its intensity, techniques and the people populating it. The producer-director-writer took an hour of DuPont time on NBC-TV last Sunday (30) and gave it to "Opening Night," the title being a misnomer because the program was as much about rehearsals and closings as about the premiere of an off-Broadway quick-closer called "The Dragon."

"The Dragon," as many in the trade recall and Wasserman reminded, closed after three weeks at the Phoenix Theatre. But Wasserman, was not interested in evaluating "The Dragon" but rather in portraying the people doing it. There was director Joseph Anthony, actress Louise Sorel, character actor C. K. Alexander and a sampling of others involved in the contemporary Russian fantasy about power politics.

Wasserma's touch in the cutting room was superb. He achieved the smoothest, often a supremely artistic, mixture of picture and sound. If his establishing shots for "Opening Night" were too long, they were still beautiful and revealing. Wasserman employed definitely superior photographic instruments. His end product often, particularly in this instance, resemble those in a good art film. Art.

The Art of the Film

Stanley Kauffman's "The Art of the Film" wound up its current season on WNDT, N. Y., Saturday (29) with a half-hour visit to a picture in actual production. Tagged "On Location with Robert Rossen," the program was frequently fascinating as it exposed cinematic tricks used in shooting the producer-director's film version of "Lilith."

Based on a novel, the picture concerns a psychotic girl in a mental hospital with whom both an attendant and another patient become romantically involved. The girl is portrayed by Jean Seberg, the patient by Peter Fonda while Warren Beatty has the role of the attendant.

Several versions of a riverside scene in Maryland in which the aforementioned players participate were run off, accompanied by Kauffman's explanatory commentary. The location footage, which was supervised by editor Aram Avakian, served to emphasize to the layman the intricate and painstaking steps involved in making a feature film.

Rossen, whose Centaur Productions is turning out "Lilith" for Columbia release, was briefly interviewed by Kauffman in a film segment. He noted that although his method of shooting often seems confusing, even to his production crew, he manages to keep the picture's overall thematic idea clearly in his own mind.

Withal, Kauffman's location visit was an absorbing half-hour for the viewer and a fine plug for the film. Gilb.

Foreign TV Reviews

SHOWCASE
With Ken Colman, Fran Gregory, Ray Sikora Band
Producer: Ain Soodor
Director: Soodor
30 mins, Fri., 10:30 p.m.
CBC-TV from Vancouver (tape).

One in a series of regional musical productions from the Vancouver studios of CBC-TV designed to spotlight Canadian West Coast artistic talent, this segment of "Showcase" came up with a sparkling combination in the vocal stylings of Ken Colman and Fran Gregory, enhanced by the big sound backing generated by the Ray Sikora band.

Colman, a onetime local disk jockey who segued from a job with N. Y. tv packagers Goodson-Todman to hit the Playboy Club nitery circuit as a fledgling pop singer, has had limited tv exposure prior to this outing, but came across impressively as a video performer. His songalog, keyed to the program theme, "Love Is a Song", was a mixture of ballads and belters and he handled both brightly and easily. Opening with a swinging "Summertime" that segued into "Swing Low Sweet Chariot", Colman changed pace and mood smoothly for stylish interpretations of "Fly Me To The Moon" and "God Bless The Child". At his bouncy best with up-tempo tunes, Colman's "Lulu's Back In Town" really took off with P. J. Perry's sax solo driving behind him and he closed solidly with "Bye Bye Blackbird", including the rarely heard verse. Cleancut appearance, warmth of personality and relaxed presentation complemented the good vocal ability Colman displayed.

Miss Gregory, originally from Los Angeles, in her first tv shot for several seasons, registered strongly, with the three numbers well-fitted to her fine phrasing and lyric control. Her first song, "It Must Have Been Something I Dreamed Last Night" had immediate impact and she maintained the effect with "I Wish I Were In Love Again" and a difficult but catchy calypso, "I Don't Think I'll End It All Today". Tastefully costumed and well groomed, Miss Gregory's was distinctively projected.

Employing four trombones, sax, piano, bass and drums, for a surprisingly big band sound, the Ray Sikora unit provided solid accompaniment for both vocalists. Orch was at its driving best in its one instrumental, a Rowland Kirk original, "Three For the Festival".

Ain Soodor's sharp overall production was marked by imaginative camera direction and good timing. This particular skein of the series has been extended to cover eight sessions with Colman and guest artists and should merit closer inspection by eastern CBC programmers for wider Canadian web exposure. Present sustaining format is easily adaptable to commercial sponsorship and cost should be attractive on an east-west audience basis. Shaw.

MORECAMBE & WISE SHOW
With Morecambe & Wise, Joe Brown and his Bruvvers, Michael Sammes Singers, Sheree Winton, Gillian Cobbold, Jack Parnell Orch
Producer: Colin Clews
Writers: S. C. Green, R. M. Hills
30 Mins., Sat., 8:30 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

Morecambe & Wise form the only surviving double act of any eminence that derives its inspiration from the music-hall tradition. Morecambe plays dumb and gets his laughs more by superb timing than the quality of the gags, and Wise is a splendid feed, sparking off reactions with fine judgment. The partnership has been in existence so long that their mutual understanding is almost extrasensory.

They returned to the schedules with a skein threaded to a conventional format, and, although the opener was below par, it promises to find a ready public. Chief fault was to strait-jacket the couple in revue-type sketches, whereas their forte is for inconsequential patter, without, rhyme, reason, or situation. Their main comic contributions were some shenanigans about a xylophone, in which notes were struck by hammering each other's limbs, and a demonstration of a washing-machine, in which Morecambe, playing host to the customers, got pie-eyed. Both were run-of-the-mill contrivances, and it said much for their expertise that they did not fall down dead.

The Michael Sammes Singers, a sextet who trotted while warbling "Put on a Happy Face," harmonized agreeably, and also guesting was Joe Brown, accompanied by his guitar-wielding Bruvvers, in infectious form.

Colin Clews produced, and the series will probably benefit from a less studied approach, allowing the pair to gag without too close a brief. Otta.

LORNA DOONE
With Andrew Faulds, Bill Travers, Vincent Brimble, Michael Healey, Norman Tyrrell, Shusha Assar, Beth Harris, Edgar Harrison, Jean Anderson, Theresa McMurray, Heather Bower, Ronald Russell, Joby Blanshard, Daphne Heard, David Morrell, Carl Bernard, Terence de Marney, Fleur Shaw
Producer: Douglas Allen
Director: Brandon Acton-Bond
Writer: Constance Cox
25 Mins., Sun., 5:45 p.m.
BBC-TV, from Bristol

Intended to spread itself over no less than 11 segments, this account of R. D. Blackmore's "Lorna Doone" opened with a distinctly placid and pallid initialler, not likely to raise the blood pressure. Its virtues were largely scenic, for the skein emanates from BBC-TV's West Region, within commuting distance of the Exmoor which gave Blackmore his background and inspiration. The period flavor of 17th century England was also carefully maintained, but, making due allowance for the establishing explanations needed in an opener, there was lack of vigor and conviction in both acting and direction. Constance Cox's dramatization did not flow easily, and one or two brief episodes were quite inexplicable without knowledge of the original.

This segment was launched by the murder of John Ridd by the outlaw clan of Doones, showed the determination of son John to avenge his father, and hinted at his budding romance with Lorna Doone, accidentally encountered. Thus the details were carefully deployed, but they set little alight. Any judgment, however, must be tentative, for the plot will presumably gain momentum when the older John and Lorna (to be played by Bill Travers and Jane Merrow) put in an appearance.

The thesps ranged from the adequate to the groping, with good cameos from Andrew Faulds, Jean Anderson, and Carl Bernard. Vincent Brimble was okay as the young John Ridd, but the child Lorna was given a strictly student portrayal. Otta.

Foreign TV Followup

Armchair Theatre

Donal Giltinan's "The Monkey and the Mohawk" made a flabby contribution to ABC-TV's "Armchair Theatre" skein. Although the plot flexed its muscles in the second half, it could not survive a lengthy, dire, and facetious opening, which ponderously established the situation.

Said theme was the rivalry of a couple of steeplejacks, Hamish (Ron Moody) and Joe (Harry Locke), for the hand of a comely saloonkeeper, Gwen (Brenda Bruce). Joe, boastful of intrepid exploits in construction jobs in the U.S., was challenged to climb a factory chimney-stack by the timid Hamish. And he lost his nerve, and his reputation with Gwen.

Some fairly pert comedy was extracted from the climbing episode, with Joe deserted by Hamish way up in the air, to give him his come-uppance. A storm broke out, and Hamish believed that Joe, fearful of descending unaided, had fallen to his death. Mild suspense was adequately tricked out, and was helped by a neat study in nervousness by Ron Moody, who won sympathy with a deft display of pawky clumsiness in a Scottish dialect. Brenda Bruce scored, too, in the routine reactions of the woman, but Harry Locke overplayed his hand as the braggart,

Chevy Renews Jackson, Trout for Ninth Year

Recent contract renewing Chevrolet's sponsorship of the weekend news on CBS Radio sets a record for the longest continuing relationship between a program and its sponsor on the web.

Chevrolet, through Campbell-Ewald, signed to sponsor the Allan Jackson Saturday newscasts and the Robert Trout Sunday newscasts for the ninth straight year.

CBC Launching Morning Shows

Ottawa, July 2.

For the first time since television preemed in Canada, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp.'s video network will operate in the morning. Starting in October, CBC's web will air educational shows from 10 a.m. daily.

CBC's afternoon shows in the autumn will include "Password," panel game show with Allen Lund and guests; "Take Thirty," show for women hosted by Paul Soles and Anna Cameron; "Razzle Dazzle," moppet stanza; "The Friendly Giant," also for youngsters; "This Living World," natural science stint; "Fireball X15," "Mister Piper," the Woody Woodpecker cartoon show. "X15" is an ITV production starring Alan Crofoot.

CTV's Fall Lineup

Ottawa, July 2.

CTV Television Network will have two new shows, both produced in Canada, in its fall schedule. Both will also go to the United States. The Jerry Lester Show, produced by Fellowship Productions, will run 60 minutes for 30 cities in the U.S. and CTV web in Canada. The Littlest Hobo stars a German shepherd dog named London, and will be exported as well as aired on CTV.

The network will bring in three new comedy shows: Phil Silvers' new stanza, "Harry's Girls" and the Danny Thomas Show. CTV also has "Mr. Novak," and "Walt Disney Presents" moves from CBC to CTV in the autumn. CTV will also have National Hockey League games from Toronto, plus Canadian professional football and the classic Grey Cup game.

Radio Review

FLAIR REPORTS
With Betty Adams, Jim Harriott, Howard Hodgkins, Stewart Klein, Edward Koppel, Charles Osgood
Producers: Ivan Ladislansky, Frank Magnire
Directors: Ted Bell, Warren Somerville
3½ Mins., Mon.-Sun. (six daily, three Sat. & Sun.)
ABC, from New York

Any similarity between ABC Radio's new "Flair Reports" and the defunk "Flair" is strictly in the title.

The old "Flair" will be remembered as timeless feature bits read by personalities and fed to locals for slotting at will. "Flair Reports," which preemed Monday (1), are three and one-half minute newscasts, with a blurb thrown in, the content of which is aimed at giving an angle or interpretation to a known news event.

Initial bit Monday at 12:25 p.m. was preceded by a series of quick headlines, then Stewart Klein (one of six anchor spielers) introduced "Flair Reports," which in this case was a sidebar from Rome correspondent John Casserly on President Kennedy's visit to the city. Report was a hypoed blast at the snafues attendant to JFK's visit (a called-off press conference, cursing Romans trying to get out of town on holiday when the main road was blocked off for the President's entry etc.).

"Flair Reports" seg was introduced with sound affects and announcement of the Rome remote, then a Wrigley's blurb was tossed in before Casserly's report. Judging from this one, intent would seem to be to keep the background bits hard and colorful.

"Flair Reports" will air six times a day, Monday-Friday, and three times on Saturday and Sunday, all slotted five minutes before the half hour. Bill.

Advertising Agency Assns. Spurn Bid to Join NAB's Ratings Council —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

The American Assn. of Advertising Agencies and the Assn. of National Advertisers are flatly rejecting a bid to join the National Assn. of Broadcasters Ratings Council. That's the board set up since the Oren Harris Washington investigation of ratings to establish an auditing and accrediting of the various broadcast rating services.

Group W's Don McGannon, who is chairman of the NAB's Rating Council, sent a letter to the advertising trade organizations asking them to participate. Late last week letters of rejection were being framed and okayed by 4A's and ANA officials, turning down the offer with specifics.

McGannon has, or will, receive a letter from John Crichton, 4A's prexy, which spells out the 4A's contention that a creditable audit of the ratings is the broadcasters' problem, since the ratings (for which advertisers and agencies carry most of the cost freight) are primarily a selling tool for stations and networks. Ratings, says the letter, are but one factor in the advertiser's considerations.

Also prompting the rejections, however, is the fact that the Rating Council to date is 100% a broadcaster organization. Represented are the three networks (David Adams of NBC, Simon Siegel of ABC and Thomas Fisher of CBS), Mutual web's prexy Bob Hurleigh, a handfull of local stations around the country and such industry promotion groups as Radio Advertising Bureau and Television Bureau of Advertising.

It's also the feeling of the ad men that any responsible outside —with strong emphasis on "outside"—organization can do the auditing job. Mentioned are Advertising Research Foundation, mag's Audit Bureau of Circulation, Price-Waterhouse or a group of academic research experts.

Same time, 4A's and ANA are providing watchdogs to keep an eye on NAB's activities in the ratings tangle. They'll see to it that any methods or auditing plans meet with the approval of the two trade organizations. ANA has named one technical monitor. 4A's will select three, one from the group's Broadcast Policy Committee, one from the media committee (to check on the local ratings scene) and one from the research committee.

Both ANA and 4A's have set up ratings subcommittees which are working together on doings since the Washington numbers investigation.

Boone in Art

Artist Harry Fisk, a veteran freelancer specializing in magazine illustration, won a top prize in this spring's Greenwich Village outdoor art show. Prominent in Fisk's award-winning still life is a jug of Vat 69 scotch, distributed in the U. S. by National Distillers. Painting, which won the Leinwand Award Grand Prize, was presented by Fisk to B. C. Ohlandt, exec veepee of National Distillers, who in turn presented it to Kenneth J. Ross, managing director of the ompany.

'Willie Loman' Low Blows

Not long ago the publisher of Sales Management magazine in an editorial asked the salesmen and sales execs of the country to rise up in protest to the depiction of salesmen in tv shows as boozing, sneaky, weak slobs and even murderers.

Now John H. Wolfe, head of a sales training outfit, Selling Aces Institute, says he's organizing a nationwire campaign urging the sellers to complain every time a "stereotyped" salesman is shown on tv (the SM man requested the same from his readers via letters to networks and station management.)

Wolfe says salesmen on tv are often depicted as obnoxious, loud, vulgar, sneaky and dishonest — "This type of person no more represents the average salesman today than Frank Nitti ("Untouchables" heavy) represents the average Italian."

Wolfe will take his "crusade" on the salesman's beat. Flying his own private plane, the sales trainer will hit eight cities.

Shapp Again Assumes Jerrold Corp. Control

In a move in which Sidney Harman sold back his stock holdings and resigned as president, Milton J. Shapp has taken over as president and chief exec officer of Jerrold Corp., Philadelphia, electronics mfg. company with subsidiaries including Pilot Radio Corp. and Harman-Kardon.

Harman's resignation came after several months of basic policy differences regarding future direction of the corporation. Sales and profits for fiscal '63 were up, he said, but the company has operated at a loss for the first four months of the current fiscal year. Shapp was founder and president from 1948 to 1961, when Harman took over.

36 Affils Now In QXR Network

The QXR Network, a chain of FM and AM stations across the country using taped or direct-feed quality musical shows originated on New York's WQXR, has signed six new affiliates to now cover 36 of the top 50 markets in the country (three of the new affils are in new markets. The other three represent changes in established cities).

New to the line up are WGKA, Atlanta; WCRB, Boston; WFML, Denver; WQMG, Greensboro, N.C.; WBMI, Hartford, Conn.; and WPBS, Philadelphia. New markets are Atlanta, Denver and Greensboro.

Since April of 1962, when Novo Broadcasting bought the web from the New York Times, 24 new stations have been signed.

Says James Sondheim, network prexy, "In each major market we are shooting for the strongest outlet whose broadcast standards are consistent with QXR's reputation for diversified adult programming. We have substituted affiliates in 12 markets and added 12 new ones in the last year. As a result, the network has expanded its share of the top 100 quality markets in the U. S., and a new research study has been launched to supplement last year's report on the QXR audience."

London Agencies

London, July 2.

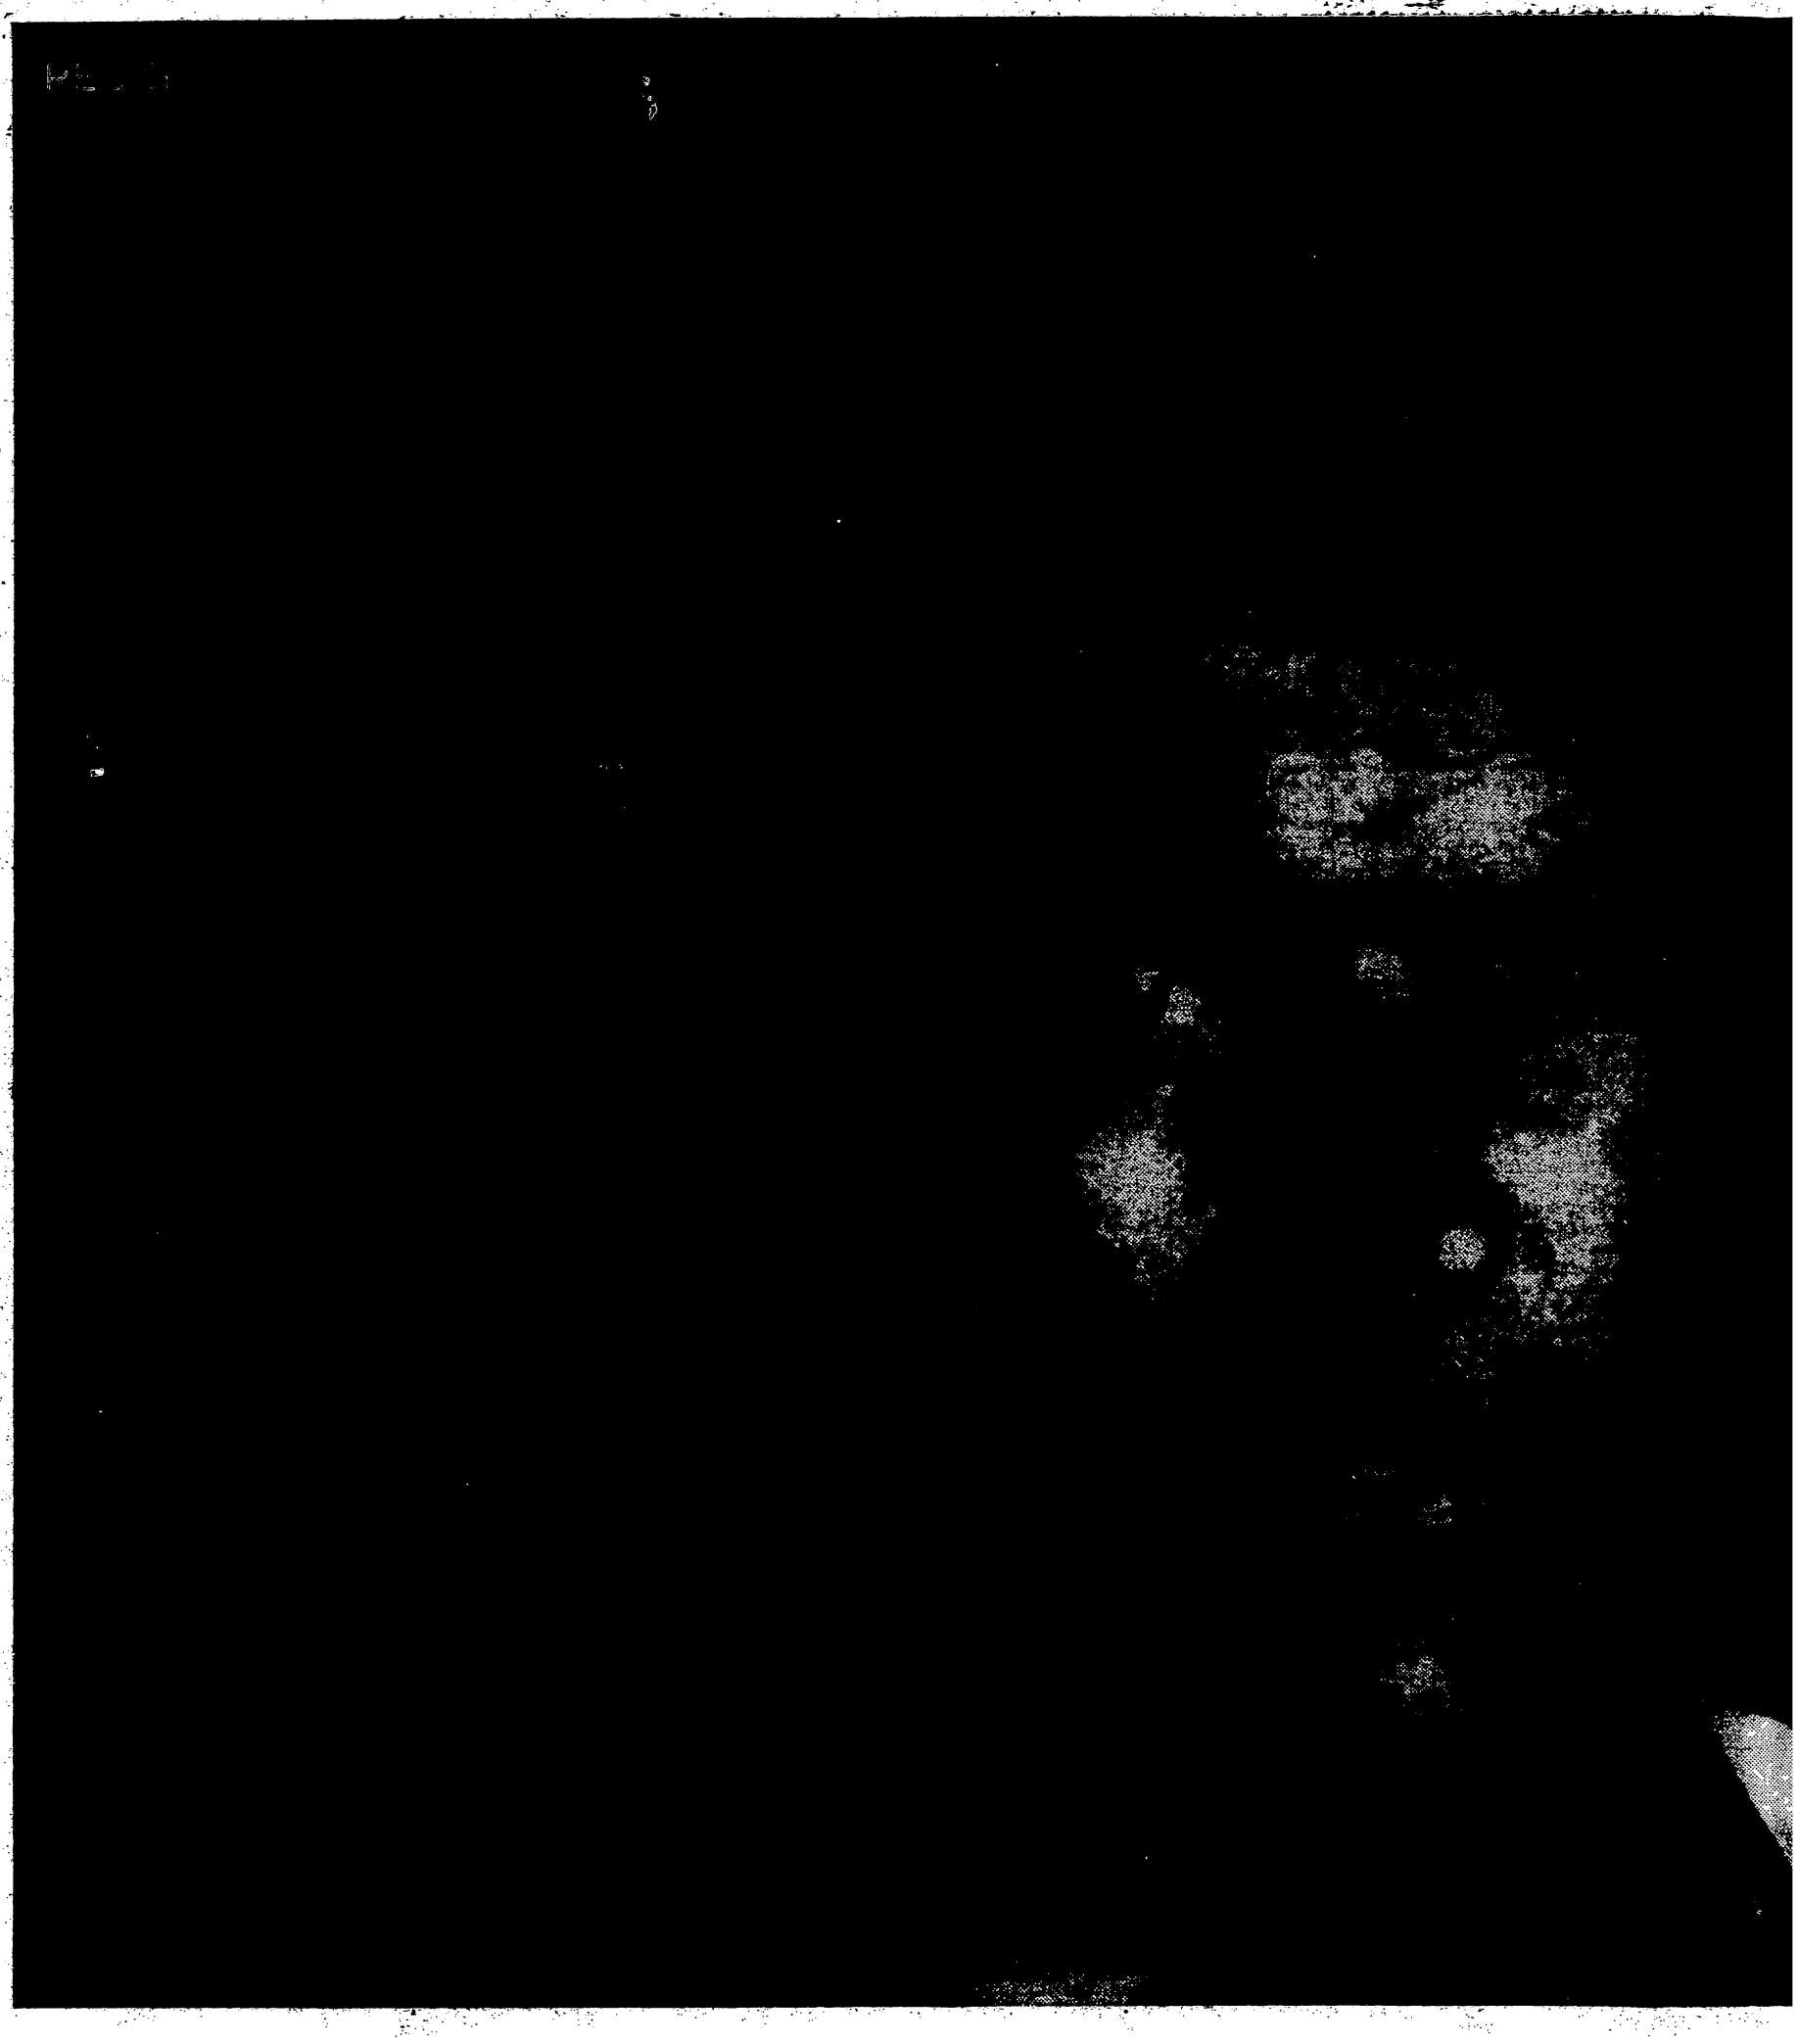
Andrew Christiansen, son of the w.k. ex-Fleet Street editor, Arthur Christiansen, to Milan's CPV Italiana office on a six-week exchange visit with Piero Leone. Christiansen is a creative group head with Colman, Prentis and Varlet . . . Howard Barnes, TV director of S. H. Benson Ltd., is vice prexy of the international jury at Cannes' 10th International Advertising Film Fest. 30-second tv spots to be used extensively this summer to put over two brands of Australian tinned fruit, Ardmona and K-Y . . . AEI-Hotpoint launching four new electric cookers with one-minute tv commercials on seven networks . . . Price in petrol cuts was swiftly put over as a 60-second commercial. Mather and Crowther did the job for Shell-Mex, and the commercial was aired within a few minutes of its completion, on the day the price cuts were announced.

McLEAN BACK TO CBC

Toronto, July 2.

Ross McLean, after two years on private tv, returned to the rival Canadian Broadcasting Corp. to produce the new Fletcher Markle series, "Periscope," which started its summer run July 1 on the CBC web.

McLean will retain his connection with the "Pierre Berton Show," produced by Screen Gems (Canada), which, though dropped by the CTV Television Network will be submitted as a 30-minute syndicated series next fall.



Redigo, Willing and Able

Despite the inevitable non-stop oratory and non-go traffic, tomorrow's national holiday is one of the happiest on the American calendar.

But Jim Redigo's personal Independence Day won't be rolling around till September 24. On that evening, NBC-TV viewers accustomed to watching Redigo as manager of the immense Garret holdings on "Empire" will be seeing him—for the first time—as a rancher in business for himself.

"Redigo"—like its predecessor—will be starring Richard Egan, whom a major popularity survey has just placed in the top 10-per-cent of show-business performers. The new, action-rich dramas will be set in the same, bountiful oil-and-cattle country of the contemporary Southwest.

The quality-bountiful Fall schedule for which this fresh, half-hour series is a part shapes up as one of the most diversified in NBC-TV history. It's a lineup that ranges from "The Eleventh Hour" to the expanded "Huntley-Brinkley Report;" from the new "Bill Dana Show" to coverage of the National Football League Championship.

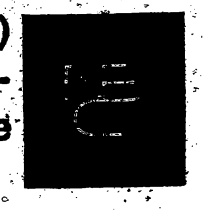
Among the people who'll be crossing Redigo's path this season: an impoverished but prideful Indian who would rather risk hunting a deer out of season than accept Redigo's charity; a lovely hitch-hiker trying to escape from the con-man boy friend for whom she's already served a prison term; a misguided lad who turns to modern rustling to insure a college education for his kid brother.

Star Richard Egan's involvement with these and other troubled souls will, we believe, make "Redigo" one of the most admired adventure series of the new year. By Southwest criteria (and we don't mean Southwest Connecticut) our hero's 25,600-acre ranch is a modest one, but as a springboard for fine drama, it's a spread without borders.



Look to NBC for the best combination of news, information and entertainment.

VARIETY - ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week six different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY. Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

network to start not later than October 1965, put up by Rodgers and signed by most of the "rebels," was negatived.

Gets Ad Levy

Earlier in the week, when the Bill was in the recommittal stage, Postmaster-General Bevins moved and won Government amendments concerning the hotly-disputed Clause 7 (which slaps a levy on the contractors' advertising income).

Despite continued and powerful anti-levy lobbying from all sections of the industry—from contractors, trade associations and unions right down to artists themselves—the Government stuck to its guns although it made certain concessions so that regional stations on the commercial network would be encouraged to produce more programmes.

Importantly, it was made firm that the levy would apply to net ad receipts and not gross spot coin (which would mean the independents would be paying the levy on 15% agency commission).

The "free slice" of advertising income, originally set at $3,500,000 for all companies, was upped to $4,200,000. On the next $16,800,000 in ad coin, the stations will be levied at 25%. And the balance of ad income will be subject to a 45% levy.

PMG Bevins estimated that, operated on this scale, the levy will yield $47,600,000 to the Government in its first full year (which compares with the $22,400,000 a year garnered from the existing Television Advertisement Duty which, incidentally, was passed on to advertisers). Assuming contractors' costs in the first year of the levy will be about $9,800,000 higher than those in 1962-63, the independents, said Bevins, should be left with profits before tax of about $42,560,000 (collectively). This figure allowed for net advertising income of $197,680,000; income from program sales of $22,960,000, and costs, including rental paid to the Independent Television Authority for its transmitters of $130,480,000 and the ad levy of $47,600,000 which left a balance of $42,560,000 before tax.

Can Go Out of Biz

Referring to Norman Collins' charge that the levy would make a British commercial television franchise "a license to lose money," the PMG said that this was not the case but that if any company believed it, nobody was obliged to contract after 1964. "The notion that the Government has the smallest wish to destroy commercial television is an utter absurdity," said Bevins. "The Clause, as amended, would offer every encouragement to the companies as a whole to carry on while at the same time, protecting the interests of the taxpayer.

Speaking on an amendment moved by a leading Labor politician, Frederick Willey, that there should be at least a 30% British quota of telefilms, the Government stated that 40% of the films shown on the commercial web were British. BBC screened in 1962 35% British films. The new clause was withdrawn.

group of "Trails West," which are selected re-edited episodes of "DVD," was said to be prompted by the immediate acceptance enjoyed by the first 52 half-hours placed in syndication 10 months ago. They have been sold in 115 markets to date.

Additionally, host Milland is currently filming a supply of bridges so that two episodes of "Trails West" can be programmed back-to-back in an hourlong format.

In addition to "Trails West," there's another group of "DVD" reruns, an earlier group, under the title of "The Pioneers," which features Will Rogers, Jr., as host. To date, "The Pioneers," totalling 104 episodes, has been sold in nearly 200 markets.

VARIETY-ARB's weekly chart offers a day-by-day analysis of the top feature evening slots in a particular market. On Saturdays and Sundays, daytime feature slots compete with nighttime pix periods for designation as the top feature slot of the day. The analysis is confined to the top rated feature slots in the ARB measured period, broken down by days in the week. The ARB measured period usually covers three or four weeks. Other data such as the time slot and total area homes is furnished. Top competition and competitive ratings also are highlighted.

formation?" he asks, adding hastily, "God forbid this be construed as an invitation for them to come around."

As for the critics: "Who the hell are they to criticize? To begin with, they have no common language among themselves. I resent them. They are dancing at other people's weddings and wakes. They are not invited by me. But they are fawned on by the agencies and networks. They are unnecessary evils. To me, they serve no useful purpose, but they do to the business. They help sell a product. They are wined and dined. Agencies and publicity departments of the networks think strongly that they are a very important factor. Else they wouldn't corral actors for interviews; you give out phone interviews until your ears are ringing. A review has little effect on the fate of a show because it's after the fact. I don't know what the hell function they serve. Except for a few who have taken on the laudable task of elevating standards through their criticism, I don't concur with their tastes personally.

'Criminal Canard'

"One of the criminal canards we have to live with is that the public shall determine what stays on tv. This is dangerous nonsense. They do not. The fact 'Beverly Hillbillies' is eagerly applauded by the public does not prove this, because you can point to a 'Naked City' going off, and that was desired by the public, it got a preponderance of good reviews, 'Can more money be made from this time?' That determines whether a show stays on. It is not a sentimental business. To give them credit, the networks and Madison Ave. never refer to tv as an art form."

Cobb believes tv will never police itself because it's a business. "Their nature is to be as they are. They are not evil men. The system should be changed, it should be taken out of the realm of private ownership. What they have in England is far better. Why should the richest country in the world be able to boast it gives no aid to the arts? Other countries do. I consider that Congressman who complained about too many cultural programs on tv a nitwit, a traitor to my country. We should have a government network representing me and millions of others, where they could find the kind of programs they want.

"Whether the majority is satisfied or not is irrelevant because it has no choice . . . How can I like something where you are a hero if you finish on time? That's the first consideration . . . Our series improved the latter part of last season. Efforts to improve it were blunderbuss — they shot in every direction. How can you do a 90-min. show in eight days without feeling that this is an emergency. 'Virginian' is a good show, but only in a relative sense. It's a hit-and-miss proposition. There's no such thing as a good series, but there can be a good individual show."

sie and ordered him back to the Continent as chief European correspondent (rather than as Paris bureau topper, as before).

Schoenbrun, fearing continued clashes with various CBS European bureau chiefs when he bounced on their scene to take the top story in their country from them, insisted that he should have no administrative responsibilities over the bureau chiefs and that he needed his own show. Edward R. Murrow and Howard K. Smith had both roamed Europe, getting into the territories of others with the net, but they were working only on their own shows in the process, he pointed out.

CBS wouldn't give him a show, intending instead for him to be a part of the new expanded 30-minute news package planned for the new season.

As Schoenbrun saw it, he would be robbing a bureau chief of his story every time he flew to another capital to appear on the general CBS news program.

The net biggies didn't see it the same way. For Schoenbrun, it represented the last straw in disagreements on news policy. His resignation resulted.

not being helped by a nauseating and distinctive laugh, written into the script.

Christopher Morahan directed Leonard White's production, skillwedding film and studio shots of the chimney incident. But the piece was really defeated by prattling dialog and its slowburn construction. Otta.

Play of the Week

Although Elizabeth Dawson's "The Seventh Wave" was stockpiled from familiar ingredients, it made a comfortably entertaining contribution to the "Play of the Week" skein from Anglia TV. Tania Lieven's direction delivered it with conviction, despite the clumsy intrusion of live film to fill in the nautical background.

Peter Miller (Anthony Booth) was blamed for a trawler accident two years previously by skipper Joe Brent (Patrick Wymark), who had lost his only son through Miller's alleged negligence. Miller, contemplating matrimony with Brent's daugher, Sally (Ann Bell), rejoined Brent's crew to try and work his passage back into favor. But Joe was unforgiving, could not forget the past, and treated Miller to running insults.

Naturally, a gale blew up, and it could easily be foreseen that Brent himself would make a navigational error, through overtiredness, and put his ship in jeopardy. This led to a final change-of-heart and grins all round.

Simple stuff, and much of it naively written, it had some pleasant touches of subsidiary character. John Moffatt and Sheila Ballantyne, as a wife-ridden seaman and his houseproud spouse, had nice comically-sentimental moments, and Bert Palmer and Derek Birch convinced as crew types. Patrick Wymark made a powerful figure of the embittered Brent, and Ann Bell was well in the picture as the daughter, torn between father and lover. Anthony Booth, despite over-indulgence in cheek-scratching, was okay as Miller, and the piece was a fair example of a routine plot that acquired a flavor through its trimmings. Otta.

Television Playhouse

Described as a "black comedy," Peter Draper's "A Sickening Thud" was an astringent entry for Associated TeleVision's "Television Playhouse" skein, with an effective line of offbeat wit and pungent observation. Central figure was Marco Polo McWhirter (Tony Tanner), a different salesman lumbered with these adventurous names and struggling against them. He had no ambition to conquer new worlds, merely to settle anonymously into this one.

The piece took a comic look at his unhappy penchant for failure. Helped to make a play for a girl by his womanizing pal, Alex (Dyson Lovell), he ended up as best man. He drifted into selling as a last resort, and mingled disconsolately with bizarre colleagues in a lodging house. It was these fringe characters that displayed Draper's gifts at their best. In the next room was Major Mort (Peter Elliot), a religious crank whose musings about vampires and the universe were constantly accompanied by music from an oldfashioned gramaphone. There was the puritanical Horton Chambers (Geoffrey Dunn), a salesman of a dignified older school, but not above the surreptitious pinching of female bottoms. There was a would-be femme fatale, Gloria Hone (Renny Lister), who proffered the hero her whole love—and turned out to be a stripper on the sly and to have dated all the males in the place. Finally, there was the ebullient Mozart Thomas (Aubrey Richards), symbol of the uninhibited life-enjoyer that Marco Polo could never be.

The salty flavor was aided by the Welsh locale, and the script had touches that would not have disgraced Dylan Thomas. The stylized entertainment was astutely acted by all concerned, with Tony Tanner scoring as the subfusc hero and Aubrey Richards and Renny Lister providing well-judged support. Director Wilfred Eades maintained fine control, and the play, although it might have been too mannered for many, was rich in entertainment, but not too black to be dubbed sick. Otta.

Love Story

Associated TeleVision's skein of one-hour yarns revolving round a central theme, love, which goes out over the whole commercial network in peak time on Mondays, is building up its reputation as an "atmosphere piece." In the segment caught, "The Habit Of Loving," authoress Doris Lessing compiled a convincing and moody profile of the marital existence between an aging trouper (Eric Portman) and a left-on-the-shelf actress (Lana Morris).

Agony the association brought—as the actress tumbled for a younger, but disinterested, man and reconciled herself to a joyless life with her grey husband—was the substance of the play. The ensuing gloom made for lump-in-the-throat viewing if only for the superb performances brought in by Portman and Miss Morris. Indeed, it can fairly be said that Portman's portrayal of the successful, sophisticated but self-centered man, who loved more out of habit than emotion, was the highlight of the series so far.

Backed up by a small but effective cast, Miss Morris as the thesp, nearing 40 and clutching at last straws, brought a lot to the role giving emotional impact to the simple dialog.

Miss Lessing's unpretentious script directly aimed at getting to the core of her characters via little plot. This left the whole of the action to come from the principals' reaction to one another.

Dennis Vance's production was deft, unintrusive and creative in its camerawork, which enhanced the atmosphere of growing discontent between husband and wife. Settings, by Vic Symonds, were admirable if a trifle oversumptuous. Watt.

concerned is the impotence of the fairness doctrine.

Several subcommittee members, candidly noting the hyper-sensitivity of the political breed, predicted FCC would be swamped with complaints even if stations were scrupulously fair in covering campaigns. This was more markedly predicted by Sen. Mike Monroney (D-Okla.). In his home state there are often 16 candidates in a primary, an obvious can of worms for broadcasters trying to give fair coverage.

Monroney and other subcommittee members felt a broader suspension or repeal would give too much power to broadcasters to pick and choose among so many candidates.

Noting the existance of such problems, but averring they could be solved was former FCC Chairman Paul Porter, repping the President's Commission on Campaign Costs.

His group recommended a repeat of the 1960 suspension, but speaking for himself Porter advocated extending it to Senatorial, Congressional and gubernatorial candidates.

Porter also read into the record a letter from N.Y. Herald Tribune exec Walter Thayer backing outright repeal.

Opposing any easing of Sec. 315 were reps of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Socialist Labor Party.

The steel tower will sit on a concrete base on which will also be located a small building in which will be housed booster equipment. This equipment will also be capable of handling 6,000 two-way telephone circuits and 84 radio circuits.

At the present time the tower of the Atlantic City Race Course and another tower near Port Republic owned by the New Jersey Bell Telephone company serve as sites for television booster dishes but these make possible only two programs simultaneously.

The new tower, which doubles this capacity, is a must as the big Democrat parley comes in. In future years it will be a welcome addition as more and more tv programs originate here. These including boxing shows and other events housed in big Convention hall, the Miss America Beauty Pageant, and the big conventions which gather with newsworthy matter in the Convention Hall annually.

CBS SWEETENS POT VIA RAISES, BENEFITS

CBS, which is doing handsomely on its profit and loss statement, has given pay increases from $3 to $5 to all secretaries, office personnel, etc. The pay increase, as well as other benefits, were disclosed following negotiations in the company's employee-management committee.

Other benefits won by employees were four weeks vacation after 20 years of service. Previously, it had been 25 years before four weeks vacations were okayed.

Other factors sweetening the pot for CBS employees include a merit increase program which will be in effect during the 15 month period covered by the above increase—July 1, 1963 through Sept. 30, 1964, a more liberalized holiday schedule which will include a half-day off on Good Friday for religious observance, and a more liberalized computation for overtime work.

stations with large proportions of week-end advertising.

He was even more critical of the suggestion offered by former FCC Chairman Newton Minow requiirng all stations to join NAB which would then take over some enforcement duties.

"The wisdom of such a course escapes me," Ford said. A similar set up in the securities market is designed to prevent fraud, he continued, but broadcasters aren't accused of improper practices. The public can judge broadcasters' performances immediately, he said.

He said the proposal would create an unnecessarily complicated regulatory device giving the Commission only indirect control.

via a meritorious presentation of the difficult problems.

The crime syndicates' new technique, unfamiliar to most people and with which the documentary largely concerned itself, has local confederates designate the job to be committed. Chicago or other cities' syndicates then use their own small planes to fly in hoods for the necessary casing and perpetration.

Tuners-in learned the size of the planes is such that they can and do land on un-policed nearby farms or sizable vacant lots instead of regular airfields. This makes it difficult to identify and apprehend the felons and the hoods are in a position to get away quickly.

During its 30 minutes, "The Hoods" boasted some engrossing action along with its plentitude of talk. While not reconstructing any crime, to provide more melodramatics, it did recreate the actual casing of a St. Paul jewelry store and adjoining bank by three visiting Chicago crime syndicate members posing as respectable businessmen. They were arrested on the ground and shipped out of the city pronto. St. Paul police department files furnished this material.

Appearing on camera to discuss crime were the Chicago and St. Paul police department chiefs, a St. Paul detective and a Twin Cities' priest. They brought out, among other things, that the Twin Cities, having become big league baseball towns, are now a mecca for the traveling activities of crime syndicates.

With the U.S. now the world's No. 1 nation in crime, a threat exists to society's survival. Father Michael McDonough of St. Paul told the tv audience more effort must be devoted to showing young folks the guiding light of rectitude and lessening money worship.

McGovern cited the case of a Negro janitor who found and returned $240,000 dropped from an armored truck and who, ever since, has been harassed by telephone callers and letters denouncing him as a "boob."

All in all, this program was one more feather in the caps of McGovern and director Guy Galante. Rees.

TROUBLED WATERS
With Don Bruchey, Narrator
Producer: Robert Cochrane
Director: Ray Douglas
Writer: George Kipe
30 Mins, Wed., 8:30 p.m.
WMAR-TV, Baltimore (film)

Baltimore enjoys one of purest water supplies in the nation, but local citizens will have to develop a sharper sense of responsibility if they want to hang onto that claim.

This was the message forcefully and factually illustrated by "Troubled Waters," a documentary-editorial presented by WMAR-TV.

City's inhabitants are fortunate, as Robert Cochrane pointed out at the close of the program, because the supply is unspoiled by cities farther north and because the watershed areas, so far, are untouched by factory waste and residential development with sceptic seepage.

Film traced the Patapsco River from several of sources to Liberty Dam then into Baltimore harbor. There is little or no pollution above the dam for reasons cited, but waters below the dam are another story.

From there on, it becomes dumping ground for garbage, stable detergents, raw sewage, oil and sceptic tank overflow to extent where "no stream in Maryland is safe for swimming."

Documentary didn't present a very pretty picture, but it was effective one and most serious note was sounded when viewers were told it is only a matter of time, with continued residential and commercial development, before watershed areas above the dams, will reach pollution level now faced by other cities.

Narration for "Trouble Waters" was ably delivered by Don Bruchey, the tight script was written by George Gipe and impressive camerawork was handled by Charles Purcell. All are to be commended for presenting one of the better and more vital of the local documentaries. Luce.

AS YOU LIKE IT
With Laurence Luckinbill, Arthur Lithgow, Edward Grover, William Kerby, Al Corbin, Norma Joseph, Ann Murray, Nicholas Kepros, Emery Battis, Kenneth Ruta, Eric Tavares, Kent Paul, Chris Colombi, Dave Bayley, William Ashley, John Scanlan, Delphi Harrington, Jane Nottage and Dr. Frank Baxter
Executive Producer: Dennis McGuire
Producer - Director: Phillip R. Enoch
90 Mins.; Thurs. 9:30 p.m.
KYW-TV, Cleveland

Shakespeare's "As You Like It" with its interwoven plots and subplots, lyrical qualities, and carefree moments is a challenge on the stage and when a station attempts to edit it—as with a feature film—it's delicate production task.

Utilizing the Great Lakes Shakespeare Festival Company, who returned for a second summer this year to suburban Lakewood, KYW-TV attempted to put 90 minutes, minus commercials and intro speeches, what the Festival cast did in about two-and-one-half hours. Under the direction of Phillip R. Enoch, the attempt almost succeeded. Unfortunately, the transitions were too abrupt, and unless one was either knowledgeable of "As You Like It," or unless briefed as to portions deleted, the total reaction was confusion.

The station did have the means to bridge the omissions through the use as host, Frank Baxter, the noted educator, who appeared to discuss English history during the era of the Bard. It would have been better had Baxter's appearance been utilized as explanatory offerings of plot deletions, etc.

The cast, however, did a notable job. Among the performers of significance were Laurence Luckinbill, Orlando; Arthur Lithgow, Adam; Ann Murray, Rosalind; Norma Joseph, Celia; Emery Battis, Duke Frederick; Ken Rutta, Duke Senior; and John Scanlan who, as Jacques, gave an impressive "All the World's A Stage." Ann Murray's Rosalind was commendable for the gayety she projected and the portrayal, too, of manly disguise.

Studio staging was effective, but the repeated use of a leaf pattern for transitional purposes became too obvious and annoying.

In overall consideration, credit to the station for attempting this meaningful offering of Shakespeare during prime evening time. Mark.

CAPITOL CLOSEUP
With Joseph McCaffrey, House Speaker John W. McCormack
Producer: McCaffrey
Director: Charles Stopak
30 mins.; Tues. 10:30 p.m.
WMAL-TV, Washington (tape)

Introducing another political interview show in Washington is sort of like sponsoring a lonely hearts club membership for Christine Keeler.

Nevertheless, Joseph McCaffrey, a top Capitol Hill expert, managed in the premier show of his projected series to make a dent.

His kickoff guest was House Speaker John W. McCormack (D.-Mass.) who ordinarily is not effusive on or off camera. But McCaffrey, betraying his intimate knowledge of the subject, elicited from the speaker several soliloquies that at times bordered on eloquence.

The format of the show is basic. There is no script and no notes. McCaffrey merely manipulates the interview by his questions. The air of complete informality is good.

Adding considerable effect is the setting which finds McCaffrey and guest seated outdoors with the awesome west front of the capitol a constant backdrop. The camera work, subtle and confined, also adds to the show.

McCormack's elder statesman look and his candid observations on the problems of his office, his relations with the President, his own political philosophy, poverty, the cost of political campaigns, civil rights, taxes, length of Congressional sessions and Congressional reform made the show impressive, informative and interesting.

There was little or no spot news in the program (as there is on some Washington interview shows), but that wasn't McCaffrey's fault, merely the practiced art of McCormack coming through. Ned.

PINOCCHIO
With Paul Winchell, Harry Monte, Frankie Delfino, Robie Lester, Bob Baker Marionettes
Producer: James B. Patterson
Director: Dick McDonough
Writer Joe Bigelow
Music: Milton Delugg, Ira Wallach
60 Mins., Sun. 6 p.m.
KABC-TV, Los Angeles

An hour of family entertainment with solid moppet appeal was fashioned by KABC-TV in this skeletal, musicalized version of Collodi's famous childrens' story. Although time and production limitations tended to weaken character definition, particularly insofar as the title figure was concerned, the morale of the tale managed to filter through to the tyke brigade, and adults sharing the experience with their charges probably welcomed the faintly irreverent, sometimes tongue-in-cheek approach taken by writer Joe Bigelow in adapting the Ira Wallach dramatization to fit the specifications of producer James B. Patterson.

There were a number of novel aspects to the program, executed on approximately a $20,000 budget by Patterson. For one thing, the novelty of a puppet (Jerry Mahoney) portraying a marionette (Pinocchio). For another, the multi-voiced, multi-character assignment undertaken and accomplished expertly by the gifted Paul Winchell. And for yet another, the utilization of midgets Harry Monte and Frankie Delfino to portray the key marionettes in long shot transitional activity. "Pinocchio" is an infrequently attempted property, for obvious reasons. Considering the inherent difficulties of translating it into live drama, Patterson and staff, and especially Winchell, merit great credit.

Although there were occasional lapses and irregularities in the execution, director Dick McDonough on the whole did the nifty job of bringing it off. Milton Delugg's score and Wallach's lyrics seemed, on the one hearing, to contain nothing especially haunting or indelible, but all the tunes were pleasant and appropriate and entirely satisfactory. Probably the best of the lot was "Hideaway Heart," warbled sweetly by Robie Lester in the role of the blue fairy. Other helpful contributions included Robert Harold Johnson's impressionistic sets and the key role played in the production by Bob Baker's Marionettes, whose utilization in bearing individual and credit cards was a particularly clever notion. Tube.

Warns Diskeries to 'Clean Up Or Else' at ARMADA Miami Meet

By LARY SOLLOWAY

Miami Beach, July 2.

Fifth annual convention of the American Record Merchants & Distributors Assn., held here last week at the Eden Roc, stressed an industry cleanup note. Imminence of Federal Trade Commission intervention in many of the current practices and chaotic conditions that have resulted from such dealings, were underlined by the meet's principal speakers.

Ex-FTC chairman Earl Kintner, now special counsel and Washington rep for ARMADA capped the "cleanup, or else" warnings in an analysis of industry conditions, when he advised convention attendees to "clean up your own industry with the help of the Federal government or face the possibility—and likelihood—of direct action by the Federal Trade Commission."

Kintner strongly urged ARMADA to press for a conference with the FTC rather than wait until it started litigation to correct illegal practices current in the industry.

Industry's 'Unhealthy' Economy

Kintner pointed out that the record industry is one of the unhealthiest in the national economy. He predicted the Government agency would find the answer to transshipping, a practice he considers "next to lawlessness."

He declared the Robinson-Patman act is being violated every day and advised that all segments of the industry unite and seek FTC cooperation in laying down rules and guide lines for ethical business practices. "Most of you are guilty of treating your customers unfairly and are in violation of the law," he said. Thus, if a trade conference did not materialize the FTC could move in via issuance of cease and desist orders that could easily put a manufacturer, distributor or one stop, out of business.

Kintner, in again stressing "set your house in order with the aid of the Government, or they'll do it for you," told the meeting that "the Government's hand may be forced by complaints of which there are several hundred already on file. You can use a large dose of Robinson-Patman.

"If your prices to the customer are all over the lot you are probably in violation of the act. You need Robinson-Patman like pagan nations need God." He then compared the chaotic conditions of the industry to the Augean stables and termed present practices as "madness." The conclave then passed a resolution to request a conference with the FTC to establish trade procedures and practice rules.

Kapp's Admonition

Kintner's strong warning to ARMADA topped other key speeches by industry leaders. Opening address by vet record manufacturer David Kapp warned of a concentration on big deals leading

Auto Mechanic's Tunenp Of Tooter's Caddy Sains Him Into Di k, Pub Fields

An automobile mechanic is branching into the record business because he became friendly with a musician whose Cadillac (1955) had been getting his service for the past eight years. The mechanic is Bernie Smith, owner of the York East Service Center on New York's eastside, and the musician is Clyde Reasinger, jazz trumpeter currently in the pit of the Broadway legituner, "No Strings."

When Smith heard that Reasinger had organized and was rehearsing a big band, he came up with the loot to sponsor an album for the new orch and to start a new record company to launch it. The diskery will be called Franklin Records and will be officered by Smith, Reasinger, the bandleader's wife, Karin, and publicist Art Franklin. The first LP will be tagged "I'm Clyde — He's Reasinger."

Also launched is the Karin Reasinger Co. which will promote and publish all of Reasinger's originals, and those of the musicians in the band who also write.

ARMADA Unit to Brief Distribs on Rack Jobbing

Miami Beach, July 2.

A committee to educate ARMADA distribs who wish to enter the rack jobber field was set up at the convention here. Members include Dave Miller, Bob Hausfater, Amos Heilicher, Bill Davis and Carl Glaser.

Committee will work with distribs going into such operation and who will require such guidance. Feeling among ARMADA members is that rack jobbing is a form of distribution.

20th-Fox Label Buildup as 'Cleo' Album Sales Soar

With the "Cleopatra" soundtrack album off the ground in the U.S., Norman Weiser, 20th Century-Fox Records veepee in charge of operations, is now prepping for a buildup in all disk areas to push the label's new image in the industry.

The "image" will be stressed via a new label logo and new packaging while the buildup will be on new artists and releases. Coming under the 20th-Fox banner as artists in the new Weiser regime (he joined the company last April) are Vivian della Chiesa, composer Alex North, 20th-Fox music director Lionel Newman, The Bobettes and The Hightsman. Dick Goodman will now head the company artists & repertoire activities.

In addition to the 20th-signed artists, Weiser also indicated that the company would keep its doors open to indie producers for the purpose of buying masters latching on to new talent. This will be done for both singles and album product. On the Coast end, Newman will also be looking for talent and material for the label.

On the diskery's album agenda for release this month are "Marilyn," soundtrack of the 20th features; "Love Notes" by Al Martino, and LPs by Little Richard and The Teardrops. The company plans to launch its pitch into the classical field in October with two packages.

On the distributor end, Weiser has revamped the company's U. S. network, and has deals with Quality Records in Canada, and EMI (Electric & Musical Industries) in England. Weiser is now winding up deals for 20th Century-Fox Records ties in every major market in the world.

On the basis of current sales, Weiser anticipates a 2,000,000 copy rackup by the end of the summer from three markets: U.S., Canada and England. The selling pattern overseas will be the same as that of the U. S., with distributors shelling out front-money before receiving the album.

Weiser is leaving for the Coast Sunday (7) for huddles with Newman and North. The discussions with North will be on the possibilities for a second edition of the "Cleopatra" track.

REELECT HEILICHER PREXY OF ARMADA

Miami Beach, July 2.

The officer slate of the ARMADA nominating committee was elected by the association. Returned to the president's post was Amos Heilicher. James Martin is exec vice president; James Schwartz, treasurer; Joe Cohen, eastern regional v.p.; Bob Chatton, western regional v.p.; Bill Davis, midwest regional v.p. and Irwin Fink, secretary.

Heilicher, in his opening address to the convention, praised exec secretary Paul Ackerman for his accomplishments in furthering the progress and planning of ARMADA.

Board members appointed include Henry Lieberman, Henry Nathanson, Milt Salstone, Harry Levin, Hutch Carlock, Carl Glaser, Bill Shocket, Jake Friedman and Bud Lampe.

Kell-Cole Pacts Sales Rep Deals With 2 Pubs

Jack Gale, partner with Nat Cole in the Kell-Cole operation, has completed arrangements with Burke-Van Heusen and the George Simon publishing companies to act as exclusive sales representatives for their product. K-C has also signed similar representation deals with Johnny Burke Inc. and Jimmy Van Heusen Inc.

In addition to these deals, K-C owns Sweco Music Corp. and the Comet Music Corp. The firm recently moved to larger quarters on West 57th St. in New York.

Pubs Lose Piracy Suit Vs. 'Mad' Mag

An attempt to establish a legal ruling that paraphrasing a song and/or copying a song with evasion is an infringement was stymied in N.Y. Federal Court last week when Judge Charles M. Metzner saw "no infringements of any exclusive rights" in the suit filed by some 12 members of the Music Publishers Protective Assn. against Mad Magazine and its corporate owner, E. C. Publications.

The action involved comic parodies of the lyrics of the plaintiffs-publishers' songs which were contained in an insert to Mag mag titled "Sing Along With Mad—A 20 Page Parody Song Book." Judge Metzner said, "It is difficult to see how music can be copied when it is not reproduced. Furthermore, if the reader is familiar with music, it can only be result of plaintiff's efforts. The defendants are not the source of this knowledge."

The Judge added that the defendants' lyrics have little in common except for meter and perhaps a few words. "They are," he said, "original, ingenious lyrics on subjects completely dissimilar from plaintiffs."

Two songs, of the 25 in the complaint, were exempted from the court's ruling. They are Irving Berlin's "Always" and "There's No Business Like Show Business." Further action on the two tunes depends on what course attorney Julian T. Abeles, who filed for the MPAA, wants to take. However, it's expected that Abeles will appeal the entire decision. The attorneys for Mad in the suit were Scheiman, Albert & MacLean.

Abeles had sough $1-per songper copy damages or $25 for each copy of Mad mag since 25 songs were involved. The total sales of the edition had been put into the tens of thousands.

Vaughn Meader's New Corporation 'Image'

Vaughn Meader who cashed fame with his takeoff of President John F. Kennedy, making the runaway disk bit, will augment his talent span Aug. 26 when he makes his legitimate debut. Place will be the Lakeside Playhouse at Skowhegan, Maine, second to Elitch's Gardens of Denver in longevity as a summer stock operation. Meader will play the elusive bachelor in "Tender Trap."

Meanwhile Meader and his manager, Buddy Allen, have set up a new corporation, Vaughn Meader Enterprises Inc. Performer is prez, manager is secretary. Corporation will handle all the many-faceted aspects of the Meader activities. "Diversification" being the thing nowadays a first action of the new corporation is purchase of a gasoline station at Baldwin, L.I.

Meader and his wife will vacation for a month in Germany following his stand July 7-13 at the Steel Pier, Atlantic City.

This fall Meader will revise the structure of his cafe turn using Bucky Searles and Donna Jean Young as foils for skits.

Carter Enterprises Into Disk, Pub and Mgt. Biz

Bob Carter, who's been associated with record companies and music publishing firms for the past 10 years, has formed his own company, Bob Carter Enterprises, which includes the Bocart record label.

In addition to the disk operation, Carter will also be involved in music publishing, management and promotion.

Col Back in Legituner Sweepstakes With 375G in Willson's 'Here's Love'

Columbia Records is back in the legituner backing groove. The diskery will be the sole backer of Meredith Willson's "Here's Love" to the tune of $375,000 with provision for a 20% overcall.

The "Here's Love" angeling marks Col's second tie with producer Stuart Ostrow. Two seasons ago the diskery was sole backer of Ostrow's "We Take The Town" with a $390,000 investment after a 20% overcall. The musical folded during its out-of-town tryout and no original cast album was made.

Col's angeling of the new Willson tuner gives it the rights to the original cast album. Willson's previous two tuners, "The Music Man" and "The Unsinkable Molly Brown," were given the original cast albums treatment by Capitol Records.

The backing of "Here's Love" marks a reversal by Col from last season's angeling adventures. The diskery played it comparatively cool in the 1962-63 season, investing only $60,000 in two properties: "Nowhere To Go But Up" got $40,000 of Col's money and "The Beast In Me" got $20,000. Both were flops and no cast albums were made.

Shapeup of the original cast album field for next season now gives ABC-Paramount "A Girl To Remember," "The Ghost Goes West" and "Mrs. A." The three musicals fell into ABC-Par's hopper via the $1,000,000 investment by its parent company, American Broadcasting-Paramount Theatres, in Lester Osterman-Jule Styne's On-Stage Productions.

Although still not officially announced, RCA Victor is expected to be in the running with "Jennie," the Mary Martin starrer with a score by Howard Dietz & Arthur Schwartz, and "One Hundred Ten In The Shade," the musicalization of "The Rainmaker" with a score by Tom Jones & Harvey Schmidt.

It's understood that Capitol has been huddling with Alexander Cohen on the possibilities of original cast album deals and backing of some of the properties he's bringing in next season.

Harry Tobias O'seas Tour Accents Global Music Biz

Vet songsmith Harry Tobias' eight-country tour, in 10 weeks, on behalf of his standards, seeing disk jockeys and a&r men "in every place, from Israel to the Scandinavian countries," as he puts it, points up another new manifestation of the global pop music biz.

Evergreens have the same impact abroad as in the U. S. and Tobias' talking up of his past and present catalog, with an eye to re-recordings, is part of the international performance rights values.

He returned to his Hollywood base over the weekend.

Bullock Exits As Victor Veepee, Up Joseph D'Imperio

W. W. (Bill) Bullock has stepped out as RCA Victor veepee for market services and business affairs, and Joseph E. D'Imperio has moved into the post.

Bullock's retirement from Victor comes after a 37-year hitch with the company. D'Imperio, who took over Bullock's slot Monday (1), was upped from his post as senior counsel for the diskery. A replacement for D'Imperio will be named shortly.

Decision by Bullock, a 56-year old, to pull out of Victor came after family pressures to ease up. He has had the veep stripe at Victor since 1956 and during his long tenure there, his activities touched in the areas of plant management, engineering, distributing, field and national sales, marketing and promotion, as well as in the creative area of artists & repertoire and album planning and merchandising.

In '55 he took over as manager of the singles division and was responsible for all producing and marketing of single records for the company at a time when rock 'n' roll was changing the music/disk scene. It was in this period that Bullock became closely associated with the activities of Elvis Presley and his manager, Col. Tom Parker. Bullock was one of the several Victor execs instrumental in the acquisition of Presley, one of the all-time top disk sellers.

D'Imperio, senior counsel at Victor for the past three years, joined the company in '55 as a member of the law department of the manufacturing and service division in Camden, N.J., serving in credit and collection and insurance activities. As senior counsel, he worked closely with Bullock on many contractual arrangements with artists and producers.

MAGUIRE QUITS LONDON TO TOP COLPIX SALES

Walt Maguire has wound up a 13-year hitch with London Records to join the Colpix label as v.p. in charge of sales. Maguire's moveover follows on the heels of the resignation of Jerry Raker, who had been Colpix's general manager for the past year.

D. H. Toller-Bond, London's exec v.p.-general manager, expects to fill Maguire's spot by the end of the week. Maguire had been boss of the American London Group, which handled about 40 independent labels.

Maguire was brought into the Colpix orbit by Don Kirshner, v.p. in charge of the diskery as well as the Columbia Pictures-Screen Gems setup. Maguire had handled some of the indie product launched by Kirshner before he joined the music-record divisions of Columbia Pictures.

There is a strong possibility that Raker will continue his activities in the disk biz with his own label setup.

Paris Teenagers Dig Twist and R&R But Brel, Becaud Also Score

Paris, July 2.

Twist and rock tunes are making the biggest disk sales here, mostly due to more affluent youngsters who can shell out for them. Regular name pop singers are finding it tough to stay abreast of the shouters.

Millions of disks are being sold by such Americanized names as Johnny Hallyday, Richard Anthony, Frank Alamo and femme shouters like Sylvie Vartan and Sheila. Francoise Hardy, with sultry songs on teenagers, plus r'n'r interludes, is also a top seller.

But despite the inroads of r&r, the more personalized singer-cleffers are holding their own. Jacques Brel has a Barclay LP with his big voiced songs attacking human foibles and pettiness. Gilbert Becaud has come up with some okay dramatic and bouncy new songs where lyrics still mean something. And Anne Sylvestre, one time prizewinner, sticks to her pungent, introspective songs that have a limited but firm audience on her new Philips disk.

Charles Trenet has what looks like a brisk Pathe platter with "Landru," a brittle look at the French Bluebeard that manages to be diverting and biting. Paul Anka essays what he feels is his first in-French spinner with "Hello Jim." He made one last year but it seems his French was not up to it. Now he is proficient and his new French wife helped with the lingo pruning.

Wanda Jackson's "Whirlpool" on Capitol has the earmarks of a local winner and should be heard from in a French version soon. Fats Domino has a racy Polydor which should get to both young rockers and jazzsters alike.

British singer Petula Clark, who has become a disk name here, is now cleffing the music for her first film, "At Knife Point." And film music keeps hitting disks too for generally okay results in sales.

'Syracuse' Cast, Ortolani's 'Cleo,' Wilson-Hopkins' 'Hand' Top LPs

"THE BOYS FROM SYRACUSE" (Capitol.) One of the best scores written by Richard Rodgers & Lorenz Hart is happily put together in this original cast album of Richard York's current off-Broadway production. Si Rady, who produced the package for the diskery, has wisely and tastefully augumented the show's pit combo to full orch proportions to add to the music's overall rich flavor. The songs are knockouts and the cast headed by Ellen Hanley, Danny Carroll, Cathryn Damon, Stuart Damon, Clifford David, Julienne Marie, Karen Morrw and Rudy Toronto fulfill the R&H delights handsomely. It's a brisk and breezy grooving all the way through and the way the album is emblazoned with the strange "New York Cast" heading, it would seem that Capitol is ashamed of its off-Broadway origination. It needn't be.

"THE THEMES FROM CLEOPATRA" (RCA Victor). Alex North's rich score for "Cleopatra" is strongly rendered in this session, arranged and conducted by Riz Ortolani. Recorded at Victor's Rome studio in the company's Dynagroove process, the disk presents a strong and beautiful treatment. Ortolani, who sprang to Yank prominence with his music from the film "Mondo Cane," has to a large extent preserved and stayed close to the original dramatic scorings used in the "Cleo" pic. Now and then, however, a more contemporary phrase is sounded with a few bars of piano and some drum work. But, for the most part, the arranger has orchestrated a session that could be used with the film. The result is a strong and evocative waxing which should climb on the sales charts.

JACKIE WILSON & LINDA HOPKINS: "SHAKE A HAND" (Brunswick). The recent teaming of Jackie Wilson and Linda Hopkins on the "Shake A Hand" single resulted in fast sales and spinning pickup so Brunswick, naturally, follows with an album pegged along the same hot gospel groove. Both Miss Hopkins and Wilson are highly-charged vocalists and their duets pack plenty of excitement which gives the LP a strong chance in the current gospel sweepstakes. With a vibrant assist from the Helen Way Singers, the duo brings new kicks to such old time religiosos as "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," "Joshua Fit The Battle of Jericho" and "Nobody Knows The Trouble I've Seen," among others.

PAUL & PAULA: "WE GO TOGETHER" (Philips). For the past year young love, young problems and young ideas have been getting a spinning spread in juve circles mainly through the disking of the youthful duo known as Paul & Paula. The accent is the same in this new package and the kids should continue to lap it up. Their harmony technique has a juvenile innocence as does their repertoire with lyrics that contain such similes as "We go together like two straws in a soda". In fact, the album cover photo shows Paul & Paula and two straws in one soda so they must be sure of their message and their market.

VIVIEN LEIGH-JEAN PIERRE AUMONT: "TOVARICH" (Capitol). The big attraction in this original Broadway cast album package is Vivien Leigh. As a musicomedy performer she shows plenty of zip and carries what cleffers Lee Pockriss (music) and Anne Croswell (lyrics) have given her to do with an unusual vocal flair. Best number in the set is "Wilkes-Barre, Pa.," which Miss Leigh delivers in high spirits with an assist from Byron Mitchell. The rest of the score isn't too sharp in the ballad or comedy material numbers and the cast gives it few added lifts, but Aumont's talk-sing style is romantic enough to win femme

PAT BOONE: "TIE ME KANGAROO DOWN SPORT" (Dot). Pegged to his clicko "Tie Me Kangaroo Down Sport" single, this LP gives Pat Boone a chance to warble a set of various pop items in smooth and stylish fashion. The singer, who has been branching into several directions through the years, most recently into dramatic acting, retains his easy-going vocal style here. He has turned out a session that contains lotsa good material, nicely arranged by Jimmie Haskell, Milt Rogers and Billy Vaughn. There are several nice tunes included that haven't won much exposure and some have step out potential. For Boone, its a good session that gives buyers and programmers a lot to work with.

SI ZENTNER: "RHYTHM PLUS BLUES" (Liberty). Trombonist Si Zentner puts his big band through some groovy paces for this outing with lotsa rhythm and a big sound on a set of tunes, some of which have a blues tempo, others a rhythm 'n' blues beat and others which just swing out. It's a solid session which also provides Zentner an opportunity to put his trombone to work in an often mock-standard style. The album has a full feeling that displays lotsa drive and verve. Big band pop fans will dig this set and programmers will find cuts with nice airing potential. It's a slick LP for the Zentner group which could get some coin attention.

DUDLEY MOORE: "The THEME FROM 'BEYOND THE FRINGE' & ALL THAT JAZZ" (Atlantic). Dudley Moore steps out of the British comedy quartet currently scoring on Broadway in "Beyond The Fringe" for a solo stint as a jazz keyboarder. Although his seemingly endless workover of the "Colonel Bogey" theme, one of "Fringe's" highspots, isn't included, Moore does have many witty moments in his jazz interpretations here. His keyboard style is light and easy, and it adds up to a package pegged for musical fun rather than musical innovations. Assisting Moore in the sessions that include workovers of such standards as "I Love Paris," "Just One Of Those Things," "I Didn't Know What Time It Was" and "Just In Time" are Peter McGurk on bass and Chris Karan on drums. Moore's comedy and his attack on "Colonel Bogey" are on the original cast ablum of "Fringe" on the Capitol label.

"SONGS FOR A SUMMER NIGHT" (Columbia). The Columbia roster is out in force for this two-LP package of songs pegged for warm-weather programming. It is a followup to a similarly styled summer pitch that was so successful last year and Col's summer—1963 should do as well especially because of the marquee weight carried here. Andy Williams, Tony Bennett, Robert Goulet, The New Christy Minstrels, Barbra Streisand, Dion, and Steve Lawrence & Eydie Gorme are some of the lures. In all, 24 Col diskers are represented and all come through with easy listening sides.

GENE PITNEY: "WORLD-WIDE WINNERS" (Musicor). Gene Pitney's global catch-on as a singer

LAWRENCE WELK
In His Newest Dot Album
Salutes "1963's EARLY HITS"

and/or songwriter gets a slick showcasing here. He's an established vocalist/cleffer in the U.S. but he's also made important dents in pop markets overseas with his own disks or his own songs sung by others. Included are "Only Love Can Break A Heart," with which he scored in Australia, Israel and Hawaii, and "Town Without Pity," Dimitri Tiomkin's pic title theme, which turned up as a clicko Pitney platter in Germany and New Zealand. Out of Pitney's cleffing bag are "Hello Mary Lou," which had hefty overseas impact for Rick Nelson, and "Garden of Love," which racked up beaucoup sales for Johnny Hallyday in France. Pitney, of course, gives 'em his own stylization which the U.S. disk fans will find to their liking.

BILL MONROE "BLUEGRASS SPECIAL" (Decca). There's growing swing towards bluegrass music as an extension of the folk fad and it should find its way towards Bill Monroe who's been blue-grassing for some time now. His bluegrass repertoire has a pure and authentic country flavor that comes off especially well in songs like "Foggy River," "Blue Ridge Mountain Blues" and "Columbus Stockade Blues." The package showcases his vocal as well as his instrumental (with the Bluegrass Boys) styles and both will find favor.

JOE BURTON: "SUBTLE SOUND" (Joday). The jazz pianistics of Joe Burton are nicely showcased via this disk. The 88er gets front and center treatment all the way, backed by the Jay Cave on bass and Ronnie King on drums. Preferring to work in a ballad or blues mood, Burton communicates a misty atmosphere via his playing which is simple to the point of being uninteresting at times. Nonetheless, he gets off some solid work for the most part and swings lightly in some spots. Cave and King provide solid backing.

Longplay Shorts

Top Singles Of The Week

(The 'Best Bets' of This Week's 100-Plus Releases)

ADAM WADE . . . . . LOOK AGAIN
(Epic) . . . . . Let's Make The Most of A Beautiful Thing
Adam Wade's "Look Again" (United Artists-Fairlane) the theme from "Irma La Douce," is a standout ballad with a sharply written lyric which this singer delivers in lilting style for spins across-the-board. "Let's Make The Most of a Beautiful Thing" (Corda-Colgems*) is another striking class item also projected for maximum values.*

LITTLE RICHARD . . . . . NEED HIM
(Coral) . . . . . Milky White Way
Little Richard's "Need Him" (Alan K.†) rides on the wave of the current gospel boom as a swinging religioso item that could spill over into the pop market. "Milky White Way" (Alan K.†) is another gospel side also marked by some powerful passages.

JERRY VALE . . . . . OLD CAPE COD
(Columbia) . . . . . Theme For Young Lovers
Jerry Vale's "Old Cape Cod" (Pincus & Sons) brings back this hit of a few years ago in a lilting rendition that will give this singer a solid chance to crack the bestseller lists. "Theme For Young Lovers" (Marpet*) is a pretty item also nicely handled for possibilities.*

DEAN MARTIN . . . . . CORRINE CORRINA
(Reprise) . . . . . My Sugar's Gone
Dean Martin's "Corrine Corrina" (Gotham) is another recent pop hit returning for another round of plays via this slickly produced slice which could mop up on all levels. "My Sugar's Gone" (Bourne*) also gets a savvy workout for easy listening.*

DON GIBSON . . . . . ANYTHING NEW GETS OLD
(RCA Victor) . . . . . After The Heartache
Don Gibson's "Anything New Gets Old" (Acuff-Rose†) travels on down a smooth country ballad groove which this singer projects in catchy style for across-the-board spins. "After The Heartache" (Acuff-Rose†) is another pleasing ballad entry also blending the pop and backwoods sounds.

BURL IVES . . . . . THIS IS ALL I ASK
(Decca) . . . . . There Goes Another Pal of Mine
Burl Ives' "This Is All I Ask" (Massey) shapes up as a sentimental ballad handled in a sugary, but savvy style that should nab plenty of spins. "There Goes Another Pal Of Mine" (Famous*) is another piece of material nicely tailored for this veteran folksinger.*

SHEB WOOLEY . . . . . COWBOY HERO
(MGM) . . . . . Buildin' A Railroad
Sheb Wooley's "Cowboy Hero" (Lowery†) is an interesting saga about a cowboy film hero who gains stardom and losses his sweetheart. It's niftily done by this western singer. "Buildin' A Railroad" (Channel) is an uptempo work song with a rhythmic drive which should earn a broad spinning base.*

LA LUPE . . . . . FEVER
(Mercury) . . . . . Ooh
La Lupe's "Fever" (Jay-Cee†) brings back this recent hit in a way-out Spanish-flavored slice which showcases this songstress' tricky and highly effective style. "Ooh" (Jazz Standard†) is a brightly rhythmic number also with some vocal kicks.

THE STARGLOWS . . . . . LET'S BE LOVERS
(Atco) . . . . . Walk Softly Away
The Starglows' "Let's Be Lovers" (Cotillion†) registers as a potent rocking ballad belted in the approved teenage style by this vocal combo. "Walk Softly Away" (January†) another well-written rocking ballad with chances.

CLEVELAND ROBINSON . . . . . THESE ARE THE HANDS
(Ascot) . . . . . Come Change Your Name To Mine
Cleveland Robinson's "These Are The Hands" (Unart†) is a slow-tempoed ballad with an interesting lyric which this singer handles very stylishly. "Come Change Your Name To Mine" (Unart†) comes across as a smooth entry also projected with class.

THE CASTLE SISTERS . . . . . NON, MONSIEUR
(Terrace) . . . . . Mister Summer
The Castle Sisters' "Non, Monsieur" (Unart†) shapes up as a clever, Gallic-flavored ballad with a catchy rhythm which this combo makes the most of. "Mister Summer" (Pera†) is another entry in the tidal wave of summer seasonal songs that have come along in such unusual number this year.

JIMMY WILLIAMS . . . . . THE HALF MAN
(ABC-Paramount) . . . . . I Gave My Love A Cherry
Jimmy Williams' "The Half Man" (Eden†) hits strongly as an offbeat rocking slice with a beat and message which the kids will go for. "I Gave My Love A Cherry" (Eden†) is a rocking workover of a traditional folk song, also delivered in arresting style.

COREY DENVER . . . . . JOHNNY RIVER
(20th Century Fox) . . . . . Johnny River Theme
Corey Denver's "Johnny River" (Horizon-Suebill†) is in the folk saga groove with a pop spirit that'll get it lotsa play. "Johnny River Theme" (Horizon-Suebill† gives the same tune an instrumental workover that can fill programming requirements.

CHUBBY CHECKER . . . . . SURF PARTY
(Parkway) . . . . . Twist It Up
Chubby Checker's "Surf Party" (C.C.-Kalmann) is a driving, rocking number parading under a surfing title. This Twist artist gives it his usual ride. "Twist It Up" (Kalmann-C.C.) is a solid Twist entry.

Inside Stuff—Music

The Sam Fox Publishing Co. has stepped up its activity in the concert and symphonic field with acquisition of several new compositions. Among them, available on a rental basis, are "Concerto For Clarinet & Orchestra" by Elie Siegmeister; "Israel Rhapsody (for Piano and Orchestra)" by Sam Raphling; "Nursery Suite" by Edward Elgar; "Round 'N' Round Overture" by Wayne Robinson and Caesar Giovannini, and the symphony, "Song Of Youth" by Mahlon Merrick.

In addition, recent publications in the serious classification include "Mass In C" by Leopold Mozart, edited by Douglas Townsend; "Ariadne Musica", preludes and fugues for piano or organ by J.C. Fischer, edited by Townsend; "Air And Country Music" from "The Four Seasons" by Vivaldi, edited by Theron Kirk; "United States of America—Circa 1790", arranged by Alfredo Antonini, and "Festival March" from "La Boheme" by Puccini, adapted by Antonini and scored by John Cacavas. Recent publications in the contemporary idiom include works by Bela Bartok, John Mehegan, Carmen Dragon, William Russo, Wesley Sontag, Dnes Agay, Robert Starer, Mal Waldron, Martin Kalmanoff, Leon Dallin, Alan Shulman, Gordon Epperson, among others.

Between $18,000 and $19,000 paid by the recording industry's Music Performance Trust Funds to local participating union musicians, as hitherto, enables the Minneapolis summer park concerts' continuation which had been threatened by lack of sufficient revenue to meet their cost. The Funds' distribution is through its trustee, Samuel R. Rosenbaum. Concerts are free to the public.

There had been a previous erroneous report to the effect that the necessary monies were coming from the local Musicians Union funds and Robert Biglow, the union's head, had been quoted in the press to that effect. However, Biglow says he actually had not made the statement attributed to him.

Concerts are by both a band and symphony orchestra, large in size and comprising union musicians. The municipal Park Board itself furnishes $23,000 to $24,000 each summer to augment the Music Performance Trust Funds' $18,000 for the participating musicians' compensation.

Roger Englander, producer-director of the N.Y. Philharmonic Young People's Concert with Leonard Bernstein which was just renewed by Shell Oil for its seventh season on CBS-TV, lectured last week at the NYU summer session of the Television Workshop on "Is There a Place For Concert Music on Television?" The students in the graduate seminar are from 12 different countries. Englander just completed producing the inaugural season of the N.Y. Philharmonic's "Promenade Concerts" at Lincoln Center and leaves tomorrow (Thurs.) for a stint as visiting professor of musical production in the School of Fine Arts at Parsons College, Fairfield, Ia. One of his projects will be staging "The Music Man" with MacDonald Carey in the title role. This will be the first production of the Meredith Willson musical in its home state. Willson, by the way, holds an honorary Doctor of Music degree from the college.

Veteran songwriter Al Sherman's two sons, Richard M. (33) and Robert B. (35), are following in his footsteps. The brothers are signed as cleffers with Walt Disney and have written for Disney's soon-to be-released "Summer Magic" as well as "The Parent Trap" and "Bon Voyage." They're also set to do the score for Disney's upcoming "Mary Poppins," which will star Julie Andrews, Dick Van Dyke and Glynis Johns. Sidebar to the father-sons cleffing careers is that the boys recently did the score for "In Search of The Castaways," which starred Maurice Chevalier, and their father wrote "Living In The Sunlight, Loving In The Moonlight" for the Chevalier pic, "The Big Pond" in 1929. Other of the elder Sherman's credits are "Now's The Time To Fall In Love," "You Gotta Be A Football Hero" and "No! No! A Thousand Times No."

Paul Weston, president of the National Academy of Recording Arts & Sciences, and husband of Jo Stafford, writes wittily on Gregorian Chant in the June issue of the Franciscan (San Francisco) monthly, Way. His piece follows many earlier articles by priests wrestling with the neglect in Catholic Churches of the Chant, despite the urgent pleas of three recent Popes that it be revitalized. The pros and cons are too special and sacerdotal for comment in this secular journal. Suffice to report that Weston argues that the ignorance of Chant by Americans can be licked through teaching it in the parochial schools, thus creating an eventual generation able to handle it in church.

Caedmon Records has tied in with the Americas Stratford Shakespeare Festival (Conn.) to push the complete catalog of the Bard's plays which appears under the Shakespeare Recording Society crest. The albums are displayed and sold in the festival-theatre lobby shop. In addition to the recordings, Caedmon has prepared a special four-page folder listing all of the plays available. More than 50,000 copies of the discography have been printed for distribution during the early summer months. There are now 16 of Shakespeare's plays in the diskery's catalog.

Latest motion pic theme to attract wide diskery coverage is "More" from "Mondo Cane." The tune, written by Riz Ortolani & Nino Oliviero (music) and Norman Newell (lyrics), has already racked up more than 20 disk versions. The spinning leader, right now, appears to be the jazz instrumental treatment by Kai Winding on Verve. The Winding disk spotlights the ondioline, a French electronic keyboard instrument. Liberty Records is driving hardest on the tune with three diskings; Martin Denny, Si Zentner and Vic Dana. The song is published by E. B. Marks.

Broadcast Music Inc. has just published a "Symphonic Catalogue," a 132-page booklet devoted to the concert works of more than 1,200 composers whose music is licensed for public performance by BMI. The booklet contains information, including approximate duration, instrumentation, and publisher, about 10,000 compositions written for performing groups ranging in size from chamber orchestras to full symphony groups. Copies of the catalog were distributed at the June, 1963, San Francisco convention of the American Symphony Orchestra League.

Katharine Bainbridge, the oldest living member of the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers, celebrated her 100th birthday Sunday (30). Mrs. Bainbridge, a Hollywood resident, has been a member of the Society since 1924. Among her songs are "Love Came Calling," "I'll Give The World For You," "Just Like Your Eyes" and "You're Just the One." Her catalog also includes Christmas songs and carols, children's tunes and sacred songs.

Bonnie Baldwin, femme disk jockey on WMOD, Moundsville, West Va., has moved into the disking field via the Mountain-AIRS label. Her initial sides are "Cheat If You Must" and "Tales Of West Virginia." Miss Baldwin wrote both sides; latter tune was written to help commemorate the West Virginia Centennial. The disk is being handled by Marlane Maclane Music Corp. in New York.

Success conductor Herbert von Karajan of Vienna Statoper is currently having with his latest issue of Beethoven's Nine Symphonies, released by Deutsche Grammophon, for which he was paid 1,300,000 German marks ($325,000) is being demonstrated by unusual statistics. Also made Grand Prix du Disque in France.

Fairmount New Tag For Cameo's Pageant Label

Cameo-Parkway Records is changing the tag of its subsid label, Pageant, to Fairmount Records. The switch stems from a claim of previous ownership of the Pageant title.

The first release on Fairmount is "Key To My Heart"-"Everybody South Street" by The Taffys, a new vocal group. Plans for the Fairmount label include the signing of only new talent.

Sales and promotion for Fairmount will be under the supervision of Herman Kaplan, national sales manager for Cameo-Parkway.

Yank Longhairs' Concert Upbeat

Longhair music in its first period of copyright protection (written since 1935) racked up 1,239 performances of American works during the 1962-63 concert season. There were 235 American composers represented in this group with 363 works. In all, there were 343 composers represented in the "since 1935" group, a new category devised for the fourth annual survey of concert music in the U.S. and Canada conducted by Broadcast Music Inc. in cooperation with the American Symphony Orchestra League.

A total of 2,586 concerts given by 262 orchestras, with 10,832 performances of 1,760 individual works during the 1962-63 season was surveyed under the direction of Ulysses Kay, American composers and BMI consultant on contemporary music.

The 10 most performed works written for the concert hall since '35 were "American Salute" by Morton Gould, "Hoe Down" by Aaron Copland, "Concerto For Orchestra" by Bela Bartok, "Adagio For Strings" by Samuel Barber, "Colos Breugnon Overture" by Dmitri Kabalevsky, "Romeo & Juliet Suite No. 1" by Serge Prokofiev, "Symphony No. 5" by Dimitri Shostakovich, "Concerto For Organ, Strings, and Timpani" by Francis Poulenc, "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra" by Benjamin Britten, and "Mysterious Mountain" by Alan Hovhaness.

According to the survey, the 10 most performed living American-born composers. Listed alphabetically, are Leroy Anderson, Samuel Barber, Leonard Bernstein, Aaron Copland, Paul Creston, Morton Gould, Roy Harris, Alan Hovhaness, Walter Piston, and William Schuman.

During the season, works of 610 composers were performed. Of them, 158 were standard composers (working before 1900); 452 were contemporary composers (working from 1900 to date).

The BMI survey involved analysis of the official season programs of 28 major orchestras, 23 metropolitan orchestras, 173 community orchestras, and 37 college, training and youth orchestras. The 2,586 concerts they presented included 1,961 subscription concerts, 146 tour concerts, 345 young people's concerts, and 134 special concerts.

The 10 pre-1900 composers most performed by these orchestras are, in order of performances, Beethoven (796), Mozart (647), Brahms (478), Tchaikovsky (463), Wagner (358), Mendelssohn (233), Haydn (232), Bach (204), Dvorak (182), and Berlioz (166).

There were a total of 1,760 works performed during the past season surveyed. There were 812 in the pre-1900 category, with 6,934 performances, and 931, written since 1900 with 3,679 performances. In the "since 1935" group, 574 works were programmed for a total of 2,050 performances.

The ratio of post-1900 to pre-1900 music was hardly changed from the survey last year: 36.7% as against 36.3%. The highest total for contemporary music in the four years of the survey was 43.4% in 1959-60.

The 262 orchestras surveyed performed 71 world premieres during the season and 19 American premieres.

Byrd's activities will include the signing of writers and exploitation.

Pic Soundtrack Albums Spinning Up Sweet Sales Melodies for Disk Biz

Motion picture music is again becoming a potent force in the record business. The sales potential of soundtrack albums is greater than ever, and the pic scores and/or themes have become an important source of new material for disk artists.

The current hefty coverage of the score for "Cleopatra" and the disk scramble on "More," the theme from "Mondo Cane" are cases in point. The longrunning hefty sales rackup of Columbia's "West Side Story" and the big advance takeoff of 20th Century-Fox's "Cleopatra" soundtracker have increased diskery interest in latching on to pic properties.

Columbia is now pitching with "55 Days At Peking" and RCA Victor is throwing its weight on "8½" with "The Cardinal" upcoming later in the year, but the most active in the soundtrack sweepstakes right now is United Artists Records.

Through its tie with its parent film company, United Artists, the diskery is getting a bigger slice of the soundtrack pie than ever before. The trackers have become a potent contributors to the diskery's overall sales take and they have also developed into important selling promotianal tools for the UA pic releases.

Now rolling in UA's soundtrack scheme are "Mondo Cane," "Dr. No," "Irma La Douce," and "The Great Escape." Among the possibilities for a soundtrack push later in the year are "Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," "The Greatest Story Ever Told," "Johnny Cool" and "McLintock."

According to Ferrante & Teicher, UA diskers who've been especially effective in the pic music scene, more emphasis is being placed on film scores by recording artists because of the paucity of "good" music from other sources. As a result of renewed disker interest in the music from pictures more film originals have been scoring in the pop market than ever before.

The importance of pic music to Ferrante & Teicher, or vice versa, is evidenced by the fact that seven of their gold disk awards stemmed from pic pegs. They've topped the 1,000,000 sales mark in singles with "Exodus," "The Apartment" and "Tonight," which is from the "West Side Story' score.

In the album field, F&T received the gold disk kudos for racking up more than 250,000 sales each on "Exodus," "West Side Story," and "Tonight." They're currently bucking the soundtrack set of "Cleopatra" with an album pegged on the pic's themes.

GEMA Scores 2 Wins in German Music Fee Cases

Frankfurt, July 2.

GEMA, the counterpart of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers here, has won a couple of rounds in its constant battles to collect fees for its members—also, incidentally, to collect added fees for ASCAP in Germany.

First victory is in its long-standing scrap with the manufacturers of taperecording equipment. It has been maintaining, via various court fights, that owners of tape machines should pay some fee to GEMA because of any GEMA-protected music that might be wired off on the tapes. This so far has been considered a violation of privacy by the courts, who rule that the seller cannot demand to know who buys a tape machine or cannot force payment of a GEMA fee.

But the highest federal court of West Germany has held that tape recording equipment retailers are liable to a prison sentence of a maximum six months or a fine of unspecified amount if they do not inform all buyers of the equipment, in easily readable text prominently displayed on the tape machines, that the buyer has no right to record GEMA-protected music.

Second score for the GEMA organization is that home owners who rent rooms to guests (such as during the summer season for those living on the beach, or during the many festivals in Germany when private home owners are urged to rent out spare rooms to visitors) will be liable to pay the same sort of GEMA fee collected for radio and television in hotels, restaurants and cafes in Germany, if the guests use the entertainment equipment at all.

Thus GEMA maintains that the private home owners are offering their guests "entertainment" and must pay for it just as the full-time hotels and restaurants pay for the rights to the GEMA music that their guests enjoy. Collection, of course, may prove to be very difficult in the test case.

Greenman Exits Mov'tone For Top Cinevision Post

M. S. (Mickey) Greenman has resigned as manager of United Press Movietone News to become veepee-general manager of Cinevision Corp. of America, a subsidiary of Estey Electronics. Cinevision holds the exclusive U. S. rights to Cinebox, a motion picture jukebox which holds 40 three-minute color sound films.

Estey Electronics, through its several divisions, manufactures organs, musical instrument amplifiers and tape recorders. Firm is based in Hicksville, N. Y.

Mpls. Tooters Slate Vote On AFM Proposal For New Dues Levy System

Minneapolis, July 2.

The Musicians Union here has been called upon to vote on the American Federation of Musicians joint law and finance committees' recommendations, submitted and recommended to all Locals, concerning the manner by which AFM dues should be assessed

If the amendment carries, the AFM will not impose dues based on members' earnings — dues called "taxes." This would be applicable to the 10% travelling surcharge tax, the 15% radio and television tax and the theatre defense fund taxes.

Annual Federation per capita dues payable by Locals to the Federation will be $6, inclusive of the per capita contribution for the Official Journal and the Lester Petrillo Fund.

However, the present per capita $2.10 will continue with respect to all life and honorary members and those under presently existing Locals' rules will become life and honorary members within one year after the amendment becomes effective. Thereafter, the Locals will pay the full AFM $6 per capita dues for such members.

The proposed amendment provides that AFM per capita taxes shall not be paid by Locals on traveling or transfer members. Another proposed revision grades the AFM initiation fee to that of the Locals' initiation fee. For example, if the Local's initiation fee is $10 or less the AFM initiation fee will be an additional $4.

Berlin Music's Move to Radio City Points Up Changing 'Tin Pan Alley'

After 19 years in its present Broadway and 51 St. location, Irving Berlin Music Corp. is moving to the Sperry-Rand Bldg. in Rockefeller Center and, for the first time in 19 years, the staff "will see sunlight."

In making the decision, Berlin figured (1) the traditional walk-up convenience for acts and musicians is passe; (2) the swimmingpool atop the a-building City Squire (Loew's-Tisch) motel on the lot opposite the present Berlin hq will not make for privacy; and (c) the adjacent CBS Bldg., and the existent NBC hq in Rockefeller Center, makes the move logical.

Berlin, now east, in between a Metro filmusical chore, plans to move by Sept. 1. He returns to the Coast this weekend, however, following necessary dental consultation.

In a measure, this is another milestone in the dispersal of the so-called Tin Pan Alley, long a euphemism because the music business, as it has existed in the past 50 years, long since deserted the brownstone fronts on Manhattan's West 28th St., the original "Tin Pan Alley."

In more recent years it has become a slick chromium-and-electronic business, operating from Nashville's Tin Pan Valley with the same facility as from the 5th and Madison Ave. environs of the Warners' and Dreyfuses' cartels, not to mention the east side locations of ASCAP and BMI.

But the veteran Berlin, dating back to the old Waterson, Berlin & Snyder Co. in the Strand Theatre (now Warner) Bldg., to a building on the site of the old Rector's, later with Saul H. Bourne in the present Columbia Records Bldg. on 7th Ave. and 52d St., and latterly the Broadway site, always had a built-in walk-up location.

This was true of many a music publisher, so as to ease the traffic for acts, musicians et al. dropping in for professional copies, rehearsal rooms and the like. These have long since become a legend of the music business.

to big volume but with resultant "little or no profits." He insisted that the manufacturer and not the distributor "must show the way." There are very few distributors who are strong enough to effect a national change . . . most . . . don't even control their own businesses."

Kapp also stressed the lack of interest in top product and ideas with usual first question from distribs, "what kind of a deal will you have?" He went on to hit at manufacturers' allocation pressures and the loss of profits through over-stocking shelves with such unqualified inventory.

In line with the Kapp thinking, Sam Clark, prexy of ABC-Paramount, announced at his company's sales meet a decision to incept a policy of no allocations of merchandise and no transshipping. If a distrib feels he doesn't want to go along, he can drop the line with ABC-Par willing to clean him out.

Clark Warns Distribs

Clark also said that if a distrib is caught transshipping he will lose the line, with the company willing to take up his inventory without any obligation on his part. ABC-Par's stand on the situation was the only one announced during the series of manufacturers' sales meets staged in conjunction with the convention.

Reelected prexy of ARMADA, Amos Heilicher, commended ABC-Par for its new policy. He also stressed contacting of the FTC and an appointment in the very near future for a Trade Practice Conference. He revealed that the association has been in touch with the Select Committee on Small Business and its chairman, James Roosevelt, who evinced interest in the problems of the industry.

Heilicher also pointed out the cheering aspect of the large attendance at the meeting, with a record number of associate and affiliate members present.

Heilicher took up the subject of the one-stop segment of the industry, which he believes is the most profitable part of the disk business in proportion to the investment involved. It serves a definite function as a central depot for the jukebox operator—the largest potential user of singles. He also cited the importance of the one-stop to servicing the small accounts.

With it, the ARMADA prexy warned of overlapping of functions: "Don't forget for one minute that the industry cannot get along without the two stop type distribution . . . We in ARMADA are attempting to tie together with Governmental aid, all segments of the record industry, to make this the profitable business it should be."

Via Veneto Notes

By ROBERT F. HAWKINS

Rome, July 2.

RCA Italiana is making a strong bid for summer disk honors here. Company, which three years ago set a much-followed trend of packaging a series of 45's especially slanted at the hot-weather resort trade, with an accent on the jukes, has come up with another multi-faceted set of 12 tunes suited to all tastes which look destined for plenty of summertime spins.

What's especially notable about this collection is the remarkably high standard of its arrangements; some may quibble and say they are "over-arranged"—but there's no denying that for rapid mass impact, it's a highly effective parlay which should help some of the weaker items keep up with the surefire sellers.

Four foreign (non-Italian) performers are included: Paul Anka in an effective "Un Ricordo per Te" sung in Italian and which should please his many local fans; Neil Sedaka, in an Italo-penned-and-sung "I Tuoi Capricci," reminiscent of some of his recent hits, but never mind; Duane Eddy in his "Guitar Man" Twister; and Charles Aznavour in top form with "Donne tes 16 Ans"—a Barclay platter produced here for local use by RCA.

The Italian names, some with offbeat fare, are likewise a promising lot: Rita Pavone in "Cuore"; Sergio Endrigo in a neatly backdropped "Viva Maddalena"; Gianni Meccia, not up to past triumphs but effective none the less with "Sole Non Calare Mai"; Nico Fidenco in a haunting "Se mi Perderai"; Gino Paoli with a decidedly apt summery flavor to "Sapore di Sale" (Salty Taste); Gianni Morandi progressing rapidly as a name to be counted on with "Ho Chiuso le Finestre"; and Rosy in an okay pop spiritual-styled ballad, "So Long," in a currently-favored vein.

Last but not least, Eduardo Vianello's "Abbronzatissima," strongly backed by an equally effective "Cicerone." Both are also part of Vianello's first 33 LP for RCA, recently given a special press intro at RCA's Rome establishment via a p.a. recital by the author-performer (who incidentally also has legit training).

Also introed at affair, and soon to be heard from when released, are two new Vianello compositions with a surefire potential on the local market: "I Vatussi," a gagsome hullygully, and especially "O Mio Signore" (Oh my Lord), a powerful and moving item which should hit the ratings almost as soon as released sometime this summer.

Some 25 self-termed "special agents" have been sent to key resort areas to study and penetrate all possible seasonal outlets; jukes, whisky-a-gogos, hotels, bathing establishments, bars, etc., where special pub-ad events will be held to push the RCA team.

Second, jukebox renters will be polled, thanks to a tiein contest, on relative spins accumulated by brand's names, with prizes both to those who send in votes and to salesmen.

Finally, from Sept. 29 to Oct. 5, winners of this all-RCA contest will be crowned in Sicily at a gala event attended by company prexy George Marek, veep Dario Soria, RCA Italian g.m. Giuseppe Ornato, and entire rosfer of company performers.

5 Singers to Rep Britain At Belgian Song Contest

London, July 2.

Five singers have been picked to rep Britain in the fifth annual European song contest which is to be held July 19-25 in Knokke-le-Zoute, Belgium. The team will comprise three men and two girls.

Those chosen are ex-boxer Mike Preston, former bus conductor Johnny de Little, Jamaican Bobby Breen, Lyn Cornell who was originally one of the Vernon girls, and 16-year-old Cloda Rogers.

Cap 'Paperbacks' Pushing Classics

Taking a leaf from the book publishing industry, Capitol Records Distributing Corp. is going into the "paperback" field to push its classical product. Borrowing the book industry's policy of making great literary works available at a low price by utilizing low-cost bind and paper covers, Cap is introducing a "Paperback Classics" series.

The disks are packaged in durable, heavy-grade paper and poly-wrapped. Though the initial release of 20 albums will not be made until mid-August, CRDC reps will begin selling the new line next Monday (8). The price structure for the new line is such that retailers may sell the "paperbacks" for $1.98 (mono) and $2.98 (stereo).

Among the names in the initial "paperback" release are Stokowski, Leinsdorf, Kemper, Steinberg, Firkusny, Pennario, Marcel Grandjany, Michael Rabin and John Browning.

In addition to the "paperbacks," Cap has also readied a new line under the heading of "Promenade Classics." This series will emphasize the lighter side of the classical repertoire. New releases and existing Capitol Classics which fit this new concept will include many of the popular recordings by the Hollywood Bowl Symphony and the Roger Wagner Chorale. In all, there will be about 100 albums in the initial "Promenade Classics" catalog.

Folk Music

ans want songs that deal with what's going on in the world today and not what they term "square and superficial pop ballads" or "juvenile rock 'n' roll."

Writers Shifting Over

Among writers now contributing to the new-styled folk song are Bob Dylan, Mike Settle, Tom Paxton, Shel Silverstein, Bob Gibson, Malvina Reynolds, Oscar Brand, Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie. And such groups as The Kingston Trio, Peter, Paul & Mary, The Wayfarers and The Limeliters have been bringing their own orignals into their ethnic and traditional folk repertoire. Their songs may be pegged on social significance, topical satire, or even romance but they all apparently are filling a contemporary need for a new folk music literature.

The young writers in this school are leaning on traditional folk patterns, said Brad McCuen, artists & repertoire director at RCA Victor, but they're taking on an identification of their own by translating it for the current market in a contemporary idiom.

McCuen is also of the opinion that a new tag is needed to properly categorize this new music since it really doesn't fit into the catchall pigeonhole of "folk music." In fact, many of the performers wish there was another identification for them than "folk singer." They believe that they are "singers of folk songs" rather than "folk singers." Something like "folk-type singers" would be more in keeping with what they're doing.

Eye New Ideas

In addition to the new material the young writers are creating in the U.S., there is a continual search going on for new folk song ideas from other countries that can be adapted for the U.S. market. Since the world has grown smaller, the song sources have grown larger.

Also riding on the tide of the current folk music enthusiasm are the instrument manufacturers. Guitar sales have been booming and the manufacturers are seeking new ways to build their image as well as their sales. Guild Guitars, a Newark (N.J.) firm, for example, is now blueprinting plans for a folk singing competition aimed at the college market. The finalists will be put on display in a special concert at New York's Carnegie Hall. The Guild execs are also working out possibilities of a record company tie-in on the competition with McCuen at RCA Victor.

Sahara, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, June 25.

Donald O'Connor, Frank Fontaine, The Wellingtons (4), Moro-Landis Dancers (12), Louis Basil Orch (15); produced by Stan Irwin; presented by Milton Prell; choreography, George Moro; $4 minimum.

Donald O'Connor's latest outing in the Congo Room showcases the star as one of the better song and dance men. The bulk of the turn is pure O'Connor, then the romp is embellished by Frank Fontaine, the Wellingtons (4), and the Moro-Landis Dancers (12).

O'Connor initials the festivities by singing "Let's Face the Music and Dance," "Make Someone Happy," and a clever bit of special material called "Born In a Trunk." He goes into a "Tea For Two" soft-shoe number before introducing the Wellingtons, a quartet of handsome young men with a highly effective sound in the folk tune vein which they describe as "formerly called Hill Billy."

With a stirring, positive approach, the Wellingtons offer such as "Sinner Man" and "Days of Wine and Roses." O'Connor and the dozen chorines join them in a rousing "Sing You Sinners."

O'Connor shows fine comedy talent with his impreshes of Pat Boone, Maurice Chevalier, Ethel Merman, Harry Belafonte and Vince Edwards. His Jackie Gleason takeoff is a neat way of bringing on Frank Fontaine, who joins "Joe the Bartender" in his now-famed tv character, "Crazy Guggenheim."

Fontaine and O'Connor do the same type of dialog exchanges seen on the Gleason show; Fontaine's wonderful mugging and outlandish vocal delivery make even old gags sound very funny. He sings "That Old Gang Of Mine," "When Your Hair Has Turned To Silver," "Oh, How I Miss You Tonight," and "Heart of My Heart," all of which bring hefty applause. It's obvious that Fontaine's exposure with Gleason has elevated him to headline status.

Roosevelt Grill, N. Y.

New bill marks the return to the old band policy in this Hotel Roosevelt room after about four months' trial with "vaudeville" plus Al Conte's Trio. It is the 12th date for Lenny Herman and his compact band in the Grill. Three different shows, each with a trio of acts, were used during the experiment along with a smaller dance floor. In this test period, it became a matter of losing part of the dance crowd and not getting enough new patrons to justify the expense of the acts.

Ironically enough Herman's crew was the final orch to play here under the old dance band policy back in January. Current Herman band is much the same as when it was here last winter. Al Ashman is at the traps; Alan Shurr, with sax and clarinet; Early (Gumpy) Comfort, on bass viol and violin; Al Logan, piano; and Herman at the accordion. Logan is the new member. Comfort, Shurr and Herman make up the trio known as the Hermanaires.

Besides ballading solo, Herman also joins Shurr for duets. Long favorites here, Herman's band is well liked for dancing. His beat and danceable tunes go over well.

Royal York, Toronto

Toronto, June 25.

Dancing Waters, Bobby Gimby Orch (7), Dinah Christy; $2 cover.

In the first time it's ever played a hotel in Canada, "Dancing Waters" opened last week at the Royal York's Imperial Room for a run through the summer. Spectacle, however, has been seen in the Hilton chain and at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto.

Show is fantastically wonderful it is multicolored, man-made rising and falling variegated fountains. Hundreds of customers left their tables to witness the man at the console who manipulated the "Dancing Waters" to musical recordings or the background playing of Bobby Gimby's Orch.

Using only water and lights, it is a "clean" show but when caught astounded all posh diners and drinkers with its swiftly-changing effects. As entertainment at the 450-capacity Imperial Room, the spectacle extends across a stage having a frontage of 24 feet, with a depth of 14 feet, and uses 900 gallons of water. Spec will be cut to eight minutes—on four nightly "performances."

Eddie Darby, at the console, is an ex-musician who played locally with Bert Niosi's band at the Palais Royale and with Stanley St. John's society orch. He pointed out that a score of "Dancing Waters" units are working internationally at fairs, trade and industrial shows.

Taking four stagehands to set up, the electrically-operated console, played like an organ, forces the water through jets to a height of some 20 feet, with the operator pressing buttons against a background of multicolored lights to orchestral accompaniment or recordings. Effects are startling in the fountain display of an invention that was brought from West Germany.

Bobby Gimby, trumpet soloist in radio with the "Happy Gang" for 13 years and later on tv programs for the Canadian Broadcasting Corp., is summer replacement for the Imperial Room. Vocalist Dinah Christy is stunningly costumed and has a voice. McStay.

Elmwood Casino, Windsor

Windsor, Ont., June 27.

Jack Carter, Lisa Carroll, Johnny Ambrose, Lindsay Sapphire Dancers (8), Jack Madden Orch (9); $2 cover.

From every angle this talent lineup makes a slick show—the star, comedian Jack Carter; the featured singer, Lisa Carroll; the line, the Lindsay Sapphire Dancers; the line's vocalist, Johnny Ambrose, and the orch, under Jack Madden's baton. Al Siegel, owner of this swank Detroit-area nitery, is hosting capacity crowds this session and counting the money.

Carter was on for nearly an hour and a half at show caught. At least a half dozen times, he asked the rhetorical question: "How do I get off?"—and it wasn't all a joke, either. His audience kept urging him to stay, and he couldn't seem to run out of good material. He went through it all—welcoming the groups, joking about the locality, cars, golf, religion, sex—the whole bit. He sang. He danced. And, he was a winner all the way.

Vivacious and melodic Lisa Carroll preceded Carter. The stacked songstress has two voices, each of them great, and each entirely different.

Just as the aud is getting used to Miss Carroll's well-trained low register voice, she shakes 'em up with her other voice. Midway in "Don't You Know," she shifts smoothly into the mezzo soprano range, with power, control and good shading. She follows with her trademark by passing out "keys" to her room while serenading the ringsiding swains with a medley of love songs. She had to begoff.

The Lindsay Sapphire Dancers score in looks, ability and routines with their windup potpourri of Spanish dances. Their singer, Johnny Ambrose, pinchhitting apparently for Don McCall, has a fine baritone and is ready for full-time duty. Jack Madden's orch backs the show expertly. Tew.

Los Angeles, June 27.

Lionel Ames, Hal Hidey, Chris Clark; no cover, no minimum.

Lionel Ames has a good baritone voice with which, when he avoids lyric or melodic embellishments, he is able to tackle a variety of pop tunes, with a good deal of success. Unfortunately the singer, who has launched a two-weeks-with-options stand at this spot, lacks the performing discipline and smoothness and the material selectivity to capture the imagination and rivet the attention of the JL winers and diners.

The banter and business which Ames inserts between his numbers are generally shopworn and detract from his vocalizing. Most of his numbers currently are being overworked by other singers in the nitery sphere. This includes "Gotta Lotta Living To Do" and "Maria."

Ames warbles "That's All" with a strong beat, makes a medley out of "Old Black Magic" as the foundation, and concludes with "Smile," which he precedes with some unnecessary corn about facing life with a smile, etc. His best offering is "If Ever I Would Leave You," which he belts straight and effectively with his dependable voice. Tube.

Gospel Music Finds Cozy Den in The Bear, Chicago Latenight Folknik Mecca

Chicago, June 26.

Chicago has been without a stay-up-late place for the night people for a good many years, and The Bear could well become the focal point for the folk who by occupation or inclination are turning out when others are turning in. Housed in the Victorian mansion once occupied by the L'Aiglon restaurant, the folk nitery has been given a studiously bizarre decor consisting primarily of black paint over the elegant woodwork of the old manse.

The building is a maze of rooms and hallways, including a small and excellent dining room, the L'Aiglon's old bar, a large showroom seating about 200, a smaller showroom, and an elevated lounge behind the bar in which the Fred Kaz Trio is resident. There is also a musty basement shop that sells old fashioned candies and curios and has a cigarette vending machine with such brands as Home Run, Fatima and Wings.

Presiding over the kooky milieu are owners Howard Alk, John Brent and Walter Reilly. The bearded and bulky Alk (after whom the club might have been named) was at one time one of the partners in the Second City. Brent is a onetime comic (he recorded "How To Speak Hip" with Del Close of the Second City) and operated the Fat Black Pussy Cat folk nitery. Reilly was associated with the Pavillion restaurant.

Current bill has a new but exceedingly polished folk group. The Just Four (see New Acts), and the Patterson Singers, a sepia gospel quintet. The gospelers are a dynamic group of five femmes who expound their pseudo-religioso tunes with fervor and finesse. The club has become sort of gospel beachhead for niteries in Chi, where the music seems to be just catching on in the clubs here.

The Fred Kaz Trio is a musically sophisticated and generally inventive modern jazz group. Kaz's solo keyboard work is disciplined but free enough to explore some of the more subtle shadings of the music. Mor.

The Bear, Chi

The Just Four, Patterson Singers, Fred Kaz Trio; $1.50 admission.

Eghth Wonder, N. Y.

Sister Rosetta Tharpe, Soul Riders (3), Apollos (4), Andy & the Bay Sisters (3); $2.50 cover.

Having done boff business with her switch to a Twist and r&r policy at the Versailles, boniface Trude Heller has opened another Greenwich Village nitery, this one gauged to cash in on the current popularity of Gospel shoutin' in the smokey places.

Eighth Wonder is on the site of an Eighth Street joint, most recently called the Blackjack (which, predictably, wasn't exactly an appealing signature to the Village tourist trade). As revamped for the commercial religioso, the place has a long bar; wrought-iron gates painted pearly going into the cabaret; and Dante's-Inferno red drapes backing the stage (the blazing drapes would be figured appropriate by that faction of Gospel which wants the music confined to church).

Initial bill, however, wisely is not confined to the religioso. Vet Sister Rosetta Tharpe provides all the religious sincerity there is here, and her piney-woods guitar and jazz-blues vocal style mark her clearly anybody's talent. She chides the customers with a number about God's dislike of moonshine and other minor preachments, but her jazz-blues skills and projection completely overwhelm the didactics.

For an encore, Miss Tharpe takes over at piano for some fine stride self-accomp that is religious like Fatha Hines.

Apollos, three young California chicks and a guy, are on the Eighth's preem bill after engagements at the uptown Sweet Chariot, San Francisco's hungry i and a string of Los Angeles niteries. Their Gospel stylings are strong and exciting and totally commercial, with a couple of "re-arrangements" sounding as though they might have been scored by Dmitri Tiomkin. Group projects with a lot of showmanship more akin to r&r than Gospel with sight values ditto.

Soul Riders, instrumental trio with vocals a la Ray Charles (right down to the tinted glasses) by the piano man, backs the show along with taking a set. It includes the r&b vocals and instrumentals—guitar, organ and drums—plus bossa nova yet.

Andy & the Bay Sisters (brother Andy and sisters Jerry and Salome Bay), who played at Trude Heller's Versailles, bring everything down to earth with their dynamic and singular harmonies on the standards. Brother is at piano (and on vocals) with sisters up front in sleek, white gowns. Mostly it's the belting harmonies, but all take first-rate solo turns in a segue medley. Bill.

Shamrock, Houston

Houston, June 28.

Rowan & Martin, Dolores Leigh, Ed Gerlach Orch (14); no cover or minimum.

Rowan (Dan) & Martin (Dick) continue at the top as comic team. Their only problem, and one that others have faced before, is that a couple of routines have become classics or near classics and auditors won't let comics drop 'em.

Rowan is superb as straight man, and Martin is more than a comic. He has created a characterization, has perfect timing and a mobile face that answers every command. His character is the somewhat stupid extrovert who wants to give the answers (always wrong) before he gets the questions.

This fits ideally in team's charades routine, and the interview of the doctor on tv. The latter and the Sir Laurence Olivier vs. the drunk skit are the classic bits.

Dolores Leigh is a thoroughly professional thrush who always has full control of excellent pipes, does fine warmup job for comics. She's further reviewed in New Acts, since she has changed her format and presentation.

Ed Gerlach's Orch, billed as the "Big Band from Texas," closes engagement with this show. Outfit has pretty much the Glenn Miller sound. It does generally fine backing job, pulls dancers to floor.

Show plays two frames. Skip.

French Qtr., Houston

Houston, June 28.

Paul Gilbert, Patrick Sullivan Burke, Don Cannon Orch (6); $2 entertainment charge.

Larry Grayson, whose producing and booking has made the French Quarter into a major Houston nitery, has another winner patron-wise in comic Paul Gilbert and singer Patrick Sullivan Burke, the singing—surprise—Irishman.

Gilbert has wisely built his act around the surgeon, in operating gown, on a medical tv show. Rapid-fire patter and his troubles with rubber gloves build to big begoff. Early lines and even opening pratfall a la Jack Durant seem a bit too familiar, although it played okay to auditors. He touches on the UN, adult westerns, Tarzan and such, and exhibits closing skill on brass as he jams with Cannon's crew.

Burke is a tall, graying Irishman with a big voice who is re-entering show business after a layoff of six years. He scored solidly in 22 minutes on stage and for patrons wanted more. He's further assayed in New Acts.

Don Cannon's orch, which consistently draws plaudits for its backing jobs from top entertainers who have played city, again is tops in cutting the show. Skip.

Nugget, Sparks, Nev.

Sparks, Nev., June 27.

Peter Lind Hayes & Mary Healy, Eddie Peabody, George Arnold Singers & Dancers (18), Foster Edwards Orch (10); no cover, no minimum second show.

Peter Lind Hayes & Mary Healy haven't played the Reno-Sparks area since 1957 and auditor response in this outing at John Ascuaga's Nugget suggests they've been too long away. The act is polished, sophisticated, and is generous in comedic values. And the two find this 650-seater a perfect room to sell their diversified wares.

Hayes, his casual conversational style perfected, warms the room for a few minutes with topical lines before introducing his partner, and from that point tablers keep ears attuned for a full 40 minutes of class entertainment from the handsome duo.

There's a laugh-provoking brief carbon of Jeanette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy, followed with Miss Healy vocaling "Stardust" from on stage as Hayes makes with some classic interrupting lines from among tablers. Male half of team also proves his thesp talents in an impresh of drunk, a routine also including lines that excite the risibilities. Miss Healy, who's smartly gowned and coiffed, invites audience participation asking for identification of familiar songs she intros by verse only.

Big attention getter is use of portable television camera to project scenes from individual tables onto large screen on stage while Miss Healy makes a stroll coaxing patrons to sing into wireless mike. During routine, Hayes remains on stage narrating and throwing top ad libs as he audits screen. Bit is particularly effective with the modest, the immodest, the over-imbibers, the don't care type. Despite the reaction from tablers, it's a sure attraction winner, with the impromptu performer now knowing whether to watch self on screen or concentrate on vocal chores.

New to the act in this return playback is introduction (from audience) of headliners' son, Michael Hayes, who scores with a creditable impression of JFK. Expertly batoning the Foster Edwards Orch for the Hayes-Healy segment is duo's regular conductor, Burt Farber.

Eddie Peabody, who was on the bill when this room opened last June, again demonstrates the technique that rates him the title of "King of the Banjo." He plays the oldies, Dixie medleys, and an impressive interpretation of "Third Man Theme" on the banporine, an instrument with a combined guitar-banjo sound he reports is his own invention.

He also wins plaudits for his work with muted banjo. In the 20 minutes Peabody is on, there's never a lull. At one point he works seated at stage side, in immediate contact with his listeners.

The George Arnold Singers and Dancers bracket the show in hold-over productions built around circus and riverboat themes.

Los Angeles, June 24.

Frankie Ortega Trio (Frank Ponti, Walt Sage); two-drink minimum.

Booking for an indefinite period of the Frankie Ortega Trio marks both a change of policy and a rearrangement of furniture at this spirited spa on the Strip. With Ortega setting up headquarters for the open end engagement, regular turnover of attractions is discontinued for the time being. In addition, stage has been done away with and piano bar setup restored, giving the room its former warmer look. Changes are for the better, physically, musically and probably commercially.

Stylings of the Ortega Trio are interesting and stimulating, and they swing. Offerings include a lively "Perdido," rhapsodic "Days Of Wine And Roses" and a driving "Mountain Greenery" featuring vocal solo by bassist Frank Ponti, whose singing style is roughly akin to that of Mel Torme.

are a rendition of themes from Ortega's "Los Angeles Suite" composition (which he soon hopes to record with 35-piece orch) and an Africanesque "West Side" medley that really rocks the room, and features a fine percussion solo by drummer Walt Sage. Ortega's work on the 88 is expert throughout. Tube.

Govt. Files Federal Court Suit to End AGVA Trusteeship Over Philly Local

The opening gun in the Government's aim to change the branches of the American Guild of Variety Artists into autonomous locals was fired late last week when U.S. Attorney Robert M. Morgenthau filed suit in N.Y. Federal Court to force AGVA dissolve its three-year trusteeship over the union's Philadelphia branch.

The action is the first to be brought under Section 123 of the Landrum-Griffin Act which permits a national union to exercise a trusteeship over one of its locals for a maximum of 18 months. Further continuance of the trusteeship has to be justified. According to present law, a national union can create a trusteeship over one of its branches in order to assure adherence to labor contracts, end corruption and restore democratic processes.

U.S. Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz challenged AGVA's contention that the Philly group was not in a position to elect a branch committee that would function properly. Wirtz declared that under the Landrum-Griffin Act the trusteeship was not necessary for a purpose allowable by the statute.

The Philadelphia trusteeship was set up Oct. 9, 1959 after a series of membership meetings took various actions independently of the New York national office. The Government suit was in response to a petition filed by Dick Jones, a leader in the Philly AGVA, who complained to the Dept. of Labor that the trusteeship was illegal. In February, 1960, AGVA also forbade the Philly branch to hold meetings.

The Senate Subcommittee on Permanent Investigations in its report last week declared that the "iron grip of a few national officers" on the affairs of the union cannot be alleviated "until the branches secure and exercise authority over their own affairs and exercise local autonomy." Apparently, AGVA anticipated strong action by Committee Chairman John L. McClellon (D.-Ark.) regarding the formation of locals. Union's recent national board meeting took action that would enable two persons to rule each local.

The Government suit also asks the court to order such relief as it may deem appropriate. The investigation was conducted by the Philadelphia Area Office Director of BLMR Frank Willette under supervision of the N.Y. Regional Director Benjamin R. Naumoff.

Adams Faces No Contest in Race For AGVA Prez

The electorate of the American Guild of Variety Artists again faces the prospect that incumbent president Joey Adams may be the only remaining candidate for that office when balloting starts next month. Paul Valentine originally listed as a candidate, was told that he was not nominated.

Other nominees for the presidency, Jack Haley, Dick Gregory and Pat O'Brien, have not made up their minds to run. Haley, who is a also candidate for first veepee, will run for that office instead. The present roster of candidates has until midnight today (Wed.) to declare whether they will run for office.

Adams' perennial opposition, Penny Singleton, has been suspended for 10 years by a trial board on charges of "dual unionism" and therefore is ineligible to run. She was also suspended last year, but was reinstated following elections.

"Also last year, Ray Bolger was nominated for the presidency, but declined to run which left Adams alone on the ballot. Difference this year is that officers will keep the post two years of the one that had been in effect previously.

Russell Swann has declared that he nominated Valentine for the presidency and there was a second by Gladys Ahearn. However, union officials state that Valentine was not nominated.

Pay Boost Compromise Ends Threat of Tooter Strike Vs. Mpls. Niteries

Minneapolis, July 2.

A compromise settlement of differences after protracted negotiations has averted a threatened musicians' strike which would have halted floor shows and guest dancing at a number of niteries that were paying only the previous minimum scale.

At about a half-dozen bistros the floor shows had to be eliminated for two nights because the musicians refused to work when the spots' owners balked at hiking their stipends and the American Guild of Variety Artists here turned thumbs down on its members performing if non-union musicians were used. When the niteries agreed to negotiate, everybody returned to their posts.

Under the new two-year contract with the spots, agreed upon by Richard Biglow, the union's head, sidemen and leaders will work 25 hours a week. The former will be raised from $86 to $92 and the latter from $105 to $115 per stanza. Also incorporated into the new pact is a responsibility agreement that employers will be punished for any violation.

Atlantic City Eyes Biggest Year As Heat Spurs Biz

Atlantic City, July 2.

This resort's 109th season is off to an auspicious start as steaming inland temperatures have brought unusually large crowds into the city to find relief from the heat and to join conventioneers already here. Hotels and motels are filled to the point where observers feel that 1963 will be the city's best year should the weatherman continue to smile.

The fact that the resort has landed the 1964 Democratic convention for its Convention Hall next August naturally has the city fathers beaming. It will be the first such political conclave ever held in this conventiion city.

Besides the influx of Democrats which will put Atlantic City on the front pages of every newspaper in the world for weeks, the greatest lasting benefit will be the air-conditioning of the main portion of convention hall. The city has lost several conventions, the Housewares conclave was one, because of the lack of a cooling system.

With a precedent now set, the resort is prepared to go all out

GALE SHERWOOD

A hit for 10 years on NELSON EDDY'S night-club show. Frank Morris, Toronto Globe and Mail, said: "He has a fine act, and he shares it with GALE SHERWOOD, a stunning blonde, who not only can sing with a very beautiful lyric soprano voice but is an expert comedienne."

Autry to Re-Light Club Gigi In Chi; Moderate Fees

Chicago, July 2.

Cowboy star Gene Autry has purchased Sahara Inn, the luxurious motel north of Chicago that opened with a bang two years ago and folded when its then owner, Manny Skar, lost a war of attrition with the banks, the law and the press. Under Skar's management, the motel featured top names in its Club Gigi.

Autry will pay the mortgage holders, Marshall Savings & Loan, $7,000,000 over a 20-year span. At a press conference yesterday (Mon.), Autry went to great lengths to assure the assemblage that it would be an above-reproach operation, an apparent reference to Skar's difficulties. Autry plans to open the motel in three or four weeks.

Asked what kind of entertainment the motel would have, Autry said that his first concern was in getting the hostelry going, but that he would eventually open the Club Gigi and Celebrity Lounge. "We will have fine entertainment, but we will not pay exhorbitant prices," he said. "You can't pay Las Vegas prices without gambling."

Gene Autry Co. also owns the Hotel Continental, Hollywood, and the Ocotillo Lodge in Palm Springs, Calif. his partners include Robert O. Reynolds, who is co-owner with Autry in Golden West Broadcasters, prexy of the Los Angeles baseball club, and an officer, director and stockholder in the Los Angeles Rams. Autry has substantial interests in the sports organizations.

Barnett New GAC Board Chairman, Herbert Siegel Retains Presidency

Lawrence Barnett has become board chairman of General Artists Corp. and a director in the GAC parent company, Baldwin-Montrose Chemical Co., with the purchase of sufficient stock to make him the second largest individual owner of B-M common. Number of shares cannot be revealed until registration is completed with the Securities & Exchange Commission. Herbert J. Siegel, who had been functioning as GAC board chairman and president, retains the GAC presidency as well as the chairmanship of the board of the parent firm. Barnett also becomes chief executive officer of GAC.

Barnett is a former veepee of MCA Inc. and was president of the wholly owned MCA subsidiary, Music Corp. of America. He had been with MCA until April when he resigned.

With Barnett now in GAC's top executive post, tighter executive control of the agency is envisioned. He already has a sizable staff of former MCAites to help him create another version of MCA's talent agency which dissolved its business last July 23.

Last week, former MCA personnel who went over the UTM Artists, Ltd., an agency formed with former MCAites after the dissolution of that company, joined GAC which recently absorbed UTM. Dick Rubin, who headed the UTM operation in New York, became a veepee at GAC in charge of tv talent sales. Tony Ford, who had the job Rubin now occupies, moved over to packaging.

There had been a number of contemplated, shifts from Hollywood to New York and vice versa. Roy Gerber from the Coast and Ken Martell from New York were to have switched posts, but that's off. Ira Okun, reported to have wanted to resign rather than come back to New York, is remaining with his Hollywood post. Only likely switch is Jerry Perrenchio to New York to work in the one-night department.

Tighter controls on all facets of the GAC operation seem inevitable. Last published Baldwin-Mont-

Aussie's Federal Hotels Chain Dickers Flock Of U.S. and British Names

Melbourne, July 2.

Big overseas names are soon likely to be appearing in floor shows here at the Menzies and Savoy-Plaza Hotels. Both are owned by Federal Hotels Ltd., the leading Aussie hotel chain which also owns inns in other cities where such entertainers may also appear for shorter seasons.

Currently, Melbourne is badly lagging behind Sydney, which boasts many niteries where imported talent like Frances Faye, Nelson Eddy and Shirley Bassey have scored solidly.

Brian Gleeson, entertainments manager of Federal Hotels, told VARIETY that negotiations have started with Shelly Berman, Eartha Kitt, Diana Dors, Tony Hancock, Shirley Bassey, Marty Allen & Steve Rossi, Dickie Valentine and Tony Martin.

Gleeson said he is flying to the U.S. early in July to finalize deals with agents of these names. During a two-week stay he'll visit Hollywood, Las Vegas, San Francisco and Honolulu.

Appearances will be mainly in Melbourne and probably Sydney also, although some artists will tour the Federal Hotel chain circuit. Here in Melbourne the imports will perform nightly at both Menzies and Savoy-Plaza, bicycling from one to the other.

Plan No Changes, Barnett Assures GAC Personnel

Hollywood, July 2.

"No changes are contemplated," declared General Artists Corp's new board chairman and chief exec officer Larry Barnett yesterday (Mon.). All GAC personnel at all its offices continue, and the dozen or so agents who joined the outfit when GAC acquired UTM Artists Ltd. are being niched into the organization.

"Fact is," said Barnett, "with the great number of clients coming under GAC's aegis with the acquisition of UTM, we are actually looking for agents." Around 150 clients (including many of the top-money acts in the variety field) came into GAC's fold via the UTM buyout.

Barnett came west over the weekend with Herb Siegel, GAC prexy and controlling stockholder who brought Barnett into the percentery. Pair this week will huddle with Coast GAC staffers, then back to N.Y., where Barnett will

Harry Richman's B'way Comeback At Latin Quarter

Harry Richman makes a Broadway comeback at the Latin Quarter, starting Aug. 21 for 10 days. Date had to be cut short because of a revival of the famed Richman, Sophie Tucker and Joe E. Lewis bill which will play the Concord Hotel, Kiamesha Lake, N.Y., Sept. 2.

Richman has been away from Broadway for about 20 years. For years he was a top name in the cafe orbit, and was a commanding talent in the vaudeville and film fields as well. He had been living in retirement in California, but broke away when he was selected a delegate to the recent American Guild of Variety Artists' convention in New York.

Compromise Ends Act Pay Tiff at Sahbra, N.Y.

The crisis at the Cafe Sahbra, N.Y., has been resolved. A settlement has been worked out between The American Guild of Variety Artists and the spot's operator, Leo Fuld, whereby he'll pay $500 to performer Dora Kalinova instead of the $1,400 the union originally awarded her.

Fuld claimed he fired Miss Kalinova because she failed to put in an appearance for a scheduled show. In addition, he has promised to give her a new contract at a "mutually agreeable" date.

Fuld had told the union that with present business conditions, it was impossible for him to stay in business and pay the $1,400. At a new hearing, a compromise was reached. He had been considering going to court or closing his spot for keeps when the offer of a re-hearing was made.

Cop Crackdown, Expense Acc't Law Tease Cigar City Bump & Grinders

By ODIE ANDERSON

Tampa, Fla., July 2.

Burlesque-type entertainment in the Cigar City, one of the last southern strongholds (in a weak sort of way) of the old bump and grind profession, is joining the crying against Uncle Sam for slicing expense account deductions.

No doubt, the visiting firemen aren't having the scarlet carpet spread as in days of yore, but local burley bistros can't—and don't blame this altogether for their sliding biz. Vice squads have inflicted far more punishment than the Internal Revenue boys and the pallid condition within the biz itself is more likely the real culprit.

One owner-operator, six years in the business, sums up his situation: "For two years I made money; two years I didn't lose money; two years I lose money."

Rick Pauline's strip emporium, the Celebrity Club, best of the four operating (as of this writing), has been the frequent target of the law on two levels—state and city. Repeated police harassment has sacred away his carriage trade. Biz is dependent on repeaters who like their drinks spiced with human peel, one-night customers daring to be different and occasional out-of-towners.

Fuss Laying Off

Chicago's Nala Apollo is doing her "Devil and the Lady" act as star stripper at the Celebrity. Her lifesize Devildummy is self-manipulated, disrobes the Lady in a auto backseat bit that winds up in a torrid love scene. Surprisingly, the fuzz hasn't interrupted (as of this writing.)

The hefty ecdysis artist opines that burlesque needs more comedians ("not everyone comes to see naked girls, some want to be entertained"). She blames bad biz on reluctance or inability of bonifaces to spend money for good acts; deplores wages—she's non-union—paid in Florida.

In addition to Miss Apollo, three teasers, Gigi, Anita and Emma Lee, peel perfunctorily in individual stints.

Big draw is emcee-comediam Gil Ray, who colors comments to the hue expected of burley buyers. Ray recalls a wide open Tampa of some seven years ago, when he emceed at the Carnival Club with exotics, singers and dancers numbering a dozen or more. Carnival was owned by Sammy Paxton at that time, who departed for Cuba after selling to Pauline.

The Brass Rail, another peelery, has been owned and operated by Ben Klosky and Ralph Chavez for the past nine years. Their strippers range from six to 10 girls. Among the faves are Colleen, blond "Body Beautiful" from New Orleans; Anita Ray, in Oriental dress slashed to waistline and not much else, and Kim Starr. Acts are nothing more than epidermis exposure, in three or four easy stages, apparently fall flat in the libido department.

Oldtime tupper Keith Hall exhibits educated talent at the Rail, dancing the flamenco and modern jazz in black costume startlingly tightened for the occasion. (A non-union club, music is provided by record player). Hall, who appeared Widow Operates Beatty-Cole Circus; But Where Are Riding Acts of Future?

By HUMPHREY BOULENS

Norwalk, Conn., July 2.

Sparked by an enlightened school superintendent and school board who provided a dream lot on local high school greenery, the Clyde Beatty-Cole Brothers' Circus rang up record-breaking business here Saturday (22) in the first major local circus stand in 20 years. An extra matinee could have been added but Mrs. Bonnie Kernan and James Harrington, running the show in the absence of Frank McCloskey, wanted to give performers a rest after long jump.

Novelty of the Beatty Show this year is not the lively performance and all-around spanking appearance of the tent show, but the presence in the front of the house of Bonnie Kernan, Widow of Walter Kernan, co-owner, who died last winter. Mrs. Kernan, in her early 40s, is probably the first important circus dogenne since Mrs. Charlie Sparks. For many years she was one of the Hunt Twins (Bonnie and Gloria) with the Ringling Show working elephants and ladders. They had come from the line at the Oriental Theatre in Chicago which was run by their father.

Another second generation is starred in the Beatty Show along with the master himself and deservedly so. She is Carla Wallenda, daughter of Karl and Helen Wallenda, and, like her mother, she is top mounter in the family's traditionally sensational highwire act. As godchild of the late Ella Bradna, she displays all of the style and showmanship that great lady passed on to her. (Practicing on a low wire on the backlot between shows was her three year old daughter Reata Wallenda for what may be her first notice.)

Trim and alert, Beatty paces the show with his lions and tigers. Not as noisy as in earlier years, Beatty remains the top showman in his special art and works a fast 25 minutes with 10 lions and four shrewd tigers. A novelty has one of the tigers chasing his tail. "The only spinning tiger," Beatty announces. They used to say of Adgie, who came from up Danbury way, that she frightened her cats into submission with her appearance. Beatty could charm them.

Count Nicholas who succeeded the late Fred Bradna as equestrian director of the Ringling Show is now with Beatty and fulfills that role with splendor and authority. While Bill "Boom Boom" Browning makes his 10-piece band sound as if it were Paul LaValle's entire "Band of America". The show is fast, colorful and precise.

Among new acts are the Frelanis, a sleek bicycle-unicycle troupe who work four high in one routine. Greta Frisk is a blonde Dane on a single trapeze administering daring heel and toe catches and abandoning the inevitable break-away for her finish. Instead she imposes her neck in a noose for an unprotected, perilous descent.

If Miss Frisk hangs by her neck, Princess Olga Wong hangs by her hair. Gimmicking an act perfected by Yom Kam two decades ago, the princess pours herself a cup of tea while suspended in space only by her hair strands. She sells the stunt well.

There is a fine brigade of elephants lead by Rex Williams that works twice on bill filling three rings. Horses are missed but Mrs. Kernan reports that there are no new riding acts and none being trained. Hanneford, Cristiani and Loyal-Repensky families are now split up into a dozen units and look it. Circus agents scouring Europe report similar situation there.

Trampoline acts continue their high vogue with home grown devotees supplying an overflowing reservoir of jouncers just as the sandlots in Bridgeport's South End once fed The Circus with "Arabian" acrobats.

The cannon act is back in favor with the space news and Luis Munoz, billed as "Captain Astroaut", proves that this perrenial closing is now no longer the exclusive province of the Zacchini family. Zoppe's dogs supported by a trained rooster are a complete joy and the Gaonas are new and fleet flyers.

The Beatty clowns are exceptionally good, exploiting their rueful skill with manifest interest. Another novelty are usherettes, probably the ladies of the aerial ballet, garbed in blue uniforms and jaunty caps like airline hostesses.

General admission is $1.90 with an extra dollar for reserved seats. This seems a modest request from a big, expensive show like the Beatty-Cole which has a lot of magic to offer.

Davis Jr.-Brubeck Into H'wood Bowl at Flat 20G

Hollywood, July 2.

Sammy Davis Jr. and Dave Brubeck quartet have been booked as a package for a Hollywood Bowl one-nighter Oct. 5. Lou Robin is promoting. Package will get flat $20,000 and that includes cost of the symph-size orch which will backstop Davis.

Robin also is renting Bowl (10% of gross) for a "Folk Festival Night" Sept. 28 and to date has booked Smothers Bros. and Miriam Makeba.

Lineup for "Dixieland Night" which the Bowl Assn. and Robin will co-promote July 26 has just about been firmed—Pete Fountain flying up from New Orleans, Jack Teagarden's combo, Bobby Hackett and group and Muggsy Spanier's drop-beaters.

in "Something for the Boys," "Let's Face It" and at Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, rambles nostalgically on vaudeville.

A resident of Miami, he crosses over to Tampa when times are slow on the east coast (only one striptease club now operates in Miami.) Hall declares there is no future in Florida; would like to go abroad where he claims vaudeville is appreciated.

Oldest burlesque in Tampa, the Show Bar, has been operating for 20 years. Sam Alter is owner and Delores Howell, manager. Here, Patti, the Indian Princess, drapes herself around teepee pole while dropping beads, bits of a fringed frock and layers of leather in an act which is different in costuming only.

Freddy Brenner has been singing emcee at the Show Bar for six months. Previously he was featured singer at defunct Carnival Club for three years, served a term at the Brass Rail and in Miami spots. He's a customers' choice, as is emcee-maitre d'Carmen Murray, old-time vaudevilian of the Murray & Murray comedy team.

Show Bar has some seven girls, off and on, in addition to Minnehaha. Non-union pianist and drummer provide sexapation; patrons are predominantly salesmen staying overnight in nearby hotels, motels.

The Diamond Horseshoe, Tampa's only burlesque cafe located in the city's Latin quarters, Ybor City, has a sporadic history, with numerous openings and closings. Current reopening features a Cuban revue, imported from Miami's Havana-Madrid Club. Owned by Joe Spicola, the "Shoe" enjoyed a lush period some 15 years ago, when customers stood four-deep to see a show emceed by Al Fast.

Another strippery, The Little Club, operated for almost six years before it was closed last winter when the state beverage department revoked its license.

Tampa's peeleries are benefitting to some degree from revival of interest created by such films as "Gypsy Rose Lee," "The Stripper" and similar fare. They could also give themselves a hypo via booking good, entertaining acts. As of this writing, they are partially saved by conscientious hasbeens and the sale of kickapoo joy juice. Also, they have no competition within hundreds of miles.

rose financial report indicated that B-M had moved into the black, but GAC was losing money. Since then, however, an increased number of tv sales may make is possible for the company to wipe out the losses.

At any rate, Barnett faces the task of reorganizing the company to make maximum use of manpower. Insiders feel there will be some rearrangement of agent personnel.

The only major company formed by MCA personnel that hasn't come into GAC is Agency of the Performing Arts, headed by Dave Baumgarten. Latter admits that he had been approached to amalgamate with GAC, but he indicates that he wil remain his own company.

Moxie Whitney to Scout Shows for CPR Chain

Toronto, July 2.

Moxie Whitney has broken up his 12-piece Royal York Hotel Orch for the summer months but still has four bands under his name-label. As director of entertainment for the next five years for Canadian Pacific Railway hotels, he plans to spend next week at the posh Seignory Club in Quebec. He later will journey to Mexico and Japan to line up one-hour shows for his trans-Canada CPR hotel chain.

Whitney bands are being batoned during the summer months by Bobby Gimby at the Royal York Hotel, by the Ralph Fraser quartet at the Black Knight, Toronto; Fred Rous, his arranger and pianist, with a six-piece band at the Lake Louise Hotel, Banff; and Jack Fowler with an eight-piece orch at the Banff Springs Hotel, Canadian Rockies posh resort.

Whitney opens fall season at Imperial Room, Royal York Hotel, Toronto, with a Hawaiian revue in Sept. 19 for an indefinite engagement.

N.O. Stymies Strips With Anti-Mixing, Fingerprint Laws: AGVA, AFM Beef

New Orleans, July 2.

Two ordinances aimed at strengthening law enforcement in the city's night spots along Bourbon Street were passed last week by the city council.

One prohibits female entertainers and employes in clubs having striptease shows from sitting with customers.

The second requires fingerprinting of all employes in night clubs and cabarets having live entertainment. This ordinance will apply to about 150 of the 2,500 retail alcoholic beverage outlets in the city, according to the New Orleans Police Dept.

Representatives of entertainiers' and musicians' unions raised strong objections to the ordinance requiring fingerprinting. Thomas J. Meunier, attorney for the American Guild of Variety Artists, told the council the proposal was unconstitutional because of discriminatory provisions. He declared there was no legal basis for singling out places with live entertainment. He favored a fingerprint ordinance, but one applying to all retail liquor outlets.

David Winstein, president of Local 174, American Federation of Musicians, said he was not opposed to fingerprinting but urged the broadening of the ordinance to include all retail liquor outlets.

In supporting the ordinance, Richard B. Montgomery Jr., v.p. of the Chamber of Commerce of the New Orleans Area, said that the historic French Quarter is important to New Orleans but that "what is happening on Bourbon Street is harmful to the city's image."

Aaron M. Kohn, managing director of the Metropolitan Crime Commission of New Orleans, stated that the promotion of tourist business also means increase responsibility for the protection of tourists. Retail liquor outlets often are the center of organized vice and gambling, he added.

Police Supt. Joseph Giarrusso said the ordinance would give the proper tool for law enforcement in the city's night spots.

The second ordinance adopted by the council was amended to remove the exemption originally proposed for hotels with more than 200 rooms.

Under the terms of the ordinance, cabaret or nightclub employees would have to obtain an identification card that would require them to be fingerprinted and photographed. It is designed to prevent employment of persons with felony convictions.

AGVA Suspends Yarnell, Spears

Hollywood, July 2.

American Guild of Variety Artists has handed 10-year suspensions to two more members of union's Los Angeles branch. They are Bruce Yarnell and Doug Spears, who were tried at the same time that Penny Singleton, past prexy of AGVA, was found guilty of two charges and given a 10-year suspension.

Three-man board, consisting of chairman Vince Silk, Sid Marion and Jack Haley, which found Miss Singleton guilty (Haley dissenting), had taken under deliberation the sentencing of Yarnell and Spears and met again June 26. Miss Singleton was suspended June 6 at conclusion of the board hearing.

Yarnell and Spears were tried on the same nine charges as Miss Singleton—who was found guilty of two and other seven dismissed—and were convicted on the two Singleton charges. These included, (1) they refused to abide by and follow orders and directives of the national executive board of AGVA, by refusing and actively preventing the nomination of officers when ordered to do so, and (2) they were found guilty of dual unionism in that they prepared or had prepared a constitution for a new separate and distinct union.

Trial board, it's understood will meet again in early July to try Roy Rogers (not the cowboy star), Gladys Ahearn and several other members of L. A. AGVA chapter on similar charges.

Phyllis Diller Lifts Early Biz at Cincy's Coney I.

Cincinnati, July 2.

Phyllis Diller magneted an early season attendance high for Coney Island's swank Moonlite Gardens dansant as weekend added attraction with Cincy's Buddy Roger orch. Total was close to 8,000 at $1.50 gate.

It was the comedienne's first outdoor engagement. Her contract had stipulations which were waived by management to allow for a higher figure in her favor, said Garry Wachs, Coney's assistant manager. "If they earn it we are glad to pay," he stated.

Thursday night (27) opener bettered 1,800, top Ladies' Night draw since 1955. High was Saturday's 4,032.

Belafonte $93,699, T'ronto

Toronto, July 2.

Harry Belafonte registered another SRO week with $93,699 for seven performances at the O'Keefe Center here. The absolute limit of the house with standees is $94,039.

Belafonte is playing the date with 30 performers on stage, the largest show he has had produced

Gengo Joins ITA

Larry Gengo has joined the cafe dept. of International Talent Associates. A former MCAite, he had been with UTM Artists Ltd., which was taken over by General Artists Corp.

Gengo at one time was the New York representative of Frank Sennes, booker of the Desert Inn and Stardust Hotels, Las Vegas. At ITA, he will join the cafe dept. which already has Irvin Arthur.

Eddys,' K.C., Sets July 18 Reopening

Kansas City, July 2.

Reopening of Eddys' Restaurant has been set for July 18, after extensive refurbishing and redecorating. Deluxe downtown spot closed after a kitchen fire last winter spread smoke damage virtually throughout the premises.

Opening turn for the floor show is to be Nelson Eddy & Gale Sherwood. The five-piece Continentals return for dancing and to back the shows.

Policy is to be dining till 8:30 p.m. (from 6), supper dancing after that, with floor shows at 8:30 and 11 p.m. nightly, according to George Eddy, who books the talent. Cover is to be generally $2 per head, which prevailed prior to the closing.

Contrary to previous custom, spot will not be open for luncheon. This phase is being dropped, according to Ned Eddy, menu and advertising chief, who said it never was profitable.

Refurbishing which the restaurant currently is undergoing will cost in the area of $200,000, according to Sam Eddy, also a brother-partner. Kitchen is being renewed throughout, carpets, drapes and decor are new, and some seating has been rearranged to better take advantage of the terrace arrangement.

Cocktail lounge will continue to be a separate entity with its own entertainer, although talent for this room has not yet been set.

Minn. Exhibit Budget At N.Y. Fair Dives to 643G; Hawaii Eyes $1-Mil Take

Minneapolis, July 2.

Budget for a Minnesota exhibition at New York's 1964-65 World's Fair has dwindled from an originally planned $2,500,00 to $643,000. The current cut represents a slash from $1,600,000. There'll be $300,000 for the exhibit's construction and $340,000 for its operation during the exposition's two years.

Reason given for slicing the expenditure was that "Minnesota businessmen's interest in a larger and more elaborate exhibit has proved insufficient." Thus far only four Twin Cities' and two out-state manufacturing companies have signed up. The non-profit promotional organization originally looked for 60 commercial exhibitors in the building, but now is expecting only some 25 in all.

Some $150,000 in state funds will help defray the cost.

May Expand Hawaii Show

Honolulu, July 2.

Hawaii's New York World's Fair Committee hopes that the Hawaii exhibit will bring in $1,000,000 from admissions, a Polynesian show and concessions.

Lester Levi, president of Ivel Corp., managers of the exhibit, wants to expand the Polynesian show into a more elaborate revue with seating for 800 to 900 persons and 90c admission. He predicts the show alone will bring in $500,000 to $600,000.

Sound effects inside the exhibit will include the sound of surf, and atomizers may be used to exude the scents of Hawaii.

Promoter Chalfen Hails Circus Swap As Lift to Soviet-American Relations

Chicago, July 2.

After doing business with the Russians for several years with his "Holiday On Ice," promoter Morris Chalfen is taking a major plunge with an exchange of circuses between the U. S. and the Soviets. With the sanction of the U. S. State Dept. and by way of a mixture of dollars and diplomacy with the astute negotiators for the Russian Ministry of Culture, Chalfen expects to lose about $200,000 on the circus he is sending to Russia. However, he hopes to come out with a profit as a result of the U. S. tour of the Moscow State Circus, with the renowned clown Popov headlining.

Chalfen's American Circus opens July 4 in Moscow, and he is not belaboring the point that that date celebrates an American revolution. In the tricky area of business deals within the Cultural Exchange, politics is a verboten word. The Moscow Circus starts its American tour Sept. 12 in Philadelphia.

Chalfen, a veteran in international show biz, has been hot on the possibilities of the Russian and American culture exchange since his "Holiday On Ice" was chosen by the Soviets as one of the earliest entries in the program and was enthusiastically received in that country. He makes no bones about his profit motive, but is also sold on the idea as a way of easing Soviet-American relations.

Calls Russians 'Reliable'

He believes that U. S. promoters have shied away from the exchange program with the Soviets because of some of the intricacies in the negotiations. He maintains that although the Russians are sharp businessmen, they are always straightforward and reliable once the deal is made.

On the other hand, the Russian Ministry of Culture determines the price to be paid American shows. The Culture Ministry sets the cities that the shows will play and the theatres it will play in.

In the case of a circus, such as the American Circus, it can only appear in arenas built for such events. They are circular, seat only 2,000 to 2,400, and the top price ticket is $2. It is because of these severe limitations, plus the fact that he will receive part of his money in rubles, that Chalfen will lose money in Russia.

In the U. S., the Moscow Circus will get a percentage and will play such large auditoriums as Madison Square Garden and Chi's International Amphitheatre. Other U. S. cities to get the Russian circus are Boston, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

The circus that Chalfen put together in Chicago to send to Russia has a strong emphasis on aerialists, since they seem to have a particular appeal to the Soviet people. He is recruiting about half the acts from the Ringling Bros. Circus, which is currently appearing here.

Included in the American Circus troupe are Harold Alzana on the high wire, trapezist Gerald Soules, the Palacios and Miss Ilona on the high trapeze, plus such acts as Roberto De Vasconcellos High School Horses, Wells & the Four Fays, hand balancer Galla Shawn, and Cesar, who juggles on the slack wire.

Chalfen's American Circus will be in Russia for three months, first in Moscow, then Leningrad and Kiev.

Limeliters Plan 6-Month Hiatus

The Limeliters will take a six-month hiatus after their concert July 13 at Red Rock, Colo. The trio, according to Larry Bennett, veepee at International Talent Associates, which handles the act, will reconvene after Jan. 1.

Bennett said that the Limeliters, because of their strenuous schedule during the past three years, have been unable to find time to get new material. Lou Gottlieb, the bassist, has taken on a single assignment, that of performing July 20 at the "Hootenanny" at the Forest Hills (L. I.) Stadium. He will try to whip up the new act during the layoff.

According to Bennett, there is also the possibility that Glenn Yarborough will take on singing assignments and Alex Hasselev, the other member may handle some acting assignments. All will try to locate new tunes for the act.

The bulk of their income during their blackout will come from reruns on television and residuals from their Coca-Cola commercials. The trio, said Bennett, head three separate corporations, and none has given any notice of getting out of these firms, which he indicated would be a normal step, if any of them were breaking away.

New Acts

THE FOUR SEASONS
Songs
30 Mins.
Copacabana, N. Y.

In a little less than a year, The Four Seasons, a male vocal combo, have established themselves as potent diskers via a string of clicks under the Vee Jay banner. But unlike other groups and/or soloists who've made it via the jukebox route, their segue into the "live" field goes further than just a recap of their discatalog. They've got an act—and it's a good one.

The reprises of "Sherry," "Big Girls Don't Cry" and "Walk Like A Man" are included, of course, and with all the falsetto trappings, but it's done with a zest and a savvy that gives it some stature outside of the grooves. They open neatly with a fine harmonizing job on "Blues In The Night" and "Just In Time" and then, after their disk retrospect, go into an act that's slickly conceived. A special material bit that blends the Irish of "MacNamara's Band" and the German of "Mack The Knife" comes over as a happy frolic, and another special pegged on what made their recording of "Sherry" a click is a self-kidding bit that even the nonjukesters can enjoy. And the routine which starts off as a solo on 'I'll Go By Myself, Alone," then builds to a duet on "Ja-da," then a trio on "My Echo, My Shadow & Me," and then to the full grouping on "Day In Day Out" is expertly executed.

Their windup is the rousing "Brotherhood Of Man" from the legituner "How To Succeed In Business Without Really Trying." It's a fine wrapup to a diverting song session. Gros.

PAT COOPER
Comedy
20 Mins.
Copacabana, N. Y.

Pat Cooper's fine Italian hand is worked to advantage in a brisk comedy turn. The lasagna lilt, which makes up much of his 20-minuter, goes beyond just paisan partisanship because it touches on familiar family foibles in wide-ranged humorous terms.

He's young and brash but he never lets it get out of hand and the overall impression is that of a likable Italo-American perplexed by old-country parental whims. His recreation of an Italian wedding is a high spot.

His precede to the Italo segment touches on the minority racial issue with some funny angles that even the most sensitive can enjoy.

He has already done well in a tv showcasing via a guest shot on Jackie Gleason's CBS show and in this nitery debut he shapes as a young man who's going places. Gros.

THE JUST FOUR Folk Songs
25 Mins.
The Bear, Chicago

In folk songs the difference between an evergreen and a chestnut is how it's sung, and The Just Four passes this test with flying colors by making much-done folk tunes sound fresh and new. Part of this can be attributed to the contribution of their mentor, folksinger Bob Gibson, who is responsible for their astute musical charts and smooth stage demeanor. However, this professional patina never gets in the way of their natural vitality and forthright handling of their repertoire.

The quartet consists of three males and a femme: Ellen Haven has a clear mid-range voice that deals with her songs directly, dramatically and without pretension. Hod Davis plays guitar and does a creditable job as the comic foil in their patter byplay, Jim Jordaine doubles on guitar and 12-string banjo, and Sean O'Brien is the bassist. They have firstrate rapport, both vocally and instrumentally, and are free enough to add an improvisational touch to their folk standards.

Quartet shapes as a good contender for the full range of folk spots and the college concert circuit. For a new group, there is an unusual lack of rough edges in their turn. If anything, they could use one strong centrepiece number, but this may develop when they find a tune that they can make the main attraction. Mor.

ELIZABETH SEAL & ZACK MATALON
Songs, Dances
45 Mins.
Shoreham Hotel, Washington

Elizabeth Seal & Zack Matalon, who were married a couple of years ago, are a pair of gifted performers whose talent is recognized on both sides of the Atlantic. Debuting as a nitery team at the posh Terrace of Washington's Shoreham Hotel, they have an act which seems nervously put together on a do-it-yourself basis. Result is that neither of them is seen to best advantage.

There should be no need for a panic button. Anyone familar with their careers knows there is an abundance of showmanship, sparkle and personality in both of them. All they need is good material to be a major new addition to clubs. Their difficulty is that they opened without the services of a director, writer, their own musical director or presumably anybody. While there were some resulting high points (notably a socko interpretation of "Me and My Shadow"), there were also lulls which sadly demonstrated how talent can be wasted. For example, their "Kangaroo' dance routine should go, but pronto.

Miss Seal, the Irma of "Irma La Douce" both in London and on Broadway (and the London star of "Pajama Game"), has never before played a club. Her zestful and comic cuteness is a natural for either big rooms or small ones (the Terrace is enormous) if she is given the kind of songs and dances which afford her the opportunity to show what she is able to do. She deserves more solos than she started with, which is possible if Matalon will consent to an "equal time" arrangement.

Matalon has a long string of nitery dates behind him in Europe and N. Y. as a singer and dancer, plus, of course, his N. Y. top featured role in "Irma La Douce" and his costarring run with Miss Seal last season in the touring company of "Shot in the Dark."

He handles songs well in French and English and is a standout as a dancer. He was handicapped with unfortunate mike trouble which robbed the tonal quality of his voice.

The Mr. and Mrs. team will spend two weeks here and perhaps the act can be whipped into shape in the interim. Carp.

DOLORES LEIGH
Songs
22 Mins.
Shamrock Hilton, Houston

Miss Leigh is ideal opener for nearly any show. She has completely professional presentation, and comely thrush always has full control of pipes. She knows her way around a stage, but has changed act recently and qualifies for New Acts review.

She opens with "Lucky Day," does "World On A String," "Love Letters," an old-time medley of "Baby Smiles At Me," "Made Me Love You," and "Some of These Days." Other tunes are "Man That Got Away," "Take Me Along," perhaps her best with audience participation via palming, and closing "With These Hands." She shows professionalism in latter when she couldn't establish rapport with accompanist at 88s, stopped number and started over. Therefore this, one of her better numbers, didn't quite come off, leaving impression "Take Me Along" might be better begoff. Skip.

PATRICK SULLIVAN BURKE
Songs
22 Mins.
French Quarter, Houston

Burke is back after layoff of six years, and his tenor is far better than general run of supper club singers. He's tall, graying Irishman in his 40s, and he quickly establishes rapport with audience with pipes and smile. Even though he seldom really needs vocal amplification, his mike technique is excellent. He also goes from show tunes to grand opera to Irish songs with ease, and his clown song from "Pagliacci" was show stopper, unusual reaction from normally blase club patrons.

Other tunes are "Young Lovers," "Nearly Was Mine," "Needs Me," "Plenty of Nothin'," "Ain't Necessarily So," "Danny Boy" and "Back to Donegal."

This is Burke's shakedown appearance, and he can fit in any club or major lounge now. French Quarter is fairly tiny room, and even so Burke's big voice fits nicely. Auditor reaction is excellent. Skip.

TONI HARPER
Songs
25 Mins.
Rendezvous Room, L. A.

Toni Harper no longer sings "Candy Store Blues"—and she no longer is 11 years old as when this tune rocketed her to moppet stardom. Today, Miss Harper has a new, sophisticated and pleasing act that indicates considerable potential in the pop jazz field.

Singer has benefited from her lifetime of experience. Delivery is smooth and assured and, except for a tendency to wiggle, she comees on with good presence. Vocally, her sound is well-trained and nicely modulated and she has a good rapport with lyrics. Yet, at this point, Miss Harper is just a very good singer. To inch ahead, she must develop greater individuality and a style of her own. There are Ella Fitzgerald influences in much of what she is doing that shoud be avoided. Natural edge toward jazz showed on "You and the Night and the Music" and "Lot of Living to do." This is area where she might well look to expansion. Dale.

VAUGHN MONROE
Music, Songs
45 Mins.
Tropicana Lounge, Las Vegas

Vaughn Monroe has a lot of nostalgia in his new lounge act which is sure to please the members of his generation, and has enough up-to-date material to balance and please the youngsters—or in this case, those who think young, because anyone under 21 is not allowed in the Tropicana Lounge.

Since his opening here, Monroe has proven to be a good, solid attraction for any room, and has played many performances to SRO.

He's backed by three beautiful girl singers—two blondes and a brunet—called The Heart Breakers, and three handsome young men singers billed as The Headliners. Latter group does a very funny job vocally and instrumentally with "Gunslinger." Duke.

House Review

Pavilion, Largs

Largs, Scotland, June 25.

David Macbeth, Susan Singer, Alex McAvoy, O'Duffy Bros. (2), Andrew Macpherson Singers (8), Jack Raynes, Helen Norman Vi Day, Cluny Trio, 6 Debutants, Tommy Maxwell Quintet under Ron Moore.

David Macbeth, young warbler, headlines this mixed-quality vacation layout at leading West Scotland seaside resort, and clicks well with outfronters. Songalog ranges from an opening "Hey! Look Me Over" to "I'll Remember You" and, strangely for an English singer, "A Scottish Soldier." Despite some trouble with a tangled microphone lead, he offers a pleasant act that would have greater impact if he could inject some more personality, of which he's obviously very capable.

Chirper Susan Singer is not so fortunate with her reaction, and comes over as a non-too-talented songstress with a slightly aggressive and non-sympathetic style.

In the comedy dept., Alex McAvoy, local legit player turned comedian, essays the laff-rousing chores with average results.

Dave and Joe O'Duffy offer a roguish Irish comedy act of song, patter and chatter, and click with its zippy pace and content. The eight Andrew Macpherson Singers gain strong mitting for Scot tunes, including "Here's To The Gordons," etc, and exit after too short an act to prolonged palming.

The Cluny Trio are a musical all-male Scot group, geared for the Auld Lang Syne tastes. Jack Raynes leads the dancing boys and girls in some pretty items, although first segment of bill (at show caught) had amateurish moments. The Deubtantes and Vi Day look after the terping slots. Ron Moore leads a Tommy Maxwell pit. Gord.

LONDON CRIX PICK 'SUCCEED'

Three Exit With $265,000 Loss

'Little Me' Deficit Around $165,000—'Photo Finish' And 'Interlude' Bucked Press Blackout

By JESSE GROSS

Unrecovered coin on "Little Me," "Photo Finish" and "Strange Interlude," last week's three Broadway casualties, is figured at around $265,000. Of the three shows, "Photo" and "Interlude" opened during the lengthy newspaper strike. The critical reaction to the two entries was generally favorable, but the dailies, unfortunately, were not there to carry the message.

"Little Me" bowed prior to the press blackout with the daily aisle-sitters giving it four raves and three qualified approvals. The Sid Caesar-starrer, which was in the sellout groove for a number of weeks after its opening at the Lunt-Fontanne Theatre, cost $354,644 to produce and is figured to have closed last Saturday (29) at a deficit of about $165,000.

Producers Cy Feuer and Ernest H. Martin intend touring the tuner later this season with Caesar repeating his starring assignment. The show's collapse in view of the bullish notices and early sellout business has elicited the theory from some tradesters that Caesar's television specials during the season didn't rub off favorably on the Neil Simon-Carolyn Leigh-Cy Coleman workover of the Patrick Dennis novel.

"Photo," which marked Joseph E. Levine's branchout from the film biz (Embassy Pictures) to legit as coproducer with Alfred de Liagre Jr. of the Peter Ustinov play, is figured to have dropped an estimated $40,000. "Interlude," the debut presentation of the Actors Studio Theatre, is figured to have lost about $60,000. The O'Neill revival was performed only six times weekly from 6 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. with an hour's dinner intermission. Production costs for 'Photo' and 'Interlude' ran about $63,000 and $100,000, respectively.

"Photo," with Ustinov, Paul Rogers Eileen Herlie and Dennis King costarred got off to a healthy start at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre N. Y. but never reached powerhouse proportions. "Interlude" opened big at the Hudson Theatre N. Y., but business subsequently eased off and hit the skids when an initial advance sale through June 1 was used up. The O'Neill play, which moved a few weeks ago to the Martin Beck Theatre, registered a run of 16 weeks at both houses. It had previously been scheduled to close July 13. "Photo" put in 20 weeks at the Atkinson and "Little Me" was at the Lunt-Fontanne for 33 weeks.

Long Frisco Famine Put 'Yum Yum' Into Orbit; Nice Take on Year's Run

San Francisco, July 2.

Nobody ever thought it would go six months, but "Under the Yum-Yum Tree," at the On Broadway Theatre, finished its first year, establishing a recent-generation record for long runs here.

"Yum-Yum" had opened to discouraging reviews and was ready to close last autumn. Then came a draught on Geary Street, where both major legit houses were dark from mid-November to mid-March. "Yum-Yum" business picked up, and has been holding or climbing ever since.

The house is scaled for $9,100 a week at a $4.40 top, and grosses now run around $7,000 week in and week out. Nut is about $4,000. "Anniversary Waltz" was previous recent long-runner at 40 weeks.

Of the original players, only Marrian Walters remains. Her husband, Mike Farrell, is director. Keith Rockwell is leading partner of the enterprise.

'Honey In The Rock' Durable at Beckley, W.Va.

Greensboro, N.C., July 2.

North Carolina playwright Kermit Hunter, author of a dozen outdoor dramas, saw his "Honey in the Rock" open its third consecutive season June 22 in Grandview State Park near Beckley, W.Va.

"Honey in the Rock" is a two-act drama with 13 scenes spaced between 1861 and 1863. A cast of 60 actors, singers and dancers tell a story of crucial importance in U.S. history. More than 75,000 tourists have seen "Honey in the Rock" since the production first opened in June 1961.

Snowing in July: Twofers for 'Tops' At Winter Garden

Another 4,000,000 two-for-one exchange coupons are being poured into the New York-Jersey area for "Pajama Tops," now in its sixth week at the Winter Garden Theatre, N. Y. That brings the show's twofer distribution in the metropolitan area to 16,000,000 thus far, according to Zev Bufman, coproducer of "Tops" with Stanley Seiden.

An initial distribution of 10,000,000 discount ducats was followed by the staggered circulation of 2,000,000 more prior to the new 4,000,000 distribution. This unprecedented stream of twofers for a Broadway entry has apparently had results in that business for the sex-accented presentation (an adaptation of a French farce) in its first three weeks at the Winter Garden was good despite critical raps.

Business for the show slipped during its fourth week, but the producers figure the new flood of exchange coupons will hypo box-office activity. "Tops" is an unusual present-day Broadway entry in that it's not aimed at regular theatregoers. Key selling points are June Wilkinson's physical attributes and the two-for-one bargain gimmick.

DOWNING'S 'LIMBO KID' IN HEIDELBERG PROD.

"The Limbo Kid," play by Robert Downing, Broadway stage manager, will be presented by The Roadside Theatre, Heidelberg, Germany, in October under the direction of Peter Buchan.

Production will be in English. Players are recruited for The Roadside from theatrical pros attached to American units in the area.

Script has previously been produced by several theatres connected with Southeastern Theatre Conference which gave the work its play-of-the-year award in 1961. Moss Hart chose play for presentation at Denver University, summer of 1962, prior to his death. In 1960, Albert McCleery directed condensed version of the play on his CBS-TV Workshop series.

'Guys' Launches Season At Greenville (N.Y.) Barn

Greenville, N.Y., July 2

The Shelley Players, in their second season at the Playhouse, Greenville, N.Y., and the eighth of operation by Mrs. Shirley Kaye, will offer productions for two-week periods, opening next Thursday (4) with "Guys and Dolls." The group has a new director, Robert Moss, who succeeds the late Garrison Sherwood.

Other shows scheduled for the resident troupe are "Life With Father," "Come Blow Your Horn" and "Getting Gertie's Garter."

CITE 'GOOD TIME' IN 4 CATEGORIES

By HAROLD MYERS

London, July 2.

A walkaway victory for "How to Succed in Business Without Really Trying" as the best new foreign musical of the 1962-63 season is a feature of VARIETY's annual poll of London's first-string drama critics. It collared 10 out of a maximum of 13 votes, the remainder being shared by "Black Nativity" and "On the Town."

One unique feature of the critical verdict is the widespread support in various categories given to "All in Good Time." By a handsome majority it was named the best new British play of the year, with six votes to two scored by its nearest rival, Bernard Miles and Marjorie Rhodes were named respective best supporting actor and actress for their roles in the show, and the author, Bill Naughton, tied with two others as the most promising playwright.

There were only two contenders for the best new British musical, and the verdict went to "Oh What a Lovely War," originally presented at the Theatre Royal, Stratford East, which had a seven to five win over "Half a Sixpence." The star of the latter, however, Tommy Steele, had a handsome lead for the best male performance in a musical.

"Looking for the Action" (presented by the Chicago Second City company at the Prince Charles Theatre) was voted the best new revue. "The Physicists," which played under the Royal Shakespeare banner at the Aldwych, was chosen the best new foreign play.

Although he did not make the anticipated clean sweep of the board, Paul Scofield got 10 of the 13 votes for the best male lead performance in a straight play for "King Lear." Peter Brook, who staged that production and "The Physicists," was cited as the best director.

There was a tie for the best femme lead, between Sheila Hancock, star of "Rattle of a Simple

Martin Tahse Set For Rangy Season

Martin Tahse, who's been busy in past seasons as a producer of touring shows, is expanding his managerial activities to Broadway and off-Broadway. For the Main Stem, he's got two musicals, "Golden Gate" and "Simon Says." The former, with book by Richard Morris and songs by Fred Ebb and John Kander, is earmarked for a Broadway preem next summer in either Dallas or San Francisco.

"Simon," with book by Lionel Wilson and songs by Ebb and Paul Klein, is slated for Broadway unveiling next spring. Next fall, though, Tahse will be partnered with T. Edward Hambleton in the presentation of another tuner, "Morning Sun," at the off-Broadway Phoenix Theatre, Hambleton, who's co-managing director of the Phoenix, will be associated with "Sun" in an independent capacity. An Oct. 7 opening at the Phoenix is scheduled for the musical, for which Ebb wrote the book and lyrics and Klein the music.

Scheduled for road presentation this season, under the Tahse banner, are a major city touring edition of "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," starting Dec. 16 at the Playhouse, Wilmington, and "Black Nativity," opening Sept. 30 at the Shubert Theatre, Cincinnati. Tahse has also secured the American rights for seven years to "Der Rosenkavalier," a filmed version by the Rank organisation of the Strauss opera in a Slazburg Festival production. Tahse is partnered in the picture venture with Showcorporation.

Incidentally, Patricia Neway is to star in the off-Broadway production of "Sun" under the direction of Daniel Petrie.

NO MONDAY NIGHTS

Sunday Matinees Instead For Boyer's 'Man & Boy'

A special performance policy will be employed from the start by "Man and Boy," opening Nov. 12 at the Atkinson Theatre, N. Y. In lieu of regular Monday night performance, the Charles Boyer-starrer will give Sunday matinees, in addition to the usual Wednesday and Saturday afternoon outings. Evening performances will be played on a Tuesday-Saturday basis.

The Terence Rattigan play, which Alexander H. Cohen will present with H. M. Tennent Ltd., wil precede its Main Stem debut with a brief London engagement, starting Sept. 4 at the Queen's Theatre.

Too Much Accent On Book, Not Enuf On Tunes: Merm

Albany, July 2.

Ethel Merman, at press conference in the Thruway Motor Inn near here, following her opening performance the previous night at the Colonie Summer Theatre (tent), indicated preference for motion pictures and television, over the stage. She was quoted as saying, "The magic has gone from the theatre" and "I have just about had it for the stage."

Singer, who received an ovation at the conclusion of her initial appearance in-the-round (although the attendance was not large), indicated that "the book" was being given prominence in today's musicals. She regretted the scarcity of memorable "scores."

"I go to a musical today," she said, "and I can't remember a single tune when I get outside."

She laughingly dismissed an inquiry as to the reason she did not appear in the screen role of "Gypsy," given to Rosalind Russell (with Lisa Kirk's voice dubbed in). "I wasn't asked for one reason. And I was glad. It would have meant that I could not have appeared in "A Mad, Mad, Mad World," which was made at the same time. And if the movie ('Gypsy') didn't do as well as the stage version, I would have taken the rap."

RASCEL'S COLLAPSE RETARDS 'ENRICO'

London, July 2.

Collapse of Italian star Renato Rascel, while rehearsing, caused the second postponement of the musical, "Enrico," which Michael Dorfman was due to present on Friday (28) at the Piccadilly Theatre.

First postponement was due to technical hitches. The opening is now set for tomorrow night (Wed.).

Open Legituner Season At Brunswick (Me.) Barn

Brunswick, Me., July 2.

The Brunswick Summer Playhouse opened its season last Friday (28) with "Fanny," in for 10 days. Other entries by producer Vicky Crandall will include "The Great Waltz," next week; "Hit the Deck," July 15-20; "Carnival," July 22-Aug. 3; "Bells Are Ringing," Aug. 5-10; "The New Moon," Aug. 12-17, and "Gypsy," Aug. 19-31.

The resident company includes Norman Kelly, of the Met Opera; Sheila Piercey, lead soprano of the Canadian Opera Co. of Toronto, and Jack Dabdoub and Stanley Page. Chele Abel, daughter-in-law of legit actor Walter Abel, is the choreographer.

"A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" is figured to have earned around 150% profit thus far on its $300,000 investment. That's based on a May 25 net (after the deduction of a share of the profits to director George Abbott), of $404,053, plus estimated subsequent income.

The Harold Prince presentation, now in its 61st week at the Alvin Theatre, N. Y., is to be represented on the road later this season by two touring facsimiles, one for major city bookings and the other a bus-and-truck operation for split-week stands. Another company is scheduled to open in Las Vegas next January and there are productions slated for England and Australia.

The key city edition of the tuner, which will be presented by Martin Tahse with Prince getting credit as producer, is to be financed from profits earned by the Broadway original. The motorized version, which Henry Guettel will present by arrangement with Prince, is to be independently financed. Neither of the two touring ventures has set a lead for the role in which Zero Mostel stars on Broadway. There's a possibility, though, that Dick Shawn may play the part in Vegas. Jerry Lester, who's subbed for Mostel on Broadway, is being considered for the major city tour.

Of the profits earned thus far by the Main Stem entry, $315,000 has been distributed equally between the management and the backers. That represents a 52½% return to the latter on their investment. During the four weeks ending May 25, the operating profit on the musical, for which Burt Shevlove and Larry Gelbart wrote the book and Stephen Sondheim the music and lyrics, ranged from $7,984 on a $53,956 gross to $10,966 on a $58,879 take.

Anent the London production, which is to be presented by Prince, Tony Walton and Richard Pilbrow, of Theatre Projects Ltd., rehearsals are scheduled to begin Aug. 10 under Abbott's direction. The Tahse presentation of "Forum," also to be staged by Abbott, isn't slated to begin its trek until Dec. 16 when it's due to open at the Playhouse, Wilmington.

Aussie Theatre Group, With Increased Subsidy, May Expand Activities

Melbourne, July 2.

Having received increased grants from Federal and State governments, the Australian Elizabethan Theatre Trust is re-examining its drama policy. Robert Quentin has been appointed drama director, having resigned as director of the National Institute of Dramatic Art (co-sponsored by the Univ. of New South Wales and AETT), a potition he's held since its inception in 1959.

Quentin is co-director with Tom Brown of the Old Tote Theatre Co., which was formed earlier this year in Sydney and made a big impact with its first presentation, Chekhov's "The Cherry Orchard" staged by Quentin. Executive director of the AETT, Stefan Haag, says the organization will conduct its future drama activities on a regional basis.

The first step, he indicates, is to establish small professional groups in states where they do not exist, and to support and encourage the expansion of ones already in existence, such as the Old Tote in Sydney and the Union Theatre Repertory in Melbourne.

Haag believes more consideration must be given to audiences in terms of comfort and atmosphere, with facilities for dining before the performance, adequate foyer space and parking accommodation.

He thinks that all drama activity should stem from these community thetres, including interstate exchange visits and large scale production for special occasions, such as festivals.

Shows Abroad

Hughie and Others

London, June 19.

Fred Sadoff presentation (for F. E. S. Plays, Ltd.) of a two-act miscellany based on the works of Eugene O'Neill. Staged by Sadoff; decor, Loudon Sainthill. Stars Burgess Meredith, Nan Martin, Jack MacGowran; features, Stephen Moore, James Cullifford, Jack Stewart, Terry Bale, John Bay, Peter Gale. Opened June 18, '63, at the Duchess Theatre, London; $3.15 top.

This is an itsy-bitsy miscellany which strives to climb on to the the current bandwagon of "putting over" playwrights (Dylan Thomas, James Joyce, Oscar Wilde are recent examples). It does scant justice to Eugene O'Neill, however.

The show is on for a limited engagement and, in the circumstances, that's just as well. O'Neill's obsession with disillusionment is made clear but there are tedious slabs in between the occasional moments of sparkle.

Alfred Allan Lewis has compiled a ragbag, and it demands patience from the audience to await the occasional gems. Burgess Meredith acts as narrator in a somewhat apologetic manner, rather like a slightly crumpled cleric delivering obsequious obituary.

Three main items are laced with snippets from a variety O'Neill plays, including "Long Day's Journey Into Night," "Mourning Becomes Electra," "Strange Interlude," "Ah, Wilderness" and others. They were presented with appropriate reverence, but fail to offer a true appraisal of a tortured writer, though hardly profound, frequently had something to say worth chewing over. But the excerpts resemble a fabricated "Listener's Digest."

In the first half, the main item is "In The Zone," a piece of melodrama set in a submarine-infested sea in World War I. When a crew member plants suspicion about a shipmate, O'Neill shows how it can build up to persecution. It is a well enough acted cameo, but come the interval, there is little to persuade the audience that it is getting its moneysworth.

Later, things improve. Nan Martin offers an intense but rather strained performance of a monolog titled "Before Breakfast." As a slatternly housewife whose relentless tongue drives her husband to suicide, her task is not rewarding. She misses few tricks but the end is remorselessly predictable.

The one-act play which gives the evening its title and its main substance is worth awaiting, though it is overlong. It is also virtually a monolog, with Meredith as a lying, vain, unsuccessful layabout of a horseplayer, who has persuaded a hotel night clerk that he's a bigshot, but who's lost when the latter dies.

Meredith plays this incident for all it is worth, and perhaps a little more. Cocky, gabby, ludicrously obvious and at times pathetic, the character is skillfully built up, but it is Jack MacGowran, with little or nothing to say, makes the hotel clerk a vivid creation.

Overall, "Hughie" is a disappointing, spotty patchwork of an evening. Rich.

Alfie

London, June 21.

Mermaid Theatre Trust presentation of a two act comedy by Bill Naughton. Staged by Donald McWhinnie; decor, David Myerscaugh Jones. Stars John Neville. Features, Glenda Jackson, Gemma Jones, Marcia Ashton, Jerry Verno, Margaret Courtenay, George Waring. Opened June 21, '63 at the Mermaid Theatre, London. $2.45 top.

Alfie	John Neville
Siddie	Glenda Jackson
Gilda	Gemma Jones
Humphrey	David Battley
Young Alfie	Arthur Mallen
Guv'nor	Norman Wynne
Woman Doctor	Audine Leith
Harry Clamacraft	George Waring

Sharpey	David Battley
Mr. Smith	Norman Wynne
Ruby	Margaret Courtenay

If ever an actor has been handed a good, flashy, effective, memorable role it is John Neville with Alfie. It is a new cynical look at a slice of life by Bill Naughton, whose "All In Good Time" has transferred successfully to the Phoenix Theatre. "Alfie" started life as a radio play on the BBC's longhair Third Program. Despite the resourcefulness of director Donald McWhinnie it still doesn't emerge as a play in the true sense. Still as an actor's vehicle it provides Neville with a role that must make him envied around thesps' hangouts.

Usually associated with Shakespeare, Neville gives a vivid exciting contemporary performance as a sharp, amoral, selfish wise boy whose entire interest in life is divided between himself and dames. From curtain rise to the finale he is involved with a string of chicks and his technique with them is love 'em and leave 'em but don't get involved with 'em. Because that spells trouble, man. When the audience is not watching his amorous shenagling he is lecturing them on his casanova methods, his philosophy about women, and his skill at spotting the time for taking to the escape route. This has much of the tang of a ripe vaude act. It is occasionally repetitious especially in its seasoning of variations on the word "bleeding," but it has a sharp wit and some dubiously moral but outrageously funny cracks and observation. Neville's performance is remarkable. He makes the heel believable, funny, often likeable and sometimes pathetic as the viewer sees him trying to convince himself that he is not worthless.

If play moves to West End, author could probably consider a building up of certain characters. Among this spirited cast Gemma Jones, Alan Townsend, Jerry Verno, Marcia Ashton, Norman Wynne, Audine Leith and George Waring particularly rate honorable laurels for their support of the star.

Wynne gives an icily sinister portrayal of a calculating abortionist. Miss Jones is touching as one of Neville's birds. Miss Ashton gives depth to another of his victims, who is forced to turn to the abortionist, Verno dominates the stage in one brief sequence as a hospital visitor and Miss Leith shares a great situation with Neville when, as a lady doctor, she examines his lungs for tuberculosis while he, thermometer in mouth, gives the audience the spiel about her. But it is Neville's evening.

A racy, offbeat show which, with al its many faults, is completely disarming in its exaction of both risibility and more sensitive emotions. Decor is economical, sparse and effective. Rich.

Six Characters in Search of an Author

London, June 18.

Edward J. & Harry Lee Danziger revival of a drama in three acts, by Luigi Pirandello, adapted by Paul Mayer. Staged by William Ball; decor, George Beech and Patrick Burke. Stars Ralph Richardson; features Barbra Jefford, Megs Jenkins, Michael O'Sullivan, Michael Johnson, Ellen Pollock. Opened June 17, '63, at the May Fair Theatre, London; $3.55 top.

A new theatre nowadays is significant, and one in a fashionable hotel is unique for London. The enterprising Danziger brothers have built an elegant and well equipped 300-seater within the May Fair Hotel, and have got off to a rousing start with their presentation of "Six Characters in Search of an Author." It deserves to be a success.

William Ball, who staged the off-Broadway version of Pirandello's powerful drama current at the Martinique Theatre, N.Y., was brought over by the Danzigers to stage their production, and he has done a magnificent job. This complicated piece of theatre has been handled with skill, and evident authority.

Obviously determined to make an impressive splash with the opening show, the management has recruited a front-ranking cast headed by Ralph Richardson and including several distinguished artists, notwithstanding the restricted potenial gross of their theatre.

Pirandello's classic debate on the subject of illusion and reality is mainly dominated by just a few of the characters — those sad, mournful, tormented members of a family whose unfinished story is re-enacted on stage. Though there is commendable teamwork, Ralph Richardson inevitably towers above the others with a rich and moving performance as the grief-stricken father who had encouraged his wife to join her lover and who patronized his stepdaughter in a brothel.

Barbara Jefford's forceful performance as the embittered stepdaughter is another of the acting highlights, while Megs Jenkins plays the pathetic mother appropriately in subdued style. There is a telling cameo by Ellen Pollock as the brotel-keeper, a vigorous study by Michael Johnson as Richardson's son, and a lively if over-enthusiastic performance by Michael O'Sullivan as the director whose rehearsals are interrupted by the "six characters."

The production requires the minimum of decor—just a few odd bits of furniture to decorate an otherwise bare stage. The stark effect thus achieved is complementary to the mood of the play. Incidentally, this excellent new version by Paul Mayer is the same as that off-Broadway. Myro.

Kelly's Eye

London, June 20.

English Stage Co. & Michael Codron presentation of a drama in two acts, by Henry Livings. Staged by David Scase; decor, Alan Tagg. Stars Sarah Miles, Nicol Williamson. Opened June 12, '63, at the Royal Court theatre, London; $2.95 top.

Eyeless Man	Arthur Lowe
Anna Brierly	Sarah Miles
Her Young Man	Clive Graham
Kelly	Nicol Williamson
Margaret	Rowena Gregory
Martin	Barry Jackson
Other Man	Roger Kemp
Mr. Brierly	Richard Vernon
Mrs. Chorley	Barbara New
Ivan Kane	Richard Carpenter

One of the most promising of Britain's new young playwrights, Henry Livings, has previously revealed absorbing style, shrewd sense of characterization and distinctive flair for comedy. However, none of these elements is evident in his latest play, and the result is a disappointment. "Kelly's Eye" does not appear to have much hopes of making a successful transfer to the West End.

The story has an interesting though hardly credible basic situation, involving an attractive 21-year-old girl from a wealthy family who encounters a beachcomber living in a tent on the shore, and it turns out that he is a fugitive murderer, but they move to a seaside rooming house, where there is an inquisitive landlady, a blind boarder with acute hearing, and a curious newspaperman. The ending is crudely melodramatic.

The attempted allegory doesn't come off, and apparently isn't the author's true metier. One scene involving two men and a prostitute has little connection with the chief theme.

David Scase, directing his first play in London after several years in the provinces, has a difficult assignment with such an untidy script. He has succeeded in obtaining creditable performances from Sarah Miles and Nicol Williamson as the two principals, but Barbara New is a caricature landlady, the girl's father is overplayed by Richard Vernon, and Richard Carpenter rarely convinces as the sleuthing newspaperman. Two serviceable sets have been designed by Alan Tagg. Myro.

Outside the Pale

Dublin, June 4.

Envoy Productions presentation of revue in two acts (28 sketches), by Fergus Linehan, Michael Bogdin, Ian Duff and Jim Harrington; music by Jim Harrington. Staged by Barry Cassin; settings, John Ryan; musical director, Thelma Ramsey. Opened May 28, '63, at Gate Theatre, Dublin; $1.17 top.

Cast: Milo O'Shea, Ann O'Dwyer, David Kelly, Rosaleen Linehan, Peter Mayock, Eamon Morrissey.

Fergus Linehann, a film critic, has a couple of modest musicals and revues to his credit and displays a development of his fairly brittle wit in "Outside the Pole." He has a better than 50% hit with his sketches, and although some of them are limited to local appeal, the average of potential exportable material is high. Punch lines are weak at times, but most of the pieces rock the audience.

Shubert Alley Shorts

"An Evening of Highlights," the current season opening at the Tappen Zee Playhouse, Nyack, N.Y., is being presented only at Bruce Becker's strawhat in the suburban village 20-odd miles up the Hudson River. It will not play any other stock engagements this season. Beatrice Lillie is starred in the show, with Reginald Gardiner in a major featured role. Plus several others in bit parts. It's a collection of mostly familiar Lillie and Gardiner material, with occasional funny moments on the strength of the two leading talent-personalities. Much of the "Evening" lacks real sparkle, however, perhaps because it's an old story to Miss Lillie and Gardiner, just as to the audience.

Incidentally, Helen Hayes, a local resident, did a non-speaking walk-on in one sketch opening night last Thursday (27), in the makeup she wore in the final scene of "Victoria Regina" (but with a short skirt). It was a repeat stunt of a bit she did for the opening night of the theatre's initial season, 1958. In that instance she played a comedy maid in "Midsummer," costarring James and Pamela Mason.

Philadelphia, July 2.

Ethelyn F. Thrasher presentation of drama in three acts (six scenes) by Arthur and Violet Ketels, based on the novel by C. P. Snow. Directed by George Keathley; settings, Curtiss Cowan; lighting, V. C. Fuqua; costumes, Christina Giannini. Stars Donald Madden, Lois Smith. Opened, June 24, '63, at the John B. Kelly Park Playhouse, Philadelphia. Top $3.50.

On a strictly summer theatre basis, "Time of Hope" is a meritorious try. Based on one of the earlier English novels in the C. P. Snow cycle, the work has been dramatized by Arthur and Violet Ketels, of the Temple University faculty.

The Snow series spans four decades in British life, beginning with 1914. "Time of Hope" is concerned largely with the early 1920s, when the young intellectuals met in Fabian groups and the English working classes were beginning to flex their muscles.

Lewis Eliot (Donald Madden) is the protagonist of the novels and the hero of the drama, a young man from the lower classes who sets out to become a barrister and, in addition to the enormous social barriers, saddles himself with one of these hopelessly frustrating romances, a la "Of Human Bondage."

An attempt is made to show the activities and motivations of the happy tavern group taking potshots at the Establishment; but young student early declares himself in favor of personal advancement rather than dedication to the class struggle.

It is no slight job to create the milieu of a novel for the stage, although the Ketels try it by bringing on various easily expendable actors. The atmosphere doesn't build however, and as a result, the bookish dialogue bristles with clinkers.

"Time of Hope" is a hearkening back theatrically. Love is all consuming, young people challenge society in the hope of remaking it, and the hero has ideals to turn to and the platitudes to resolve his amatory plight.

The forceful playing of Madden conveys the torment of the man, obsessed by success and a rich, neurotic two-timing woman, and unable to shake her out of his life. Lois Smith is outwardly persuasive as this headlong lady, who wanders off a week at a time to hang out in drab hotels and cheap saloons. But what particular worms are eating her is never made quite clear.

Through the effective playing of the leads, their give-and-take, hell bent for disaster affair surrogates whatever other purpose the play might have had in mind. The scene of England in its post-World War I intellectual and social ferment is lost.

George Keathley makes the most of the head-to-head romantic conflicts between the lawyer and his sick sweetheart, and also manages good contributive bit from Guy Spaull, Jane Rose, Tom Brannum, William Cottrell and Lynore Fern, among others. Gagh.

God Bless Our Bank

Zev Bufman-Stanley Seiden production starring Ann Sothern. By Mac Benoff. Director, Ezra Stone; scenery, John Raymond Freimann; costumes, Vilma and Bufman; lighting, John Detz. At Northland Playhouse, Detroit, opening June 25, '63.

Detroit, June 26.

It is almost impossible to believe that theatrical professionals would have anything to do with "God Bless Our Bank," let alone seriously state publicly that they are readying it for Broadway. Yet, the strange fact is that this new comedy by Mac Benoff is replete with stage vets and is being touted as prior-to-Broadway.

The show, which opened at the Northland Playhouse, a summer theatre housed in a plastic geodesic-shaped dome, stars Ann Sothern and is staged by Ezra Stone. Such other vets as Roland Winters, Jeff Corey, George Ives, Wallace Acton, Donald Marye, and George Cotton are involved.

It seems well-nigh impossible that these veteran performers could be made so ineffective as to appear as amateurish, but that's exactly the impression made by their completely predictable antics in "God Bless Our Bank." There is no question that the guilt lies almost entirely with the writer and the stager.

The plot revolves around a much-loved bank worker, Miss Sothern, who gives away $1,000,000 of the bank's money over a period of 20 years because she just wants to help out a small town's hard-pressed-for-cash citizenry. There are no surprises, very few laughs, and a lot of ridiculous nonsense in this one.

In its present form, "God Bless Our Bank" has no chance for Broadway, Hollywood or stock. It shouldn't be on tv either, but it probably will wind up there one day purely as filler material. God bless the Northland Playhouse patrons, most of whom sat through all three acts—probably as a courtesy to the much-loved Maisie, er, Miss Sothern. Tew.

'Camelot' 101½G, 'How To' $65,683, S.F.; 'Milk' $42,888, 'Take' $23,265 in Chi; 'Mary' $15,259, Det., and 13G, Philly

San Francisco was the busiest road city again last week with three musicals on tap, "Camelot," "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off." The only other town with more than one touring entry was Chicago, where "Milk and Honey" and "Take Her, She's Mine" are berthed.

Business continued big for such entries as "Camelot" and "Succeed," as well as "Carousel" in Los Angeles and "Sound of Music" in Washington. Receipts for the other shows ranged from skimpy to so-so with "Mary, Mary" in Detroit suffering a 50% drop in business.

Estimates for Last Week

Parenthetic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout, RS indicates road show and BT indicates bus-and-truck production. Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway grosses are net; i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

Stock: 'Jeanie' 93½G, St. L.; Burnett $77,568, Dallas; Ont. Bard Fest $47,894

"I Dream of Jeanie," a musical based on two weeks in the life of Stephen Foster with book by Myles Standish, drama and film critic of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, played to wow business in its preem last week at the Municipal Theatre, St. Louis. Attendance at the 12-000-seater (1,500 seats are given away free at each performance) for the tuner's seven-performance engagement hit 66,000.

Also in the powerhouse groove was the Carol Burnett-starrer "Calamity Jane" in the first week of a fortnight's stand at the State Fair Music Hall, Dallas. "Show Boat," with Robert Horton heading the cast, did well in the wind-up stanza of a two-week outing at the Starlight Theatre, Kansas City.

The Stratford (Ont.) Shakespearean Festival dropped to 71% capacity from 81% the previous week and the Bard repertory in Stratford, Conn., climbed to 63% of capacity from 60% the previous frame. The tryout of "Time of Hope" at the Playhouse in the Park, Philadelphia, didn't fare too well.

Estimates for This Week

Parenthetical designations for stock refer, respectively to top prices (where two prices are given the higher is for weekend evening performances and the lower for weeknights), number of seats, capacity gross and stars. Prices include 10% Federal tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway and the road, grosses are net, i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

B'way Shrinking to 14 Entries; 'Succeed,' 'Never' and 'Oliver' SRO; 'Woolf' 34G, 'Sky' $24,438, 'Tops' 13G

Broadway continued downhill last week with substantial drops registered by most shows. However, a pickup in business for "Oliver" put that musical back in the capacity groove with "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying" and "Never Too Late."

"Strange Interlude," which folded last Saturday night (29) along with "Photo Finish" and "Little Me," went out smartly with receipts for the stanza climbing $12,240 over the previous week's take. The loss of those three shows leaves 15 entries on the boards this week. The list will shrink to 14 with the closing next Saturday (6) of "Rattle of a Simple Man."

'Rothschilds' Libretto By Wolf Mankowitz

British writer Wolf Mankowitz will do the book for the musical version of Frederick Morton's nonfiction bestseller, "The Rothschilds." The tuner, for which a composer and lyricist are still to be set, is to be produced by Hillard Elkins who intends presenting it first in London, and then on Broadway. Present plans call for the West End preem next spring.

Elkins, who set the deal with Mankowitz during a month-long overseas visit, returned to New York Monday (1) from Vienna where he and Mankowitz met with Morton, who has a villa there. Mankowitz, incidentally, is due July 11 in Manhattan. The sets are to be provided by British designer Sean Kenny.

Pickwick Club, London, New Show Biz Feedery

London, July 2.

A new restaurant club for theatrical trade, with membership on an invitational basis, opens next Thursday (4) in the West End. It will be called the Pickwick Club, and the opening will coincide with the preem of the new British musical, "Pickwick," written by Wolf Mankowitz, Leslie Bricusse and Cyril Ornadel.

Harry Secombe, who plays the title role in the tuner, will be chairman of the governing committee, which will include Mankowitz, Bricusse, Sammy Davis, Jr., and Anthony Newley, with Desmond Cavanagh as club manager.

There will be no paid membership, and all invited to join will be enrolled as honorary members.

"Troilus and Cressida," a rarely-produced play from Shakespeare's catalog, seems to say that wars should be settled by two fighting contestants apart from the machinations of politicians. Anyway, the playwright had the idea some four centuries ago that something needed to be done about war which because of the inherent brutalities of man, fed by the faithless love of woman, go on.

"Troilus and Cressida" is the second play at Canada's Stratford Festival this season to be followed by "Timon of Athens"—debuting on July 29 in modern dress.—Say, that in its 11th year of production, directors are scraping the bottom of the Bard's barrel.

Staging of Michael Langham, and the design of Desmond Heeley in the dressing of the Trojans in golden uniforms and the Greeks in browns and greys, serves to keep the audience apprised of military forces—and is a good play.

Shakespeare wrote "Troilus and Cressida" immediately after "Hamlet," when he was 38. He seems preoccupied with the wanton lust of Cressida who, on her transfer to the Greek camp as an honorable prisoner of war, proceeds to share her favors with her captors and goes from man to man, forgetting her vows to Troilus.

Michael Langham has done a good staging job. McStay.

Comedy of Errors

Stratford, June 19.

Stratford Shakespearean Festival revival of comedy in two acts, by William Shakespeare. Staged by Jean Gascon; decor and costumes, Robert Prevost and Mark Negin; music, Gabriel Charpentier. Opened June 19, '63, at Festival Theatre, Stratford, Ont.; $5 top.

Musicians: Robert Comber, William Kuinka, Eli Kassner, Ronald Laurie.

In "The Comedy of Errors," one of Shakespeare's less successful plays, Jean Gascon comes from Montreal to stage. He has jazzed up the farce of mistaken identity with much added "business" that achieves speed and color at the cost of bewilderment. It leaves Shakespearean characters and situations unexplained.

Against the foregoing, however, blend of French direction and English language sprinkles piquant touches. Some of the 2,258-capacity audience at the Stratford (Ontario) Festival were in a state of hilarity unintelligible to others for whom "The Comedy of Errors" seemed a bore.

Contribution to the color and movement was a masquerade, part of fore and aft. A garrulous old man leads his group of disinterested listeners cross-stage intermittently as a running gag. There is also use of a clown quintet of stagehands, prop men and spectators.

"Comedy of Errors" deals with identical twin sons lost in a shipwreck. Each grows up unaware of the other's existence. Augmenting the confusion is that they have identical twin servants.

Playwright and director don't clear up the entanglements until the twins meet each other and the stripping abbess (Christine Bennett) reveals herself as the long-missing wife of the fast-taking merchant and mother of the two master twins. Confusion reigns until a family reunion and explanations are forthcoming. All of this, Gascon propels at breakneck speed.

Half masks and weird costuming add to the fantasy of the shenanigans, plus the pace of Gascon's staging. Some of the audience appreciated the French-Canadian's directing; others preferred the Shakespearean authenticity and did not feel that Gascon's image and tricks were funny enough to justify his liberties.

Antipholus of Syracuse and Antipholus of Ephesus are played by Peter Donat and James Douglas as the masters; the twin servants by Eric Christmas and Douglas Rain. All are excellent in their portrayal though the latter two have the low-comedy lines and slapstick antics.

William Needles is the wily Duke and Hugh Webster is the loquacious Dr. Pinch, with both fine. Kate Reid and her sister, Martha Henry, are the shrewish wife and the simpering target of affection; Tony van Bridge as the garrulous father. All do what they can with the roles, plus the swift direction of Gascon.

Designed by Robert Prevost and Mark Negin, with background music by Gabriel Charpentier commendable. But it is Gascon's frantic staging that draws the comment. McStay.

Off-B'way Review

The Living Premise

Theodore J. Flicker presentation. Staged by Theodore J. Flicker and Joan Darling; sets, David Moon. Opened June 13, '63, at the Premise, N. Y.; $3.90 top.

Cast: Calvin Ander, Godfrey Cambridge, Al Freeman Jr., Jo Ann Lecompte, Diana Sands.

America's most acute problem, racial discrimination, is spoofed and dissected with razor-sharp wit by the new integrated cast of the Premise. The sketches, purportedly improvised by the performers but set in advance, go directly to the heart of the matter, and most are comic. The evening is, therefore, entertaining as well as topical.

The subjects for satire—the vanities and prejudices of both races, the differing approaches of "liberals" and the Black Muslims, the bowing and scraping by eastern and western diplomats to members of the Afro-Asian bloc — are obvious, but the treatment is fresh and clever, and the show moves at a sprightly clip. There are a few attempts at on-the-spot improvisations, which didn't turn out very well at the performance previewed, but did not detract from the hilarious success of the rest of the evening.

The quintet of players, three colored and two white, is excellent. Diana Sands demonstrates a fine comic sense, and her portrayals of both "enlightened" Negroes and "mammy" types are delightful. Godfrey Cambridge is equally effective, dominating the skits in which he appears.

Filling out the cast are Calvin Ander, Jo Ann Lecompte, and Al Freeman Jr., all skillful actors and savvy comedians. With its new performers and fresh slant, the Premise should draw and please large audiences. Kenn.

Stock Theatre to Roll 5 Mos. Season Oct. 2 in V'couver; Sets 126G Budget

Vancouver, July 2.

A professional stock theatre has been launched in Vancouver. It has booked the 647-seat Queen Elizabeth Playhouse for the months of October-November this year and January to March in '64. It thus ducks Christmas. Called The Playhouse Theatre Company, the new legit organization has set a budget of $126,136 to cover the cost of staging the six productions named for the debut season, ranging from classical drama to musical comedy.

First Canadian production of Brendan Behan's "The Hostage" will open Oct. 2, directed by John Hirsch of the Manitoba Theatre Centre. Second play will be Noel Coward's "Private Lives", opening Oct. 31 and "The Boy Friend", British musical of the '20s, is scheduled for Nov. 14 to round out the '63 half of the season.

In January comes Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar", chosen to mark the 400th anniversary of the bard's birth, and directed by Mavor Moore of Toronto's Crest Theatre. This will be followed by Harold Pinter's avant-garde play, "The Caretaker" and the final production of the season will be an up-dated version of the classic farce, 'Charley's Aunt", with closing date set for March 21, 1964.

Contracted to date from local Equity ranks, all with experience in and outside Canada, include Rae Brown, Lillian Carlson, Bob Clothier, John Sparks and Ted Stidder. Negotiations are also continuing for directors in addition to Hirsch and Moore, part of an exchange plan with other Canadian legit groups.

Management committee for the new company is headed by Arnold Edinborough, currently chairing a journalism seminar at the University of British Columbia. Other members are vice-president Robert Philips, secretary Hamish Cameron and artistic liason, Joy Coghill. Directors also include past president Alec Walton and Hugh Palmer, director of tv for the CBC in Vancouver and representing the Community Arts Council. Michael Johnston has been appointed full time producer-manager of the rep company.

In lieu of a financial grant, Vancouver city council has given the company free rental of the civic-owned Playhouse, equivalent to $15,000 for the inaugural season. A token grant has been received from the Canada Council and more substantial assistance is expected later this year. Box office revenue of some $85,000 is anticipated, based on 40% estimate of capacity scaled at $3.50 and $2, and balance of the $25,000 deficit against budgeted production costs is to be raised from private citizen and business firm donations. Donors of $1,000 or more will be called Founders of the Green Room and this method of financing has produced $8,550 to date.

FORM THEATRE GROUP FOR ROME REPERTORY

Rome, July 2.

A new theatre company has been formed by Luchino Visconti, Paolo Stoppa, Rina Morelli, Giorgio DeLullo, Rossella Falk and Romolo Valli. It will probably be called The Rome Free Theatre Group and will combine two of the most successful Italian legit companies, the Campagnia dei Giovani and the Morelli-Stoppa. It will open Dec. 15 with Shakespeare's "Troylus and Cressida."

Both the theatre in which company will perform, Rome's Quirino, and legit impresario Carlo Alberto Cappelli will share production authority. Directors will be Visconti, DeLullo and Jerome Kilty, who will stage his version of dramatization of Thornton Wilder's novel, "Ides of March after its English language debut in London with Laurence Olivier as star.

Others authors to be performed are Feydeau, Pirandello, Sartre and Anouilh. The company will appear in Rome through April 15, then go to Milan and later return to Rome with a new repertory.

Greta Markson is appearing this week at the Avondale Summer Theatre, Indianapolis, opposite George Montgomery in "A Hole In The Head." She does "A Shot in the Dark" next week.

Twin Cities Groups To Combine for 'Threepenny'

St. Paul, July 2.

Theatre St. Paul, a local little theatre group, and a Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra segment, including conductor Stainslaw Skrowaczewski, will combine to present five performances of "The Threepenny Opera" next October at the Tyrone Guthrie Theatre, Minneapolis. In the pit will be 10 Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra musicians, with Skrowaczewski conducting.

The event will be one of Theatre St. Paul's seven subscription offerings next season. It's also included in the orchestra's Sunday afternoon subscription season's 10 presentations.

The Guthrie repertory company's season extend only for 20 weeks from May into September, leaving the Minneapolis house available for other shows in the fall and winter.

In Australian Musicals: Bronhill Reprises 'Widow,' Lamond Into 'Wildcat'

Melbourne, July 2.

Soprano June Bronhill is to return to the stage in August when once again she will play the lead in "The Merry Widow," presented by Garnet H. Carroll at the Tivoli here. Miss Bronhill made impact four years ago when she returned to play the "Widow" with the Sadler's Wells Opera Co. Thereafter she was at Sadler's Wells as lead in "Sound of Music" at a reputed $1,125 a week. She left the cast early this year to have a baby.

With productions currently running in Australia of "Sound of Music," "King and I" and "Orpheus in the Underworld." Carroll is soon to launch the Lucille Ball musical, "Wildcat," at the Princess here. In Miss Ball's role will be local video comedienne Toni Lamond and playing male lead is Gordon Boyd, brought from England. Playing "Janie" will be Canadian-born Norah Halliday. Staging will be in the hands of the American Milton Lyon.

Mpls. Musicians Union Pickets Little Theatre

Minneapolis, July 2.

The refusal of the local suburban St. Louis Park Community Theatre to employ two of the Minneapolis Musicians Union members to play the piano for the musical accompaniment of "Little Mary Sunshine," led to picketing of the showhouse at the recent opening performance. Instead of an orchestra, the little theatre group used two non-union piano players to furnish the accompaniments.

The union claimed that because the theatre charges admission, it is not a non-profit venture entitling it to use two non-union pianists. The union had offered to furnish two of its members at less than the regular $30 a night scale for each, according to James Greco, local vice-president.

The theatre group's president, Al Anderson, insisted the Community showhouse is non-profit and therefore the union lacks jurisdiction. He said revenue from its stage offering go into building funds "and we can't lay our hands on them."

Scot Troupe Into Tent After Theatre Burns

Dundee, Scotland, July 2.

The Dundee Repertory Theatre will go under canvas in a city park following the recent fire which destroyed its theatre. The company will use a 200-seat showtent in the local Camperdown Park.

Switch to canvas will be made this week, at the expiration of a month's lease of the city's Palace Theatre, a vaudery, which was obtained as emergency accommodation when the Repertory Theatre was burned out. The chairman, G. E. Geddes, says the experiment will continue for four or five weeks, or more. "Whatever the long-term solution, our theatre will continue in the meantime," he promises.

3 Couples & Bachelor

Williamstown, Mass., July 2.

An oddity of the Williamstown, Mass., Summer Theatre resident Equity company this season is that it's composed of three married couples and one bachelor, Equity group consists of Joyce & Michael Ebert, Carolyn Coates & James Noble; Olympia Dukakis & Louis Zorich. The lone unmarried is William Hansen, who appeared at the theatre last year in "The Sea Gull."

Williamstown will have eight-week span.

Seattle Rep to Offer 'Lear,' 'Firebugs,' 'Heroes,' 'Burning' and 'Sea Gull'

Seattle, July 2.

The Seattle Repertory Theatre, being organized by Stuart Vaughn for the Center Playhouse, will begin a 30-week season Nov. 13 with "King Lear." Vaughn, formerly director at the Phoenix Theatre, N.Y., has been here since May 1.

The repertory group will use the 800-seat Playhouse at the Seattle Center. A sales campaign for series tickets will begin some time this summer.

Following "Lear" the company will present Max Frisch's "The Firebugs," Christopher Fry's "The Lady's Not for Burning," Anton Chekhov's "The Sea Gull" and Robert Ardrey's "Shadow of Heroes." Vaughn will direct the Shakespeare, Fry and Ardrey productions and assoictae director Andre Gregory will stage the Frisch and Chekhov plays.

The plays will be scheduled to open at intervals of five weeks or longer, with "Shadow of Heroes" due for next March. The productions will continue in rotating schedule for the 30-week season.

The theatre will be an Equity house, probably pay over union scale. Most of the key members of the company of 15 have been selected, but contracts haven't been signed. The one definite player is Helen Quarrier, Mrs. Vaughn.

"We are selecting the company not for glamor but for their skill and their capacity for becoming permanent members of a repertory group," Vaughn says. "Also, they are invited here to become permanent citizens of Seattle, not just members of a theatre troupe."

The actors, plus Gregory and technicians, are due here the first week in September. Other performers to be hired on a non-professional basis and, particularly for "Lear" and "Shadow of Heroes," will be auditioined locally.

William S. Taylor is business manager of the new company. Ticket prices have not been set yet, but Vaughn hopes to sell around 25,000 series tickets and figures on a sliding scale of $3.50 to $1.50. Some improvements and additions are planned for the Playhouse, notably in the sound system, scenery shop and backstage.

To Star Video Fugitives At Traverse City, Mich.

Television names dominate the list of headliners scheduled to appear this summer at the Cherry County Playhouse, Traverse City, Mich. From "The 11th Hour" video series there'll be ack Ging and Wendell Corey. The former is slated to play his only strawhat engagement of the season at the spot in "King of Hearts" the week of July 16. Corey, his daughter, Robin, and other members of his family are to appear at the Playhouse the week of Aug. 6 in an undesignated offering.

Marjorie Lord, tele wife of Danny Thomas, opened the season last night (2) in "Blithe Spirit." Bernard Grant, of the daytime tele series, "Guiding Light," will star at the house next week in "Critic's Choice." MacDonald Carey will star the week of July 23 in "Oh Men, Oh Women," Charles Ruggles is to headline the week of July 30 in "Not in the Book" and Anthony George, of tv's "Checkmate" series, will top the cast the week of Aug. 13 in "Come Blow Your Horn."

"No Bed of Roses," a musical version of "The Fourposter," costarring Walter Cassell and Gail Manners, is to be a late August entry. Ruth Bailey is producer at the Playhouse where the shows are presented on a Tuesday-Sunday schedule.

Big Biz Fans Hopes of Mpls.' Guthrie Theatre to Hit Black in 1st Season

Minneapolis, July 2.

Results so far lead the operators of the local new $2,200,000 1,427-seat non-profit Tyrone Guthrie repertory theatre to believe that its first season of 20 weeks will wind up in the black. This is despite the fact that through June 19 it was a trifle behind, according to figures released to the press.

The initial season started May 7 and extends through Sept. 22. At the rate of eight a week, five nights and three matinees, total performances will be 160 for the four plays—the classic "Hamlet," "The Miser" and "The Three Sisters" plus "Death of a Salesman" yet to come.

At $5 top the theatre since the May 7 opening and through June 19 has played to 56,147 ticket buyers in the first six weeks. This represents 80.5% of capacity and an approximate slightly more than $30,000 a stanza gross for a $183,809.20 total.

With 14 weeks still in the offing along with "Death of a Salesman," expected to be the season's best boxoffice bet, there have been purchased, including the advance sale, 115,123 tickets out of a 228,320 potential. And the aggregate boxoffice take, up to and including June 19, was $419,614.40.

In order just to break even on the initial 20-week season, the total gross will have to be $66,000—an average of some $33,000 a week. Two-thirds of that has been attained, the press was informed.

It has been pointed out that the theatre is being operated as economically as possible. Sir Tyrone's annual salary is $16,000—"and how much do you think he could be making on Broadway?" asks Barton Emmet, the theatre's assistant administrative director. The theatre's top actor scale is $400 a week for which such prominent performers as Hume Cronyn, Jessica Tandy, George Grizzard and Rita Gam, etc., toil.

"I'll wager that Cronyn earned more in three weeks during the filming of the film 'Cleopatra' than he'll make with the Guthrie Theatre the entire season," opines Emmet.

The theatre has been enjoying much transient trade, with mail orders coming from as far east as England and as far west as Hawaii, according to Emmet.

'Show Boat' Bows Season Of Saratoga Musicals

Saratoga, N.Y., July 2.

The Spa Music Theatre opened last week for its second season here under the producer management of Ray Rizzo, with "Show Boat" featuring Howard Hartman. Subsequent shows will be "Paint Your Wagon," "Kiss Me, Kate," "Desert Song," "Finian's Rainbow," "The King and I," "The Red Mill," "The Threepenny Opera," "South Pacific" and "The Fantasticks."

The New York State-owned, air-conditioned, 580-seat house on the Saratoga Reservation, features a resident company, under the direction of Phil Osterman. Music Director is Lew Hooper.

Acad of Dramatic Arts To Madison Ave. Centre; Has Two 200-Seat Auds

American Academy of Dramatic Arts will move from its westside berth in the ANTA Playhouse, N.Y., to a six-story eastside structure on Madison Avenue which it purchased for around $500,000. The academy's new headquarters will be in the building erected in 1906 as the home of the Colony Club and which, more recently, was the site of the Seven Arts Center.

At the eastside location there are two theatres, each seating 200; workshops, rehearsal, dance and sound studios, numerous classrooms and administrative offices.

Evie Hayes Hokes It Up As Melbourne Mata Hari

Melbourne, July 2.

After three years of presenting audience-participation melodramas in a basement coffee-lounge atmosphere at the Bowl Music Hall here, George Miller is offering a musical version of "Mata Hari," subtitled "The Flame of Istanbul," the work of pianist A. Vincent Jones.

The show has little story, but corney comedy and a broad interpretation of the title role by American musical comedy actress Evie Hayes using a Mae West approach. The show runs 10 minutes short of two hours, with two long intervals, and the second half is almost entirely taken up by Miss Hayes, draped in long black tresses, leading group singing of World War I ballads.

The show has drawn rave notices from local critics, and should run almost indefinitely. Miss Hayes and her husband, American comedian Will Mahoney, have settled in Melbourne but this is the comedienne's first stage stint for several years. She has concentrated on television in the interim.

Vancouver Opens Tuner Season With 'Sunshine'

Vancouver, July 2.

Vancouver's Theatre Under the Stars opened its 25th season last night (Mon.) for a six-week schedule of musicomedy productions. The opener, "Little Mary Sunshine," plays through July 13 with Roma Hearn and Dean Regan as leads.

"Carousel" is next, July 15-27, with Lloyd Hanna, Yvonne O'Sullivan and Karl Norman. The season finale will be "Gypsy," July 29-Aug. 10, with Helena Bliss, Roseanne Hopkins, Ginger Harrison, Wally Marsh, Miss Hearn and Regan.

The outdoor Malkin Bowl in Vancouver's Stanley Park is the setting for civic-sponsored Theatre Under the Stars, with a subsidy from Carling Breweries.

Meader In 'Trap'

Skowhegan, Me., July 2.

The Lakewood Theatre will present Vaughn Meader here in "The Tender Trap" for a week opening Aug. 26. The disk impersonator was signed when Groucho Marx cancelled because of illness.

This will be Meader's only summer stock appearance. He's a native of Waterville, a city 40 miles away.

CINCY EXPECTS MORE TG-ATS SHOWS IN '63-'64

Cincinnati, July 2.

More roadshows are expected to play Cincy next season. Greater interest in the live theatre is triggered by two new groups of supporters, with the renewal of Theatre Guild-American Theatre Society subscribers already close to last year's 3,000 mark and a possibility of 3,000 new members. The total may exceed last season's by 1,300, says Kay Fipp, local Guild secretary.

Bill Blum, resident manager for the Shuberts, is figuring on 12 Broadway shows playing Cincy, with present assurance for eight in the Guild series, five already set. "Black Nativity" is booked for the week of Sept. 30 at the Shubert. An earlier tentative bocking is for "No Strings" at the larger Taft.

Guild shows scheduled are "A Man for All Seasons," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Wolf?" "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," "Camelot" and "Stop The World—I Want To Get Off." Possible additions are "Beyond the Fringe" and "A Thousand Clowns."

Fancy-Titled Strawhat To Bow in Windsor, Ont.

Windsor, Ont., July 2.

A strawhat operation, billed as the Windsor International Theatre Festival, opens next Saturday (6) in the 1,200-seat pro company of 21 actors, Cleary Auditorium here.

Co-producers Wayne Martens and Jonathan Knopf plan eight shows, including "View from the Bridge" and "Touch of the Poet," with Mark Schoenberg as resident director.

3 Actresses to Reopen Pike Theatre, in Dublin

Dublin, July 2.

The Pike Theatre, one of Dublin's most successful intimate houses, is to be reopened by Rosemary Crownson, Veronica Power and Deirdre McCartan. The three actresses have formed Roamar Productions to a double bill, "A Phoenix Too Frequent" and "The Zoo Story," as the opener.

The Pike shuttered after founder Alan Simpson became committed in production work in England. It was reopened by the Dublin Stage Co. last fall, but flopped.

Bill Skinner, a television producer, will direct "A Phoenix Too Frequent" and a young American recently in from Houston, Kelly Fitzpatrick, will stage "The Zoo Story."

Legit Followup

Virtue in Danger
(STRAND, LONDON)

London, June 5.

The Mermaid Theatre's phenomenal run continues with the transfer of "Virtue in Danger" to the Strand Theatre, making four Mermaid originations current in the West End, all hits. This latest should maintain the theatre's remarkable bating average.

With only a few minor cast changes, this musical version of Vanburgh's "The Relapse" makes the transition smoothly, and Wendy Toye's nimble and fluent direction keeps the big cast under control. Paul Dehn's book and lyrics are bright and witty, and James Bernard's score ideally matches the subject. The current presentation is under the management of Tennent Productions and the Mermaid Theatre Trust.

The principals of the original Mermaid presentation repeat their roles with assurance. John Moffat's Lord Foppington is a richly observed performance, and Barry Ingham plays his scheming and impecunious brother suavely. Leading the femme roster are Patricia Routledge as a widow with an eye on her best friend's husband, Patsy Byrne as the lady happily tricked into marrying Foppington's brother, and Jane Wenham, as a faithful wife who appeals to the fashionable men around the town.

There is a refreshing gaiety about the whole production, which should reap its reward ot the box-office. Myro.

Phoenix's 5 Dailies

One retread and two new dailies are skedded to start publishing in Phoenix. Combined with the firmly entrenched Arizona Republic and Phoenix Gazette this will bring a total of five newspapers to service this 810,000 populated valley.

Robert Morrison, publisher of the beleagered Arizona Journal, pegs Aug. 21 as the launching date to resume publishing the shuttered a.m. sheet. The paper was padlocked last February by a Federal withholding tax beef. Evan Meacham, local auto distributor and Mormon lay leader, will start his offset presses rolling Sept. 1 with a 60,000 circulation sendoff for his Evening American.

The third entry in this sweepstake is Hank Greenspun, publisher of the Las Vegas Sun, who has purchased the weekly Phoenix Sun and proposes to convert it into a daily with the cold-type process. His debut date is also Sept. 1 with a 50,00 run. An interesting circulation dogfight is predicted.

Ben Ames Williams' Works

The widow of novelist Ben Ames Williams has given an extensive collection of the author's writings and reference sources to Colby College in Waterville, Me.

The gift was described by Prof. Richard Cary, curator of rare books, as "invaluable in understanding Williams' working process and the development of his work from the earliest tentative stages."

Williams, a native of Mississippi and longtime resident of Boston, spent many summers at Searsmont, Me., where his widow still vacations, and the area was the scene of many of his stories.

Mrs. Thomas, Dunne & Ustinov

Caitlin Thomas, widow of Dylan Thomas, calls her first autobiographical stint, "Not Quite Posthumous". It has to do with uninhibited and humorous advice to her coming-of-age daughter. Atlantic Monthly Press will publish in November.

Same pub is bringing out Philip Dunne's "Mr. Dooley Remembers," some informal memoirs of his father, the late Finley Peter Dunne.

Also via Atlantic is the just published "Photo Finish," Peter Ustinov's play.

David Ewen's 3 Music Books

After living in or near New York for the past 50 years, David Ewen, musicologist and biographer, is transferring his permanent home to the Bal Harbour section of Miami, Florida, on July 1.

Ewen has just signed contracts for three books. A young people's biography of Cole Porter will be published by Holt, Rinehart & Winston in 1964; a history of Tin Pan Alley by Funk & Wagnalls in 1965; and an "Encyclopedia of American Popular Songs" by Random House in 1966.

Jim Bishop Sez Tain't So

Columnist-author Jim Bishop denies that his upcoming Harpers' novel, "Honeymoon Diary," is based on his own marriage, although the plot revolves around a novelist whose new bride is 20 years his junior. This is analogous to the real-life Kelly and Jim Bishop. Both took a round-the-world tour for "authentic background" for this book of fiction, which is also about a globetrotting writer and hif wife.

Harpers also has Cleveland Amory's "Celebrity Register" on its fall list (in collaboration with Earl Blackwell) and Bernard Taper's biog of (George) "Balanchine." Hamilton Fish Armstrong, editor of Foreign Affaira, has authored "Those Days," also for Harpers, and also a personal memoir.

Esquire Inc. reports increased sales and earnings for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1963, with revenues totalling $30,280,160, a gain of 7% over the previous year.

Before taxes, income was up 51% to $634,086 from $419,640 before a special charge involved in the folding of Coronet mag.

Net income was $319,986 for 57c a share on 559,531 shares of capital stock outstanding March 31. This compared with a net loss the year before of $431,175, or 78c a share after the special charge of $850,815 covering the operating losses and costs of Coronet's el foldo.

Report to stockholders states that Esquire this year has reached an all-time circulation high, averaging more than 880,000 copies a month. Advertising bookings are up 8%, the report says, with the regional editions up 20% in ads.

Outside the Pale

amateur drama group's presentation of what could have been "Oklahoma," involving the whole of the small but smart company. In the solo spots Rosaleen Linehan's drum majorette comedy piece on the upcoming visit of JFK gets the house to a happy level and the American tourists in the audience in the mood for the rest of the piece, even when they don't understand the accents.

A tourist skit, always a revue winner here, is better-than-average and has point. The political skits are barbed enough, but local even if they have their counterparts elsewhere.

Milo O'Shea is a first class revue artist with a fine comic sense, and his wide-eyed style is a winner. David Kelly has a dead-pan approach which contrasts well. Both the women in the cast have the revue technique and good light voices, Ann O'Dwyer being the better with ballads and Rosaleen Linehan hits the comedy spots the hardest.

The other two players, Peter Mayock and Eamon Morrissey have the adaptability to cooperate in a small company show of this type. Linehan and his company haven't found much that is new to lampon, but they have a collection of fair targets and make a good score.

Where Do We Go From Here?

Melbourne, June 15.

St. Martin's Theatre Co. presentation of revue, devised and staged by Jon Finlayson, with music by Arthur Young. Features Lesley Baker, Bunney Brooke, Brian Crossley, Robin Farquhar, Phil Lanham, David Spurling. Settings, Paul Kathner; at the pianos: Arthur Young and Nehama Patkin (or Reg Cantwell); percussion, Graham Morgan. Opened June 14, '63, at the St. Martin's Theatre, Melbourne; $1.40 top.

The St. Martin's Theatre Co. seldom ventures into the field of intimate revue and when it does the standard is usually high. The current show reaches rock bottom, however, without a single good item among the 42 listed on the program opening night (some were seemingly missing the second night).

About a quarter of the numbers are capsule fillers usually used front of the curtain to mask quick scene changes. Not one number has a powerful tag line. The cast can do little with such poor material, although it is legit actress Bunney Brooke's first excusion into the realm of intimate revue. Phil Lanham, Lesley Baker and Robin Farquhar all appear promising, but only Brian Crossley is able to point lines in true intimate revue manner.

The music is pleasing and the costuming and settings okay, but the production generally is poor, particularly in the execution of lighting effects.

WELLS RICHARDSON

Oh for 'a Daniel Come To Judgment!' When will the ability to deliver the Shakespearean line with its full beauty, insight and power be considered sufficient reason to engage an experienced actor who is so unfortunate as to lack the right local connections?

One wearies of reading critics' frequent (and justified) complaints about faulty speech and mediocre performances when what is so obviously needed is "a Muse of Fire."

By rights Wells Richardson ought to be commuting between Stratford and Central Park!

A Midsummer Night's Dream

London, June 14.

Royal Shakespeare Theatre revival of comedy in two acts, by William Shakespeare. Staged by Peter Hall, assisted by Frank Evans; decor, Lila de Nobili and Henry Bardon; costumes, Lila de Nobili; music, Raymond Leppart; lighting, John Bradley; dances, Pauline Grant; Royal Shakespeare Wind Band, directed by Guy Woolfenden; London music director, David Taylor. Features Tony Steedman, Rosemary Frankau, Ann Beach, Brian Murray, Barry MacGregor, Diana Sigg, Paul Hardwick, Newton Blick, Ian Richardson, Juliet Mills. Opened June 13, '63, at the Aldwych Theatre, London; $3.36 top.

Largely due to Peter Hall's bright, gay and inventive direction, this revival of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" seems a natural to be a hit in the Aldwych Theatre's summer schedule. This version was first staged at Stratford-on-Avon in 1959, and returned there last year. Its revival in London adds a lustre to a somewhat sombre season.

A staunch favorite with London theatregoers, "Dream" cries out for imaginative staging, and Hall has not only pulled out every ace in the pack, but added a few extra professional tricks. He makes excellent use of the large Aldwych stage, and his scene changes from the Duke's castle to the forest avoid any letup in the action.

A team of accomplished performers respond to the director's mood, helping to sustain the lighthearted atmosphere. The four lovers are admirably played by Ann Beach, Brian Murray, Barry MacGregor and Diana Rigg. Paul Hardwick is a richly comic Bottom. Juliet Mills, a newcomer to the company, makes a sparkling Titania, with Ian Holm an impish Puck and Ian Richardson a lively Oberon.

Newton Blick is notable in his every scene, John Nettleton makes an admirable Snug, and Tony Steedman and Rosemary Frankau register in the limited roles of the Duke and his bride.

Hall's gift of comic invention comes into its own in the staging of the play within a play, the presentation of Pyramus and Thisbee. The scene is immaculately timed and loaded with bits of business to ensure the additional laughs. Full credit is also due the set and costume designers.

And the Big Men Fly

Melbourne, June 13.

Union Theatre Repertory Co., in association with the Australian Elizabethan Theatre Trust, presentation of a comedy in three acts, by Alan Hopgood. Staged by John Sumner; settings, Anne Fraser. Opened June 12, '63, at the Russell Street Theatre, Melbourne; $2.25 top.

J. J. Forbes	Alan Hopgood
Wally Sloss	Paul Karo
Achilles Jones	Dennis Miller
Lil	Elspeth Ballantyne
Commentator	Simon Chilvers
Wobbly Coates	Paul Eddey
Les Williams	Leslie Wright
Television Employees	Jane Bertelsen, Brian Harold

Although the theme, a lampoon of Aussie soccer and radio and tv commentators, may not have mass appeal, "And the Big Men Fly" is on the whole, a well written comedy without let-down interludes. The plot involves a dimwit yokel who is recruited to play bigtime soccer, and the objects of the spoofing are sports promotors and the radio and tele spielers who cover the field. The soccer scenes are graphically and satirically described by the two commentators, and there is much kidding of commercial shows in the process.

The author in the first place has described his play as "a tall story about football" and as such it cannot be taken too realistically, although it never really reaches actual farce. There is plenty of humor, although some of the lines and situations are corny.

John Sumner's staging is excellent, and the cast is fine. Dennis Miller is believably funny as the primitive athlete, and author Alan Hopgood is hilarious as the manager. All the manager's office, tv studio and off-ground soccer scenes are done on an apron stage before a curtain depicting the players, while the rural scenes are performed behind the proscenium. Anne Fraser's settings are authentic.

Except for its subject matter, "And the Big Men Fly" would be a standout for entertainment anywhere, but even in Melbourne, it remains to be seen whether there exist enough sports followers to support the play, or if it has appeal for regular theatregoers.

To bolster his own standing in the community of small-time Bible-thumpers Finlay Bradford imports —in this plot—an American evangelist, an event upsetting to his honest but agnostic brother-in-law. Trouble follows before the cash-on-barrel-and-praise-the-Lord evangelist move on. Dramatist Sam Thompson's observation of character is shrewd, as proved this in his shipyard play "Over the Bridge." He's provided a credible but not great stage piece in his study of "The Evangelist." The Bible-thumpers and the hopeful sick are all present, even the apparent miracle, but the American evangelist is not a spellbinder.

His brainwork shows through and there is little enough in the character as written to rouse a congregation to transports of fanaticism. The playwright is showing the evangelist's "technique." Because of this Ray McAnally gives a precise performance without achieving a complete breakthrough to the audience or the stage congregation, despite the bridging of the gap through the proscenium arch to embrace the audience as part of the congregation.

Author himself plays the agnostic Manser Brown. While making no case for the agnostic attitude, he makes effective criticism of the hyprocrisy of the big pitch. A death does not resolve the problems raised in the play, but closes a chapter in the life of the evangelicals.

There is some first-rate work in the piece, notably in the lead roles played by McAnally, Sam Thompson and Geoffrey Golden, with good character interpretation of the housekeeper Bella (Catherine Gibson), the Tweedledum Tweedledee figures of the local pastors portrayed by Chris Curran and Michael Mara, and the shadowed figure of the hypocrite's wife in which Bee Duffell manifested the restraint of the woman until the appropriate explosion of revolt.

This is Tilton Edwards's first major stage production for some time and his staging is effective in its handling of crowds, groupings and the maintenance of movement without fussiness. Robert Heade's sets conform to the atmosphere of the neighborhood and the bible hall in both design and color.

The piece treats an unusual aspect of life in a northern Irish city, although its equivalent could be found in other countries. It looks set for a run and should have a chance overseas.

Ein Schoener Herbst
(A Beautiful Autumn)

Vienna, June 9.

Theatre in der Josepfstadt presentation of Franz Stoss production of a musical comedy, with music by Robert Stolz and book and lyrics by Hans Weigel, based on the comedy by Bruno Schuppler, "A Young Gentleman of 40." Staged by Edwin Zbonek; musical direction, Gustav Zelibor; scenery, Walter Hoesslin; costumes, Gerdago; lighting, Franz Pribil; technical supervision, Karl Dworsky. Stars Leopold Rudolf; features Carl Boss, Albert Rueprecht, Erich Nikowitz, Nina Sandt, Helly Servi, Elfriede Ott, Annie Rosar, Senta Berger. Opened May 8, '63, at the Theatre-in-der-Josefstadt, Vienna.

Franz V. Waidring	Leopold Rudolf
Alexander Gemmingen	Carl Bosse
Georg Rottenkirch	Albert Rueprecht
Josef	Erich Nikowitz
Sophie Gemmingen	Nina Sandt
Marianne Seybold	Helly Servi
Amelie Carron	Elfriede Ott
Anna Welsperg	Annie Rosar
Valerie Welsperg	Senta Berger

With all prognostics for a long run, Theatre in der Josefstadt has preemed as its contribution towards the Vienna Festivals the musical comedy "A Beautiful Autumn" by Robert Stolz and Hans Weigel. The show is based on the successful comedy by Bruno Schuppler, presented 1950 in the Vienna Burg Theatre, under the title "A Young Gentleman of 40."

The show, with a turn-of-the century Austria-Hungary locale, involves a middleaged playboy who is sad at the realization that his youth is past. His butler invites to the country home three of his employer's former sweethearts, hoping one will become his wife.

Helly Servi plays a serious, friendly type, Nina Sandt portrays a married, dissatisfied woman, and Elfriede Ott is funny as a Viennese who worked in Parisian musichalls. Annie Rosar gives a good performance in the small, but good part of an ambitious mother.

Albert Rueprecht enacts a handsome, helpless fiance who wins another lady. Senta Berger plays the seemingly winning femme, although the authors don't specifically say so.

Weigel has done an excellent job of adaptation, with witty lines that had audience laughing. His lyrics are also excellent. Robert Stolz has composed variety of songs in the atmosphere of the period. The title number, sung by Leopold Rudolf as the hero, has a haunting melody in three-quarter time, keeps the audience humming and has all chances of becoming an international hit. The same applies to the novelty number, sung by Miss Ott, "Love, l'Amour, Liebe."

Other outstanding tunes are a love song tango, sung by Miss Sandt and Rudolf, "Lesson in Love" sung by Miss Berger and Rudolf, and Miss Servi's song "What Has Been."

Edwin Zbonek has provided capable staging, while the scenery by Walter Hoesslin is charming, and the costumes by Gerdago are nostalgically in period.

This excellent, amusing intimate romantic musical should be a success whereever presented

Inside Stuff—Legit

British playwrights have struck a blow against racial discrimination in supporting the anti-Apartheid Movement of South Africa. Some 47 scribes out of 100 approached have instructed their agents to turn down offers for their plays to be performed in any theatre where the color bar is enforced. This, of course, can only affect future contracts.

Arthur Miller has joined forces with the British playwrights who include Shelagh Delaney, Daphne DuMaurier, Spike Milligan, John Osborne, Mary Hayley Bell, Samuel Beckett, C. P. Snow, Arnold Wesker, J. B. Priestley, Graham Greene, Alan Melville, Stephen King-Hall, Dodie Smith and Bernard Miles.

German playwright Roth Hochhuth, 31, has asked to change certain technical and dramatic aspects of his play "The Deputy" before its next German presentation. None of the strong language of the drama, which deals with Pope Pius XII's alleging inadequate aid for the Jews during the Nazi era, will be altered. The play is due in Frankfurt this fall. General manager Harry Buckwitz has okayed the revision. Michel Degen will play the lead here.

City Stage of Basel, Switzerland, has put the play on its fall schedule.

"Is the Pope Allowed to Remain Silent?" was the title of a television show over the West German network recently, in which several authorities discussed this hot topic, dealing with the aspects raised in the Hochhuth play.

Stan Seiden and Zev Bufman revealed cancellation of two advertisement in the N.Y. World-Telegram & Sun and the N.Y. Post for their current production of "Pajama Tops" at the Winter Garden Theatre.

Two ads, which ran once in papers and then were pulled by management and replaced with the regular schedule, involved show's featured Frances Fong and June Wilkinson. Ad on Miss Fong pictured the Chinese actress with phrase, "Is it true what they say about Chinese girls?" An asterisk at bottom stated, "Find out when you see 'Pajama Tops'." Copy on ad showing Miss Wilkinson stated, "June hangs out in the best places," with lower notation of class spots in which the actress has recently been seen.

Spokesman for the Guy Lombardo "Around The World In 80 Days," outdoor spec at the Jones Beach (Long Island) amphitheatre based on Mike Todd's smash film, chides the VARIETY reviewer for "seeing" 50 stars in the American flag when, consistent with the 1872 locale, the prop U.S. banner has only 37. Another captious note anent the supposedly "modern" babycarriage prop is refuted as being authentic and consistent with the period; the rubbertires, however, were a compromise because of the stage.

"HE IS ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST COMICS NOW; HE COULD BE, I'M CONVINCED, ITS GREATEST ACTOR!"

—Ralph J. Gleason
San Francisco Chronicle and Variety

"Shelley Berman, one of the real wits on the stage... his hilarious comments are comedy classics."

— Lloyd Johnson
SF Bay area syndication

"Berman is one of the greatest monologists of the day and his recent network television show, portraying a backstage comic, won him new fans." — Perry Phillips
Oakland Tribune

"Shelley has been a perfectionist ever since his earliest days as an actor in summer stock, where his fellow talents included Paul Newman, Betsy Palmer and Geraldine Page." — Walter Blum
S. F. Chronicle

"Shelley Berman, electrifying his audience with 54 minutes of pure talent... his material is devastatingly funny, but even more than that, we love his great skill as an actor." — Maggie Daly
Chicago American

"No matter what you think of Shelley Berman's recent television 'spectacular,' the guy is strictly a winner with night-life audiences."

— Charlie Dawn
Chicago American

"Shelley Berman drew a witty rapier and slew the dragon of his TV temper in his opener at the Fairmont's Venetian Room... Shelley was marvelously received... A classic." — Ivan Paul
San Francisco Examiner

"Despite four other major nitery openings on the same cold and rainy Monday eve, an ultra responsive crowd jammed Mister Kelly's and a holdout line waited in the downpour for the second show... Berman turned on a remarkable and unbeatable mixture of comedic expertise and likeable stage manner."

— Mor
Variety

"One of the nation's leading comedians... The spark was ours. The hard work that drew the laughs was Shelley Berman's."

— George J. Jaffe
Pageant Magazine

"He must be admired... Admired just as much as a carpenter that takes pride in his work, or a painter, or a sigger, a musician, or just about anybody who does his job really well... One of the most articulate in the business."

— Bob Foster
The Times Weekend

"He is an actor who turned to comedy... His rise to fame as a comedian has been meteoric."

— George Tashman

"Shelley Berman's triumph... at the Fairmont... a great night for Shelley, and a greater night for the laugh-hungry audience."

— S. F. Chronicle

"Shelley Berman returned to the Fairmont's Venetian Room... to ring the cash register and pull in the laughs, there is little doubt that he is a marvel with monologues."

— Edward R. Frisbie
San Francisco Examiner

"The hallmark of an enduring comedian... There don't seem to be too many of these personalities around these days, and so it was a delight to sit in on Shelley Berman's opening night."

— Don Miller
The Post (SF Bay area)

"One of the best in the business — Shelley Berman!"

— Paul Speegle
S. F. Chronicle

"There was a full house... The applause came before he started, during the show, and it was prolonged when the show was over."

— Glen Graham
Petaluma Argus-Courier

"Shelley unveils his new 'image'... this is bigger news than Brando! And it's a lot of fun... all beautifully delivered and perfectly timed."

— Will Leonard
Chicago Tribune

"Shelley Berman is a ring-a-ding-ding whether using his imaginary telephone in a night club or playing it straight in a drama."

— Irv Kupcinet

"Circle Arts Theatre in San Diego... Broadway-level production of 'Damn Yankees', starring Shelley Berman, a smash hit. Berman is the lure that gets them in, and his is the star quality that illuminates the whole."

— James Powers, Hollywood Reporter

"Berman makes everything work for him ('Damn Yankees') in an airtight performance blessed with a genuine comic spirit. He snares big laughs with the most prosaic of lines... A smash all the way, Berman's song-terp of 'Those Were the Good Old Days' adds up to an affectionate spoof of show biz types — Jolson, Richman, et al." — Variety

"Berman is a perfect choice to play the devil (in 'Damn Yankees')... training as an actor creates a character who is a lot like Berman but yet has qualities that are unique... reaches his peak in the song 'Good Old Days'."

— Dave McIntyre, San Diego Evening Tribune

for television entertainment, and you'd be surprised how television would improve."

3. The "sick comic is usually one who hasn't made it as a healthy one—and there's a big question if he's making it as a "sick' comic."

4. "Television ratings are the closest thing to fraud, and those that sponsor systems are nothing but thieves doing it with licenses."

5. Film people who work abroad to save on taxes "should be shot. They are greedy, unpatriotic and disloyal. I would not do it, and I have turned down opportunities to profit in this way."

Through it all, Lewis was the master showman, sitting on the couch in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel suite, demonstrating exactly how he tries to get the most out of a comedy scene, and even remembering that Doris Clark (femme commentator on CJAD) who had just taped an interview with him, "was an awfully good interviewer."

Lewis will have done approximately 700 appearances in 45 days of his current "Nutty Professor" tour of North America, the like of which he hasn't done in six years.

Would he do it again?

"It's a very big question," he said, "but I do know that it not only helps sell the picture, but it does something for me getting me in close contact with the people."

As to his upcoming TV project—two hours live every Saturday night for five years beginning in September—he declined to reveal any of the details except that "it will be live as television should be done."

The current tour will have cost "possibly $1,500,000," according to Lewis p.a. Jack Keller, and "though it's been highly satisfactory in terms of audience reaction and results, there are certain problems because of the continuing decrease of theatres with proper stage facilities."

Lewis made a particular impresh by recalling the time he worked at the old Normandie Roof and Gavety Theatre (a stripper) in the 40's, and remembering the name of every act on the bill.

Hilton's N.Y. Preem

word-of-mouth shades the N. Y. Hilton on decor, height of ballrooms, and plusher ambiance.

On the other hand, the Americana's Royal Box gives that hostelry a built-in "popular traffic" appeal; the Hilton will rest its laurels on its Rue des Gourmets, a series of atmospheric restaurants, and intime entertainment supervised and provided by Tony Cabot and Bill Buraham.

Binns and Voit

Longtime Waldorf-Astoria major domo Joe Binns and former Savoy Hilton (N. Y.) managing director Gene Voit now head the Rockefeller Center Hilton's top brass.

And many of their staffers, who were lured away from the Waldorf to the Americana, have continued playing "musical hotels"; and having come full circle, are now at the N. Y. Hilton.

This hostelry is dominantly owned by Percy Uris (Uris Bldg. Corp.) (50%) and the other 25% each are controlled by Conrad N. Hilton and Laurence S. Rockefeller, on behalf of R.C.

Since the major hotels depend 50% on convention and banquet business, "the battle of the ballrooms" will continue and who may suffer is a question mark. The Americana cut into the Waldorf-Astoria and the new N. Y. Hilton may also cut into its companion operation and, of course, pitch for Americana's business.

Ballrooms

There are four ballrooms of which the 3,000-5,000-capacity grand ballroom on the third floor is the keystone with its Jo Mielziner lighting and decor, dressingrooms, complete stage etc. The futuristic Mercury and the traditional Trianon ballrooms are smaller interiors, also on the third floor; the smaller Sutton ballroom is on the second floor.

A major plus is the quick evacuation from the ballrooms via the escalators' ready ingress and quick exit. Still another is the encased downstairs lobby entrance, perfect protection against inolement weather until one's car or a taxi arrives.

The electric lift stage in the major ballroom, of course, is keyed to complete industrialized presentation, including trucks that can drive into and unload within the hostelry.

The stage also has projection equipment, elaborate lighting board, and closed television facilities.

However, as talent booker William Burnham and music booker Tony Cabot learned through their first prevue shows in the ballrooms, the acts working there better have everything working for them—including familiarity. Its huge size is automatically a handicap for singers and comedians.

Rue des Gourmets

Imaginative are the four international restaurants and a cocktail lounge opening up from a glass-enclosed sidewalk cafe on the lobby level of the N. Y. Hilton on the West 53d St. side. Old Bourbon House (New Orleans at the turn-of-the-century), the Valencia (Spanish), the Place Lautrec (French-styled sidewalk cafe motif) and the Seven Hills (sophisticated Rome) are the names. Latter adjoins its own Terrace Room. The Kismet cocktail lounge is still another nationalistic motif, to further the international flavor and, vicariously, also points up the Hilton chain's global coverage. William Pahlmann did the decor.

There are also 23 private diningrooms plus a series of 15 hospitality suites on the fifth floor which can hold from 35-50 for small meetings and luncheons. These rooms are named for authors identified with New York such as Franklin P. Adams, Clifton Fadiman, Robert Benchley, Damon Runyon, Walter "Red" Smith, Dorothy Parker, Wolcott Gibbs, Lorenz Hart, O. Henry, and the British author, P. G. Wodehouse, who is familiar to New Yorkers.

The new Hilton is the fourth unit in New York. The others are the Waldorf, Savoy-Hilton and Statler-Hilton. At one time, it also operated The New Yorker and Roosevelt Hotels but the Dept. of Justice contended that this created a monopoly on the banquet business and forced the chain to divest the latter two hostels.

The 46-story structure of blue glass construction was designed by William Tabler and David P. Dann, with Harrison & Abramowitz, who did many Radio City buildings, as consultants.

Proximity Helps

On the other hand, the juxtaposition of the Hilton on 8th and 53rd, and the Americana on 7th Ave. and 52nd-53rd St. so that the latter's wing is diagonally facing the Hilton hostelry), could work benevolently for both. It already has in one conclave, the canning industry, which traditionally met in Atlantic City but now will divide its personnel, wives et al. between both hotels and, of course, comes December (time of the convention) have the advantage of Broadway theatregoing and the like.

By a paradox of fate, the current hotel building boom was first given impetus by a realtor who had to abandon his dream because overexpansion and overextending had made inroads on his financial empire. It was William (Webb & Knapp) Zeckendorf who conceived the idea of the first new New York hotel in some 30 years; and he planned it also for Rockefeller Center, but on the site now occupied by the Sperry Rand Bldg. (Which, incidentally, is already figuring extensively in uprooting an important segment of the textile industry from its traditional 7th Ave. environs to showrooms further uptown).

Loew's-Tisch

With the Zeckendorf setback, although in the meantime he was wheeling-dealing other hotel operations (the Gotham, St. Regis, Astor, Manhattan, Taft, Chatham, Commodore), the Tisch brores, Preston Robert (Bob) Tisch and Alan Tisch, respectively president of Loew's Hotels Corp. and prez of the parent Loew's Theatres Corp., moved faster. They took the site of their old Loew's Lexington Theatre for The Summit, followed by the plusher Americana and still plusher Regency. Plus their two near-Times Sq. motor inns on 8th Ave., first the one operated by Howard Johnson and later the Loew Motor Inn, latter with a swimming pool atop its structure. Same will be true of the City Squire, on the square block from Broadway to 7th Ave., 51st to 52nd St., diagonally opposite the Americana and, from another perspective, ditto from the Loew's Cinerama (nee Capitol) Theatre. (The Tisches, thus, between a theatre for closed-circut projection, and the complex of four hotels, all within a two-three block radius, can create a miniature "convention city" all their own).

All agree, however, that New York can never become a truly big convention City (political rallies and the like) until it builds a City Auditorium, Convention Hall or Coliseum of size such as Frisco's Cow Palace, or the convention halls which Chi, Philly and Atlantic City have to offer. The Coliseum on New York's Columbus Circle is not of sufficient capacity.

Hope of broadcasters now, according to word leaking out of the NAB board meet, is that the tobacco industry will do its own self policing in tv commercials in this point of time. "It's a ticklish situation," according to one NAB board member. Official position of the NAB has been that the NAB should not impose restrictions on cigaret advertising until at least the U. S. Surgeon General issues his report.

FUN-LESS '64 FAIR WORRIES N.Y.

Tourists & Diners In Cost Yowls

Motorist and pleasure-seekers generally this summer are complaining that the inflation which has cursed the United States for 12 years has grown acute. At a baseball game a cola drink is now 25c, popcorn ditto, an inferior cigar 35c. Film theatre concession stands in many situations have nothing priced under a quarter.

Reserved seat attractions peddle souvenir programs at $1. Few any longer consent to sell at 75c. Programs are frequently shy on text, loaded with paid advertising. Word from summer stock is the same. Cigarettes are vended at 35c a pack, defended as "a convenience."

Luxury N.Y. restaurants have long since become gaspers on their prices. A European visitor at one of the Park Avenue cafes last week was shocked at the $11 price of a bottle of red wine, which the tip-hustling sommelier still forgot to serve until half through the entree.

Beaucoup Show Biz Behind Iron Curtain — And the Price Is Right

By HOWARD PEARL
(of United Artists, Detroit)

A trip behind the Iron Curtain to see what goes on in front of their asbestos curtain took me to Warsaw, Prague and Budapest. It's all rather simple excepting that it is necessary to explain that when one travels behind the Iron Curtain, it becomes obligatory for a Communist-dominated travel agency to make all the arrangements. In Poland, it was "Orbis." Consequently, before arrival at Okecie Airport in Warsaw, representative of Orbis meets one to tell which hotel was booked. However, no Orbis man was there. Upon further inquiry, one learns that practically no one speaks English in Poland; un peu francais, peut-etre — but no English!

Saddled with this double dilemma, I scurried around the airport and finally boarded a bus, hoping it was going in the right direction. At this point, at the height of frustration, I paused to count my

Presbyterian Deplores Billy Rose Decision Re Play About Late Pius XII

Religious leaders in the U.S. are continuing to express concern over the proposed Broadway production by Billy Rose of "The Deputy." The Roth Hochhuth drama, presenting the thesis that the late Pope Pius XII failed to exert maximum influence in behalf of the Jews during the Nazi regime in Germany, preemed last February in Berlin under the title, "Der. Stellvertreter."

Among the more recent critics of the proposed Broadway presentation are Dr. Carlyle Adams and the Rev. Robert A. Graham. Dr. Adams, religious editor of the Albany Times-Union, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Rensselaer, N.Y., and Stated Clerk of the Presbyterian Church in the Albany area, write in the Times-Union, "Most people of religious faith and good will regret the

BIG BIZ ECLIPSE OF SHOW BIZ

By ABEL GREEN

With the 1964 N. Y. World's Fair less than a year away, Gotham bonifaces, hoteliers, restauranteurs and showmen are much concerned, despite reassurances, about a fun-less fair, a soberside exposition possibly devoid of showmanship, and the dread of a possible letdown. All this relates to "midway" remaining a dirty word to Fair president Robert Moses. Seemingly because prime preoccupation of the planners is with swinging foreign nations and domestic big business into paying the freight of opening the fair, those who will be presented nationalistically or industrially, will have laid it on the line heavily for the privilege of participating.

"It may wind up as great showcase for Big Business, but," said one showman, "I've never heard of people leaving a fairgrounds whistling a turbine!"

As the New York hotel building spree came to a capping climax with the opening of the new New York Hilton at Rockefeller Center, innkeepers and restauranteurs started taking stock of some downbeat potentials: (1), tourist business this summer is almost nil, because all seem keyed to "doing New York during the 1964 or 1965 Fair"; (2), that it may prove a dud for the midtown plusheries as conventioneers and tourists hie to the peripheral motels and suburban eateries, near the Fairgrounds at Flushing Meadows, Long Island.

The class eatery and nitery spots in town hark back to the downbeat of the 1939 N. Y. World's Fair which, too, meant little to the es-

Peck Sees Nix On 'Unreal' Heroics

Pau, France, July 9.

Gregory Peck, who has been a Hollywood star for almost 20 years, says that the days of the glamor roles—and of stars who are unreal, dreamlike characters—are just about over. Because audiences are getting more selective and demanding depth rather than escapism in films, today's star must be concerned with the depiction of true people in meaningful situations, he thinks.

Peck, who earlier this year won an Oscar for "To Kill A Mockingbird," is here shooting exteriors for Columbia's "Behold A Pale Horse," which Fred Zinnemann is directing. Because he is now often coproducer of the pix in which he stars, Peck is able to exercise his preference to do films with some meaning.

Rank Org Forms 50-Theatre Chain For Live Shows, Sets Lotsa U. S. Acts

London, July 9.

A major expansion into the area of live entertainment is taking place within the Rank Organization. During the last few months a chain of theatres equipped for stage presentations has been lined up, and now there is a circuit of 50 fully-equipped houses in London and the provinces with a combined capacity of over 100,000 seats.

Main emphasis currently is on top talent for one-nighters, but there is no strict pattern and bookings made to date include summer shows, a season of D'Oyly Carte opera, the Welsh National Opera Company and pantomimes over the Christmas vacation.

Among talent already signed for Rank theatre dates are Nat King Cole, who starts a tour next Saturday (13) with 10 one-nighters exclusively confined to the circuit; The Everly Bros., on an exclusive deal for 30 dates; and Count Basie, Sarah Vaughan, Erroll Garner, Ella Fitzgerald and the Modern Jazz Quartet. Between September and the end of the year the Rank circuit will present a minimum of 150 one-night stands.

Live theatre division is controlled by George Pinches, who is booking controller, and Stan Fishman, production director. Pinches is also the group's principal booker for motion pictures. The chain of 50 theatres includes the New Victoria in London's West End and 10 in the London suburbs, of which three have a capacity of over 3,000.

Also in the London list is the Regal, Edmonton, which was the site for the tryout, some 18 months ago, of the Lionel Bart musical,

Sammy Davis 'Ben Casey' Seg on Racial Revolt

Hollywood, July 9.

TV film, which normally avoids topical or controversial subject matter, is finally going into the delicate area of the Negro racial revolt.

Sammy Davis Jr. stars in a segment of "Ben Casey," which tackles the Negro problem, exploring it from opposite ends of the spectrum, insofar as the Negro is concerned. Davis plays a Negro who has adjusted so well he is scarcely aware there is a Negro problem, while another character essays one who is a Black Muslim. Plan is to tell it all from the Negro viewpoint.

Salant's Retort: Barry Goldwater Is Unfair to CBS

That crack of Senator Barry F. Goldwater that "I just don't trust CBS News" is considered unfair by CBS News.

Ever since CBS-TV carried "Thunder on the Right," an outing of "CBS Reports," the Arizona Republican Presidential aspirant has been feuding with CBS News. The documentary, dealing with the extremist right-wing groups in America, Birchites, Minutemen, etc., also contained footage of Sen. Goldwater. The right-wing groups looked to the Arizona Republican as their leader and on the program, Sen. Goldwater called them "good Americans."

Not Enuf Twist in British All-Girl Terp Troupe So Israeli Teenagers Riot

Tel Aviv, July 9.

Police arrested 28 teenagers in Jerusalem following a two-hour riot aftermath to a bogus Twist performance in the Holy City's Edison Hall. The house was sold out for a show featuring the Crazy Twisters, an all-femme British troupe. When the act failed to live up to its billing, the youthful patrons shouted catcalls throughout the show's first half.

At intermission, the enraged teenagers demanded their money back. They tore the arms off the seats and threw them on the stage. Meantime, the frightened girls took cover. Minutes later some 60 cops charged into the hall and dispersed the yougsters.

The riot—unprecedented in the history of modern Jerusalem—went on in the streets for two hours. Shop windows were stoned and two cars were overturned. One officer was injured before the 28 teenagers were collared.

'Hallowed Ground' Strictly a Come-On; Gettysburg Fete Run Like Amateurs

By JOSEPH T. KINGSTON

Gettysburg, Pa., July 9.

Gettysburg has begun a second 100 years as one of America's most lucrative tourist traps. This followed a three-day fling (July 1, 2, 3) at "professional" show biz of the what-is-it? variety. Professional it was called; amateur it played.

A $128,000 production staged by Pennsylvania's Gettysburg Centennial Commission, with the aid of hired Broadway and outdoor spec specialists, attracted more than a quarter of a million rubbernecks, all of whom left at least a couple of bucks in the cash boxes of Battletown operators. Seldom has "hallowed ground" been so commercialized.

Press corps—more special correspondents than were accredited to the Normandy invasion—had harsh words for the handle of all this by George Kabusk, the affair's $5,250 news director. Kabusk gave the red carpet treatment to the network television crews and news service photogs, but appeared to wish the working scribes, particularly those from nearby dailies, would get lost.

Reporters coming after July 1, to cover the huge parade of July 2 and the reenactment of Pickett's Charge the next afternoon, largely were left to fend for themselves. Even official accreditation badges—very necessary to cover the widespread areas of activity, all cordoned by battalions of Pennsylvania State Police—were lacking. Kabusk had passed them all out the first day.

These badges were handsome bronze medals, no gimcrack stuff, and had cost the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania $2,000.

Late-arriving scribes had to set-

'What's That In Pesetas?' Deals With Yanks And Their Spanish Servants

Madrid, July 9.

World stage and screen rights to the season's top Spanish hit, "Los Que Tienen Que Servir," by playwright Alfonso Paso, have been acquired by Bush Fekete, who has already received the author's approval on changes in the English adaptation, Fekete and his wife are now preparing under the title, "What's That in Pesetas?"

The Paso farce about Americans and their servant problems in Spain will become a comedy in the Fekete version and the Americans will be treated with more understanding and sympathy. The same play, which chalked up over 600 performances here, will also be produced in Munich by the Kleine Komoedie under the direction of Herr Metzner.

The Feketes also report that the film rights for their play, "Lot's Wife," have been sold to Charlie Feldman for production in Spain later this year.

OILING UP FILM SPOOF OF 20TH'S 'CLEOPATRA'

Houston, July 9.

Ron White of Hollywood states here that he will make a motion picture called "Antony and Cleopatra," to spoof 20th's "Cleopatra." It will be filmed partly in Houston and partly in Rome. White says he plans to start shooting within three weeks and will then remain here for about three weeks' photography. He said his story starts in an oiltown, then fades to a dream sequence in Rome.

He explained that he is shooting in an oiltown because part of the money backing the film is from Dallas oil people. White hopes to get the rest of his production money in Houston. His budget is set at $500,000.

Film will be made in partnership with Kurt Frings, agent of Elizabeth Taylor, who also manages Jayne Mansfield who is slated to play the role of "Cleopatra." White hopes to get either Buddy Hackett or Mickey Rooney as Caesar.

Ruth Menutis of Houston has been cast as Caesar's wife and has a letter of agreement to do the picture, but no signed contract because she has contracted to make another pic, "Women of Montmartre."

Carson's LV Booking With Built-In Press Junketers

Telecomedian Johnny Carson has signed a contract for his first major cafe date which contains an unusual clause. Carson, who is set to go into the Sahara Hotel, Las Vegas, to start July 7 of next year, has stipulated that the hotel will junket newspapermen for his preem. They'll comprise mainly television editors.

This is regarded a Carson's first important cafe stand although he played one date in a Bakersfield, Cal., nitery some years ago. Before he could continue in night clubs, he started on ABC's "Who Do You Trust" and remained with that show for five years. He subsequently went over to NBC-TV as successor to Jack Paar.

RALPH PEARL

Las Vegas Sun, July 5, says: "PAUL ANKA, the mightiest, at the age of 21, in the Copa Room of the Sands Hotel, like a glowing Lebanese warrior, belted a dozen or more ditties, some he himself had written, while a packed house, brimming over with July 4 revelers, responded lustily."

J. C. Stein Extols Coast as Logical Producing Centre

Hollywood, July 9.

Jules C. Stein, chairman of MCA Inc., today (Tues.) voiced his company's "Conviction that a great new period of expansion lies ahead for entertainment as an enterprise," at Golden Rivet ceremonies commemorating completion of groundbreaking and commencement of construction of Universal City Plaza. "Historically," he said, "the very heartbeat of entertainment production and its worldwide leadership have flourished in this area . . . southern California is the proper setting for the concentration of new expansion, and therefore the logical place for our companies to establish our new international headquarters."

Stein said in his brief address he was speaking on behalf of his associates in MCA, Universal Pictures Revue productions and "our thousands of employees and coworkers."

In March of 1915, he recalled, "Carl Laemmle accepted a golden key from a city official to unlock the gate of Universal City. At that time Laemmle stated it was his goal to build facilities to "manufacture every conceivable type of picture." Today, Stein declared, 48 years later, "we are gathered to celebrate a golden rivet ceremony so as to further extend Laemmle's prophetic vision by enlarging and modernizing the facilities of Universal City to pro-

Four Show Bizites Among Freedom Medal Winners

Washington, July 9.

Marian Anderson, Pablo Casals, Rudolph Serkin and Thornton Wilder are among the 31 winners of the Presidential Medal of Freedom. They will receive their medals at a White House ceremony in September.

The medal is the highest civilian honor the President can award to U.S. citizens or foreigners in peacetime for contributing to U.S. security or national interest, world peace or cultural and other endeavors.

President Kennedy made the final selection of winners with the assistance of a special committee composed of Government officials and private citizens.

Britain's film critics have been sent copies of the American paperback, "My Life With Cleopatra," by Walter Wanger and Joe Hyams. British paperback version will be published as a Corgi book on July 29 to coincide with the preem of the film.

In sending out the books the publishers added the snide comment: "20th Century-Fox are not treating this as a film tie-in edition, for some extraordinary reason!"

23-Year Old Showman Expands Legit-With-Eats

Chicago, July 9.

Candlelight Dinner Playhouse, first of a wave of stock theatre-restaurants here when it opened in suburban Summit two years ago, will move into a larger facility this winter with twice the present seating capacity. Owner-director William Pullinsi has ordered construction of a new octagonal building with an arena stage surrounded by terraces of dining tables and a mezzanine.

The new structure, which is expected to be completed in November, is designed to seat 300, with the most distant seats only 25 feet from the stage. It will have an elevator stage adjustable to three levels, one for performance, one for set-changes and a third for after-theatre dancing.

Pullinsi, who is only 23, started his first Candlelight Playhouse, in Washington, D. C., in 1959, and moved it to the Chicago suburb exactly two years ago as a professional stock operation without star system. Offering dinner, a play and dancing for a package price of $3.95 per person, it has been highly successful and imitated, with some modifications, by at least three other year-around stock theateries.

'Consent No Buffer Against Competish'

Judge Grants Stanley New Milwaukee Site—Marcus, Prudential, Perliwitz Opposed Plea

N. Y. Federal Judge Edmund L. Palmieri has granted Stanley Warner Corp. the right to erect a new theatre in the Capitol Court Shopping Center, Milwaukee. To be operated as a firstrun nabe situation, the new theatre will seat 1,200 patrons.

Consiederable opposition was raised in court by Milwaukee exhibs attempting to block the Warner move. This as is provided via the mechanism of the Consent Decree rulings. But Palmieri overruled this opposition which came principally from Ben Marcus, a big holder in local exhibition; Associated Prudential, which operates the largest circuit in Milwaukee and the Perliwitz boys, also local exhibs.

The judge's primary reason for granting SW the go-ahead is the circuit's diminished position in exhibition in that area is recent years. Whereas the chain once operated seven houses in the vicinity, it now only runs three. Commenting on this point Palmieri noted, "It must be stressed that the purpose of the Consent Judgment provision which is binding on the petitioner and which requires court approval for acquisition of new theatres was not to insulate independent exhibitors against competition but to prevent petitioner from achieving an undo advantage in a market area."

NEW CAUTIOUS WAYS RE FILMS

By GENE ARNEEL

Attitude of Wall Street's professional stock analysts, as pertaining particularly to motion picture issues, is due for a change. As a matter of fact there already has taken place a new kind of thinking among the pundits when it comes to tallying the potentials of this or that film company.

These pro students of the ups and downs of picture stock possibilities are in large number laying off—that is, they're not heard from so much anymore, whether it be for or against (buy or sell) any pic stock. This in itself is a major change, as contrasted with prevailing penchant until a couple of years ago. Numerous of the commission houses were then prone to be glib with suggestions anent buying, holding, selling, long-term, short-term, growth potential and so on.

One, two, or perhaps three of the Manhattan downtowners might come up with a film company appraisal but it's likely to be more iffy than ever. More than a couple of Wall & Broad denizens have confessed within the past few days that "it's gotten awfully tough to appear knowledgeable."

Changing Omens

And it's gotten tough, they added, because the traditional guideposts have disappeared.

And just what were the guideposts? These were caliber of management, past profits-loss performance and conservative-or-liberal attitude anent dividends. Also, importantly, capital gains.

But the public investors, and in some cases the stock brokers themselves, seem not to be giving a hoot about past statistics; instead, they are influenced by their own guesswork concerning individual up-coming pictures.

That the film business is more volatile than ever from investment standpoint appears particularly reflected in the 20th-Fox stock. Last year this issue was down to $14

Filmways 9-Month Profit at $83,966; Rubs Out Deficit

Filmways, indie feature film and tv production company, reports net earnings of $83,966, or 14c a share (based on 595,445 shares of common stock outstanding) for the nine months ended May 31, 1963. This compares to a net loss of $234,803, or 41c a share (on 571,504 shares) for the comparable period last year.

Filmways prez Lee Moselle says that total revenues, from motion picture and tv films, studio rentals and other income, rose to $9,017,116 for the nine months, compared to $7,163,038 for the first three quarters of 1962.

Net income before provision for Federal income taxes amounted to $187,966 this year, against a loss of $345,703 last year.

According to Moselle, the increase in revenues and upturn in profits reflects the company's expansion of its motion picture and tv activities and the shift of its production of commercials from the east coast to Hollywood.

Filmways chairman Martin Ransohoff has just completed production of "The Wheeler Dealers" which Metro will release in the fall, and his upcoming sked includes "The Americanization of Emily" and "Lighter Than Air" for Metro, "Man in The Middle" for United Artists, and "The Sandpiper" for Columbia. Also planned, but as yet without a distrib deal firmed, is the film version of Evelyn Waugh's "The Loved One."

In addition to these theatrical productions, Filmways produces "The Beverly Hillbillies" and "Mr. Ed.," both for CBS-TV.

Johnston's Illness Crucial to Trade; Already Wonder About 'Understudy'

Sudden illness which has befallen Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Assn. of America, is of grave concern to all key officers of U. S. film companies. It provoked conjecture about a possible standin, or even permanent replacement.

An MPAA spokesman reached in Washington yesterday (Tues.) by telephone, confirmed Johnston suffered a coronary thrombosis (stroke) and said Johnston's doctor reported his condition was "slightly better" than in the previous few days but all concerned refrained from any speculation.

This conjecture was heard at the highest film business level and, of course, connotes the importance of Johnston's role in worldwide picture industry affairs.

One of the most influential film execs in the business said "a man such as Richard M. Nixon would be needed." Thus Nixon's name was the first to be mentioned as a possible successor to Johnston.

Other important sources thought it premature (as of last weekend) to speculate anent a new MPAA president. But everyone said the matter is a vital one and will require serious attention without delay.

By coincidence somewhat startling, former U. S. Vicepresident Nixon, who now resides in New York, was quoted in last week's VARIETY, in a dispatch from Madrid, as saying he was studying reaction abroad to American policies and prestige, and his investigation would include a close look at Hollywood films and American entertainment generally. However, Nixon is just starting in fall with a N.Y. law firm at a grand ducal stipend.

Johnston has been rendered out of action at perhaps the most crucial point in his 15-year tenure as head man of the organization of American film producer-distributors. As chief exec of both the MPAA and the Motion Pict re Export Assn., his orbits range from censorship domestically (growingly important in light of the trend toward "adult" pictures) plus racial issues concerning film production and exhibition, and labor matters, such as with the Screen Actors Guild presently.

On the foreign front he has been coping with common market problems in Europe, development of trade for U. S. films in Africa, changing governments and the ever-present prospect of U. S. pic exchange impediments.

While MPAA and MPEA are both regarded as strong in exec talent, Johnston himself has carried the "weight" whether in closing a film treaty with a foreign government or talking to a local state governor about legislation. Formerly president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Johnston, like Nixon, is a Republican.

U-Revue's Techni Deal

Hollywood, July 9.

Universal and Revue are in processing of wrapping up a long term deal with Technicolor for both theatrical features and vidfilms. Unusual aspect is that parent MCA, as part of the studio expansion at Universal City, will build a complete Technicolor lab on the lot. Official announcement is expected later this week.

Universal and Revue currently have deals with Pathe and it's understood the Revue contract runs out first, within the year.

It Keeps Guys Smiling; Par Grosses $1,250,000 On $70,000 Beefcake

Who can tell about the picture business? Paramount bought the U.S. rights to an Italian epic for $70,000. At least a couple of sources at Par couldn't remember the original title, but the homeoffice braintrust called it "Duel of the Titans" and Martin Davis' ad-pub department underlined the star values.

Latter refer to Steve Reeves (erstwhile Hercules of the screen) and Gordon Scott (who has appeared as Tarzan). Thus, the Titans.

So far, Par has grossed $1,250,000 on its 70G investment.

WANTS TO BE AMUSED, NOT PSYCHOANALYZED

Atlanta, July 9.

Mrs. William G. Sullivan, of Shaker Heights, O., president of the National Federation of Motion Picture Councils, greeted Atlanta members of the Federation and firmed the groundwork for the council's national convention to be held here April 1-2, 1964.

Mrs. Sullivan felt there was a bit too much emphasis on sex in current film productions, but she believes realism can be handled without crudeness and too-heavy innuendo.

She pointed out that many feature films today are based on current novels and short stories. "So if people are going to attack the subject matter of certain films, they should really begin with today's authors.

"There are many wholesome films being made today. I don't like to be psychoanalyzed when I go to the movies. And I don't like to see all the problems of society in color and wide screen!"

Script Tailored for Hope By Texas 3 Via Matson

Dallas July 9.

A trio of local writers have come up with a comedy which may develop into a Bob Hope film. Bob Bixler, former Paramount exploitation chief in this area and a friend of the comedian; Neiman-Marcus veepee Warren Leslie, and Bob Hunter, onetime pressagent here for United Artists, have written "The Floorwalker" with Hope definitely in mind. It is being delivered to Hope and he has already expressed interest in the theme which the writers explained to him over the phone.

Harold Matson, New York literary agent, is handling negotiations between Hope and the writers.

ROSENFIELD TO STUDIOS

His First Trip Since Becoming 20th-Fox Exec

Jonas Rosenfield Jr. left New York for the Coast over the weekend for his first visit at the 20th-Fox studio since becoming ad-pub v.p. of this company.

Rosenfield, who joined 20th five weeks ago in the top ad-pub post, plans a week's stay west.

Stanley Warner Profit Rises for May Quarter; Expenses Up $4-Million

Stanley Warner Corp., including Latex and drug diversifications, showed consolidated operating profit for the three months ended May 25, 1963, of $739,100, equivalent to 36c per share on the outstanding common stock. This is up somewhat over the consolidated operating profit for the same period last year which was $707,600, equal to 34c per share.

Consolidated profit for the nine months ended May 25, 1963 was $1,798,100, equal to 88c a share. This, however, was off considerably from the $2,267,600 profit registered for the same period last year, which was equal to $1.11 a share. Merchandise sales, theatre admissions and other income for the three months ending May 25 were $37,386,700, up some over the tally of $34,051,600 registered last year. Expenses in 1963 rose from $32,876,137 the previous year to $36,137,970.

New Ground Rules Via Viking Suit; See Product Splits Sometimes Okay Along With Pic Rental Adjustments

Tradewise savvy execs in the picture business, alone with the lawyers, feel they have new guideposts to go by in a decision by the U. S. Court of Appeals in the anti-trust suit brought by Philadelphia's Viking Theatre against three other firstrun Philly theatres and six distributors. The initial action was thrown out by the Federal Court and this ruling was reaffirmed by the Court of Appeals. It's still subject to another appeal, of course.

But meanwhile the verdict as it now stands is significant. Herman Levy, general counsel of Theatre Owners of America, makes this point in a formal analysis. He says it throws new light on the way distributors can conduct their business with exhibitors and not run afoul of the antitrust laws.

The decision means, states Levy, that product splits are not illegal per se. In other words, two theatres in competition may be licensed a split or product from one distributor, if both theatres agree, if there's no imposition on the distributor, and if other theatres, as the court said, are afforded the opportunity to bid for the product which is split by the aformentioned two theatres.

Said the court: ". . . the agreement, i.e., the split, between Goldman and Stanley Warner imposed no obligation on the distributors to include particular pictures on the list or to deal exclusively with the said exhibitors. The evidence affirmatively shows that every exhibitor was afforded the opportunity to bid or negotiate for the picture of each distributor."

Goldman and Stanley Warner, as Philly exhibs, were among the defendants.

Major point in the Viking trial concerns rental adjustments, which, it was brought out, do ex-

ROUVIER RETAINS TIE

Stays on Board of UA's French Co.—Cartier's Post

Georges Rouvier, United Artists general manager in France since 1936, has left the post but, at the request of UA officers, has agreed to remain on the board of directors of the company's French subsid, Les Artistes Associes S.A. He's been succeeded by Raoul Cartier, UA's French sales manager for the last five years.

Pierre Deschamps, assistant to the French sales manager since 1958, has been uppec to the post of sales manager for the country. Georges Laurent, who recently joined the company, has been named administrative manager for France.

Before joining UA in 1958, Cartier had been for 18 years French manager of RKO Radio Pictures. Deschamps had also been with RKO and with Cinedis and Laurent was also a Cinedis exec before coming to UA.

OSLO OKAYS 5% RENT HIKE FOR 'MOCKINGBIRD'

Oslo, July 9.

Universal has been granted permission by the Municipal Cinemas Board to increase its rental 5% above the prevailing rate for "To Kill A Mocking Bird." In Norway, where film rentals are under governmental control, increases are occasionally granted to films of "high artistic merit."

"Mockingbird" already has been given special tax reduction certificates in Germany, Holland and Austria, as well as a special recommendation by the Japanese Film Review Board.

Him Good Friend

Washington, July 9.

Actor Vincent Price has been reappointed to the Indian Arts & Crafts Board, an arm of U. S. Interior Department designed to improve the lot of the American Indian by promoting and marketing his handiwork.

Art buff Price was first named to the five-man board in 1957 and was reappointed in 1959. His new term will expire in 1967.

Alain Delon's Terms For 'Big Grab' Follows Title; Foreign Rights Gravy

Madrid, July 9.

French actor Alain Delon pulled a financial nifty in negotiating his deal to appear in Jacques Bar's production of "The Big Grab" for Metro. Performer related his salary request was turned down by MGM and he countered with another proposition by which he would take over distribution rights to "Grab" in Japan, Brazil and Russia.

This went through and the Frenchman took the picture to market, picking up $125,000 in Japan, $30,000 in Brazil and $25,000 in Russia—adding up to considerably more than he originally had wanted in salary.

In addition to this Delon is getting French State Aid in the amount of 24% of the $180,000 he collected in foreign sales which is to help finance his own production of "A Man and a Woman." He's also to star in this with Romy Schneider.

Delon is here on his first visit to star with Virna Lisi and Akim Tamiroff in the Spanish-Italian coproduction of "The Black Tulip." which Christian Jacques is directing.

Actor said his goal is international fame. He believes it can come via a major Hollywood production and the right kind of role for him.

Long Holiday Weekend Ups Biz; 'Cleo' Still on Top, 'West' 2d, 'Horn' 3d, 'Irma' 4th, 'Birdie' 5th

The long July 4 weekend is boosting biz generally this week at firstruns covered by VARIETY. Ideal outdoors weather failed to cut into cinema trade as feared because many strong pix were out on distrib. First four top grosses came in with a total of nearly $1,700,000.

"Cleopatra" (20th) (3d wk) again is champion by a wide margin, with $779,000 gross in some 18 keys. "How West Was Won" (MGM) (20th wk) is taking second place, same as last round.

"Come Blow Your Horn" (Par) (5th wk) again is capturing third coin, just the same as a week ago. "Irma La Douce" (UA) (5th wk) wound up fourth, same as last stanza.

"Bye, Bye Birdie" (Col) (3d wk) is holding in fifth position, spot it held a week ago. "Lawrence of Arabia," also from Columbia, is finishing sixth. It is out in circulation 26 weeks. "Spencer's Mountain" (WB) (3d wk) is winding up in seventh spot, higher than last round.

"Gathering of Eagles" (U) (2d wk), just starting last week, is taking eighth place. "Savage Sam" (BV) (3d wk) will be ninth. "PT 109" (WB) (2d wk) is finishing 10th.

"L-Shaped Room" (D-R) (2d wk) is taking 11th position while "Hud" (Par) (7th wk), rounds out the Top 12 grossers. "Donovan's Reef" (Par), just getting around; "55 Days at Peking" (AA) and "Mondo Cane" (Times) are runnerup films.

"Great Escape" (UA) shapes as one of most promising of new pix just launched. It is wow in Washington, smash in Toronto, boff in L.A. and socko in Frisco. "Young Racers" (AI) is rated hotsy in Hub.

"King Kong Vs. Godzilla" (U), also new, looks great in K.C. and wham in Hub. "Buddha" (UA) opened big in Frisco at an arty theatre: "Fellini's 8½" (Embassy) still is wow in second week at two N.Y. houses.

"Longest Day" (20th) still is big in second session playing a N.Y. arty house on continuous policy. "Flipper" (MGM) is rated fast in Chi.

"Sparrows Can't Sing" (Janus) still is neat to good in several arty spots currently. "Balcony" (Cont) is in a like category. "Nutty Professor" (Par) is stout in several keys currently.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

June Retrospective Report: Zingy; 'West,' 'Arabia,' 'Peking' and 'Hud' Tops; July Outlook Promising

By MIKE WEAR

VARIETY'S regular weekly boxoffice reports are summarized each month, retrospectively. Based on an average of 24 key situations, the source data constitute an adequate sampling of current releases but are not, of course, fully "definitive." An index of relative grossing strength in the U.S.-Canada market this monthly reprise does not pretend to express total rentals.

Out of the seven strongest grossing films in June, five were newcomers. Also, an impressive array of new product was launched the final week of the month with indications that much of it will be around all of July or later, presumably helping.

High-grossing proclivities of the top product is gleaned from the fact that five hit nearly $5,000,000 in the four-week period covered by this monthly check. "How West Was Won" (MGM) again ran off with top honors for June, the same as in May.

"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) again finished second, same as in May. "55 Days at Peking" (AA) captured third position. In fact, this pic was so strong it copped first place the week it was launched. "Hud" (Par) wound up fourth, being as high as third two weeks running.

"List of Adrian Messenger" (U) wound up fifth, displaying nice staying power. "Dr. No" (UA) capturing sixth place, having close to $325,000 just in key cities covered by VARIETY.

"Nutty Professor" (Par), only getting around as the month ended, made such an impressive showing it wound up seventh. This by "Cleopatra" (20th), opened so far in only two cities. In New York City, it was still capacity in second week while the openiing session in L.A. was rated mighty, and likely to be a house record. Costly opus teed off in several other major keys just before July 1.

"Bye Bye Birdie" (Col), which had such a sensational run at the N.Y. Music Hall, apparently is headed for top figures across the country. It was wow in Chi opening stanza, boff in Pitt and big in L.A. "Jason and Argonauts," also from Columbia, with many nice to smash showings, did well enough to finish seventh the final week in June.

"Savage Sam" (BV), also preemed late last month, chipped in with some hot to hefty engagements and likely will be heard from more in the future. "Spencer's Mountain" (WB) came through with tall to sock grosses the same week. "PT 109," also from Warner Bros., was boff on initial playdate in Boston.

Jerry Lewis comedy should be heard from additionally. "Stripper" (20th) managed to finish eighth. "Ugly American" (U), which was third in May, captured ninth place.

"Tammy and Doctor," also from Universal, took 10th spot although out in release only two weeks. "Mondo Cane" (Times) finished 11th. "Wrong Arm of Law" (Cont), which took 12th place in May, rounds out the Top 12 grossers.

"Call Me Bwana" (UA), "Island of Love" (WB), "Mutiny on Bounty" (MGM), which was fifth in May; and "The Balcony" (Cont), winner of 11th spot in May, are the runnerup films.

A long line of newcomers, most of them brought out the final week in June, is topped, of course,

CANADA'S FUTURE IN FEATURES

Pix Can't Lie About U.S. Exhibs

By DORA ALBERT

Hollywood, July 9.

At a special panel discussion for the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, four members of the Screen Producers Guild—Lawrence Weingarten, Aaron Rosenberg, Arthur Freed and George Glass—answered such questions as-Why don't producers produce more pictures? Why aren't producers developing more new stars? How much freedom do producers allow directors? and Are producers concerned about the image of America created when their films are shown abroad?

In answer to this last question, posed by this writer, Lawrence Weingarten said, "In a free society producers do what they want to, and make the pictures they want to, without interference by the government. If the image of America is distorted, then that is wrong; however, if a certain segment of our life is evil, then it should be shown that way, without regard to what people abroad may think. 'Blackboard Jungle,' for instance, showed an unpleasant side of life in some schools in America, but the picture represented conditions as they really exist.

"Motion picture producers are often targets for unfair and contradictory criticisms. One moment we are accused of being provincial and naive; the next of making harmful pictures because we have told some unpalatable truths."

George Glass said, 'It is not up to Hollywood producers to lie about Birmingham, etc. We tell the truth as we see it. If some area of American life is unpleasant, it is up to us as Americans to try to clean up the area where the image is not good, rather than to clean up the image. The freedom of American motion picture producers to speak out on any subject gives the best image of America that can possibly be presented. We all know that such freedom is not available behind the Iron Curtain, to their producers."

Failure of studios to develop many new stars in the last few years was attributed by Weingarten to lack of the disciplines by which future stars used to be trained for two years by major studios in deportment, dressing, speaking and acting until ready for the right picture; and also to the economic risk involved when an agent says "You can have this actor or actress for two pictures only," when all the actor or actress has done is make an exciting test. If a studio agrees to pay the steep amount the agent usually asks, another studio or producer will profit by the efforts of the one that first took the risk, if the newcomer becomes a star.

May Fuse SAG & AFTRA Pension Plans

Idea of Florida Friebus (Girl Actuarial) Favored by Screen Actors

Hollywood, July 9.

Screen Actors Guild board, in line with sentiment expressed at the membership meeting in June, has approved a motion whereby SAG will investigate the possibility of merging its pension and welfare plans with those of American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

Florida Friebus suggested such a probe at the recent meeting, and the membership echoed her sentiments. At that time SAG national exec secretary John L. Dales told members the guild and producer trustees were already on record as favoring a working agreement with AFTRA's welfare plan, and that discussions have been held with trustees of the AFTRA plan. Meetings were not too fruitful because the AFTRA trustees were not ready to take the "risk" that the revenue to the AFTRA fund would be sufficient to carry the increase in eligible members, Dales reported.

Thus, the new action calls for reopening of the talks with the AFTRA trustees.

Board has also adopted a resolution calling for semi-annual membership meetings, instead of having one, as has been the practice. Board's action stems from a resolution presented by Al Ruscio at the membership meeting for a change, to the semi-annual session. Ruscio move had asked the second meeting be held the second week of May (annual membership meetings are held each November). Board moved the second meeting be held between March 1 and July 31 of each year.

Saskatchewan Censor To See 'Wild & Willing'

Regina, Sask., July 9.

Saskatchewan's film censor, Adele MacPherson, has not yet made a decision on "The Wild and The Willing" (20th-Fox), which has been banned in Alberta and British Columbia. She expects to view the film soon.

In Alberta, the provincial censorship board banned it, the distributors appealed and a government-appointed appeal board upheld the decisions of the censors.

Con-Wise Consultants

Houston, Tex., July 9.

Jack Heard, assistant chief of the Texas prison system, has been hired as a technical director, the third, for "The Confessor" which is slated to be shot here starting Nov. 11 by John Frankenheimer.

Mirisch Bros. are producers of the film.

Other technical directors include Edd White of the Sheriff's department and Larry Fultz of the Police Dept.

Lotsa Refurbish Coin Confidence In Film Theatres

Minneapolis, July 9.

Expenditures to improve present film theatres here, and in a single instance even practically to rebuild one interior, have soared well into the six figures during the past several years, with circuit owners Ted Mann and Sidney Volk particularly shelling out large sums for such purposes.

But now there's also visible locally for the first time in several decades the likelihood of the construction of not only one but of two new four-wall showhouses.

Present plans call for one to be part of a Mall project and the other to be included in a new shopping centre that have been announced for local suburban areas.

MCA Writing Grant

Greensboro, N.C., July 9.

U. of North Carolina Dept. of Radio, Television & Motion Pictures has received a $2,500 grant from MCA Inc.

The grant will be used by the RTVMP Dept. to establish the MCA Scholarship or Graduate Fellowship in Creative Writing which will be awarded to a student, chosen by a selection committee, who has shown exceptional talent in the field of creative writing for the performing arts.

'MONTREAL, FEST AIDING'--JUNEAU

By VINCENT CANBY

The Montreal International Film Fest, which, in its three years of existence, has been credited with forcing Quebec provincial film censors to adopt mid-20th century standards and with the recent Canadian boom in artie distribution and exhibition, is now playing an important role in promoting increased Canadian film production. So thinks its president Pierre Juneau, who is also, when he wears his other hat, exec director of the Canadian National Film Board.

Montreal fest, the fourth edition of which will be held Aug. 2-11 this year, has not only served to make lay Canadians film conscious in a way they were never before, says Juneau, but it has also provided young Canadian filmmakers with important, face-to-face meetings with some of the top producers and directors from abroad.

Juneau, who was in New York early this week finalizing plans for the showing of 20th-Fox's "The Leopard" as the fest's opening pic (see separate story), declined to discuss details of an upcoming international coproduction feature, to be produced by the Film Board, but did say that the project had its genesis at an earlier Montreal fest. (It's understood that the feature, an omnibus-type film, will deal with teenage habits in various parts of the world.)

Competitive Facet

This year, in a direct move to focus attention on Canadian film production, the Montreal fest, which otherwise is non-competitive will sponsor a special section in which Canadian features and shorts will compete for prizes to be awarded by an international jury. As yet, the only feature to be set definitely is the documentary "Pour La Suite du Monde," a CNFB-sponsored project, but also expected to be ready in time are a fiction feature produced by Crawley Films, and a semi-documentary feature being made by local director Claude Jutra. Between 20 and 25 shorts will also be competing, about half of which were sponsored by the Canadian National Film Board.

Juneau does not expect any "phony boom" in Canadian feature production generally, and certainly does not see the Canadian National Film Board getting into the business of making strictly "entertainment" pix, that is, musicals, psychological mellers, etc.

No Advantages

But, speaking of overall Canadian feature production, he says it's conceivable that in several years time, as many as five to eight pictures a year might be turned out. However, since the government does not offer any financial inducements to lure pro-

'Leopard' to Montreal Festival as Opener

"The Leopard," 20th-Fox-Titanus coproduction which took the Golden Palm as best picture at this year's Cannes fest, will be the opening night feature Aug. 2 at this year's Montreal International Film Festival. Showing in Montreal will be the North American premiere of the film, which is also due to be screened at the Moscow fest this month and which does not open in New York until August 12.

"The Leopard" will be shown in Montreal in its English language version — the Italo version was screened at Cannes.

Fest prez Pierre Juneau, visiting New York early this week, noted that the showing of Burt Lancaster starrer marks the first time that an American major had participated in the Montreal festival (now in its fourth year) and expressed hope that other majors will see fit to cooperate in upcoming fests. Montreal is a non-competitive fest.

No Rule That Film Must Be Shown; Exhibs Yipe Against Distribs' 'Blind' Invitations as Unfair to Bidders

Vogue For Twins

Boston, July 9.

Another twin theatre is underway in the theatre building boom which has been busting out in Boston and vicinity.

New England Drive-in Theatre Corp. has petitioned the city of Newton, Mass., for a zoning change that would permit construction of a $1,000,000 luxury twin on Route 9, near Langley Rd., Chestnut Hill.

A public hearing is being held on the matter. New England Drive-in told the aldermanic claims and rules committee that the proposed facility would contain two theatres in one building. The same films would be shown in each theatre, but the screening times would be staggered.

Comments last week by Theatre Owners of America prez John H. Stembler regarding the (to him) increasingly menacing distribution practice of putting exhibitors in the position of bidding "blind" for features they haven't seen has rekindled some interest on the part of exhibs around the country. Some of the talk includes the possibility of the matter being brought before the Federal Trade Commission for some remedial action.

The question which arises in many exhibs' minds is: "can blind bidding possibly be considered fair trade practice?" It's possible in the first place, per Stembler, only because Dept. of Justice re-evaluation of the decree rulings some years ago did not require distribs to screen product for bidders before they sent out invitations to bids.

The result, Stembler argued, and others echoed last week, has been an increasing practice on the part of distribs to force exhibs to bid sight unseen for product. It is pointed out, for example, that next Christmas product is being bid for right now. This seems to exhibs to give the distribs a rather decided trading advantage, especially considering the prevailing scarcities.

The matter has been taken up with the Dept. of Justice with this curious, if legally sound, result. The Justice Department has said that, since there is no requirement necessitating screenings, it cannot act unless it can be proven that some buyers get to see prints ahead while others do not. This would be an infringement on the unfair competition legislation it has to work with. But if nobody gets to see the pix, then blind bidding can legally go on under Justice regulations because no one exhib is getting an advantage over any other.

"Cleopatra" is, of course, an example of a picture being offered for bidding, and hefty money being sought at that, without first being screened for exhibs. But, it's granted, this is not the best case since potential boxoffice was very strong and the gamble almost sensible in the light of all the publicity attendant on the film and the do-or-die nature of Fox's attitude fn selling "Cleo" to the public.

But, by the same token, it's pointed out, an exhib can be badly hurt if he is forced to buy a few of these pix which he hasn't seen and they turn out to be stiffs. He may have gone in too deep in the first place and he is being put in the position of having to work in the dark more and more, many exhibs point out. Had "Cleo" been an out-and-out bomb, many exhibs could have gone under because of it. Of course, nobody forced them to book it but, with firstrun prod-

Sugar Sees 20th 'In Great Shape' On 'Day' & 'Cleo'

"We're in great shape," exclaimed Joseph M. Sugar, v.p. of 20th-Fox, in speaking of the welfare of his own company. He offered figures attesting to the fact that the film organization now helmed by Darryl F. Zanuck again has major impact on film business generally.

Of considerable significance are Zanuck's own production of "The Longest Day" and, of course, Walter Wanger's "Cleopatra."

Pic company last week asserted a theatre gross in the United States of $3,352,961 for only six days. This was achieved by only two pictures —the aforementioned "Day" and "Cleo"—and surpassed anything in the entire history of the business. So far there has been no publicly-stated rebuttal from other producer-distributors.

It's almost ancient (at least a few weeks) history that "Cleo" would be like phenomenal in view of the perhaps $17,000,000 in theatre guarantees to 20th, coupled with the public's window buying in advance. Non-partisans unaddicted to tall tales now believe "Cleo" looks like a fair-enough success even despite the $42,000,000 in negative costs.

Called upon in his office for private conversation, Sugar said he's confident of $17,000,000 to $17,500,000 in domestic rentals for "Day" and he expects to have 80% of this money in by Dec. 1.

The prospects are startling when an observer considers that merely a year ago 20th was a meager contender in the film trade sweepstakes and, to some, might have been headed out of the race entirely.

There can be no verdict yet on upcoming releases but Sugar says he's confident anent product for the balance of the year and is even more sanguine concerning the outlook for 1964.

Most prominent in Sugar's mind is "Longest Day," which was short of best in roadshow, but which is registering wow in second wave First dates were milder than "Ben-Hur," "West Side Story" and "Around the World in 80 Days," for example.

Going into the off-Broadway, in New York and elsewhere, Sugar and his confederates negotiated some deals which a few years ago would have been regarded as sacrilegious. For example, they sold away from the RKO and Loew's chains, opening the picture via either negotiation or straight bidding. Loew's and RKO were invited but declined.

Independent houses grabbed it, 31 of them in N. Y.'s metropolitan area on a guarantee of a minimum of six weeks' playing time and on

JULES B. WEILL EXITS

Dino Fazio Steps Into Colorama Presidency

Jules B. Weill has resigned as prez of Colorama Features and been succeeded by the outfit's exec v.p., Dino Fazio. Circumstances surrounding Weill's departure are being guarded by the company, Fazio commenting on the change that he "cannot enlarge on the matter at this time."

The new prez has for a long time been in charge of distribution throughout the western hemisphere for Telac Inc., production-distribution company which recently bought control of Colorama. Since the takeover, Colorama has mapped an extensive program of distribution and production, including the importing of 13 foreign pix, one for its world preem in the States and a few for their U.S. debuts. Latest release under the Colorama banner is the filmization of Mickey Spillane's latest tome, "Girl Hunters."

Strange Lovers

Three tales concerned with facets of homosexuality. Minor entry dependent on sexsensational values.

Hollywood, July 3.

Robert Stambler-William Mahan (Mast) production. Cast includes: Walter Koenig, Joe d'Agosta, Jennifer Boles, Arlene Hedrick, Sylvia Brenner. (No character names given). Directed by Stambler. Screenplay, Stambler, Mahan, Nick Boretz, Alex Beaton; camera, F. Said; assistant director, Kamzi Thomas. Reviewed at Apollo Arts Theatre, July 3,'63. Running time, 73 Mins.

Homosexuality is the topic of this shallow and inconclusive trilogy. Had the creators of the independent production focused and concentrated whatever knowledge they have of this subject on a single set of characters in one story, perhaps promising boxoffice might have come of it. Instead they have chosen to squander their efforts on three separate-though-related dramatic vignettes, none of which is developed with sufficient finesse, clarity or penetration to be meaningful or convincing. Provocative and exploitable though the topic obviously is, the film lacks the substance or insight to rise out of that shadowy exhibition sphere dominated by sex-oriented attractions.

The first of the three yarns, entitled "End Of The Path," deals with a young man who was attacked in his early childhood by a homosexual and has been left with an emotional scar that ultimately prompts him to murder an older woman who is playing up to him. The middle piece, labeled "Homo Means Man," dramatizes the plight of a somewhat older young man who, after separating from his wife, makes a seeming homosexual contact and is beaten up and rolled by his companion, then nursed by a woman who, repulsed for her suggestion that they hit the hay together, returns her reluctant "date" to his spouse. In the third tale, called "Segue," a teenage girl who has never been able to hit it off with the boys is tricked into a Lesbian relationship by her employer, a woman with a more-than-businesslike eye for her models.

It is an oddity of all three of these stories that most of the "healthy" people implicated are obsessed with sex. In their zeal to pinch bottoms, unzip zippers or lure others into the sack, they provide a counterpoint to the three troubled principal characters, none of whom seem much inclined to engage in sexual activity.

Although the directorial tempo is extremely sluggish, the performances are generally capable, which reflects some credit on director Robert Stambler, who also co-produced with William Mahan and penned the script together with Mahan, Nick Boretz and Alex Beaton. The principal players, all of whom emote rather well under the circumstances, are Walter Koenig, Joe d'Agosta, Arlene Hedrick, Jennifer Boles and Sylvia Brenner. Tube.

Shock Corridor

Shoddy, shallow shocker with exploitation facets.

Hollywood, June 24.

Allied Artists release of Samuel Fuller production. Stars Peter Breck, Constance Towers; features Gene Evans, James Best. Directed and screenplay by Fuller; camera, Stanley Cortez; editor, Jerome Thoms; music, Paul Dunlap; assistant director, Floyd Toyer. Reviewed at Directors Guild of America, June 24, '63. Running time, 101 MINS.

Johnny	Peter Breck
Cathy	Constance Towers
Boden	Gene Evans
Stuart	James Best
Trent	Hari Rhodes
Pagliacci	Larry Tucker
Swanee	William Zuckert
Dr. Fong	Philip Ahn
Psycho	Meyle Morrow
Dr. Cristo	John Mathews
Wilkes	Chuck Roberson
Lloyd	John Craig
Police Lieut.	Frankie Gerstle
Dr. Menkin	Paul Dubov
Singing Nympho	Rachel Romen
Dance Teacher	Linda Randolph

In "Shock Corridor," writer-producer-director Samuel Fuller apparently is trying to say something significant about certain contemporary American values. The points are sound and have merit. But the melodrama in which he has chosen to house these ideas is so grotesque, so gruelling, so shallow and so shoddily sensationalistic that his message is devastated. For all of its innate exploitability, it is difficult to see where the Allied Artists release can have any really appreciable boxoffice impact.

Fuller's thin plot has a newspaperman (Peter Breck) contriving, with the aid of a psychiatrist no less, to get himself committed to a mental ward in order to identify a murderer known only to the inmates and whom the police have been unable to detect. The newsman gets his scoop, but winds up a catatonic schizophrenic, or the only Pulitzer Prizewinner in the psycho ward.

Within all this lurks three points about Americana, each embodied in characters the fourth-estater encounters in the hospital. A Communist-brainwashed and subsequently disgraced Korean war vet (James Best) is the mouthpiece through which Fuller pleads for greater understanding of such unfortunate individuals. Likewise, a Negro (Hari Rhodes) supposed to have been the first to attend an all-white Southern university serves to make the point that it takes enormous emotional stamina to play the role of the martyr in social progress. And the character of a renowned physicist (Gene Evans) whose mind has deteriorated into that of a six-year-old enables Fuller to get in some digs against bomb shelters and America's participation in the space race.

But all these points go for naught because the film is dominated by sex and shock superficialities. Among the gruelling passages audiences must endure, for no reason other than sheer sensationalism, are a striptease and an attack on the hero in a locked room by half-a-dozen nymphos. There's also levity in the wrong places. The audience tends to laugh at the inmates. It's not really funny business.

The dialog is unreal and pretentious, and the direction is heavyhanded, often mistaking sordidness for realism. The performers labor valiantly, but in vain. Those most prominent are Breck, who really gets his lumps and earns his pay, Constance Towers as his stripper-girl friend (making her a stripper distorts and weakens the whole story—simply for an extra dash of sordid sensuality), Larry Tucker as an inmate obsessed with the Pagliacci aria, William Zuckert as a misguided editor, Philip Ahn as that misguided psychiatrist who okays Breck's absurd idea, chuck Roberson and John Crang as attendants, and Evans, Best and Rhodes as the three message-bearers.

This Sporting Life

This pic, which opens its regular run at the new 34th St, East and Little Carnegie next week, drew high praise from Rich when reviewed from London in VARIETY issue of Feb. 13 this year. He described "Sporting Life" as "having gutsy vitality that should catch the masses . . . also enough classiness in its direction, writing and acting to make it a superior contender generally. The North England Country accents should not harm the production's prospects any more than the Midland burr of 'Saturday Night and Sunday Morning.' Karel Reisz, who directed 'Saturday Night,' produced this one and his influence can clearly be seen."

Pic concerns professional rugby football. But basically it's a study of a confused young man and his blundering attempts to "find his own little farmyard where he can crow more loudly than other cocks around him."

Richard Harris, last seen in "Mutiny on Bounty," is credited with a dominating performance as the arrogant, blustering and insecure football player.

Rich writes: " 'Sporting Life' may well be one of the last hits of the 'Saturday night' genre, but this will be remembered as one of the most satisfying ones."

Final Berlin Festival Reviews

Los Innocents

(The Innocents)
(SPANISH-ARGENTINIAN)

Berlin, July 2.

Sueva Films (Madrid) release of a Cesareo Gonzalez Spanish-Argentinian coproduction. Stars Alfred Alcon, Paloma Valdes, Fernando Mistral. Directed by Juan Antonio Bardem. Screenplay, Bardem, Eceiza and Quejereta; camera, Albert Curchi; music, Isidro Maizteugui. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 110 MINS.

Guido	Alfredo Alcon
Elena Errazquin	Paloma Valdes
Laura Errazquin	Fernanda Mistral

Juan Antonio Bardem is undoubtedly Spain's most distinguished director and his skill and authority stand out in this Spanish-Argentinian coproduction, which was the official Spanish entry at the Berlin festival. Pic has obvious art qualities, with additional appeal to the Spanish lingo houses.

Under the director's assured and sympathetic guidance, there unfolds a semi-tragic love story doomed to an inevitable unhappy ending. Social differences, Bardem emphasizes, cannot transcend human emotions, and thus the romance between a poor bank clerk and a rich girl is brought to an abrupt end after the intervention of her family.

The two principal characters are brought together after her father and his wife were killed together in a car accident. That was the first clue either family had to the illicit relationship. The dead man was a powerful industrialist, and his family still wields enough authority to keep photos and reports of the incident out of the press, and to have the bank clerk transferred to an out of the way town when they become disturbed at the blossoming romance.

Though the story hardly breaks new ground, it is noted for its excellent characterizations, not only of the major roles, but the small cameos.

The film was lensed in the Argentine, and the action takes place mainly in Mar del Plata, with fine camerawork highlighting the scenic effects. Paloma Valdes, imported from Spain, plays the young girl with an appealing warmth while Alfredo Alcon (a native Argentinian) gives a carefully observed study of a man who realizes the embarrassment of being out of one's social depth. Fernanda Mistral is the eccentric grandmother, and plays her few scenes with great aplomb. Myro.

Mensch und Bestie

(Man and Beast)
(GERMAN)

Berlin, July 2.

CCC Filmkunst (Berlin) and Avala Film (Belgrade) release of an Artur Brauner production. Stars Gotz George. Directed by Edwin Zbonek. Screenplay, Sigmund Bendkower, Al Bronsowy, based on idea by Robert Azderball; camera, Nenad Jovicic. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 84 MINS.

Franz Kohler	Gotz George
Willy Kohler	Gunther Ungeheuer
Nurse	Katinka Hoffman

One of oddest features of concentration camp life in wartime Nazi Germany was that two brothers were in one camp—one as an inmate, the other as commandant. That strange fact is the basis of an otherwise fictional story, and there are obvious possibilities for developing this situation into a powerful celluloid drama. Though producer Artur Brauner has made a bold try, he has been sorely let down by a script which is riddled with implausibilities.

Basic situation is expanded by having the inmate escape and his brother as pursuer-in-chief, harassed because the authorities are aware of the relationship and suspect that he may deliberately fail in his duty. But there's not much fear of that as the commandant is a dedicated Nazi and out for blood—even if it is his brother's.

Where the plot falls down is in the string of unlikely adventures of the man on the run. The first is when he is given food and shelter by a military nurse, who readily hops into bed with him after a acquaintance lasting just a few minutes. Then there is the Alsatian tracker dog who, after severely mauling the escaped prisoner, suddenly befriends him and they become inseparable companions. And finally the man, who finds him in a state of delirium, takes him home where he is breast-fed by his young wife. All these improbabilities—and others hurt this picture and could have been avoided if more attention had been given to plot construction.

Gotz George gives an adequate study of the man on the run, though his acting chances are restricted by the script. Gunther Ungenheuer makes a conventionally brutal commandant while Katinka Hoffman is attractive as the nurse. Direction looks leisurely, even though the pic has been trimmed to a convenient 84 minutes. The black and white lensing, particularly of the wintry countryside, is okay.

Only the opening sequences show camp life, and there are the familiar scenes of savage brutality, but once the escape alarm has sounded, the action folows the man on the run, making for the Russian lines, until shot by his brother as he is within earshot of his destination. A modern Cain and Abel situation which lacks the literary qualities of the original. Myro.

Yollymoon

(The Red Gate)
(KOREAN)

Berlin, July 2.

Sang-Ok Shin (Seoul) production. With Kim Dong Won, Han Un Jin and Chae Un Hee. Directed by Shin Sang Ok. Screenplay Kim Kwang Yoon; camera, Jeong Hae Joon; music, Jeong Yoon Joo. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 105 MINS.

This Korean feature pic is qualitywise, better than many Japanese productions. It's well acted and even very well photographed and not as brutal as similar Japanese productions. For a Korean pic, it has the flavor of a surprise entry. It's, of course, chiefly an item for the native market.

To keep "the red gate," the sign of purity, a young widow is forced to renounce her personal prosperity to her relatives. It takes her many years until she's able to leave the house of unhappiness. Film makes one familiar with problems of different calibre but there's something about the film which makes it quite interesting. Hans.

El Less Wal Kilab

(Chased By the Dogs)
(UNITED ARAB REPUBLIC)

Berlin, July 2.

Gamel el Leissi Films (Cairo) production. Stars Shokry Sarhan and Shadia. Directed by Kamal el Sheikh. Screenplay, Nageeb Mahfuz, Sabry Ezzat; camera, Kamal Kurayem; music, Andre Ryder. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 120 MINS.

This Arabian production, which reportedly has walked off with several honors in its native country, reveals considerable western influence but can't stand comparison with what filmites are doing in the western world. Apart from an overly-long running time of two hours, there are deficiencies with regard to cliche scripting, acting and directing. Pic stands small chance in the western market.

This concerns a man who was sentenced to five years in prison because of alleged theft. After his release, he seeks revenge on his wife who had accused him of theft and on society which he makes responsible for his ruined life. He becomes a killer and is eventually shot. It's the simple story of an unfortunate human being whom fate made a criminal.

Pic makes an attempt to criticize modern society but the outcome isn't very convincing. Everything remains too much on the surface while for western patrons the various players tend to overact considerably. Hans.

Alskarinnan

(The Mistress)
(SWEDISH)

Berlin, July 2.

AB Svensk Filmindustri production and release. Stars Bibi Andersson. Direction and screenplay, Vilgot Sjoman; camera, Lars-Goran Bjorne. At Berlin Film Fest. Running timee, 76 MINS.

The Girl	Bibi Andersson
The Boy	Per Myrberg
The Man	Max von Sydow
The Wife	Ollegard Wellten

One of Sweden's most successful commercial films this year, "The Mistress" is also notable for the fact that it is the first directorial effort of Vilgot Sjoman, who learned filmmaking under the guidance of Ingmar Bergman. He has certainly proved an apt pupil, and has written and directed a picture which should go a long way towards establishing his reputation. Pic has definite chances in the foreign markets, including U.S. arty possibilities.

As if taking a leaf out of his master's textbook, Sjoman has given this story of a young girl's passion for a married man an unhappy ending. But that was the logical thing to do, and the more conventional type fadeout would have obviously been contrived.

Bibi Andersson is the title character, and she is torn between a young student who genuinely loves her, and a married man who has a passionate attraction for her, and who takes every advantage of that fact. She knows she is not being too logical, and is aware that her emotions always get the better of her mind. In the end, when she is determined to make a temporary break from both men in her life, the married man follows her, persuades her to spend the night with him in his sleeping car compartment. But in the clear light of day she determinedly sails off on her own.

Typical of the structure of the film, there is one incident in the plot which puts the two principal characters into focus. The married man had promised to spend a whole day with her, but then starts making one excuse after another to delay his arrival. Eventually he shows up late in the evening, there's a quick tumble in bed, and he's away again.

Miss Andersson, a polished, attractive actress, plays the girl with a passionate intensity, but without overdoing the histrionics. Max von Sydow is credible as the married man and lover, and there are okay studies by Per Myrberg, as the student, and Ollegard Wellten, as the wife. Myro.

Choose Life

(SWISS-SWEDISH)

Berlin, July 2.

Beretta Film (Zurich) release of an Erwin Leiser-Hans Deutsch production. Written and directed by Leiser. Camera, Jean-Marc Bipert, Hiroshi Segawa, Otto Ritter; editor, Hans Heinrich Egger; music, Robert Blum. At Berlin film fest (out of competition). Running time, 100 MINS.

Erwin Leiser, creator of the successful "Mein Kampf," and who later made the Eichmann documentary, now has completed a trilogy "dedicated to the defense of man" by his production of "Choose Life," which puts the spotlight on the dangers of this atom age. It is an extremely well-planned treatment of a complex subject, containing large hunks of original celluloid in addition to some apposite, though partly familiar, library material. In its present form, this is too long, but it is to be edited down 20 minutes. That should hypo its commercial chances in many areas.

The title comes from an Old Testament quotation: "I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing: therefore, choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." Inspired by that text, Leiser presents atomic science as both a blessing and curse, but leaving man to make the decision between life and death. The title leaves no doubt where the film stands on this issue.

In a neat touch of symbolism, the opening sequence shows rural Mexico where simple folk happily accept the inevitability of death, just as they enjoy the simple pleasures of life. Then a dramatic switch to the brutal realities of life, with a few quick horrific shots of concentration camp victims, and then over to Hiroshima for the aftermath of the atomic explosion, with many unpleasant (though timely) reminders of the horror effects produced by that one bomb. But there is the implicit warning that today's atomic blasts would be many times greater.

There is a convincing note of optimism permeating the film. Hiroshima has been rebuilt, but does not forget. Young people all over the world demonstrate against the bomb and plead for an end to tests; science is using atomic discoveries for peaceful purposes, including medicine. But the threat continues, and the dangers from fallout remain a constant menace.

Understandably, the largest slice of the film is focussed on Japan, limiting the amount of time devoted to other countries. There

Italy's Year at European Festivals; Berlin Inactive In Deal-Making

Berlin, July 9.

The year 1963 may go down in history as the year of achievement for the Italian film industry in international film festivals. It has just achieved its latest triumph of sharing the Golden Bear at the Berlin fete with Japan, after having two outright wins at Cannes, with "The Leopard" and at San Sebastian with "Mafioso." The score of two and a half out of three, is believed to be unrivalled in recent times.

One of the more remarkable features of this unusual success story is the personal triumph scored by Alberto Sordi who stars in two of the three winning pictures—"Mafioso" and "Il Diavolo." He made in-person appearances at San Sebastian and Berlin that added to his prestige. That double tops Sidney Poitier's two acting awards at Berlin—one for "The Defiant Ones," five years ago, and for "Lilies of the Field" last week.

Though the awards of the Berlin festival jury did not raise any reaction from the audience during the presentations, a considerable amount of resentment was voiced by a wide segment of the industry when the prize winners became known.

The American colony, while gratified that there had been a major prize for "Lilies of the Field," made little secret of its disappointment at the failure of its main entry, "Freud," to get any mention in the listings.

There was also a substantial volume of criticism at handing out the Grand Prix to two such contrasting pictures as "Il Diavolo," which is strictly a commercial comedy and Japan's "Oath of Obedience," which was generally regarded as a grim, bloody and very repetitive subject. There was even more adverse comment on the best director accolade going to Nicos Koundouros for the Greek picture "Little Aphrodites," as many felt there were several more distinguished efforts worthy of a prize. Advance predictions had strongly tipped the Spanish director Juan Antonio Bardem for this prize, but the only mention accorded that picture was its selection by the International Critics Union (Unicrit), a recently formed organization which made its first award at Berlin.

Though the Italians were happy with the achievement, many were surprised that an award had not gone to "La Rimpatriata," which in the event, ended up with the FIRPRESCI prize. It was widely contended that this was far more a "festival type" picture than the winner.

While Berlin has always been regarded as a businessman's festival, without the distractions of the Mediterranean (Cannes) or the Adriatic (Venice) this year's trade results were disappointing. There was an abundance of sellers but few buyers, and though some deals were accomplished, the level of trading was way below past years and certainly not within shooting distance of the turnover negotiated during the Cannes fest.

'Cleo' Golden Gleam

Twentieth-Fox continues to ride high with the grosses being racked up daily by "Cleopatra" and "The Longest Day."

Company reports that "Cleo" racked up total theatrical grosses of $853,497 in 41 domestic theatres for the first five days (ended Sunday, July 7) of its second week.

"Day," meanwhile, has taken in $1,042,721 in the first 12 days of its New York metropolitan area general release in 31 theatres.

On Monday (8), the Rivoli in New York, where "Cleo" is in its preem engagement, reported it sold $16,957 worth of advance tickets, to establish a new Rivoli record for a single day's ticket sales.

National Screen Resumes Service To Col Aug. 1

National Screen Service will take over distribution of trailers and accessories for all Columbia releases beginning Aug. 1. This was disclosed in a joint announcement yesterday (Tues.) by Leo Jaffe, exec v.p. of Col, and Burton E. Robbins, president of NSS.

Col will continue to create and develop the trailers and accessories. This work, along with the distribution, had been assigned to NSS but the two companies had a complete split in September, 1960. They're going together again, so far as the distribution is concerned.

Unpredictable Hazard Of Filming: Sharks

Budva, Yugoslavia, July 9.

Columbia's "The Long Ships," Viking saga starring Richard Widmark and Sidney Poitier, has entered its fifth and final month of shooting with locations at this Adriatic coastal town. Only production problem so far has been a result of the unusually warm late spring weather, which increased the number of sharks off Budva and added to the ordinary hazards of sea shooting.

Production of "Long Ships" got underway early this year with a month of shooting about 450 miles north of Budva at the Limski Fjord. The picture's main set at Limski, a sprawling Viking village, has subsequently been taken over by the Yugoslav Tourist Federation, which is going to operate it as a tourist attraction.

The picture, which is being shot in Technirama 70, is directed by Jack Cardiff and produced by Irving Allen.

SAYS HE: PERFECT FEST NEVER WAS

By HANS HOEHN

Berlin, July 9.

The just terminated 13th Berlin International Film Festival and its director, Dr. Alfred Bauer, have been strongly criticized by a number of both domestic and foreign press people, especially those who represent boulevard papers. The festival was called "dull" and the festival chief "a man without imagination."

Bauer whom this reporter interviewed after the festival said this: "Two years ago I invited Jayne Mansfield to the festival. I said then: The boulevard press wants a bosomy star. Allright, it shall have one. What happened? More or less the same people who had been complaining about the absence of sex suddenly complained that the festival put too much emphasis on sex."

"It's the old story," said Bauer. "To make it right to everyone is an art which nobody masters. It already starts with the weather. Once we had cool weather during the festival. People complained that such weather handicaps the general mood. This time, it was beautiful sunshine. Again the more or less same people complained that it's too hot. . . .

"To my mind," Bauer said, "the average quality films shown at this year's Berlin festival was better than that of Cannes. Quite a number of critics have expressed the same opinion."

Bauer said that he will continue the Berlin film festival style as it is, that's to say with the participation of small—even smallest film nations. Berlin has a style of its own. It's a style that does not need palms and beaches. It has internationality and this internationality gives all film nations, even the smallest, the chance to be recognized here like the big film nations. And then this: Berlin's special position as a Soviet-menaced city requires tact towards all nations which sympathize with free Berlin. We can't give a small film nation the brushoff only because it's a small film nation."

With regard to star participation, Bauer said that he's corresponding with around 100 stars each year to come to Berlin. Due to other commitments, the stars often can't come. But Berlin has many friends. He referred to the fact that several pix shown at the Berlin fest had also been wooed by Cannes (the Swedish, the Spanish, the Argentinian entries, to cite examples) but Berlin was given preference.

Bauer also referred to the fact that many top-flight director personalities has come such as Michelangelo Antonioni, Leopoldo Torre Nilsson, Juan Antonio Bardem, Vilgot Sjoeman, Alain Robbe-Grillet, John Huston, etc. Already these men made Berlin an interesting meeting place.

With regard to the jury prizes, Bauer admitted that he was in several instances not of the opinion of the jury. The prizes, incidentally, met heavy criticism in the local press. That goes especially for the Grand Prize (The Golden Bear). And there are too many prizes. In all, 18 prizes were issued this year (including those of the Senator for Youth, the Catholic and Protestant Church, the International Film Critics Assn., etc.). One local paper wrote: "We wouldn't wonder if also the usherettes would climb the stage and hand out their prizes. . ."

TWO MORE FOR MOSCOW

Geraldine Page, Rip Torn Fly To Festival

Washington, July 9.

Geraldine Page and Rip Torn on Monday (8) accepted invitations from the Soviet Union to attend the Moscow Film Festival and flew there today (Tuesday).

Miss Page will return via Italy, where she will accept the David Di Donatello award for her "Sweet Bird of Youth" film roles.

Capra Walks as 'Circus' Goes Meller In Madrid; It's Thataway Hathaway

Madrid, July 9.

Frank Capra has exited the Samuel Bronston production of "Circus" after spending six months here in Madrid on the preparation. He was to have directed and will now be replaced by Henry Hathaway.

Philip Yordan switched storyline to apparent dismay of Capra. It is now described as a romantic melodrama, having been originally projected and accepted by Capra as a fantasy. Changes by Yordan, longtime writer-producer associate of Bronston, inspired Capra to want out.

Background of "Circus" is to be pre-1914 Central Europe. Shooting is expected to start in September with John Wayne, David Niven and Claudia Cardinale in leads. Various big top turns are being engaged at present.

Hathaway who replaces Capra was in the reverse role some months ago in Ireland when replaced on "Of Human Bondage" by Kenneth Hughes.

Roman Forum set used for Bronston's "Fall of The Roman Empire," now completed and in editing, will be used to create the sawdust arena needed for "Circus."

San Jose Circular Theatre

San Jose, Cal., July 9.

Syufy Enterprises is projecting a 950-seat circular theatre here, with tentative opening date of Oct. 1. It will be equipped for projection of all forms of film, from Cinerama to 35m.

Parking lot for 500 cars will surround structure for easier access.

Moscow's Jurors; Big French, Yank British Parties

Moscow, July 9.

The Jury for the Third Moscow International Film Festival (July 7-21), is made up of eight members. The eastern bloc has four members, one each from USSR. Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, the western bloc has two seats, to USA and Italy, and "Neutrals," so-called, Yugoslavia and Japan have one each. Here's the list:

Dusan Vukotic (Yugoslavia) cartoon director
Sergio Amideo (Italy)
Jan Prohaska (Czechoslovakia)
Jan Ribkowski (Poland)
Kiehiko Usihara (Japan)
Stanley Kramer (USA)
Janos Herschko (Hungary)
Sakej Ajmanov (USSR)

A reported documentary and short film jury will also function. Its constituent members are:

Thomas Guteres Alea (Cuba)
Mohamed Afifi (Morocco)
Juris Evans (Netherland)
Ion Popescu-Copo (Rumania)
Edgar Eanstay (Great Britain)
Llja Kopaljin (Czechoslovakia)
Fedor Hitruk (USSR)

France is expected to have the biggest delegation of 44 members including stars Simone Signoret, Dany Robin, Yves Montand, Jean Marais, Rene Clement, directors Pier Etex, Francoise Truffaux, Frederic Rosif. US delegation comes next with 22 members including Danny Kaye, Tony Curtis, Natalie Wood, Charlton Heston and director Billy Wilder.

British are sending 20 people under leadership of Eric Georg Fletcher. Lord Archibald and director Alexander McKendy. Edward G. Robinson and James Quin are ranked as "British stars." Italy is sending Claudia Cardinale, Julieta Massina, Sophia Loren, Marcello Mastroiani and Alberto Sordi.

"West Side Story" (UA) opened the Moscow Film Festival, out of competition. It was well received Sunday night by a mostly-Russian audience. Stanley Kramer, as a member of the festival jury, spoke via translation before the screening, warning the Russians that the locale and characters were only a small segment of New York life.

Columbia Wins Round In 'Paris by Night' Tiff

Hollywood, July 9.

Columbia Pictures won second round in its litigation with Leo Mantin over alleged plagiarism of title, "Paris By Night." Superior Judge Ellsworth Meyer yesterday (Mon.) set aside damages of $80,000 previously awarded to Mantin. In ruling on Columbia's motion for a new trial, Judge Meyer held that the damages are to be redetermined by a jury.

In court's 14-page opinion, it was stated that damages awarded to Mantin were speculative, uncertain and not supported by the evidence. Mantin had sued for $3,000,000 charging unlawful competition and plagiarism of his title.

Hollywood Directors See Possible Eastern Wedge Via IATSE Assistants

Longstanding talks between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Directors Guild of America through which DGA would take over control of New York assistant directors, presently members of IA Local 161, will go before the 161 membership for discussion later this month.

The dicker has been going on for some time and IATSE execs are said to look favorably on the plan and, natch, have a say in the matter. Should the 161 members decide to join the DGA, it would give the latter organization a toehold in Gotham filmaking which the organization presently lacks. Although the DGA is active in the east in tv, Screen Directors International Guild reps directors in New York.

Switch to the DGA has been discussed by the 161 exec committee and officers. It has yet to come before the membership for batting around, however, and this will bring the matter closer to some conclusion when presented to 161 members in the next week or so. The IA-DGA talks have blown hot and cold for quite a while but have warmed up again in recent months.

SPAIN MAKES 'WESTERN'

It's A Coproduction With Metro To Release

Madrid, July 9.

Mercedes Alonzo and Maria Granada are the female leads in "Gunfighters of Casa Grande" with Alex Nicol, Jorge Mistral and Steve Rowland in a Spanish-made "western" that Lester Welch (Gregor Productions, Hollywood) and Jose Maesso (Tecisa, Madrid) are coproducing for Metro release world-wide, less Spain and Portugal.

Mercedes Alonzo is a Tecisa contract star and Maria Granada had her first film role in "The Savage Guns," which Tecisa coproduced for Metro release early last year.

"Gunfighters," now filming, will be shot principally on locations in the Sierra Guadarrama foothills about 30 miles from Madrid as well as in an Andalusian hacienda outside the southern cognac city of Jerez during the 7-week schedule. According to Rowland, 400 horsemen and 1500 head of cattle will be used for the finale sequence in Cinemascope and Metrocolor.

'Irma' Leads New L.A. Films, Whopping $43,000; 'Prof.' Hep 30G, 'Escape' Boff 26G, 'PT' Smash 25G, 'Eagles' 20G

'Irma' Lusty $11,000, Prov.; 'Mountain' 8G

Providence, July 9.

Sock summer weather, Newport Jazz Festival, 4th of July fireworks celebrations, etc., proved stiff competition for firstruns in current week. Two which managed to stick their heads above the crowd are State's "Irma La Douce" and Majestic's "Spencer's Mountain." RKO Albee's second of "55 Days at Peking" is also good. Strand's "Nutty Professor" shapes slow.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (2,200; $1-$1.25)—"55 Days at Peking" (AA) (2d wk). Good $5,000. First was $6,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 90-$1.25)—"Irma La Douce" (UA). Big $11,000 or close. Last week, "Main Attraction" (MGM), $7,600.

Strand (National Realty) (2,200; 65-90)—"Nutty Professor" (Par). Slow $3,000. Last week, "Jason and Argonauts" (Col), $5,000.

'King Kong' Big $14,000, Hub; 'Cleo' Terrif 75G, 'Irma' 27G, 'Birdie' 25G

Boston, July 9.

Cool July 4 spurted pix biz in Hub, with cloudy weekend an added plus. Lines around big cinemas were welcome for exhibs holiday (4) night and Saturday (6) evening. "King Kong Vs. Godzilla" looks big at Memorial on opener. "L-Shaped Room" is hot at Beacon. "Mouse on Moon" is big at the Capri. "Young Racers" is rated slick at the Center. "Savage Sam" is just okay at the Paramount.

"Cleopatra" continues its amazing takeoff pace with torrid second round at Music Hall. "Irma La Douce" shapes smash again in second at Saxon. "Bye, Bye Birdie" is a sizzler at Astor, also second, marking biggest three films in Hub's history. All had long, long lines.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (B&Q) (1,117; 80-$1.50)—"Bye, Bye Birdie" (Col) (2d wk). Socko $25,000. Last week, $24,000.

B'way Booms; 'Women' Huge $48,000, 'Bwana' 21G; 'Horn' Soars to Mighty 195G; 'Irma' Wow 58G, 2 Reade Spots

Hypoed by holiday scales and out-of-town visitors, the long July 4 weekend will help Broadway firstrun biz generally in current stanza. More moderate temperatures are rated a plus factor, but clear, sunny weather took thousands away from N.Y. into the country, perhaps hurting the overall gross total. Upsurge enabled several houses to top last week's take or hold very close.

Top newcomer is "Women of World," which hit a wham $48,000 on initial round, daydating the Guild and Forum. At latter house, this is rated a high excepting for Christmas week while the Guild's biz is the best in two years. "Call Me Bwana" garnered a good $21,000 or close opening stanza at the Astor, with numerous dates in the Metropolitan area cutting biz at this house.

Leader in total coin easily was the Music Hall, with "Come Blow Your Horn" and stageshow. It looks to finish the fifth session today (Wed.) with a mighty $195,000, top business week of run. Stays on, of course. Another amazing performance was turned in by "Irma La Douce," daydating the DeMille and Baronet. Pic soared to a huge $58,000 for the fifth week which was not only way ahead of fourth round but very close to opening week.

Fellini's "8½" also displayed great strength by holding at $46,500, giant take, in second round, daydating the Embassy and new Festival Theatre. "Hand in Trap" hit a big $10,300 opening stanza at the Carnegie Hall Cinema.

"PT 109" finished its first holdover round daydating the Warner and Trans-Lux 52d Street with a good $24,000. "Hud" wound its sixth week daydating the Paramount and Coronet with an okay $34,000. Stays on in both houses.

'Birdie' Boffola 23G, K.C.; 'King Kong' Great 50G; 'Mountain' Lofty 9G, 2d

Kansas City, July 9.

Holiday week brought big figures to "Bye, Bye Birdie" at the Plaza and "King Kong Vs. Godzilla" in a 13-theatre multiple run. "Birdie" is setting a fantastic pace for biggest week in history at Plaza. "Kong" is rated great. "Gathering of Eagles" is mild in two houses.

Paramount is getting a big play with "Spencer's Mountain" in second round, and likely will go a third. Trade generally boosted by holiday. Weather continues its long hot streak.

Estimates for This Week

Brookside, Granada (Fox Midwest-Nat. Gen. Corp.) (800; 1,217; $1.25-$1.50)—"Gathering of Eagles" (U). Moderate $6,000. Last week, Brookside only, "Tammy and Doctor" (U) (5th wk), $2,500.

Capri (Durwood) (1,260; $1.50-$1.80)—"55 Days at Peking" (AA) (m.o.) (2d wk). Nice $6,000; holds. Last week, $9,000 at Saxon, now closed because of lack of air-conditioning.

Empire (Durwood) (886; $1.25-$2.50)—"How West Was Won" (MGM) (15th wk). Boosted by holiday biz and extra matinees, sock $13,000; holds. Last week, $12,000.

Fairyland, Kansas (Finkelstein) (1,500 cars, 1,000 cars), Heart (Noah-Wiles) (1,500 cars), 63rd Street (S & S) (1,500 cars), Leawood (Dickson) (900 cars), New 50 and New Claco (1,000 cars, 600 cars), Isis, Vista (FMW) (1,360, 700), Englewood, Dickinson, Overland Aztec (1,000, 700, 700, 500) (Dickinson) ($1 each)—"King Kong Vs. AN OUTDOOR MAN

Texas Cowboy, Age 90, Sees First Film — It's Lia.

Dallas, July 9.

A 90-year-old retired cowboy Isaac Newton Stout of Ringgold, Montague County, was the guest of the Interstate Theatres at the preview Wednesday (26) of "Cleopatra" (20th at the Tower Theatre. He was probably the only one in the audience who's never heard of Elizabeth Taylor or Richard Burton. This was the first motion picture seen by Stout and his first visit to Dallas, although he has lived for 80 years within 100 miles of this town.

Elderly cowboy said that there were always horses to break or something else to keep him busy, "I never got around to seeing any motion pictures."

per share. The price this year hit a high of $37 per share, which is a mighty rise. And president Darryl F. Zanuck reported on April 15, that the company, in 1962, had a staggering loss of $39,000,000.

A Touch of Red

Or take Paramount. This company's loss of only $3,400,,000 in 1962 was like the proverbial drop in the bucket when measured against inherent corporate values. There has yet to be any threat to the continuing dividend rate. It was the first Paramount red ink in 25 years. Par stock nonetheless hit a low of $35.25, compared with a high of $48.25 for the year, and is still (as of the closing last week) more than $7 short of the high.

Evidence of stock price volatility goes beyond these observations. The 20th shares, when selling at $37, had these props: Anticipation of "Cleopatra," a pretty widely accepted notion that "The Longest Day" would be a major money maker, and a tax loss carry-forward of $20,000,000.

And then despite these supporting items the quotation on 20th fell below $30—and this after "Cleo" opened to unprecedented advance sales, and "Longest Day" became established as a genuine blockbuster (separate story on "Day").

$41 Level

Par closed last week still at the $41 level and herein lies another apparent contradiction of logic. For this company is gaining ground nicely. Like all distributor-producers Par has had its ups and downs and at the moment is up.

Par is strong with "Hud," "Come Blow Your Horn" is fine and "Nutty Professor" may turn out to be the strongest Jerry Lewis grosser on the books. In any event all three clearly are established as clicks. Just starting out is the John Wayne starrer, "Donovan's Reef," and so far so good.

A v.p. of a major film company stated he just can't figure Wall Street in terms of his own company's price fluctuations. Bullishness and bearishness appear suddenly and no one seems to know why. Commented a senior officer of another film corporation: "Those fellows on the Exchange, I think, are sometimes as mixed up as we are."

Only God Can Make a Tree, But Looks Like Film Company Can Cut 'Em Down

Columbus, Tex., July 9.

Colorado County commissioners court would like to see Columbus in the motion pictures, but not at the cost of five 50-year-old magnolia trees on the courthouse lawn. The court members think they are on the horns of a dilemma, but they are not sure where the horns are.

Hal Fisher, the location manager for Columbia Pictures, has told the officials that the Colorado county courthouse and other buildings on the square are ideal for a film to be shot in September or October, tentatively entitled "The Travelling Lady."

But, Fisher said that five of the magnolia trees would have to be taken out so that camera shots could be made to and from the 73-year-old courthouse.

Commissioners and court members decided almost immediately they — and the voters — would rather have the magnolia trees than to gave the film shot here.

A group of Wharton businessmen, who have been in the negotiations all along, came here and explained to a small group of citizens, including four woman, that being the site of a film would mean far more to Columbus than would the five magnolias. What's mere beauty? It appeared that most of their listeners were like-minded as to commerce.

And the screenplay of "The Travelling Lady" is being written by Horton Foote, the Wharton native who also scripted "To Kill A Mockingbird."

The trees can not be removed for the filming then replanted nor can they be defoliated, according to some. However, a number of local residents prefer the filming over the magnolia trees.

HILL VS. H'WOOD—AGAIN

Repeats Charges Before NAACP Convention

Chicago, July 9.

"I accuse the motion picture industry of being artistically dishonest and socially irresponsible."

Such were the charges of NAACP exec Herbert Hill as he opened fire on the film industry last Friday (5), on the fifth day of the 54th annual convention of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. It was largely a reprise of what Hill had said to Hollywood itself.

Motion pictures were lumped with school history textbooks and other educational materials that have been distorting the role of the Negro in American life and have portrayed him inaccurately.

PUNCHY EMBASSY ITALO PAIR ROMP IN GOTHAM

Joseph E. Levine's Embassy Pictures is perking strongly in New York with two back-to-back hits and another pic which seems to have about the strongest legs around.

Now finishing its second week at the New Embassy and Festival Theatres, Federico Fellini's "8½," although dipping somewhat under the first week's very strong biz of $26,500 at the former house and $29,600 at the latter (Levine's own incidentally), is still registering hefty action at the wickets. Across the street from the New Embassy at the Forum, "Women of the World" wrapped up its first week yesterday (Tues.) at about $33,400 while at the Guild, the pic rated a strong $18,200.

"Divorce—Italian Style" still continues to show great strength, holding at about $7,500 in its 41st week at the Paris. This pic has now also spread into seven Long Island situations where it clocked in at a nice $50,000 in its first week and is holding firmly. This film is also doing biz in various other cities around the country.

Embassy also has some potentially strong pix coming up within the next few months, including "Threepenny Opera," which is set for a late summer U.S. preem and "Queen Bee" which has been released from U.S. Customs after a brief skirmish. As far as "8½" and "Women" look, they'll probably hold through the summer and then some. The latter opens July 24 at the Vogue Theatre, Los Angeles, and has lined up several other bookings around the country.

It is remembered that another documentary handled by Levine, "Sky Above — Mud Below," held through most of last summer at the Forum last year. Also, Gualtiero Jacopetti who made "Women," has a currently strong pic which has been attracting considerable attention in "Mondo Cane," a Times Film release. It was, in fact, "Women's" forerunner at the Forum.

LANDAU TAKES PAIR OF 57 ST. HOUSES

Ely Landau has officially taken over the Little Carnegie and Normandie Theatres on W. 57th St. between 6th and 7th Ave. His plans call for the operation of the houses as independent theatres until refurbishment is undertaken and completed, all of which is expected to happen by Sept. 30.

Once the two houses have been redecorated, Landau plans operating them as twin cinemas, that is theatres playing the same picture only at different time schedules as is done with Cinema I & II sometimes. It will not be a constant policy for the Landau houses either but will be done when advisable.

Currently at the Little Carnegie is "Mondo Cane" which has been held over from its original booking twice so far. It will exit on July 17, however, to make way for "This Sporting Life," British-made feature starring Richard Harris and Rachel Roberts. Into the Normandy, which is currently playing re-issues, will go 20th Century-Fox's "Marilyn" biopic of the late Marilyn Monroe. This will begin shortly.

As of Sept. 30, the names of the theatres will also be changed to match their new policy. Until then they will contiue to operate under their old handles. This now makes Landau and Joseph E. Levine the exhibition moguls of 57th St., Levine's Festival Theatre, operated in association with James J. Mage, having opened a couple of weeks ago with Federico Fellini's "8½" and located a block east from the Little Carnegie and Normandie. Levine is also presently constructing the Lincoln Arts, which will also be on 57th St. to the west of the Landau situations. This is slated to open at Christmas.

MAINE OBSCENITY PINCHES

Augusta, Me., July 9.

About 45 arrests have been made this year in the Maine State Police war on obscene films, pictures and books, it has been reported by Capt. J. Edward Marks, who said his troopers hope to suppress the illicit traffic before "it gets completely out of control."

He said all but two of the persons arrested pleaded guilty and paid fines ranging from $50 to the maximum $1,000.

He pointed out that an amended law makes Maine one of the few states where mere possession of obscene matter constitutes a criminal offense.

Saga of a Tired Spanish Loyalist

Fred Zinneman Foresees Nothing to Offend Madrid Government

Pau, France, July 9.

At work in Pau, the picturesque French town near the Pyrenees, on "Behold the Pale Horse" (Col), producer-director Fred Zinneman does not understand how Spanish authorities decided the film is anti-Spanish in any way. In fact, he feels it is apolitical.

The main characters may be Spanish and have been affected by the Spanish Revolution, says he, but they are treated 27 years later after their characters have been remolded and their actions mainly anachronistic. The theme deals with man and his need for faith, action and self respect in general and any Iberian governmental squawks are puzzling to him.

Zinneman wonders how this friction all began. He thinks that somebody may have mentioned the theme vaguely in Spanish film circles and some Ministerial office objected. It seems the script was presented to the Spanish Embassies in the U. S. and France and then politely handed to official circles in Madrid.

If embassies saw nothing wrong, official circles seemingly objected and it was bruited about that some reprisals against Columbia Films in general could be forthcoming. Zinneman does not think that a film has to be subject to any sort of control from foreign governments, but he also does not see any reason to withhold courtesy submissions of scripts on request.

But he feels the film is the thing and only on the finished product can it be judged. He opines this matter has been overblown and overstated and it will be resolved when the completed film can be viewed by the dissenting Hispano representatives in question.

Pic has Gregory Peck as a Spanish exile who has lived in the French town of Pau for over 20 years. Formally on the Loyalist side during the Hispano Revolution, he had become a resistance fighter making forays into Spain over the years and then, eventually, became just a terrorist and bandit. Now, getting on in years, he wants to stop.

But an obsessed Spanish police captain, played by Anthony Quinn, has vowed to someday get him and even concocts a plan to lure him back to Spain after not hearing of him for years. Also involved are a little boy who still looks up to the aging bandit as a hero. Also a dedicated Spanish priest played by Omar Sharif, who risks his life to bring word to Peck of his dying mother and the trap set for him by the police in spite of Peck's hatred of the Church.

Pic is being made entirely in France including the Spanish-localed scenes. But Zinneman says this is just for logistic reasons. Besides Pau, the city of Lourdes, where pilgrims come to the site of the miracle of Bernadette's vision, and Bayonne and Biarritz are also figuring in the exteriors before the production moves to the Paris studios of Saint Maurice next week.

Zinneman, who has not had a film on world screens since "The Sundowners" (WB) in 1960, says he felt it was time for one in '63 but his work on the mammoth project of "Hawaii," after two years, still had plenty of preparation to go, so he decided to do a film in the interim. He wanted to find a simple story, stressing characterization and not complicated technically for his next pic.

Emeric Pressburger's book "Killing a Mouse on Sunday" fit his ideas and he had JP Miller do the script. Then his Highland Production Co. and Peck's Brentwood Productions combined to produce with Columbia for distribution.

Pau was picked since it is the site of the book and Pressburger wrote it there. Crew is French with lensing by Jean Badal who has worked with many of the unorthodox youngblood French directors.

Canada's Future

ducers to Canada to make pix, and since costs are no less in Canada than in the States, those pix which are made north-of-the-border will probably be confined to those subjects which are more or less indiginous to Canada.

In his role as exec director of the CNFB, Juneau said that while there need not be any difference "between entertainment and social truth," he did not think that pictures which deal with "individual psychology" would be of particular interest to the Canadian government, which sponsors the Film Board.

Thus the board's first feature, the aforementioned "Pour La Suite du Monde," made on a budget of $75,000, deals with life on a small island in the St. Lawrence River, a la Flaherty, and its second feature, "The Drylanders," with life in western Canada.

Resuming his role as fest prexy, Juneau reported that about half of the fest's budget, (something over $100,000) is accounted for by ticket sales, with the remainder coming from a variety of private and public sources, including Quebec's Department of Cultural Affairs; the Canadian Council, set up by the government to support the arts, sciences and humanities, and Rothmans of Pall Mall, a tobacco firm.

He also reported an interesting aspect to the showing of the Film Board's "Pour La Suite du Monde" at the fest. The same night it is screened at Loew's Theatre (where all fest screenings are held), the picture will be shown over the French tv net covering Montreal, Ottawa and the Maritime Provinces. Pic will eventually go into theatrical distribution (by Art Films) in the fall.

Lineup at Montreal

Of the 20 feature films due to be unspooled at the fourth International Montreal film fest, Aug. 2-11, the following titles are now definitely set:

"The Leopard," directed by Luchino Visconti (Italo-U.S.); "The Sporting Life," Lindsay Anderson (Great Britain); "The Trial of Joan of Arc," Robert Bresson (France); "Pour La Suite du Monde," Michel Brault and Pierre Perreault (Canada); "The Bandits of Orgosolo," Vittorio De Seta (Italy); "The Pitfall," Hiroshi Teshigahara (Japan); "The Little Soldier," Jean-Luc Godard (France); "Salvatore Giuliano," Francesco Rosi (Italy); "Luciano," Gian-Vittorio Baldi (Italy); "The Exterminating Angel," Luis Bunuel (Mexico); "Knife in The Water," Roman Polanski (Poland); "An Autumn Afternoon," Yasujiro Ozu (Japan; "The Stoolie," Jean-Pierre Melville (France); "The Eclipse," Michelangelo Antonioni (Italy), and "Harakiri," Masaki Kobayashi (Japan).

Among the pix still to be skedded are a U.S. indie feature and a Russian feature.

Included in the shorts category will be Ernie Pintoff's "The Critic" and John Hubley's Oscar-winning "The Hole," both from the U.S.

Pep Hubmen On 'Peking'

Boston, July 9.

Jack Goldstein, exploitation director for Samuel Bronston Productions, outlined plans to theatre managers, circuit execs and touters here this week on the campaign for the first multiple break of "55 Days at Peking."

Goldstein said there will be a "heavy expenditure" covering radio, tv and a series of four newspaper insertions plus sky banners from planes over the Red Sox ballpark and beaches. At the brain sesh were Harry Goldstein, New York office; Phil Engel, exploitation New England territory; Ben Abrams, branch manager, and Jerry Callahan, AA branch, Boston.

Allied States Sees Some Progress Against Early Selloff to Television

Detroit, July 9.

As expected, television was the whipping post for National Allied's board which met here last week, and the director's claimed to have drawn blood.

The directors hailed a "breakthrough" in the war against film distributors who sell to tv and simultaneously, or nearly so, release the old pictures for theatre showing. And, they saw a silverlining in the pending NBC-MCA-Universal deal which would enable the tv industry to "stand on its own feet in providing entertainment instead of being a parasite on the motion picture industry."

The "breakthrough" came when American International Pictures promised that in addition to its current policy of witholding tv release for five years for new product, it will make that policy apply to all its past releases as well. Furthermore, AIP will advise Allied well in advance of any tv releases enabling Allied to inform members so they will not "experience the unfortunate incident of simiultaneous tv showing."

The promises were in a letter from James H. Nicholson. prexy, and Samuel Z. Arkoff, veepee, of AIP, to Jack Armstrong, prexy of Allied. As a result of the letter, Allied directors issued a "directive" to members to indicate their appreciation of AIP's act by "booking AIP product at every possible opportunity." This request has been made in the past by Allied, but never before in the form of a "directive."

The "television-is-growing-up" statement came from Milton H. London, executive director of National Allied. It was made, he said, to clarify the pending NBC-MCA-Universal deal to produce theatrical flim for $750,000 to quiet fears of exhibs.

London said: "Now, we have been told you can't make a good theatrical film for $750,000 to $1 $1,000,000. That, however, is the budget for these proposed tv productions and cannot therefore be taken as serious competition. The development is a logical one from the 30-to-90-minute tv features and segments now being produced.

"It is the sense of this meeting that this will spread the cost of maintaining studios by keeping them busy, and by steadier employment even improve the quality of theatrical films. Finally, this will do for the movies what stock companies do for the legitimate stage by training new talent and developing new stars."

In other action, Armstrong was instructed to form a permanent comittee to aid the Hollywood Museum project. The Board also adopted resolutions continuing support of the Will Rogers Hospital and O'Donnell Laboratories, voted a contribution to former publisher Pete Harrison who is ill with an incurable disease, and pledged to continue the fight to elliminate the Federal admission tax.

The board decided its next meeting will be in Chicago in September, followed by one to be held immediately before the New York convention in October.

Paul Heller, Torre Nilsson Pards for 1 British Film

London, July 9.

Paul Heller, producer of "David and Lisa," and Leopoldo Torre Nilsson, the Argentinian director, are to join forces and make a picture in Britain this fall.

The film, "A Beautiful Family," is based on an original story by Beatriz Guido (Mrs. Torre Nilsson), and the screenplay is now being written by Edna O'Brien. Casting will not start until the script is completed by the end of next month.

Heller was in London prepping the project, and discussing distribution and finance with British outfits. It will be the director's first film outside his native Argentinia, where he has made 16 films since he started directing in 1950.

Tammy Grimes to Repeat Stage 'Rattle' Role In Sidney Box Film Version

Hollywood, July 9.

Frank Cooper agency has completed first step in packaging film production of "Rattle of a Simple Man," Broadway and London comedy produced by David Merrick in association with Michael Codron. Property has been sold to British producer Sidney Box, with playwright Charles Dyer already having completed a film adaptation and legit star Tammy Grimes to repeat her role in the film.

Deal is one of the many full package activities which, according to Cooper, has "today made agencies become virtually producers." Cooper said his company is stepping up such literary activities and developing into a full packager who puts all the elements of production together before making a deal.

Similar projects now being set up involve "Act of Destruction," Ronald Hardy novel which Cooper has sold to Joseph Landon for a Warner Bros. film deal. Cooper will continue on the package throughout.

In expanding literary work, Cooper within the past few months has added Bill Belasco, Mort Viner and Martin Leeds to his Hollywood staff and Jay Wolf in New York.

Other properties in various stages of presentation include "Two Hours to Darkness," recently sold to William Ludwig, Reuben Bercovitch and Hank Saperstein; "Master of This Vessel," novel by Gwyn Griffin; "Passion in Rome," by Morley Callaghan; "Fear Is the Key," Alistair MacLean; "Twenty-Four Fine," Frank O'Rourke; "The Spring Madness of Mr. Sermon," R. F. Delderfield; "The Chaplain's Braid," Ric Hardman, and "Pajama Tops." Latter is the Stan Seiden-Zev Bufman legit farce which Cooper is handling for producers on a film deal. Show is now at Winter Garden in New York.

Similarly, having aided in packaging "Seven Days in May" for producer Edward Lewis and Paramount, Cooper now is packaging "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," which Lewis is to do on Broadway. Office also is handling "Man From La Mancha," by Dale Wasserman who wrote "Cuckoo." Albert Marre will produce the play. Mel Lazarus is now adapting his novel "The Boss Is Crazy, Too," as a legit package.

Lord Making a Career Out of Playing 'Leiter'

Hollywood, July 9.

Jack Lord has been set for a second Ian Fleming picture, "Goldfinger," to be done late this year in London. Lord continues in role of "Felix Leiter," which he played in "Dr. No," first of 10 Fleming pix being planned by producers Harry Saltzman and A. R. (Cubby) Broccoli. Pair purchased rights to 10 Fleming novels.

Lord said "Leiter" character will run in seven of the 10 features planned in the series and that he will continue doing the role. Terence Young directs, with screenplays by Richard Maibaum, Johanna Harwood and Berkeley Mather.

Meanwhile, Lord, who returned last week from eight weeks of personal appearances in Europe on behalf of "Dr. No," said he has also been discussing "The Thin Red Line," James Jones novel, with producer Sidney Harmon and writer Phil Yordan, who will make the picture. Phil Carlson is under negotiation to direct. Similarly, actor said he was offered "The Devil Came From Dublin," Paul Vincent Carroll screenplay, for Herakles Productions. Bernard Wiesen directs, with Diane Cilento set as femme star. Picture will be made in Dublin, "Red Line" in Spain.

ARROGANCE CONCEDED, BUT UNFAIRLY FIRED

Washington, July 9.

A National Labor Relations Board trial examiner charged Film Inspection Service Inc. of New Orleans, La., with unfair labor practices. Company inspects and repairs motion picture film for shipment to Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida for seven major distributors. It was cited for illegally discharging an employee because of his union activities.

Roy Hirstius, business agent for Local B-57, IATSE and Motion Picture Machine Operators of the U. S. and Canada, was fired after several disputes with the company prexy Daniel Brandon.

Examiner Horace Ruckel hung the adjectives "conceited" and "arrogant" on Hirstius and some of his actions but ruled nevertheless that the real reason for his dismissal was his union activities.

Ruckel recommended Hirstius be reinstated in his former position without prejudice to his seniority and other rights and with full back pay.

The examiner's recommendation is subject to further action by the NLRB.

Hub's All-Femme Reviewers Rave It Up for 'Cleo'

Boston, July 9.

"Cleopatra" grossed a tremendous $75,000 during the initial week at Ben Sack's Music Hall. On Saturday unused balcony was opened in the 4,300-seat house where 2,215-seats are usually sold at $3.90 top.

Boston reviewers accorded the film raves to a man, or rather to a woman, since all of them are femmes. Said Elinor Hughes, Herald: "It's bigger than you heard; it's more beautiful than you can imagine, and it's more spectacular than anything you've seen before . . ." Alta Maloney, Traveler: "The funny part of it all is that this is a wonderful film, a completely satisfying one from every point of view. The popular audience will relish the rich screenplay based on Plutarch, Suetonius and others.

"The intellectuals will ogle Elizabeth Taylor's thighs and yearn for a sudden drought to drop the water level in the queen's bath. The women will consider briefly Richard Burton's bandy legs and chorus their appreciation for the sexy suavity of Rex Harrison. It seems inconceivable that such a good film could have come out of the confusion surrounding its shooting, or even—if a snobbish-aside is permitted—out of $38,-000,000. But there it is."

Peggy Doyle, Record American: "'Cleopatra,' the motion picture that has more curiosity value than any in the history of the film industry is brillant, exciting, memorable, film-making . . . Nor is 'an extravagance of expediture beyond measure or belief' of which Plutarch wrote in describing the way of life of these 'Inimitable Lovers' missing from the widest screen in this part of the country as the $40,000,000 20th Century-Fox film is unreeled . . ."

Marjory Adams, Globe: "The film is something in the nature of a cinematic tidal wave in its very bigness sweeps away most objections. It's like a three-ring circus—if you don't like the acrobats, you can wait for the elephants. And if you fail to appreciate Miss Taylor's acting, believing that she only once in a while attains any sense of grandeur as Egypt's queen, there is all that lustrous beauty of form and face which distinguishes her as one of the great beauties of modern time. Nor is Miss Taylor loath to give her admirers plenty to look at. Cecil B. DeMille would have been pea-green with envy, were he now alive, to see the naked Miss T. bathing in an over-sized tub and sailing a small golden boat holding ointments . . . 'Cleopatra' is certainly big, it is expensive enough to keep Boston talking all Summer, Fall and Winter—and then on into the Spring—but it will have the malcontents to deal with along with the widely enthusiastic . . ."

'Cleo': Her San Francisco Press

San Francisco, July 9.

Local film critics' reaction to 20th's "Cleopatra," which opened Wednesday (26) at the appropriately-named Alexandria Theatre, were mixed. Most agreed the first half is superb and the second lags in comparison; all praised Rex Harrison as Caesar; and all were critical of Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor.

Paul Speegle, News-Call-Bulletin: "No movie should cost $40 million, but if that sum had to be spent . . . it couldn't have been poured out to better advantage . . . It is a stunning achievement in the art of motion pictures and a towering testimonial to the separate skills of Joseph L. Mankiewicz as a writer, director and film cutter and diplomat . . . The settings are unbelievably magnificent, the costumes something out of designer's most opulent dreams. The scene in which Cleopatra makes her triumphal entry in Rome . . . dwarfs every other processional I've ever seen in motion pictures . . . The supporting cast is perfect, down to the smallest speaking role."

Stanley Eichelbaum, Examiner: The picture "is indeed a knockout—by no means a masterpiece, but surprisingly high-caliber entertainment, on the most lavish scale ever seen—and sophisticated enough as drama to elevate it above the pure spectacle level of an expensive epic . . . It is . . . a strangely unmatched movie in two distinct segments . . . Visually, the film offers unsurpassable pleasures of pomp, color and opulence, with settings that make one wonder how Fox managed with only $40,000,000 . . . The legend of Cleopatra deserved this sort of screen treatment. And now that the hysteria has subsided, the movie can be appreciated for the virtues that it happily has."

Paine Knickerbocker, Chronicle: ". . . a film of considerable distinction, sometimes brilliant and sometimes dull, with many sequences breathtaking to behold however absurd they may be, and with a superbly written and acted characterization of Caeser by Rex Harrison . . . Those who have the courage to leave at the intermission will have seen a fascinating and admirable picture; they will miss only a few sequences of note, and they will have experienced a moving, witty and visually enthralling drama. If they stay until the end, they may find occasion to whine as it becomes tedious . . .

". . . During the drama that covers 18 years, her (Cleopatra's) appearance does not change, and the sands of time run slowly through the hourglass of her persistent decolletage . . .

"The surroundings and trappings . . . are superlative. Much of the $40 million allegedly spent on the film may not be indicated on the screen, but the vulgarity of Cleopatra's approach, whether it be her parade on Rome or her barge in Tarsus, is diverting."

Theresa Loeb Cone, Oakland Tribune: ". . . One of the most magnificent jobs of color photography ever accomplished by film makers . . . Granted that Elizabeth Taylor recites a good percentage of her dialogue like a high school junior who doesn't understand her lines, she is, nonetheless, spectacularly beautiful Some of the most epic of all spectacle scenes brought to the screen . . . If it weren't already in the dictionary, the word 'lavish' would have to be invented . . .

Columnist Herb Caen, Chronicle: "Some of the critics have been unkind about Miss Taylor's performance, but I think she showed miles and miles of heart. All the way down to her navel."

Crowther In Minneapolis

Minneapolis, July 9.

The two, and only, dailies here both carried panning reviews of 20th's "Cleopatra." Hence the theatre is giving prominence in its advertising to the rave notice of Bosley Crowther in the N.Y. Times and other favorable Manhattan notices.

Among other derogatory things, one of the two local slamming daily newspaper reviews of "Cleopatra" said in its first paragraph: "When it offers spectacle, it offers glorious spectacle. When it's a bore, unfortunately, it is a big bore. And, toward the end of its almost four-hour length, when endurance has been taxed to the uttermost, even the big glorious spectacle becomes a bore."

However, the aforementioned review concluded: "But 'Cleopatra' is a film you probably should go see as part of your life-enrichment program—just as you should go see Yosemite National Park. It will give you an idea of what God could have done with Yosemite if he had $40,000,000 to play around with."

Redstone of Boston In Buy of Boudouris Trio; Toledo Staff Retained

Toledo, July 9.

Theatre Operating Co. has sold three of its drive-in theatres, all in the Greater Toledo area, to Redstone Management Inc. of Boston which operates a group of drive-ins and hard-tops along the Eastern Coast. Redstone has acquired the 1,500-car Miracle Mile, Jackman & Laskey Rd., Toledo, the only year-round ozoner in this area; the Franklin Park Drive-In, 5225 Monroe St., holding 950 cars; and the Maumee Drive-In on Conant St., in nearby Maumee, holding 900 cars.

Theatre Operating Co., which is headed by Al Boudouris, also owner of Eprad Inc., Toledo manufacturers of theatre sound equipment, will continue to operate its other drive-in theatres, the Battle Creek and the West Point, both in the Battle Creek, Mich., area; the Scioto Breeze Drive-In, Lucasville, O., the Little Flower Drive-In, Ottawa, O., and the Great Oaks, Cedar Lake, Ind.

Redstone Management previously had one drive-in theatre in Ohio, the Oakley Drive-In, near Cincinnati. Manuel Lima, district manager for Redstone in the Metropolitan area of New York City, who came to Toledo to supervise the takeover, said that there would be no changes in operating personnel, with Jim Dempsey continuing as area manager in charge of the three drive-ins; Mrs. Bonnie Kennedy remaining as manager for Miracle Mile, Paul Smith. manager at Maumee, and Glenn Stansbury, manager at Franklin Park.

Dallas Opens All Seats to Negroes

Dallas, July 9.

Negro members of Dallas' Community Relations Committee informed 125 leaders of the organized Negro activity in Dallas that all of the city's motion picture theatres are now open to all citizens. Dallas was one of the most reluctant of Dixie communities.

It was one of the final steps in the peaceful desegregation of Dallas that has been planned and executed by the Community Relations Committee—a group of white and Negro leaders that has become a model for many American cities.

The theatres have been admitting Negroes on an integrated basis since June 24.

Gov's WOMPI Spiel

John Connally, Governor of Texas and former Secretary of the Navy, will be the main speaker at the 10th annual International Conference & Convention of the Women of the Motion Picture Industry, to be held in Dallas, Sept. 13-15. He'll address a banquet Sept. 14 at the Regency Hotel, speaking on the natural subject "Woman Power."

Joan Crawford, a WOMPI member, has been invited to intro the governor and to make the presentation of plaques to him and his family, honoring the group as "Family of the Year." Sue Benningfield of Texas Congress of Motion Picture Organizations (COMPO) is running the show and Conrad Brady, Intersate Theatres exec, will be toastmaster.

New York 20, New York

Dear Joe:

East side, west side, all over town, WOMEN OF THE WORLD is sensational!

The Forum Theatre has just broken an all-time 40-year record to the astounding figure of $33,800 for the opening week.

The Guild Theatre in Rockefeller Center has had the same reaction as Broadway grossing $18,200, one of the highest figures ever.

For a film to appeal so strongly to two completely different types of audience is exciting proof of its tremendous boxoffice power, and of the unique showmanship that is the trademark of Embassy Pictures.

My congratulations to you and your fine staff; I am looking forward to a sensational summer at both theatres with WOMEN OF THE WORLD.

All best wishes,

Norman

ONE-CAMERA CINERAMA HOUSE FOR TED MANN

Minneapolis, July 9.

Ted Mann, prez of the Minneapolis-headquartered Mann Circuit, has added a 1,500-seat theatre to his chain. The as-yet-unnamed theatre will be the first built in Minneapolis expressly for the new one-projector Cinerama process and will also be equipped to show Todd-AO and all other standard ratios.

Construction will begin shortly on the house, which is expected to be completed by early 1964. It is to be located in the Southtown Shopping Center, the newest shopping area in the city. House, natch, will include various theatre innovations and will have parking facilities for 500 cars.

Fire Guts Knoxviller

Knoxville, Tenn., July 9.

One of the largest main street fires in Knoxville history destroyed the 1,000-seat first-run Riviera Theatre. Future plans for the theatre have not been disclosed. The house is owned by Simpson Operating Co., of Atlanta, and is managed by Hugh Rainey.

The fire started shortly after opening time at 1:30 p.m. The audience, composed mostly of children, was quickly evacuated. Ushers started getting patrons out when they scented smoke.

Damage to the theatre, the second largest in Knoxville, was estimated in excess of $200,000.

Philly Decision

ist in bidding areas. The adjustment is a reevaluation of a film licensing deal whereby, in simplest terms, the distributor eases rental terms when, upon playoff of a picture, it's learned that the given picture warranted an easier deal for exhibitor in the first place.

The court made no ruling on validity of adjustments. But Levy quotes Robert Bicks, former head of the Antitrust Division, Dept., of Justice, as saying, "I do not think that we have ever taken the position that adjustments are barred by Decrees."

Levy says this all should influence distributors into providing adjustments where warranted and they shouldn't claim they're enjoined from doing so.

Court edict, states Levy, also confirms that a picture should not be awarded to a bidding theatre simply on the basis of the amount of money offered by said theatre. Other factors may determine the superiority of the bids, including earning and exploitation potential of the theatre, location, seating capacity, performance record, the experience of management, suitability of accommodations and standards of maintenance.

Another point in the court decision cited by Levy has to do with conspiracy—or the theory that because certain distributors behave in the same business way they're acting in concert. This is the doctrine of "conscious parallelism" and it's an old chestnut that's been pretty well discarded, commented Levy.

Said the Philly court ruling in part: "...the courts have recognized that certain parallel behaviour is inherent in many business settings. Therefore it has been held that proof of a conspiracy may not rest on similarlity of conduct in the absence of evidence that the alleged wrongdoers were mutually aware of such conduct and that the mutual awareness entered into the decisional processes."

Plaza, Chi, to Naked Idiom

Chicago, July 9.

Plaza Theatre, an offbeat art house for the past six months, has been leased by Ed Ross, operator of a nudie theatre in Kansas City (Strand Art), and has converted to a skinfilm policy. First bill is "Lucky Pierre" and "Daughter of the Sun."

Theatre is located in the Old Town section of Chicago, and is the first house to play the pelt pix outside the Loop with the exception of a brief run of "Paradisio" in several nabe situations. Ross said that he felt the North Ave. location was a good bet because of the recent development of the area as a focal point for small niteries and folk spots.

A distributor disclosed that several out-of-town nudie house ops have long been eyeing the success of the downtown Capri Theatre and have been looking for another outlet for skinpix. The Monroe, also in the Loop, shows buff bills occasionally. However, until Ross took over the Plaza, it was felt that a large transient walk-in trade was essential.

Gettysburg Fiasco

tle for car sticker ID signs, which seemed to do nothing but infuriate police, pedestrians and other, stickerless, drivers alike. It didn't help when these reporters, trying to argue their way into an action area, spotted moppets of five and six years comfortably esconced in the limited press seating section and sporting the official badges.

Various reactivated "Civil War" units, in authentic uniforms and carrying authentic weapons, tried hard to capture the spirit of the commemoration, but their efforts were overshadowed by the hard commercial sell of junk souvenir stuff, and a thoroughly tasteless parade production and re-staging of "Pickett's Charge."

The parade, after its first section passed, consisted of a few snappy regular service units (Army, Navy, Air Force) plus dreary march-bys of battalions of National Guardsmen, looking unhappy and bedraggled—it had poured rain as the parade was forming, the sudden storm catching everyone in the open.

Also, high school bands with leg-tossing majorettes, all regaling the memory of July, 1863, and the bitter cost of Gettysburg, with trick-rhythm pop tunes, and rock-n-roll versions of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

The big event of July 3, reenactment of Pickett's Charge, was the major effort of the professional production staff, headed by Adele Gutman Nathan, New York, who got $12,500 for the job. Louis M. Simon, also of New York, was producer ($8,000), and Richard Bernstein, Broadway and off-Broadway stager, was director (no fee listed).

Ben Grauer was the master of ceremonies, with Maj. George Fielding Elliot credited as military analyst, and Walter Abel, the legit actor, as narrator. Between them, this trio split $5,000.

About 1,100 authentically uniformed "troops" of the North and the South, all working for expenses, carried out the reenactment, which was noiseless—no discharge of firearms permitted on Gettysburg Battlefield, by orders of the National Park Service.

It wasn't supposed to be noiseless; the Commission had bought a special stereophonic tape, recorded in New York at a cost of $3,500, then installed a special stereo speaker system, tabbed at another $3,800, to play the tape for the crowds gathered around the target area of Pickett's Charge.

The tape was to reproduce the sounds of battle, in "all its fury."

Bad Sound

In its July 4 edition, published at 9 p.m. July 3, the Lancaster (Pa.) Intell said "frankly, we have heard more noise at an Italian wedding; even at an Irish wake."

Possibly 75,000 persons witnessed this climactic event, although it is unlikely than more than 2,000 of them heard anything that Actor Abel had to say. A stiff breeze put the Indian sign on the costly speaker system, and the thunder of Pickett's Charge sounded like static on a next-door neighbor's radio.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower was honorary chairman for this whole affair, but after officiating at the opening day ceremonies (July 1) Ike took off on a trip, and was not around for the balance of the $180,000 show.

That tab, incidentally, has produced some howls among the Democratic side of the Pennsylvania General Assembly. They were screaming, in fact, before the affair; if they attended any or all of it, they probably are even more unhappy right now.

Originally, $100,000 had been budgeted. Asked to approve a $35,000 deficiency appropriation, the Pennsylvania House squawked loud and long, several members screaming that the "commemoration" cost would exceed the cost of the actual Battle of Gettysburg (to the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania).

They cut the requested extra coin to $28,000, and that only after acrimonious debate and a few apple-polishing deals.

Gettysburg merchants, on the other hand, never had it so good. Huge inventories of camera film were completely depleted by July 2. In fact, there didn't seem to be anything they couldn't, and didn't, hawk to the throngs of spend-happy tourists.

Best thing is, for them this doesn't end.

Trend's Combo: Films and Disks To Foreign Marts

Coast-based Trend International, Indie outfit, plans distribution of film and wax product in 51 countries outside of the U. S. Some of the product to be released via the operation will be produced by Trend which presently operates a subsid which makes tv commercials called General Animation Studios.

The company presently has four feature films planned for market in 1963-64. Of these two will be live action and two animated. The first of these, a cartoon spec called "Enchanted World of Mother Goose," is currently in work. In addition to the four features, plans call for the making of 39 animated cartoons, 13 six-minute episodes of each of three series. Additionally, Trend will produce 104 three-minute musical shorts.

The three series of six-minute pix will be sold to tv and theatres while the three-minute musicals will be booked on tv and film jukeboxes, dubbed in various languages, in addition to some theatrical bookings. Trend Records, the company's disk division, will additionally offer 36 LPs and some 120 singles, some of the latter lifted from the albums, in the 1963-64 season. These are to include scores from pix and promising material from shorts.

Further product will come from indie producers, according to the plan, in both the film and record fields. These will be marketed globally under the Trend logo. All releases from both film and disk sources will be issued abroad via tendem distribution and merchandising operations, as is the plot for Trend's own material.

Also planned is the gradual withdrawal of the General Animation studio from commercial work to concentrate on the creation of cartoon features and the servicing of product for the juke film and tv markets. Dave Fleisher, an innovator in the field of cartoons and long-time producer of same, is guiding the Trend pic-making operation.

H. B. Meiselman Spreads

Charlotte, N.C., July 9.

H. B. Meiselman, Charlotte theatre operator and businessman, has bought the Providence Shopping Centre from Vernon Goode and Lloyd Goode Jr., both of Charlotte, and Mrs. David Clark of Lincolnton. A supermarket, a theatre and several stores are located in the centre, built in 1947.

Meiselman said he plans to build a 1,000-seat theatre on Pineville Road. Construction of this theatre, announced some months ago, will begin this summer.

Re-do Broadway's Stanley Warner

Changeover to One-Lens Cinerama for Nov. 17 Preem —House Will Have Around 1,500 Seats

Stanley Warner Theatre, N. Y., will close at the end of this month for three months during which time it will undergo a $400,000 refurbishing in preparation for the opening there of Stanley Kramer's "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" Nov. 17.

A large bulk of the renovation will center on installation of Cinerama's new one-lens process. Instead of having the three separate projection booths in the rear of the house as are presently positioned, one large booth, positioned further back, will be created, still equipped to handle three-camera projection in case the new single-lens equipment isn't available in time for the Gotham bow, as some fear could be the case. In the event that all is well with the single-projector plan, the big booth will then be trimmed to a one-projector size.

Seating capacity will be lessened somewhat to 1,500 from the present 1,800 locations because some of the balcony area will be removed and the orchestra seating plan will also be moved toward the rear more than it presently is. There will, of course, be other changes in the decor, sprucing up the house somewhat. The Warner was the first Gotham Cinerama house and is now to be the first to be set up for the single-lens Cinerama development, although existing Cinerama situations can play the process too, natch.

The "Mad World" preem at the theatre will be a gala affair in the form of a benefit for various Joseph P. Kennedy foundations set up to honor the eldest Kennedy son who was killed during World War II. It will be a celeb-politico et al attended affair.

YOUNG-IN-ARTERIALS MAY APPLY AT 20TH

Twentieth-Fox this month will accept applications from a second group of candidates for its executive training program. According to exec veep Seymour Poe, the first group of trainees, who initiated the program last fall, has worked out so well that 20th plans to extend the program eventually to involve "understudies" in all phases of company operation here and abroad.

All potential trainees must be under 30, with a business background preferred, but no experience in the film industry required.

Chilling Systems Falter in Swelter, Move 2 Bookings

Kansas City, July 9.

Durwood Theatres suddenly closed two of its downtown stations Wednesday (3), giving as its reasons problems with the air-conditioning system. Theatres are the Saxon and the Studio, both in the same building, the former Loew's Midland.

Saxon has been showing key first runs, and currently was in midst of engagement of "55 Days at Peking." This moved over to the Capri, which recently went dark after a long run with "Mutiny on the Bounty." It's a 1,260-seater with adequate air conditioning.

Same time circuit took "Divorce, Italian Style" out of the Studio, lounge theatre downstairs in the Saxon, and moved it to the Academy, upstairs arty in the Empire Theatre building. Second run of "To Kill a Mockingbird" at the Academy was dropped in favor of "Divorce," enjoying a long subrun at the Studio, 150-seater.

Saxon has been seating 1,119, revised from the 3,300 of the original Loew's Midland by closing the balcony and screening off part of the main floor. Theatre has one of the oldest cooling plants in town, and was known to be borderline for some time. No decision as to when the theatres might be reopened.

"Peking" went into the Saxon on an announced limited engagement, possibly expecting 5 week run. Capri had been expected to reopen in July with "Cleopatra," but no date has been announced for that. "Peking," at least, fills the gap until more firm arrangement can be made for the Capri.

This leaves Durwood operating the Empire (886) with "How the West Was Won" in Cinerama; Roxy Theatre (664) continuous run with "Donovan's Reef"; Capri and Academy, all downtown.

Prints Passed to Others Okay; Not Grounds For Waverly to Duck RKO

Los Angeles, July 9.

District Court of Appeal has sustained, by unanimous opinion, RKO General's right to make foreign distribution agreements with Loew's International, Rank Film Distributors and others. This affirms a trial court decision by Judge Alfred Giterson against Waverly Productions Inc., prexied by Benedict Bogeaus.

Bogeaus during trial contended that his company wasn't required by his distribution agreement with RKO to turn over to RKO two films, tabbed "Enchanted Island" and "From the Earth to the Moon," for foreign distribution. He based his claim on fact that RKO General had shuttered its foreign exchanges and arranged distribution abroad through Rank, Loew's and others.

Appeals court held that RKO had "acted in good faith" in making foreign distrib deals, and Waverly had acted "without legal cause" in refusing to permit Technicolor to make release prints for foreign release.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Mary Batten, staffer with Film Comment, a New York quarterly, tape-interviewed attorney Ephraim London at great length, touching on manifold themes, including Pentagon okay to big producers for facilities never granted little producers, Roman Catholic influence in censorship, etc. London developed the factor of imposed litigation costs as one of the unfairnesses under licensing systems. He was disinclined to credit any producer ever deliberately seeking censorship for the sake of the resultant publicity. (That thought was bruited about during "The Connection" struggle with Albany by pro-Regent voices—Ed). Among Attorney London's more unusual comments, on a question of the personal motivations of censors, quote:

"I think it's a little sophomoric to say that people who are censors are frustrated (a phrase I've often heard used about censors). It isn't true. New York has had a series of censors who have been extremely intelligent, cultured men. Dr. Flick, former Chief of the New York Motion Picture Division, is a Ph.D., and an historian; his predecessor, Dr. Bowen, was an educated gentleman; the present chief, Louis Pesche, is a man of intelligence with a good knowledge and appreciation of films, and that is also true of Mr. Bernstein and some of his other associates. In Kansas, Mrs. Kitty McMahon is Chief of the Censor Board. She is a sweet lady, but I doubt that she knows much or gives a damn about films as an art form. I don't know what her background is or what her qualifications are for judging films, but I would guess that before she became a censor she was a housewife."

National Legion of Decency's former "Separate Classification" now known as "Class A—Section IV was applied in recent years to 29 pictures. These included: "Advise and Concent"; "Anatomy of a Murder"; "Case of Dr. Laurent"; "Divorce, Italian Style"; "Freud"; "King of Kings"; "La Dolce Vita"; "Lolita"; "Long Day's Journey Into Night"; "Pressure Point"; "The Sky Above and the Mud Below"; "Suddenly, Last Summer"; "Victim" and "Walk on the Wild Side."

MILTON E. COHEN ON KRAMER'S 'MAD WORLD'

United Artists' drive for Stanley Kramer's "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" is leaving as little as possible to chance. Latest move in the preparation of the film's reception is the appointment of Milton E. Cohen, the company's national director of roadshow sales, to personally supervise the handling of the Cinerama one-lens pic. The preliminary promotion campaigns were set up earlier this year by Mori Krushen.

Cohen is a vet of UA's sales department and has headed the roadshow division since it was created two years ago. He set out from Gotham over the weekend on a tour of the U. S. and Canada to meet with exhibs and check all theatres being considered as possible situations for showing the comedy. The appointment continues the company's intensive activity on the pic, which includes that $500,000 junket of 250 reporters from all over the world to Hollywood for a Nov. 3 press preview.

Europeans Worried About New Lure Red Lands Now Offer Vacationists

By HAZEL GUILD

Frankfurt, July 2.

Europe's hotel, nightclub, pub and restaurant owners are getting increasingly worried about the direct Red attack on American and European tourists. This year, for the first time, the Red lands of East Germany, Bulgaria, Poland and Russia itself are making an allout attempt to lure the American and European travelers.

And the European business people are afraid that they are going to come out on the short end of the travel budget money. It's expected that about 1,000,000 Americans will be heading for Europe this year, with England and France having spent about $500,000 in luring said tourists.

Worried West Germans, concerned about the decline in tourist trade to their land, have agreed to increase their advertising budget in other countries — to a new high of $2,250,000 for 1963 with an increase up to $4,000,000 planned for foreign advertising for tourists to Germany in 1964. They have even set off on a different tack—of urging the 10,000,000 Germans who, statistics show, usually do not take a vacation, to try a vacation right in their native land.

Themed "Vacationlan Deutschland," the aim, backed by $50,000 from the Assn. of German Tourist Groups, suggests that the Germans can have a wonderful and inexpensive trip right in their own country. Also that particularly the hotels and restaurants in the smaller cities offer a quiet and pleasant stay at low rates.

Urge Vacation At Home

Reason for the growing German concern is that the tourist trade is no longer a profitable one here, and the travel has turned to the red side of the ledger. Last year, German travelers spent about $1,150,000,000 in other lands—and visitors to Germany contributed only $550,000,000 locally.

Competing lands that are anxious to get the German tourists' trade also have increased their tourist spending with Italy spending an estimated $7,000,000 for ads and Switzerland laying out $2,500,000.

Meanwhile, the Red lands are all out to attract the visitors, offering unusual dips behind the Iron Curtain and special "hobbyists trips."

Boast Inexpensive Trips

In East Germany, for instance, groups of a minimum of 10 persons are invited to seven "seasonal hotels" including sites at East Berlin, Potsdam, Dresden, Erfurt and Weimar. A week's stay, including meals, comes to only $20. At more luxurious centers in East Germany, $10 pays for the hotel, food and guides while rates dip down to $5 for the same services in the tourist class.

Scandinavians going to East Germany are offered special tours via Denmark to East German beaches on the North Sea. A special attraction is the "hobby tour" for architects and those interested in modern architecture, which offers an eight-day jaunt to see the weird modern structures in East Berlin, plus the new creations in other Red cities. Cost for the eight days from East Berlin is only $50, all inclusive.

The Red lands emphasize trips for groups of 10 or more, but getting an individual trip from Frankfurt to Siberia booked borders on the impossible.

Germans Can Visit 16 Countries

German tourists can now visit 16 countries without a special visa —and for the U.S., which still requires a visa, a new gimmick has just been offered, a "Lady Visit." This is slanted at women who will be accompanying their husbands on business trips, and gives them a 15-day arrangements with visits to department stores and modern shopping centers.

In addition, Germany's largest restaurant owner, Hans Herbert Blatzheim (husband of German actress Magda Schneider and stepfather of actress Romy Schneider) has just opened a luxury hotel in the favorite vacation area of the Germans, which offers something almost unique for Swiss hotels—dogs and children are allowed. Generally, the French, German and Swiss hotels take a dim view of children and pets.

Blatzheim, who owns 30 restaurants and nightclubs in West Germany, has just opened the Park Palace Hotel in Lugano, Switzerland, in time for the summer rush. Rates range from $10 to $20 per day, including meals.

The German hotel owner is likewise expanding in Egypt and Ischia, so that the European and American visitors can count on good food and good drink in just about every corner of the globe.

Question of all the various competing federal tourist offices this summer, is—who's going to wind up with the most traveling coin in the cash register.

Frankfurt Meters Its Ticket Racks

Frankfurt, July 2.

Least popular of the original operas premiering at the Frankfurt City Stage last year was the Thornton Wilder-Louise Talma opera called "Alcestiades," which was 80% sold out for its eight performances at the 1,430-seat house.

Nonetheless, the record of plays and operas and ballets and concerts at the Frankfurt Grosses Haus (Large House) and the Frankfurt Kleines Haus (Little House) with 583 seats, is a record that does this town of 750,000 proud.

And it is an indication of how successful the city-sponsored theatre program can be with the public.

Of the plays presented at the Large House, Berthold Brecht's "Life of Galilei" was sold out 99.4% for 14 performances, and the two others which were new presentations at the City Theatre during the season, Kleist's "Penthesilea" and Durenmatt's "The Visit of the Old Woman" were sold out 94.9% and 96.9% respectively —a record of which Broadway could be envious last season.

Most successful of the operas done in new presentations at the Large House was Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," a hundred-percent click, with Mozart's "Magic Flute" 99.9% for five performances.

Even the repeats did very well, with Puccini's "Turandot," Verdi's "Aida," Wagner's "Tannhauser" and "Flying Dutchman" all ranging between 98% and 100% at the box office, while play repeats like Anouilh's "Becket" did 97% and Ibsen's "Peer Gynt" did 95.7%.

DROP 'FESTIVAL' TAG

It's Now 'The Epidavros'—Four From Antiquity

Athens, July 9.

Epidavros Festival has its 10th consecutive year. Only it has a new name now, "The Epidavria" without the word "Festival." That's reserved for the Athens Festival.

Four classic dramas are presented in the Epidavros ancient theatre this summer every weekend. Famous for its accoustics, theatre is the best preserved Greek arena. Seating capacity is 14,000 people, though located about 100 miles from Athens.

This year's program includes:

1. "Alkistis" by Euripides with Anna Synodinou and Thanos Kotsopoulos. It is the oldest known drama written by the famous classic playwright presented for the first time in 438 A.D.

2. "Ekave" by Euripides with Katina Paxinou in the title role. Ekave was the most tragic mother of the ancient world losing all her children in the Trojan war including the famous Hector killed by Achilleus.

3. "The Gasps" a comedy by Aristophanes with Christophoros Nezer. It has been played for the first time in Athens on 422 A.D.

4. "Prometheus In Chains" with Alexis Minotis in the title role. It is one of the best Greek classics about the legendary hero who had given the secret of fire to the people and was punished for this by the Gods to die chained on a rock and be devoured by the vultures. Hercules freed him afterwards and became immortal. It has a deep meaning: The sacrifice of one man for the benefit of many.

MUCHO LONDON BRASS TO MOSCOW FILM FEST

London, July 9.

Official British delegation for the Moscow Film Fest, which opened on Sunday (7) includes Robert Clark, president of the British Film Producers Assn.; Lord Archibald, chairman of the Federation of British Film Makers, with Lady Archibald; and Michael Bromhead, general manager of Lion International.

Other visitors will add to British representation. There are Alexander Mackendrick, director of "Sammy Going South," the official U. K. entry; Theo Richmond, associate producer of "Heavens Above," the invited British entry; MacGregor Scott, Warner-Pathe managing director, and Dr. Eric Fletcher, deputy chairman of Associated British Picture Corp.

Peter King, Cinamatograph Exhibitors Assn. yeepee; and A. Gorzynski, Associated British-Pathe's Eastern Europe sales rep, are also among the British top brass that will be at Moscow at different periods.

Greater Union's Glowing Pic Coin

Sydney, July 2.

Under the direction of Norman B. Rydge, Greater Union Theatres' film loop turned in a profit of $500,000 in the year ended last Dec. 31. Ordinary dividend absorbs $322,000, which is equally divided between the Rank Group (London) and Amalgamated Holdings Ltd., the Aussie public company. For the fifth successive year, a dividend of 10% will be paid to stockholders.

This year, GUT directors have made no announcement as to whether they have made any provision for tele contingencies. Understood that up to 1961, $1,600,000 had been set aside as combat coin for tv opposition, but apparently the tele bogey has been licked by keen showmanship and good product.

GUT, apart from operating key houses coast-to-coast, also controls key suburban, country and ozoners. Major product comes from J. Arthur Rand and British associates, plus Columbia and Universal-International.

In recent times, Rydge set a blueprint for the reconstruction of big capacity cinemas to the intimate type house of no more than 1,000 seats.

In this city, the GUT arty spots are Barclay (1,000 seats), Forum (800) and Victory (827). It's understood Rydge will reduce the capacity of the State, now seating 2,500, to a 1,000-seater and may also erect an 800-seat cinema on the same site for specialized pix, possibly Cinerama.

In Melbourne, GUT recently converted the 3,500-seat State to a 1,000-seater, and also operates Chelsea (1,000), Forum (940) and Odeon (912).

Rydge always has been a firm believer in the motion picture as the No. 1 entertainment media for the masses. And he has fought successfully all opposition by keen showmanship and has backed distributors to the limit minus expensive quibbling.

French Producer Says Making Pix in France Cheaper Than Italy

Paris, July 9.

There is misunderstanding about production costs in Europe, according to French producer Julian Derode who has been exec producer on many American films made here, and elsewhere. He claims it is now cheaper to make a film in France than in Italy. And cheapest, among the bigger producing nations, is Great Britain. Comparatively, a film made for $1,000,000 in Britain would cost $1,150,000 in France and $1,200,000 in Italy, he claims. Spain is still cheap but calls for the sending most materials there which eventually brings up the costs.

Derode, who handles all Seven Arts films made abroad, also produces here on his own and does outside work for Americans when he has no direct Seven Arts pix. He will next handle "The Visit" (20th), after winding a French film "Les Mystifies" (The Mystified) which he says was brought in for $280,000 though using topnotch men in all technical aspects as well as some good thesp values.

Derode points out that Italy does have the advantages of weather and sumptuous technical facilities and sound stage space. It drew Americans during the days of frozen coin and when labor was cheap. But wages soon skyrocketed there and though extras may be less costly, the general outlays are way up. It has made Italy no longer a cheap place in which to make films.

With French film aid up to 14%, and equivalent with Italy, he sees more U.S. majors investing in French pix for product. But he thinks trying to make essentially American pix in two versions, and fulfilling French actor and technician demands, are not worth it in the long run. The aid would not cover the extra cost, says he.

He can understand films that have a specific European feel made this way, but films with a definite American flair and outlook would be better made as such and dubbed for best results, he thinks. Of course, films that are more in the comic mood, like "Irma La Douce" (UA), could easily be made in Hollywood. There a composite, slightly Americanized view of Paris would give it the right flair. But more realistic films need the actual places.

International Sound Track

London

Sir Michael Balcon, Neville Breeze and Jack Worrow of Bryanston Films hosted a small, informal trade press dinner shindig to celebrate the company's fourth anni. The Group has, in those years, produced 18 first features and 13 supporting pix at a cost of over $8,400,000. Dorton Films, the indie company started by Charles Baldour and Robert Hutton, is to make "A Ticket for the Peepshow," based on a just published first book by Fleet Street columnist Logan Gourlay . . . Pennebaker Ltd has joined the British Film Producers Assn. with Jock MacGregor as its British rep . . . Granada has booked "Boccaccio '70" for most of its theatres. Neither Rank nor ABC is giving its general showing . . . Frankie Vaughan is star of a musical, "It's All Over Town," first full length film to be produced by Jacques de Lane Lea. Vaughan, who has a financial interest in the pic, has no dialog for the story's told by narration. But he has plenty songs . . . E. G. Forsyth, previously general manager of Rank Ten Pin Bowling Division, upped to managing director, with similar hike for J. M. Whittle of the Top Rank Dancing Division. Promotions indicate growing interest in the Rank organisation in its diversifications . . . National Film Theatre sponsoring a King Vidor season . . . Earl Mountbatten guest of honor at the gala European premiere of "P.T. 109" at Warner Theatre. Proceeds to the Variety Club and the Edwina Mountbatten Trust . . . Nicholas Cory will take over as secretary of the Assn., of Specialised Film Producers in September when Brian Collis becomes assistant secretary of the Federation of British Film Makers . . . France Nuyen interrupted her honeymoon to start work on "The Winston Affair" with Robert Mitchum for 20th-Fox release . . . Cinerama has located a descendant of The Grimm Family and snapped him up to attend the premiere of the film at the Coliseum on Monday (15). Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon will be there.

Paris

As summer comes in old films have their sway and way. The French Film Museum goes on with its over 200 old Yank pix to big audiences and oldies appear at firstrun regular houses as well as arties. They do well and upcoming this week is John Huston's "Red Badge of Courage" (MG), a fuller version than that released by Metro originally. it is bruited about. "Wuthering Heights," in two versions, by William Wyler and Mexican filmmaker Luis Bunuel, are also doing well. Newies, in fact, are faring very ordinarily. It is true the big product is now held back. Some Champs-Elysees firstruns sometimes grind with two or three people in the audience. Also, a Yank tome on bygone pix "The Movies in the Age of Innocence" by Edward Wagenknecht is being read by buffs here. Selling for $5, it has been sent to many Yanks as well as French critics. Consensus is it is nostalgic, provocative, sentimental and a bit old hat but does charm during these twilight film biz days of reissues and looks at oldies.

Marlene Dietrich has no definite pic plans but her ideal bit would be another pic version of Colette's "Cheri" with her playing opposite young French star Alain Delon. Miss Dietrich recently had a singing stint at the Casino of Baden-Baden in Germany and is almost a regular resident here. She sometimes laments having been molded into a femme fatale by Yank director Josef Von Sternberg in the German "The Blue Angel" and her subsequent Yank pix. She says she wanted to do simple, naive, romantic roles but these never came if she managed to do some caricature roles of her screen image in such pix as "Destry Rides Again" and a "Foreign Affair." . . . Henri Tisot, the actor who became a top disk and music hall and boite fave via his takeoffs on President De Gaulle—which he has now given up—doing personal appearances and new sketches along with his first starring pic "Le Roi Du Village" at the Paramount. This is a first pic by noted animator Henri Gruel . . . Georges Lourau, head of the production outfit Filmsonor, the new prexy of the French Film Producer Syndicate. He replaces Francis Cosne . . . Annette Stroyberg, ex-wife of director Roger Vadim, back to French films after several years in Italo pix via "One Night by Chance," a French-Belgian coproduction to be directed by Yvan Govar. She plays a 13th century actress who mysteriously lives through the centuries sans aging . . . Pierre Roustang, who did the sketch pix "Love at 20" and "The Greatest Swindles in the World," prepping an episoder about a Yank businessman prowling Europe for love after a recent divorce . . . Nicholas Ray in huddling with Lars Schmidt on a film property he wants to do starring Ingrid Bergman.

No hard feelings department: 20th-Fox taking a full back page ad in the Paris Herald-Tribune and quoting sock "Cleo" reviews except the Trib pan. There was no page ad in the International Edition of the N. Y. Times in spite of the raves it handed the pic.

Rome

Metro and Carlo Ponti close to a "Doctor Zhivago" deal, after Rome confabs between Robert O'Brien, Maurice Silverstein, Ponti, Tom O'Neill and Lee Steiner, but production is still some ways off, per local grapevine, and no disclosure has been made . . . Pier Paolo Pasolini and Arco topper Alfredo Bini off to Holy Land for scouting mission of director's upcoming "Scriptures According to St. Matthew," to be given neorealistic treatment instead of the spectacle approach; incidentally Pasolini's long-banned "Ricotta" episode in Arco's "Rogopag" (which held up release of other items in multi-episoder) now okayed by Italian censors, gets local release in fall . . .

Mario Cecchi Gori, whose Fairfilm has come up with several sleepers during past season, gunning his new production, "I Mostri" (The Monsters) this week, with Ugo Tognazzi and Vittorio Gassman toplined . . . also a July starter: Damiano Damiani and "Empty Canvas," the Carlo Ponti-Joseph Levine production starring Bette Davis, Horst Bucholz, and Catherine Spaak . . . 22 features changed titles here between January and June of this year, mostly oldies needing a b.o. hypo . . . Giorgio Dickman, Samuel Bronston's Italo man, celebrated local windup of "Fall of the Roman Empire" via special commemorative Roman medallion . . . Nanny Loy prepping a follow-up to "Four Days of Naples": "The Diary of a Schoolteacher," to be shot in his native Sardinia, and "Il Padre di Familia" (The Family Father) . . . Dino DeLaurentiis' "Boom" almost wound, with locations on Via Veneto and vicinity.

Despite Some Hassles, French Film Biz Envisions More, Better Fests

Paris, July 9.

Although in the midst of the film festival season, and with France participating heavily in all, there is still some dissension within the industry and film governmental bureaus as to the efficacy of these international competitions. However, a consensus here seems to weigh positively towards fests in general.

Recently, a National Assembly member scored Culture Minister Andre Malraux on why a pic like "Les Abysses" (The Depths) was picked as the official French entry, and representative of France, when it was a downbeat, violent, surrealistic look at servant and master relationships.

Malraux answered that it was a film made in France and therefore eligible and it no more represented France in its outlook than any individual act was symptomatic of a whole country. It was a French film, and therefore, if selected, would run.

Choosing of this pic also enraged the regular producers since it was made outside ordinary channels on an indie basis. But if controversial and specialized it did do all right, both in release and at the fest, while the two other pix that ran at Cannes fared fairly dimly commercially and did neither the fest nor themselves much good by appearing there.

How It Boils Down

Some feel it again boils down to whether a fest should be geared to exploitable pix or those more specialized and usually needing fest recognition for better chances. Local film people also believe fest juries are too longhair and are planning to give their own prize at Cannes next year via the Golden Ducat for the pic that is both good and most likely to bring people to the cinema rather than keep them away.

In spite of all this, producers do battle to get into fests and try to benefit from the publicity focused on it by all the scribes present. As someone points out, when a good commercial pic is also a good film, that will be the ideal fest pic.

New Fests Mulled

Though the Federation of International Film Producers Assns. is trying to cut down active fest participation, except for the few really big ones, new fests keep being bruited. Now Britain might have one in Brighton and there is still talk of a Hollywood or Washington, D.C., fest. British have gotten more fest-minded since they began taking prizes of late after almost a decade of bad showings.

Yanks have finally realized the solid publicity and prestige values of these confrontations. They are taking it more seriously via more selective choices and bigger film personality and star turnouts.

Main worry of burgeoning festivals is the scarcity of enough unique films for them. But the more there are may become the more the merrier as they give the growing indies increased outlets if they sometimes make for more trouble than they are worth for the bigger more commercially-minded majors.

But fests are here to stay and others will come as Africa and Asia eventually make their bids. It is the coping with fests that will henceforth be the news and not whether they are necessary, helpful or good.

Screen 200 Films For Children's, Documentary Festivals in Venice

Venice, July 2.

More than 200 pix from 23 countries are being screened by a special selection group for the two preliminary Venice events, the Festival of Films for Children and the Documentary Festival. Both start July 10 and run through July 20.

Eleven countries are participating in the moppet event, in which recreational pix this year dominate. This year also marks a sharp rise in TV-Films, both in childrens and documentary categories.

Last three days of the Venice Fest will be dedicated to an international gathering of experts on children's films and specialized publications.

WB & Hoyt's Signature Long-Term Film Pact

Sydney, July 2.

Warner Bros. and the Hoyts' cinema loop have signatured a new long term contract covering the former's output in this territory. Deal was pacted by Ernest Turnbull (Hoyts') and Berry Greenberg (WB).

Pix for key playdates here include "Baby Jane," "Gypsy," "PT 109," "Days of Wine and Roses," "Spencer's Mountain," "Critic's Choice," "Chapman Report," "Term of Trial," and reissue of "Giant."

Hoyts', which is opposition to Greater Union, is product-hooked to 20th-Fox and United Artists and is the only Aussie chain with cinemas geared for Cinerama. New Warner deal will give the loop additional product for the keyers and suburbs.

French Exhibs Vote To Check Vital Issues

Paris, July 9.

Recent French Film Exhibitor meeting passed a motion to keep close watch on all problems coming up in these still critical times as filmgoing still dips while tv gets more powerful, taxes are still too high and the general film picture is pessimistic.

Exhibs were warned to be careful about present moves to adapt 70m techniques. If there were strong incentives by promised big pix they were told that many times not enough copies were made and quite often they later were distributed in 35m. France's last count for 70m pix installations was about 170.

Some exhibs told of being refused these big screeners while others, due to previous agreements, got them in reduced format. Besides that, they also felt that if distribs were consolidating it sometimes led to offices for copies and pub being divided and spread out, making it difficult for exhibs.

Exhibs also felt there should be more coming attraction trailers ready sooner for new pix and a check on growing transportation costs for film copies to the hinterlands. They also again made a pitch aimed at the Ministry of Culture for cuts in taxes and a modus vivendi with tv to keep out old pix from prime time and not allow public places to use video sets for entertainment purposes.

CINERAMA EXPANSION IN ITALY SPEEDED

Rome, July 9.

Success of Cinerama's "How West Was Won" (MGM) at Milan's Mazoni Theatre, currently in fifth record-breaking month, has accelerated plans for Cinerama installations in various other Italian keys. Twelve new houses will be equipped with the widescreen system, it was announced here by company topper Nicolas Reisini during his recent visit. They will begin screening "West" on Aug 1.

Teeoff will be at Genoa's Margherita Theatre, to be followed Sept. 1 by Palermo's Cinema Golden, and Sept. 15 by Rome's Royal Theatre. While in Rome, Reisini also met with several Italo producers, including Dino Delaurentiis.

Reported that Reisini also laid plans to lens an Italian opera in Cinerama at Milan's La Scala Theatre.

Luber to Coast For Start on 'Achilles'

London, July 2.

Bernard Luber, one of Marbern Productions' top brass, has planed to Los Angeles on his film, "The Achilles Affair," skedded for Universal release.

It was to have starred Stuart Whitman but, according to Luber, Whitman's agent claims that 20th-Fox has a prior claim on Whitman's availability.

UFA Theatres Perking

Duesseldorf, July 2.

UFA Theatre Corp. here, having reported in the red for the last couple of years, came up with a profit for 1962. The theatre association, which formerly carried its business along with the now-defunct Universum Films Corp., had reported losses of more than $1,000,000 in 1960 and more than $2,000,000 in 1961.

This study for 1962, though, revealed that the company came out over $1,500,000 ahead, even though boxoffice receipts generally were off in the past year. UFA Theatres have now cut down on their expenses and reduced their personnel so that they are operating for the first time at a profit.

Italian Dubbing Impasse Settled

Rome, July 9.

A compromise solution on a recent dubbing certificate impasse has been reached here between Leo Hochstetter, MPEA Mediterranean topper, and ANICA chief Eitel Monaco.

Deal is articulated in three parts. First concerns 1962 dubbing certificates, which will be paid for in full at 23⅓% of face value on presentation to the Banca del Lavoro.

Secondly, 1960 and 1961 dubbing papers shall be paid in two installments. Half of them at 23⅓% on delivery to the Banca del Lavoro; the balance by April 30, 1964.

Third, bank guarantees will be issued via MPEA to member companies towards these second installments until paid.

Previously, some companies had been fretting about threatened delays and uncertainties concerning promised payments of pending dubbing certificates.

GERMAN-SPANISH 'GIRL' MAY CUE MORE CO-PROD

Berlin, July 9.

Dr. Hermann Schwerin's Fono-Film is currently producing "Ein fast anstaendiges Maedchen" (A Nearly Decent Girl) in collaboration with Madrid's Chamartin Productions for Columbia-Bavaria release. Entire German-Spanish film is being shot in the Spanish capital, with Swiss-born German film star Liselotte Pulver (Lilo Pulver in U.S. pix), German Martin Held and Spain's Alberto de Mendoza in the leads. Ladislao Vajda is directing this comedy.

Vajda said that coproductions are now the big thing in Spain. Of the 90 films made there last year, about every third pic was a coproduction. Within the last few years, most of the Spanish coproductions were made with the French, Italians and Americans but hardly any with the Germans. This is an odd thing for German films fare quite well in Spain. In fact, German producers regard the Franco country as one of their most lucrative foreign outlets. Last year, 18 German films went into the Spanish market. This number places Germany higher than France with 17. Many German producers are interested in coproductions with Spain. The shooting conditions are said to be extremely favorable.

Nat'l Film Finance Corp. Back In Red After Two Years' Profits

London, July 9.

Britain's government backed National Film Finance Corp. has slipped back into the red after two years of holding its own. Accounts for the year ended last March 31 show a $615,627 loss which compares with the two previous years' profits of $138,779 and $51,634.

This year's loss means that NFFC's accumulated deficiency now amounts to $11,991,988. The corporation's remaining funds are almost wholly deployed, and its uncommitted resources as at March 31 this year amounted to only $253,022.

One main factor contributing to NFFC's setback this year was its failure to back a b.o. winner of the calibre of a "Saturday Night And Sunday Morning" as it did last year. Subsequently, shares of profits received by NFFC from its investments in pix decreased from $907,065 the previous year to $325,875. In addition, provision made by the corporation for losses on loans remains high at $639,859 as compared with $614,686 last year.

NFFC report puts on record that during the year British Lion Films repaid $1,654,800 of its $1,680,000 loan from public money. Company's capital has been reorganized so that NFFC has a $25,200 investment in British Lion Film and is in for a 50-50 split with the other company shareholders.

The repaid $1,654,800 has, per agreement, gone back to government coffers but according to NFFC managing director John Terry, the Board of Trade has indicated that the corporation will get the sum back to swell its uncommitted funds.

Terry estimated that NFFC was now financially involved with about 25% of the pictures produced here. This section, he emphasized, comprised new directors, bolder projects and so on. While it is probably the most important section of the business, it is also the most speculative so far as backers are concerned.

The report reveals, however, that NFFC is seeking new legislation to increase funds at its disposal. It points out: "There is little doubt that if the corporation's resources were larger, the task of paying its way would be easier."

Ireland's Oldest House, In Dublin, to Be Sold

Dublin, July 9.

Ireland's oldest theatre, 1,450-seater Olympia, likely will be sold. Currently shuttered for a month's vacation, it has been operated by Stanley Illsley and Leo McCabe since 1951. Pair moved in after establishing successful partnership as IMP Productions. Both are actors. Illsley has staged a number of productions in the house.

Site, near Dublin Castle, has been an entertainment spot since the 18th Century, but the present theatre was built as Dan Lowrey's Musical Hall in the last century, later becoming the Empire Palace of Varieties, and then the Olympia. Most of the big name vaude acts played the house. But biz has dropped in recent years. Recent presentations included a couple of vaude bills with pop singers.

Leo McCabe declined to comment on the sale, but said he hoped the building would continue as a theatre.

German Product Regains Status In Switzerland

Zurich, July 9.

Although American features accounted for a major portion of the highest grossing releases in the first half (Jan.-June) of the current film year in Switzerland, they are rivalled by a marked progress here of German pictures. For the first time since 1958, four out of the 10 topgrossers during that period in the five Swiss key cities of Zurich, Basle, Berne, Geneva and Lausanne came from Germany, with an equal number from the U.S. plus one each from Italy and France.

Yank entries include Samuel Bronston's "55 Days at Peking" in second spot, despite its summer release, considered unusual here; the reissue of "Gone with the Wind" (MGM) in third position, turning in amazing grosses for an oldie and holding for 21 weeks in the five cities; "Hatari" (Par) and "That Touch of Mink" (U-I) in sixth and tenth spot, respectively.

The German winners are: "Flying Clipper" (fourth), first 70mm film from that country; "Der Schatz im Silbersee" (The Treasure at Silver Lake) (fifth), a German "western" based on a popular novel by Karl May, which proved a real sleeper; plus two comedies, "Die Foersterchristl" (seventh) and "Kohlhiesels Toechter" (Kohlhiesel's Daughters) (ninth), the latter starring Lilo Pulver in a double role.

Top grosser is Italy's "Mondo Cane" (Embassy), whilst France is represented, in eighth spot, with "La Prostitution," a no-name exploitation entry allegedly based on actual police files and benefitting from a day-date release in some of the key cities.

Thousands of Italian Workers In Germany Give Film Biz Nice Lift

Frankfurt, July 2.

About 220,000 Italian workers now are currently employed in West Germany, and this influx is aiding the entertainment industry here. Just to keep them entertained, Sonderfilm and Republic are releasing six American films which will play on Sunday matinees and special showings, in the Italian synchronized version, in West German cinemas.

And a new distributing firm, Midas Films Corp., has just been opened in Germany to release five Italian pix in their original version, with Italo ad material. The firm is offering Italian music to accompany the programs, and also is expecting to sell the films for special showings.

One house, the Europa Filmpalast, in Munich, is now doing four special Italian-lingo showings every weekend, under the general title of Cinema Italia. Nine other distribs are currently offering 30 Italian films for this and similar houses.

Sale of Italian records has also become a big business in West Germany since the arrival of these thousands of well-paid and often homesick foreign workers. Also, CCC Films of Germany is doing a film titled "The Strangers," under direction of the young Italian Jerzy Macc, about the life of the Italian workers in Germany and their special problems here.

'Longest Day,' 'Story' Win Victoires Prizes As Top Foreign Pix

Paris, July 9.

Every year the most coveted French film prizes, the Victoires, are handed out via referendums among cinema patrons and film exhibitors. Last year filmgoer and film boxoffice tastes coincided, but they are completely different this year. Some moneymakers, the usual exhib yardstick, were not as popular with audiences as those that also coined well, but below the exhib choices.

Yanks scored on both lists via taking the best foreign nods from the public, "West Side Story" (UA), and the exhib approval for "The Longest Day" (20th). Spectators felt the top French film was "Sundays and Cybele," the pic that scored first in the U.S. before it went on to good biz here on the U.S. sendoff.

Patrons found top foreign actress to be Sophia Loren in "Five Miles to Midnight" (UA) which was made here in English. Best offshore actor was Marcello Mastroianni for "Divorce, Italian Style" and fave French thesps Annie Girardot and Jean-Paul Belmondo.

Exhibs' nod for top French pic went to the small-budget bonanza at the boxoffice, "The Button War," which WB took for release here after most French distribs refused. And as best foreign entry, "Longest Day," with Emmanuelle Riva and Robert Hossein for France; and Natalie Wood, "Story," and Tony Perkins, "The Trail," as best foreign thesps.

It might be noted that paying patrons favored two Oscar winners in the French "Cybele" and Yank "Story." Also-ran U.S. player was Shirley MacLaine.

Enriched & Enlarged Middle Class Makes Zurich Festival a Sellout

By GEORGE MEZOFI

Zurich, July 9.

The 1963 Zurich June Festival at Stadttheatre (opera, ballet) and Schauspielhaus (legit), May 29-June 30, enjoyed the briskest box-office in years, despite stiff scales up to $9.30 for certain operas with guest singers. Out of a total of 36 performances, at least 30 went completely SRO, with the remainder up to 80% sellouts. It's hard to say whether this result is due to the remarkably versatile lineup in both houses (which, after all, has prevailed in previous festivals as well) or whether it's attributable to the fact that buying power of the Swiss "middle class" is mounting.

Program consisted of four legit productions with a total of 20 performances, 10 operas (12 performances) and two ballet programs with one repeat each. As its own production, Schauspielhaus contributed a little known 19th century Russian comedy by Alexander Ostrowskij, "Even the Smartest Can Make A Blunder," directed by Rolf Henninger (who also played the lead), with sets by Toni Businger. Despite mixed reviews, it emerged into a hit almost instantly, with every performance sold out, due to a uniformly brilliant cast and the play's satirical wit. A Jean-Louis Barrault-Madeleine Renaud presentation, in French, of Christopher Fry's "Dark Is Light Enough," also went clean at the boxoffice and, to the assisting author's delight, found a responsive audience.

An Italian guest troupe, the Teatro Stabile from Genova, failed to sellout, undeservedly so since their Luigi Squarzina production of Carlo Goldoni's "Venetian Twins" impressed as one of the most imaginative shows seen here in some time. To complete the Schauspielhaus' traditional "Theatre in Four Languages" cycle, the Birmingham Repertory Theatre presented, to full houses, a 17th century restoration comedy by William Wycherley, "The Country Wife," a bawdy romp about a roue spreading the rumor that he has lost his virility, resulting in all the husbands trusting him as companion for their wives. Though somewhat overlong, farce was an audience-pleaser thanks to the troupe's spirited rendition, notably by Linda Gardner in the title role.

The opera sector, at Stadttheatre, was dominated by Wagner and Verdi, plus the world premiere of a new onera, "Die Erretung Thebens" (The Salvation of Theben), by a young Swiss composer, Rudolf Kelterborn. For good measure, Mozart ("Magic Flute") and Beethoven ("Fidelio") were also thrown in, but did not fill the house, whereas the Wagner and Verdi staples played to 100% capacity.

An impressive array of guest singers was lined up, including quite a few Americans: James McCracken and Sandra Warfield (Mr. & Mrs. in real life), Gladys Kuchta, Thomas Stewart, Virginia Gordoni, Ken Neate, Regina Sarfaty. McCracken scored a personal hit in "Othello," "Fidelio" and notably in "Trovatore" where his Stretta literally stopped the show for 15 minutes (sorry, no encore). Miss Kuchta, a firsttimer to Zurich, garnered warm response for her unsentimental vocally impressive Leonore in "Fidelio."

An uninspired "Rigoletto" was lifted up momentarily through the vocal prowess of Ettore Bastianini in the title role, but otherwise mediocrity reigned that night. The other Verdi items, however, were in excellent hands via maestro Nello Santi at the baton and the generally high onstage level (both "Othello" and "Trovatore" had been staged by Herbert Graf during his Zurich opera reign 1960-'62).

London's Festival Ballet concluded the festival with two different programs (both SRO), of which a recently re-discovered Tchaikovsky full-length ballet, "Snow Flake," was particularly impressive. Olga Ferri, Marilyn Burr and Jean-Paul Comelin won plaudits in this one.

Choose Life

are, however, shots of Kennedy and Khrushchev, and a substantial American sequence which contrasts the shelter facilities available for the rich and poor. There is also an eerie scene of a U.S. air-raid alarm exercise in which life on the surface comes to a dramatic standstill.

Once its running time is reduced, "Choose Life" should prove an exploitable item, with the "Mein Kampf" credit an aid to promotion. An English language track is available, though this review is based on the German-speaking version which was shown at the Berlin festival. Myro.

Deo Gratias
(FRANCE)

Berlin, July 2.

Le Film D'Art-A.TI.L.A. production. Stars A. Bourvil. Directed by Jean-Pierre Mocky. Screenplay, Michael Servin; camera, L. H. Burel. At Berlin Film Fest. Running time, 82 MINS.

Georges Lachaunaye ..... A. Bourvil
Cucherat ..... Francis Blanche
Raoul ..... Jean Poiret
The Father ..... Jean Yonnel

A lightweight but amusing comedy, with near-farcical style, "Deo Gratias" has a host of amusing situations. But it is essentially a one-joke theme which shows occasional signs of being overdone. Nevertheless, it should rack up useful returns with fair playoff chances.

Michael Servin's adroit screenplay quickly establishes the point that for four generations no member of the Lachaunaye family has sought employment, and that the present bearers of that name see no reason to change that state of affairs.

Unfortunately, however, money is running out, furniture has been sold, there's no fuel on a cold winter's night, and meals have to be scrounged from friends and relatives. Desperate measures for a desperate situation: the elder son, a devout man, prays for guidance, and as he is waiting for the sign from the Lord, he hears the sound of a coin dropping in the poor box. His prayers are thus answered, and the family fortunes are rapidly restored by a systematically planned campaign of robbing the offertory boxes in a circuit of churches.

Most of the fun derives from the planning of the operation, and the cat-and-mouse game with the church police, who quickly identify the man they are after, but are constantly outwitted by him. There are also a few amusing scenes indicating the constant improvement in the technique of extracting money from the poor boxes, culminating with a sort of vacuum attachment which clears most of the boxes with the minimum of effort.

Jean-Pierre Mocky's racy direction is just right for this featherweight piece, moving rapidly from one situation to another with hardly a letup in the action. Performances, too, are consistently good, with A. Bourvil in fine form as the thief, Jean Poiret getting plenty of laughs as his partner in crime and Francis Blanche making a suitably harassed cop. Jean Yonnel does okay in a lesser role as the father. The support is always competent. Myro.

Der Grosse Atlantik
(River of the Ocean)
(GERMAN-COLOR)

Berlin, July 2.

Sirius Film (Munich) production. Directed and written by Peter Baylis. Camera (Eastmancolor), Jacques Letellier; music, Jean de Rohanzinsky; narrator, Orson Welles. At Berlin Film Fest. Running Time, 76 MINS.

This full-length documentary film, written and directed by Peter Baylis (a Britisher for Sirius-Film, a German producing outfit) was shown in English language (American Orsen Welles narrator) as a German entry at the Berlin festival. The NATO-supported pic had it easy to capture the prize for the fest's best full-length documentary if only because there were only two other documentaries competing. Except for the beautiful Eastmancolor and a number of fine but not exceptional shots taken from the air, there's nothing special about this offering. Taking into account that some full-length documentaries proved commercial clicks with domestic cinemagoers, this one stands a solid b.o. chance as well.

This picture tells the story of the Atlantic Ocean. It shows the countries tied to it by destiny, the cities who owe their wealth and power to it. The city of New York is given particularly substantial footage. The viewer follows the coast dwellers' struggle against the big sea, he sees the ships and airplanes that cross the ocean. The commentary is a mixture of matter-of-fact reporting and big pathos. It also tells of the people whose task it is to keep a constant watch over the turbulent Atlantic. Hans.

Assoc. British's $5,046,512 Net

London, July 9.

Trading profit of the Associated British Picture Corp. group as of last March 31 was $11,300,763, after providing $2,642,250 for depreciation and amortization. Trading profit for 1962 was $14,106,890.

Net profit of the group before taxes totalled $11,321,206 (last year, $14,952,089). Interest payable was $103,720, leaving the group's net profit, after providing for all charges, at $5,046,512. It was $6,302,618 in 1962.

Despite the drop in profits, a final dividend of 20% actual, less tax, has been recommended. With the interim divvy already paid, this will make a total of 30%, less tax, same as in 1962.

Big Bally Planned By Universal in Italy

Rome, July 2.

Several special ad-publicity ventures are being planned here by Universal to launch "Secret Passions" ("Freud") and a large roster of U pix to follow during the fall-winter season of 1963-64.

For "Secret Passions," which was the official U.S. entrant at the Berlin Festival, the Italo branch plans a series of previews for doctors and psychoanalysts in Rome, Milan and Turin. An expert in the genre, Professor Emilio Servadio, will be consultant on the Italian language version of this pic.

"To Kill a Mockingbird" which recently won Gregory Peck another award, the Donatello David given by Rome's International Film Society, will get a similarly elaborate launching, as will such followup items on the upcoming U agenda, among them "For Love or Money," "The Birds," "Gathering of Eagles," "Ugly American," "List of Adrian Messenger," "Thrill of It All" and "Charade."

Danish Prods. Warned To Raise Standards

Copenhagen, July 2.

Several film production companies were helped here in Denmark to make ends meet by being granted license to operate theatres on the side. Recently, Julius Bomholt, Minister for Cultural Affairs, threatened to revoke such socalled production licenses if the films produced did not aim at a higher standard. The monthly paper published by the Association of Cinema Owners comes out in its July issue against the Culture Minister's "vague demands," and asks him to state bluntly what kind of films he has in mind.

If Danish film producers must think only in terms of possible film awards like "Bodil," the local Oscar the paper claims it would mean financial disaster for producers as well as for exhibs. General feeling among pix producers here is, however, that Bomholt just wants them kept on their toes. And that he will otherwise leave them alone which has been his policy so far.

Inside Stuff—International

Under the new "friendly enemies" setup between all the French government-subsidized theatres, Jacques Charon of the Comedie Francaise will direct "Tricoche et Cacolet," a musical revue, at Jean-Louis Barrault's Odeon Theatre in September. Cast will be headed by Suzy Delair, Simone Valere, Jean Desailly and Jean Paredes. While this is being prepared, Barrault himself will be busy at the Opera directing "Wozzek". . . but, if he is finished in time, he will join Charon's cast.

After 16 months in its new building under the administration of Gustav Rudolf Sellner and Egon Seefehlner, West Berlin's German Opera has just published a report which shows that attendances have increased from 90.7% to 93.1% and subscriptions from 15.9% to 23.8% of takings. Of the 22 works which, apart from ballet, comprise the current repertory, 13 were taken over from Carl Ebert's previous regime at the company's former theatre, nine were new productions. Most frequently performed were "Madama Butterfly" (29 evenings) and Wieland Wagner's recent "Aida" (24). "Butterfly" and "Nozze di Figaro" had the highest attendance figures, while Giselher Klebe's "Alkmene" registered only 60.1%.

Apart from Sellner himself, Wieland Wagner had most productions to his credit—four: the "Aida" of the opening week and his "Lohengrin" of the end of 1961 have now been joined by "Salome" and most recently by "Die Meistersinger," both mobilizing fierce partisanship for and against.

With the appointment of Egon Hilbert to the Vienna Opera as administrative director, the post of general manager of the Vienne Festival becomes vacant as of 1964. Foreign Press and Publicity Director of the Festival Office Trudy Goth will have same position next spring with the "Maggio Musicale Fiorentino" (Florence May Music Festival) which for '64 is headed by composer Roman Vlad and will bring exclusively masterworks of the 20s and 30s in music, drama and visual arts.

Vienna Festival this year had a total of 713,867 admissions of which 68,610 heard 59 concerts. A total of 400 performances made up the rest of the events in the four weeks Festival (May 18-June 16). Included were 35 operas, 35 plays, 14 operettas and one ballet. Seven of the plays were either firsts or firsts in German language.

Janine Charrat's Phoenix Bit

Rehabilitated After Fire — Heads Geneva Opera Ballet —So-So First Work — Great Opportunity

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

Geneva, July 2.

About a year ago, Janine Charrat, French ballerina and choreographer, was caught in a sudden flash fire while dancing in a television studio and was very near death for several months. Doctors gave her one chance in ten to live. After a number of operations, skin grafts, etc., she is now back at work, not only as choreographer but as star dancer. She is now in complete charge of the recently created ballet company of the new Grand Opera House here.

A galaxy of persons of importance in European dance and music circles made the journey to Geneva to gander her newest work, "Tristan and Isolde," a ballet she composed and in which she stars. It is not a very good ballet, but it clearly shows that she is still one of the finest choreographers in Europe. And there is no question of her talent as a lovely, lyric dancer. At the opening performance, she was on-stage virtually throughout the entire nearly two hours of ballet and always, whether one liked what was going on around her or not, one followed her movements with pleasure and admiration.

Miss Charrat has put together a highly interesting young company and it is highly likely that this troupe will be heard from, after they get in two or three years of work. All the elements seem to be there. What they need, obviously, is more ensemble work, and repertory. If Miss Charrat will go back a bit and work the company into more classic ballet, if she forgets and by-passes some of the "modern" nonsense that currently seems to intrigue her, she has a very big chance.

For the opening performance, her male lead was Victor Rona of the Budapest Ballet, a fine, highly-trained and well-disciplined terper, who made a strong impression. Other good marks were scored by Luis Diaz and Nicole Nogaret.

Perhaps the biggest handicap Miss Charrat had to face is the very wonderful theatre. It is just about the most modern opera house one can imagine, with a remarkable stage replete with the most up-to-the-minute equipment. It is possible to do almost anything one can dream up on this stage. And that is the headache. One is tempted (as Miss Charrat was tempted, obviously) to utilize all the gadgets. Which is just plain silly.

British Singer to Be Directed by Canadian

Blackpool, Eng., July 2.

Cliff Richard, young English pop singer, who is currently starring in a 16-week stage season at the new ABC Theatre here, is to be directed by a Canadian for the third time in his next film.

Sidney Furie, young Canadian director, is pacted to direct the pic, as yet untitled, and due to be lensed on location and at Elstree. Furie previously directed "The Young Ones," a b.o. winner, and also "Summer Holiday," the most recent Cliff Richard vehicle. Lensing will start in November.

Lazarus, Patlach Madrid Powwow

Paul N. Lazarus Jr., exec v.p. of Samuel Bronston Productions, left Manhattan over the weekend for Madrid where Bronston completed shooting of "Fall of the Roman Empire" Saturday (6). Screenings and discussion of release plans are on Lazarus' agenda.

Leon Patlach, Bronston v.p.-treasurer, winged out for Madrid yesterday (Tues.) for meetings concerning the tentatively-titled "Circus," skedded to roll Sept. 1 in the Spanish capital with John Wayne, Claudia Cardinale and David Niven heading the cast.

Shuttering of Vienna Variety House Shifts Unionists to New Areas

Vienna, July 2.

With the unexpected closing of the Leicht Variety showhouse in the Prater, the city's amusement district, the artists union reveals that practically all its members (1,215) have sought and most of them found other jobs in "civilian" life. The Leicht showhouse, so-called after its founder around the turn of the century, was forced to shutter because of patronage decline. "Those very few oldtimers of the Ronacher and Apollo days cannot fill the house," said Emmerich Arleth, president of the Artists Union.

Hundreds of old artists here depend on charity, as there was no social security law during their days. Parliament is not interested.

Hints 'Unusual Opposition'

Texas City's Plea For a Cable Television System Gets Little Action From FCC

Austin, Tex., July 9.

Austin's city council was advised that "unusual obstacles" have been encountered in Washington by a firm attempting to establish a cable television system here. John G. Campbell, representing TV Cable of Austin Inc., said his Washington attorney advised him that the Federal Communications Commission was delaying approval of his application for a permit due to "orders from the top."

Campbell asked the city council to contact the FCC and urge that action to be taken on the pending application.

A similar application has been filed with the FCC by Capital Cable Co. Austin's only commercial television station, KTBC-TV, owned by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, holds an option to buy 50% in Capital Cable.

The KTBC interests originally filed an application for a cable television franchise, which would make out of town channels available here for a monthly charge, in 1957. It did not press the matter, however, until late last year when several other firms filed similar applications.

Campbell prseented to the council a letter from John P. Cole Jr. his Washington attorney, concerning his applications for an intercity microwave system.

These applications appear to be encountering some unusual obstacles," said Cole's letter, "since we have been advised by FCC staff personnel on a number of occasions that they have been processed, meet all commission requirements and specifications, and are ready to be granted."

Cole said action on the applications could reasonably have been expected during the latter part of May "or perhaps earlier."

He investigated their status about that time, he added.

Campbell told the council that his firm already has strung "over 50 miles of line" for its cable television system.

He said he was under the impression, when the city council granted his permit last February, that cable television here would be on a competitive basis.

Blind Bids

uct on the slim side, the gamble almost had to be taken and continues to be necessary in the case of other pix.

The big answer could come from the Feredal Trade Commission, it's believed. This agency has pretty broad powers when dealing with business matters and the relationships between buyers and sellers. The question, as always, is "how far will the exhibs go?" It's felt that if TOA or Allied really got tough and went to the FTC, an interesting case could develop. But it has always been Stembler's policy to try and get things done through the distribs themselves whenever an industry matter like this comes up, without going to the cops. He has made his statements on this matter and indicated his desire to iron it out with the distribs.

But just how cooperative they will care to be on a point which puts them in such an advantageous position remains to be seen. It is felt in many quarters that the only answer will be through the FTC because, as Stembler noted, the blind booking pattern is growing —not getting any better.

Rank 50 Vaude Houses

"Blitz." It was considered to be the only available theatre outside the West End capable of housing the complicated scenery required for that production.

The 50 theatres in the live show circuit, largely because of their capacity, have a hefty potential gross. It is reported that one U.S. artist recently grossed a total of $110,000 for eight one-night stands.

Cary Grant's 26th Film Booked by Music Hall

Cary Grant may be on his way to another chunck of coin via Universal and Radio City Music Hall. His latest effort, starring with Audrey Hepburn, "Charade," has been booked by the Music Hall as its Christmas picture, an occurance which almost alway sets off a hefty wave of bookings across the country.

The Stanley Donen comedy-mystery is the first film coupling of Grant and Miss Hepburn. It's the actor's 26th pic to play the Music Hall. His last to play the houses, "That Touch of Mink," also for U, set the all-time b.o. record there with a sizzling $1,885,340 during a 10-week engagement last summer. Grant's previous 25 pix at the Hall have run a total of 99 weeks, also a record for a star at the showplace.

"Charade" was filmed in Paris under the producer-director aegis of Donen from a screenplay by Peter Stone and with music by Henry Mancini.

tablished Manhattan spots, attuned to catering to their own clientele. They even prognosticate that the now, they think, over-hoteled and over-roomed Manhattan hostelries face a rude awakening as the drive-in trade holes up at nearby Fair motor inns rather than coming into midtown Manhattan. (This has nothing to do, incidentally, with the sharp warning just issued by New York's Traffic Commissioner Howard Barnes who points to the retarded roadway construction which, whether completed or not, will face the normally abnormal motor traffic in direction of the airports—LaGuardia and Idlewild—and to be still further complicated by the new baseball stadium being built at Flushing Meadows for the N. Y. Mets).

But, primarily, with lingering civic pride the veteran local restaurateurs and hoteliers openly shudder at the lack of showmanship so far manifested.

They point to the grim news that a "promotioned" French Pavilion couldn't get off the ground; that the major European powers are not officially represented, as they were at the 21st Century Seattle Exposition two years ago (due to that International Federation of Fairs accord that exists); that, lacking these, there will not even be the culinary excitement of a French, Belgian or Italian Pavilion (class dining), the British Buttery, and the like; that countries like Russia and Israel have bowed out, etc. "Nobody will get very excited because the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan has just broken ground for a Pavilion," said another showman.

Many point to the fact that Seattle, despite its existing blue laws, made no bones about nudity, "girlie" shows, a midway, and the like, even though, as it developed, the big hits turned out to be the U. S. Exhibition Hall, the monorail, and that perisphere revolving restaurant.

There is recognition that Walt Disney "is very much in on the show business end of the GM and other industrial displays," but many doubt that's going to sell tickets en bloc.

It is stressed that before it's too late—and it may be too late already—that "something should be done to stir up the powers-that-be at the Fair who are industrial-minded and give the brushoff to the basic showmanship that is the true pitchman's delight to lure the masses."

It is doubted if an Hawaiian hula display, or the Aquacade resurrection (under the Meyer Davis-Leon Leonidoff aegis) or even the Ringling Bros.-Barnum & Bailey Circus will be enough to lure the fun-seekers. In connection with the latter, the Ringlings for the first time in many years have relinquished their traditional Madison Sq. Garden site to the visiting Moscow State Circus and shifted locale to Flushing Meadows.

CABLE PICKUP OKAY

Cunningham In Corpus Christi, Also Alice, Texas

McAllen, Tex., July 9.

City commission approved an ordinance granting W. C. Cunningham of Corpus Christi, Tex., a franchise for a cable television system. Cunningham recently began operating a cable television system in Alice, and has one under construction in Kingsville.

Systems in all three cities will provide reception of KONO-TV, WOAI-TV, KENS-TV and KWEX-TV, all of San Antonio. The latter is a Spanish-language outlet on Channel 41; and programs from KLRN-TV, an educational outlet operating on Channel 9 in Austin. Another channel will feature time and weather reports.

Cunningham will be allowed to charge local customers a $15 installation fee and a $5.95 monthly subscription fee.

Allied Artists Fight Pictures Sans Svenskas

Theatrical motion picture rights to the Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight championship fight July 22 in Las Vegas have been acquired by Allied Artists. Deal is worldwide except for the Scandinavian countries.

Bout also is going closed-circuit to theatres and auditoriums via SportsVision Inc., which holds the ancillary rights.

Par Sales Drive Flies Chas. Boasberg Banner

"Paramount's Tribute to Charles Boasberg" got underway this week, it being a six-month sales drive honoring the president and general sales manager of Par Film Distributing.

George Weltner, exec v.p. of the parent Par, provided the posies: "I know that I am speaking for our entire selling team when I say that Charley Boasberg is the best and most capable sales manager in the business today."

Product to be pushed includes "Hud," "Nutty Professor," "Come Blow Your Horn," "Donovan's Reef," "Wives and Lovers," "New Kind of Love," "Fun in Acapulco," "All the Way Home," "Who's Been Sleeping in My Bed?" "Who's Minding the Store?" and others.

It was only a matter of months after taking the g.s.m.'s post at Par that Boasberg was elected president of the distribution subsidiary. Earlier this year more than 1,000 exhibitors joined in a testimonial for him at New York's American Hotel.

percentage deals which provided 20th with an initial 60% of the box-office gross.

Jonas Rosenfield, 20th's ad-pub v.p., interpolated that the company in going into the nabe runs switched from newspaper insertions to television and radio, latter being important in summertime as a means of reaching the teenagers.

Sugar claimed that the N. Y. metropolitan area (northern New Jersey included) houses grossed $651,000 in the first week. He said Century Circuit's Kingsway Theatre in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn took in $50,000, or near.

These exhibition outlets have advanced their scales, up to the $2 level, but there are no reserved seats. In view of the three-hour running time, it's been hard to get in more than three shows a day.

Similar pattern has been adhered to in Chicago, except that "Day" opened in 15 theatres (10 hardtop and five drivein) whereas normally the second wave of a pic's release hits 40 houses. The guaranteed running time in Chi for these spots varies from three to four weeks.

Sugar said he preferred the fewer number of simultaneous playdates because of weather risks. Several bad weekends could be especially damaging if all 40 houses had the picture at the same time.

"Cleo," of course, stays in the showcases, where there's no sign of b.o. letup.

Hartford Toll's 'Letdown' First Year

Finds Itself in Same Groove With Teachvee — Lotsa Capital Sunk

By ROBERT H. ECHELSON

Hartford, July 9.

One year and approximately 2,300 subscribers later, tollvision here is poking along in low gear. Both in number of subscribers and in types of programming, nation's three year experiment in paysee has failed to come to expectations.

Original sights had been set at 5,000 subscribers by the first of this year. Total at the moment is in the area of 2,600. At the start of the experiment, there were less than 300 coinbox subscribers. Paysee got underway on June 29, 1962.

Disappointment has been noted as to type of programming. Although no figures are made available, most of programs are films both new and old. However, in fairness, attempts have been made to diversify the programming by introducing some live matter. To this extent personality type items have been promulgated. Examples: Art Buchwald, Rady Middleton and Emily Kimbrough. There has been some talk of programming some summer dramatic stock fare. Conversions relative to showcasing from the new Goodspeed Opera House at East Haddam, 35 miles down-river, broke down.

Beyond $10,000,000?

Review of first year reveals three pertinent and informative points. One, RKO General will stick out for three years and possibly continue to spend, even though it's $10,000,000 allotment has evaporated (part of that figure is being hoarded for litigation to come after trial period expires).

Secondly, film theatre owners are preeming themselves for more court fights and psyhological warfare during the trial.

Thirdly, educational television, because of its nature, will be an asset to theatre owners in their fight against pay-see and at same time be a competitor for public notice.

Talk along Pearl Street, Hartford's equivalent to Wall Street, is that the RKO General-Zenith experiment could be the forerunner of a new national industry and add $8,000,000,000 to the gross national product if the experiment is expanded to include an estimated 50,000,000 television equipped homes throughout the United States.

Not Exciting

Although eyes of U. S. show business have been focused here, since the inception of the trial, there has been very little done on the local level to excite talent or public about the future of parlor-toll entertainment.

The plays, the concerts, the spectaculars that were promised have largely failed to make their appearance. Localites sometimes blame studio unions for this, without any proof that the unions are at fault.

Experience As Goal

RKO General execs evade questions relative to break even points, costs, etc., with statement that they are seeking experience and that numbers of patrons are secondary. Point out they started without any blueprints and are writing (from their experience) a manual of tollvision format and behavior.

Unofficial sources believe that a breakeven point would be 10,000 subscribers. At current rate of subscriber enlistment, this figure would be attained in about five years, give or take a few months.

Station execs refuse to pinpoint amount each patron spends on pay programs each month. Say only that "financial results have not been disappointing."

Tie With Pedagogs

Theatre operators after defeats in court actions now beat propaganda drums. In a tieup with local teach programmers, ten hardtop and ozoner situations during month of May flashed two minute trailer promoting programming on the educational station. Trailer, produced by the station, was paid for and distributed by theatre owners group.

Nighttime format of local teachvee service includes film, concerts, jazz, commentaries, some legit, etc. Through tieups with National Education Television in Manhattan, there is taped programming available from American, Canadian and British sources. Hence, the contrast of a richer fare on a frankly educational, but free, station alongside fee-charging experimental RKO General.

Although it is impossible to obtain figures, it is known that highest audience was attracted to last fall's Sonny Liston-Floyd Patterson heavyweight go. Some 80% of 800 homes were tuned in to the fisticuffs.

Each of the coinbox subscribers paid $3.00 to view that go.

Majority of feature films shown are rerun, though there's been some first run product. Station operates 60 hours a week, 30 on fee tv, 30 on free tv. Most pictures presented during past year were in the $1 and $1.25 fee range. Three however were priced at $1.50. There were "Judgement at Nuremberg," "Gypsy," and "Barrabas."

Other fare presented were in sports, college football, pro hockey, pro basketball. There was a Hildegarde tape as well as one of "The Kingsmen." There was a tape of Bolshoi Ballet, and of Gian-Carlo Menotti's "The Consul."

Other Items

The presidential bash, honoring a National Cultural Center, was spectaculared by the station as was the first live remote pickup for tollvision. Latter was a pickup from Bushnell Memorial of "Collegiate Sound," featuring various college choral groups.

At the start of the experiment, the station had trouble getting sufficiant film. Blunt talk by RKO General prexy Tom O'Neill apparently dissipated this shortage threat. Station has since had no difficulty in securing film.

One station source told VARIETY that subscribers pretty much accept what the station offers. This is in direct contradiction to a story appearing in Hartford Times, written by it's television editor Tony Davenport. He speaks of innumerable cancellations as protest to station's programming. Says the story in the Times, "While the subject of decoder returns is a touchy one, RKO is not so unrealistic as to deny its existence. There was a point a few months ago, when one official admitted there were days when 'we simply hoped we could give out more than we got back'."

"Reasons for this state of affairs, he hastened to explain, were many and complex, but unavoidably hitched to the matter of program acceptance. This was a period when subscription figures were standing still. Since then they have started to inch forward again.

WHCT, official tag for the paysee experiment, has a tie with Toronto's Telemeter setup for exchange of product. That is where station got its tape of Menotti's "The Consul" for its United States preem, having originally been shown in the Canadian city.

$10 Cut to $4 On Liston's Repeat

Philadelphia, July 9.

Stanley Warner chain here will show the closed circuit telecast of the long awaited rematch of Sonny Liston and Floyd Patterson, July 22, and notable in the decision is the sharp reduction in price and the absence of a midtown house.

Because of Liston's local origin, the first championship fight telecast commanded a $10 price in a string of eight theatres headed by the first-run Stanley, flagship of the chain. Prices for the telecast of the rematch in Las Vegas will be $4 each, including all taxes.

The fight will be seen in only three area theatres—the Logan (N. Philly); the 69th St., in suburban Upper Darby, and the Stanley, Camden, N.J.

Universal inked Robert B. Radnitz Productions to coproduction deal on "Island of the Blue Dolphins," Scott O'Dell children's classic.

British Com'l TV Riding Confusion And Dilemmas; Was $50,000,000 Tax Rap Mistake Which Everyone Bungled?

By ROGER WATKINS

London, July 9.

Out of a confused and chaotic situation, which has confounded the British commercial tv business for many months past, all the political infighting and behind the scenes maneuvering seems, at last, to be bringing forth some semblance of a pattern for the future of commercial tv in these parts.

On the commercial side, what has emerged to date is that the contractors are to be subjected to a $50,000,000 levy on net advertising income from mid-1964 (when their present franchises expire) in addition to normal taxation and a rental charge for use of transmitters. The present 11% tv ad duty is to be dropped.

A second commercial outlet has been promised — if the situation does not change radically in the meantime — which will be operational by 1966. But no firm decision has yet been made by the Government.

It is understood, though not officially voiced as yet, that the existing contractors will get first offer of the second indie web, introduction of which, it is assumed, will mean an end to the levy.

What is expected to happen is that the major contractors will have their present contracts extended so that instead of splitting their operation between weekdays and weekends, they will get a full seven-day run.

This will mean, for instance, that Associated TeleVision, which currently operates in London at the weekends, could get a full week franchise for the capital. Similarly, Associated-Rediffusion, which now has the plum Monday through Friday airtime in London, could also get a week-long contract, bringing the two stations into direct competition with one another and thus providing alternative independent tv. Responsibility for mounting the second indie web falls to the Independent Television Authority which has been also voted increased powers to administer the present outlet.

In uper tv circles, some doubt has been expressed about the likelihood of many new contenders for a commercial station franchise, if only because the present stations and BBC have staked their claim on the somewhat limited reserves of talent.

Daily Express Wants In

However, certain industryites have revealed that the Daily Express group wants an in—so no one would be too surprised if the newspaper group was involved in a merger with an existing contractor (it is doubted by trade sources that the Express would be prepared to go into a franchise alone).

Other parts of the giant jigsaw of regional areas that make up the present independent web, are scheduled for some reshaping by the ITA. Via a series of "area mergers," the ITA is expected to make fewer but larger regional areas, each with increased commercial viability. Each region will

ABC-TV 'Channing' Gets Major Client

ABC-TV has lined up its first major sponsor in "Channing," the hourlong dramatic series with a campus locale being produced by Revue. Brown & Williamson, through Ted Bates, bought into the show on a regularly weekly basis for 52 weeks. Scatter minutes in "Channing," have also been bought by Dodge, Heinz and Remington.

Brown & Williamson has put coin into the web's two major news shows, the Ron Cochran show at 6 p.m. and the 11 p.m. wrapup by Murphy Martin.

Remington also came into the network with a wide scatter buy. Aside from "Channing," Remington picked up minutes in "Arrest and Trial," "The Outer Limits," "McHale's Navy," "The Fugitive," "77 Sunset Strip," "Burke's Law" and "Combat."

Wm. Morris Agency's TV Sked: 27½ Hrs.

William Morris Agency will enter the fall season with a whopping 27½ hour schedule of shows of which 18 hours are in the daytime category and the remainder on the nighttime spectrum.

Seven layouts have been pacted for a five-day weekly basis during the day. The schedule on CBS includes "Andy Griffith Show," and "Real McCoys." The NBC roster has "The Danny Thomas Show" with an extra half-hour on Saturday; "The Merv Griffin Show," "Loretta Young Show," "People Will Talk," and "The Doctors."

Five of the night shows are hour sessions. They are "Burke's Law," "Outer Limits," "Jimmy Dean Show," all on ABC; Mitch Miller and Robert Taylor shows both NBC. The half-hour after dark setup includes "Joey Bishop Show," "Hollywood Story," and "Bill Dana Show." on NBC. CBS has "The Danny Thomas Show," "Andy Griffith Show," and the "Dick Van Dyke Show" and "My Favorite Martian." ABC has the "Patty Duke Show."

NBC-TV's SRO Summer Olympics ($3,000,000 Tab)

More than a year before the coverage, NBC-TV has sold out its scheduled 14½ hours of Summer Olympics to three bankrollers, for about $1,000,000 each.

Splitting the $200,000-an-hour tab three ways are Texaco, P. Lorillard and Schlitz. A couple of years ago CBS, when it had both the winter and summer games, had a hard time finding buyers, but this time around ABC also has the SRO sign up on the winter coverage from Austria.

NBC also has signed two sponsors for its Saturday 5 to 5:30 p.m. "National Football League" highlights starting again in the fall. In for a third each are Georgia Pacific, plywood manufacturer, and Monroe, auto parts.

Telstar Town Meeting Hits Last-Minute Snag; No French Simulcast

First "Town Meeting of the World," slated to be telecast today (Wed.), has run into trouble. Plans for simulcast broadcast in Europe had to be abandoned because French authorities have withdrawn the ground station at Pleumeur Bodou for use for the broadcast.

According to word received indirectly by CBS News, it was the contention of the French government that the projected "Town Meeting of the World" would be too political and controversial in nature, as a world broadcast celebrating the first anni of Telstar.

Program will be telecast by CBS-TV as scheduled.

The complex "hot switching" which would have permitted European audiences to see the broadcast live and would also have permitted the participants in the broadcast to have seen each other simultaneously, depended on the availability of both the French and Goonhilly Down, Eng., ground stations. The British ground station was to transmit the signal from Europe to Telstar 11, and the French ground station was to receive the signal from the U. S. Latter aspect of the broadcast is no longer possible with the withdrawal of the French ground station.

'Talent Scouts': TV's Most Durable Replacement Show

Irving Mansfield's "Talent Scouts," celebrating its 15th season on CBS-TV, now wears the crown of tv's most durable summer replacement show.

"Talent Scouts" has been off CBS' schedule only three seasons, '58, '59, '61. In 1960, Mansfield, in order to revive network interest in the series, peddled it to NBC-TV's "Ford Star Time" as a $150,000 budgeted one-shot, with a change in format. Instead of young talent being sponsored by friends, relatives et al, Mansfield arranged to have established stars in the theatrical profession bringing on the young would-be headliners.

He credits his wife, Jacqueline Susann, with the idea for the format switch which, of no minor importance, made the show more palatable to agencies looking for star names in behalf of their clients.

"Talent Scouts" teed off in 1946 as a radio stanza, starring Arthur Godfrey. In '48, series went simulcast leaping into tv while holdings its radio position. Mansfield, by then busy developing such new programs as "Jane Froman's USO Canteen" (for General Electric) and "This is Show Business," relinquished his producer-director portfolio to Jack Carney, now deceased, brother of Art Carney.

The "Ford Star Time" outing revived interest in the show, with General Foods buying it the following summer (1960) to stand in for Danny Thomas, with Sam Levenson as emcee. In summer of '61, show was not on CBS schedule, Mansfield and web's biz affairs department reaching an impasse on money.

Tap Mort Werner As ATAS Prexy

NBC-TV program veepee Mort Werner has been elected president of the National Academy of Television Arts & Sciences in a vote Monday (8) by the org's board of trustees. He succeeds retiring president Robert F. Lewine, who has served two terms.

Other officers named are Seymour Berns, director of the Red Skelton show, exec veepee; tv hostess Betty Furness, secretary; and George Bagnall of George Bagnall Assoc.'s, treasurer.

Veepees, representing each of the Academy's chapters, are Syd Eiges, veepee of public information at NBC, New York; James W. Beach, veepee of Foote, Cone & Belding agency, Chicago; Merv Durea, program director, WLW-C, Columbus; and Hal Metcalf, TV Guide, Phoenix. Exec veepee Seymour Berns is head of the Hollywood chapter.

Also serving as veepees are Mark Russell, exec producer, KMOX-TV, St. Louis; William Hollenbeck, KPIX, San Francisco; Lee Schulman, director of programming, KING-TV, Seattle; and Robert M. Adams, promotion director, WTOP-TV, Washington, D. C.

London Script a Liz Fiz

With regard to the sensitive area of a network's buying outside telementaries, CBS-TV, it's been learned, pacted for complete script control on the upcoming "Liz Taylor's London" hour, and reportedly has already nixed the initial script from Television Productions of America, new production firm making the Liz show.

Insisting on script control was a switch for the network from the Monaco special this spring when Grace Kelly and husband Prince Ranier, as a corporation agented by MCA, had total control. Situation reportedly created hard feelings within the CBS news and pubaffairs division, not only because it was an outside telementary, but also because of the hour's tourist-promotion aspects and the fact that the pubaffairs men had contemplated a Monaco special of their own.

Pierre Berton Sez Religioso Groups Pressured Him Out of CTV, Mag Jobs

Ottawa, July 9.

Both Maclean's mag, which fired multi-media nonconformist Pierre Berton from his $26,000-a-year job, and CTV, Canada's indie network which has not renewed his five-a-week one-hour discussion show, were heavily and widely pressured, Berton told VARIETY.

So were CFTO, Toronto—CTV's largest outlet—and radio station CHFI there, on which Berton still does a daily five-minute commentary, and its sponsor Burns & Co., one of Canada's Big Three meat packers, "but happily the latter resisted.

"Most of the pressure," said Berton, "comes from the Catholic Women's League, whose members were instructed to use every form of pressure against me, at their annual convention in Banff. But the Anglican synod was heavily against me too . . . Since I was fired from Maclean's I've had hundreds of letters praising me, even agreeing with the article I wrote. Many have been from ministers."

A few weeks after the appearance of "It's Time We Stopped Hoaxing the Kids About Sex" in May 18 issue of biweekly Maclean's publisher F. G. Brander announced the termination of the "experiment"—a term derided by Berton, who was for some years Maclean's managing editor before leaving to do a five-a-week 1,200-word column for Toronto Star, Canada's largest daily (350,000), which he quit after two years to return to Maclean's as a contributing editor, doing a regular one-pager and the odd other piece. There's little doubt that Maclean's—a firstrate 550,000-circ. biweekly published by Maclean-Hunter, Ltd. which loses money but is supported by 46 trade mags and the profitable distaff monthly Chatelaine—lost some ads because of the piece in question; and that CTV did too.

Berton's tv shows sometimes probed prostitutes, cons, et al. Although the show is officialy dead, it's being rerun for the summer on several stations including Ernie Bushnell's CJOH, Ottawa—teeing last week with one chiefly devoted to a chat with chanteuse Hildegarde, with young Negro comic bill Cosby joining them for the last quarter-hour.

Berton is also still "on about a dozen radio stations, though two were forced to cancel me because of heavy local pressure. I'll be doing a half-hour local tv show in the

Marlo Lewis Set As Perry Como Producer

Marlo Lewis, for the last 25 years associated with CBS-TV productions, has been signed to produce the seven Perry Como specials for Kraft on NBC-TV this coming season.

At CBS, Lewis was in charge of all comedy and variety shows, including early Steve Allen, Jack Paar and Red Buttons programs. He also was exec producer of the Jackie Gleason show.

Como also has repacted Dwight Hemion as director. He's directed the last two seasons of weekly Como shows. Back as music director will be Mitchell Ayres with Ray Charles again choral director.

CBS-TV in N.Y. Realignment Of Program Staff

Harold Graham Jr., newly-appointed v.p. of CBS-TV network programs, N. Y., has realigned the N. Y. program department of the web, with Marc Merson copping the important post of director of live programming.

Merson had been general program exec. As director of live programming, he will supervise not only regular live program series but also will continue supervision of specials.

Under the reorganization, Tom Loeb, currently supervisor of live programming, was named to the newly-created post of director of program salees, program department, N. Y. That job has been left vacant since the exiting of Jerry Leider. Robert Milford, currently director of live programming, assumes the newly-created title of director of program services. Robert Peyson, assistant production manager, is promoted to production manager.

Other new titles are assumed as follows:

James Lavenstein, now administrative manager, network program department, is appointed manager, liaison. Lillian K. Curtis, currently administrator-program personnel, is named manager, program personnel and services. Maureen McGleave, currently supervisor, network films, N. Y., assumes the title of program supervisor, network programs, N. Y.

Continuing in their present positions are: Fred Silverman, director of daytime programs; Alan Wagner, director of film programming; and Larry White, director of program development.

Cy Howard's CBS Pact

Hollywood, July 9.

Producer-creator Cy Howard has been sighted by CBS-TV to write and produce a network idea for a half-hour comedy series, for the 1964-65 season.

If the project develops into a web series, Howard will function as exec producer and story consultant on the show. Meanwhile, he is to pen the pilot script.

Deal with Howard was set by Reynolds and Hunt Stromberg Jr., veepee in charge of program development. It's a return to an old address for Howard, whose "My Friend Irma," "Life With Luigi," and "That's My Boy" series were all on CBS-TV years ago.

Jackie Cooper's 140G Wkly. Tab

Hollywood, July 9.

Deal firmed for 26 hourlong telefilms in a series starring Jackie Cooper, to be produced by his production company, for CBS-TV for the 1964-65 season, calls for a budget of approximately $140,000 per seg, believed the highest for any CBSeries.

Cooper will produce the series under banner of his Jackie Cooper Productions Inc., and UA-TV is also a partner in the venture. A test film for early showing to sponsors will be lensed before Sept. 1 in New Mexico.

Cooper will then spend six months accumulating scripts, preparing for a production start about next April. He is presently headquartered at Studio Center, will supervise the initial film there. Dramatic series takes place in New Mexico of today.

SOLO SPONSORS' LAST STAND

The Care & Feeding of Stars

Hollywood, July 9.

"We want to keep our people happy and if this will do it the expense is justified." What this spokesman had in mind was the CBS layout for a penthouse atop the web's Television City for Danny Kaye, a raised stage and garden approach to a trailer dressing room for Judy Garland. The stage reconstruction was said to cost $75,000 and the Kaye penthouse another $75,000. Network is also standing the charges for bringing out Bill Hobin's 35-foot cruiser from N. Y. He's also shipping his horse out here, with CBS likely picking up the tab. Hobin directs the Garland shows.

While it made two people happy it made many of the long-timers on the network a little miffed at such coddling. A faint chorus of "what have they done for us?" seeped out of the groundswell of resentment. Art Linkletter, for one, 18 years on the Paley network with "House Party," would like for CBS to build him a heliport so "I can get to my shows on time." The others haven't been heard from but that they will seems the common impression once the word gets around on the pampering of the new stars.

It is not likely that such loyal Columbians as Jack Benny, Arthur Godfrey, Red Skelton and Garry Moore will make any such lavish demands. Benny has his own massive stage at Revue named after him—the Jack Benny Theatre; Godfrey flies his own plane and Moore is a yachting commodore so there's no problem there.

Old timers recall that non-coddling can be disastrous, too. In the later years before tv when NBC had a corner on the top comics, NBC misjudged the temper of its prize chattel and slapped a charge on their parking. This is said to have so enraged the by-then unfunny men that the parade down the street to CBS started and before it ended Jack Benny, Amos 'n' Andy, Edgar Bergen, Burns & Allen and Red Skelton were in the CBS fold and with free parking.

For the remaining stars the network not only reserved their stalls at no fee but erected a stand with a large star bearing each one's name. Alas, it was too late. Incidentally, the press also had to pay for parking which was later rescinded when one of the aggrieved told it to CBS and the rival network agreed to reimburse the pressmen.

ONCE KINGPINS NOW A RARITY

There is no broadcast society for the preservation of the single-show sponsor, yet the creature is as close to extinction as the whooping crane.

The once-dominant species of primetime radio and videoland perished again this season by the numbers under the onslaught of costs, participations and the dominance of small-ticket advertisers who flit ilke sparrows around the nighttime spectrum.

Detroit could be the only breeding ground left. Car makers have single shows in greater number for the coming season. But then, cars this year have been selling like hot cakes, and hot cakes are a small-ticket item.

Chevy probably cued the Detroit move with its success with NBC-TV's "Bonanza" and ABC-TV's "My Three Sons." Chevy is back with its prairie family, but has dropped the urban "Sons." And Chrysler comes in with weekly sole sponsorship of NBC's Bob Hope spread. Ford, which once had Ernie Ford, now has "Hazel."

But the "image" advertiser has taken the count. This season has seen the end of U. S. Steel, Bell & Howell, Kaiser, Ralston-Purina, Nationwide Insurance, Firestone and Armstrong Cork as bankrollers of their own shows (although U. S. Steel and Armstrong alternated weeks, they still had total identification with their particular hour).

This coming season, ABC, where primetime participation buying got its momentum, is down to one loner—Consolidated Cigar has the Edie Adams-Sid Caesar split all the way.

CBS has Prudential again with "20th Century," Campbells with "Lassie" (not counting a couple of sell-offs during the season), and strong single-show holdout General Foods with Danny Thomas, Andy Griffith and Phil Silvers. Just out of prime time on Sunday, there's also Ted Mack and the amateurs for Geritol. Another early-Sunday entry, "GE College Bowl," moves to NBC.

NBC actually expands a bit in single bankrollers. Last year there was DuPont, P&G with "Car 54," Chevy with "Bonanza," Kraft with Perry Como, Ford with Hazel and Shell's Sunday golf spread. This season DuPont, Chevy and P&G are back (the latter with "Grindl" instead of "Car 54"), and Bell Telephone comes in every other week with its musical hour instead for just eight specials. Alternating with Bell is S&H Green Stamps, all the way on the Andy Williams variety show. Ford is back with "Hazel" and Kraft is in with its who-done-its. Shell is back with golf on Sunday afternoon, and the aforementioned Chrysler, which last season had "Empire," this year goes all out with Hope.

TV Networks' Perennial Real Estate Headaches On East vs. West Studio Requirements; Millions at Stake

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

Overlooked in the year-in, year-out three network scramble for talent and shows, is the season to season crisis in making proper use of network studio facilities both in the east and on the Coast, and even tougher the forecast of east-west studio needs for coming seasons.

The crisis translates itself into millions of dollars, when, for example, NBC's Burbank Studios, finding itself devoid of a single regular nighttime weekly "live" entry bid hot and heavy to be selected as the production site of two bigtime CBS entries "The Judy Garland Show" and "The Danny Kaye Show."

Jerry Lewis, for his two-hour Saturday night entry at ABC-TV, has been instrumental in adapting the El Capitan Theatre on the Coast for his show, the tv conversion being variously estimated from $500,000 to $1,000,000. What happens when such costs are written off on web profit and loss statements, if the show fails to ride more than a season, is one of the anguished questions asked in the real estate scramble.

CBS-TV has been fortunate the past few years in retaining a program mix which roughly follows a 40% N. Y., 60% Coast program origination ratio. That's nighttime. The mix also has been salted by maintaining a 35% to 40% "live" (vidtape) ratio for nighttime, the ratio greatly enhanced by CBS-TV's game and variety shows. With Miss Garland and Kaye, the variety category on the web next season will grow. Daytime tv on the web is essentially a N. Y. origination operation, although there are some Coast daytime originated shows, too.

The $15,000,000 renovation job being done in the N. Y. 57th Street CBS-TV plant will add four "live" studios, and, according to the web's programming v.p. Mike Dann, "our projection is that they will be kept busy."

ABC-TV, which up to now has been essentially a film program operation hasn't been nearly as

Judy Punchin'

Hollywood, July 9.

"The Judy Garland Show" which will be telecast by CBS-TV during Thanksgiving week next season, was vidtaped July 4 weekend. Guests for the Thanksgiving week show include Mel Torme, Count Bassie, Jerry Van Dyke, and Judy Henske.

It was the second Garland show vidtaped at CBS Coast studios, and again it was a complete run through, with star and guests doing the outing in one take. Doing the November show at this early date illustrates the preplanning required because of possible guestar commitments, problems arising of guestar clearances with the telecasting of other variety shows, etc.

5-Man NAB Unit Designed to 'Keep Collins In Check'

Governor LeRoy Collins, who, as prexy of the National Assn. of Broadcasters, has tried to convey the image that he wears no man's collar other than his own, has a battle on his hands, if he continues to take what influential broadcasters feel is the "high road."

That five-man exec committee, appointed without too much fanfare at the recent semi-annual meet of NAB's board of directors in Washington, has as its chief function to keep Collins in check. That's the inside word of a key board member. The exec committee's function will be "to make sure the policies of the NAB board of directors are carried out between semi-annual board meetings. In short, according to the insider, "to keep Collins in check."

According to the official bland announcement issued in Washington, the exec committee's general duties include interpreting and initiating policy, with "first priority" given to carrying out the campaign against FCC's proposed commercial time limits.

It's an open secret that broadcasters and Collins time and again have been at loggerheads, the most recent issue concerning the cigaret-cancer controversy. It's true that with time Collins has mellowed, making a stronger defense of industry practices taking a more hostile attitude against

Hub Robinson's NBC-TV Dickers

Longtime query: "What's happened to Hubbell Robinson?" reveals that the ex-CBS-TV programming chieftain is going back into tv production and has been negotiating with NBC-TV on a half-hour situation comedy series designed for the '64-'65 semester. It's understood that the dickers are nearing finalization.

This would be Robinson's initial fling in the area of comedy. During his two-year tenure at Revue Production (between CBS jobs), he brought in "Ford Star Time," "Thriller" and "87th Precinct." However, this time out Robinson, it's reported, will be operating on his own.

Interestingly enough, for all the years that Robinson was encamped at CBS, all the HR production efforts—as with the new situation comedy series—have flaunted the NBC banner.

H'wood Telefilm Prods. Hits Peak This Month With 48 Series Rolling

Hollywood, July 9.

Hollywood telefilm production will hit its peak in July, when 15 more series join the 33 already in production.

Series going into production this month include a number of new shows, such as "My Favorite Martian," The Bob Hope Show, "Petticoat Junction" and "Kraft Suspense Theater," in addition to return es such as "Perry Mason," "The Danny Thomas Show," "The Andy Griffith Show," "McHale's Men" and "The Joey Bishop Show."

Already in production are series such as "Twilight Zone," "Arrest and Trial," "The Robert Taylor Show," "The Great Adventure" and "Wagon Train."

Thus, with virtually every show before the cameras, the annual three-month slack period will end and the march of Hollywood's unemployed to the local office of the California State Employment Service should tail off somewhat.

With some 80% of all applications for unemployment insurance handled by the area CSES office being jobless industry workers, the Service began last April placing ads twice weekly in the tradepapers to help ease the situation. Results from outside employment sources so far have been "exceedingly encouraging" according to Irving Miller, office manager of the CSES Hollywood branch.

Offered under catchline of "Available: Capable people with entertainment industry experience" have been industry personnel of almost every description. Listed on the service's rolls include 9 the-

At CBS-TV There's Always Room For Extra Com'l Hour

CBS-TV, by adding another hour to its daytime Saturday network schedule, has increased its potential billings by about $1,500,000 over the course of a year.

The outlook that the potential will be realized is bright, indeed, for the web has Saturday customers waiting in line, especially for the fourth quarter which encompasses the Thanksgiving-Christmas holiday period. Program changes will take effect in the fall.

What the network did, after some long investigation, was to

UA-TV's 'Bunky' As '64-'65 Entry

United Artists Television, busily lining up new projects for possible '64-'65 entries, has signed Michael J. Pollard for a half-hour situation comedy series. Pollard, now appearing on Broadway in "Enter Laughing," will star in the title role "Bunky."

Series, created by Joshua Shelly who also will act as producer, will be coproduced by UA-TV. David Burns, now appearing in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," will also star. Setting of the situation comedy is a diner.

Sidney Zelinka, Stephen Kanfer and Jess Korman will write the pilot script; both pilot and series will be filmed in New York.

Webs 17% Unsold And Ride It

With a little more than two months to go before the kickoff of the new season and with all major advertiser buys already in the bag, there's still some $35,000,000 in minutes still rattling around as availabilities on the three television webs for the fourth quarter. That's about 17% of the theoretical three-network SRO gross of $225,000,000 for that period, mased on card rates.

So once again, the fourth quarter is adding up to a two-and-half network economy, just as it has been doing for the past couple of years. If that amount of unsold inventory appears to be an irreducible minimum, the webs have learned to live with it. Even with the $35,000,000 in minutes on their shelves, the three networks still can rack up room adequate to fancy profits on their overall schedule for the fourth quarter, dependent on the varying unsold minutes among the networks.

But it's not the unsold time in the fourth quarter that's disturbing more than one web, but the necessity of hustling renewals and new business for the first quarter of next year. In an era when 13-week participations have become the rule, the first quarter has become the rule, the first quarter has become the make-'em-or-break-'em period. Less so for CBS-TV, which still rolls with lots of longterm sponsorships, but very much so for both NBC-TV and ABC-TV were the minute deals are dominant.

The web sales staffs can't make a move about first quarter biz until the rating numbers for the new season's schedule start shaping up in November. If a web's ratings is solid, the first quarter business is a natural shoo-in. But if the rating are down for a particular web, then it's reach for the panic buttons and start those bargain sales.

ABC-TV felt the brunt of this economy with full force during the first quarter of this year. The web's fourth quarter sales last year were okay, about on a par with this year's 81% of capacity, but after the rating rout of the web's schedule, the first quarter revenues were way off. The business comeback of the web for the upcoming season is based on the sweeping overhaul of the programming lineup and demonstrates the readiness of advertisers to speculate on the ratings of new shows. But once the ratings are in, sales strictly follow the numbers.

A complicating aspect of the first quarter business is the annual exodus of the Christmas season advertisers, such as the perfumeries and glassware companies, from the network scene. Add that to the game of musical chairs played by the year-round advertisers in the first quarter and it spells ulcers for the sales boys.

SG Taps Bob Finkel For Paul Lynde Series

Hollywood, July 9.

400G 'Great War' As 26-Parter On BBC-II Channel

London, July 9.

An indication of the "mammoth attractions" BBC Television wants to mount in its upcoming second outlet (due in April) came this week when news of the "most expensive documentary on television" hit the headlines.

The project, tentatively titled "The Great War," is scheduled to run into 26 half-hour episodes, at a cost of around $400,000 and deals with the 1914-18 war. It is being made in collaboration with 20th-Fox, CBC and the Australian Broadcasting Commission. Research is already underway in such places as New York, Montreal, Washington, Paris and the Balkans. And, of course, in London. It has been indicated that Russia and Jugoslavia are also prepared to cooperate with compilation of the production.

It is hoped that Sir Michael Redgrave will be the main narrator on the project which is scheduled to emerge sometime next May on the Corporation's new 625-line channel.

News of the documentary is the first concrete fact to emerge about programming on the BBC-II channel although it is known that BBC Enterprises, which does all the Corporation's program buying, is rapidly acquiring product for that outlet.

However, short of saying that he anticipates putting on at least one "big attraction" every night of the week, BBC-II program controller Michael Peacock is for the time being keeping his program buys and plans under wraps.

Brit. ATV's 11-Mo. Profit: $5,178,985

London, July 9.

Preliminary figures released on the accounts of Associated Television, the London and Midlands Independent station, show that for 12 months ended March 31, 1963 the group profit, after all charges, including tax, was $5,178,985. Figure comp..es with $6,661,953 group profits for the previous 12 months.

Final dividend of 21.25% makes, when added to the interim dividend already paid, a total of 41.25%. This is equivalent to 45% for a full year and compares with 60% paid the previous year. Company paid tax amounting to $4,317,681 ($7,368,345 last year), and there is $5,208,378 ($6,686,075) attributable to the holding company. Amount absorbed by Ordinary dividends is $3,289,585 ($4,784,850).

NBC-TV Daytime Spurt on Sales

NBC-TV reports sales for the first week in July topped the year so far in daytime sales with a total of 16 advertisers coming in for more than $8,000,000 in new and renewed business for the fourth quarter.

New business, accounting for some $3,250,000, includes Warner-Lambert, about $800,000; Miles Labs, $400,000; Dumas Milner, $720,000; Singer, $500,000; Campbell, $600,000; and Quaker Oats with the 2:25 p.m. news strip, about $175,000. Other major spenders include Kraft, Procter & Gamble, Ex-Lax and Lever Bros.

Brendel's ABC-to-CBS

As part of the extensive two-way traffic in personnel between CBS and ABC, Bill Brendel, ABC publicity staffer in charge of sports, is moving over to CBS July 22 as public relations director for CBS Sports. It's the fifth member of the ABC press department to move over to CBS in recent years, the others being Hank Warner, Sid White, Jack Fields and Ron Bonn.

The traffic in news staffers, however, has flowed in the other direction. In the last 18 months, about one dozen members of the CBS news department shifted to ABC.

U.S. to Europe: TV's New Horizons

By GEORGE ROSEN

London, July 9.

On the surface of things, or in any pre-screening of the Nielsen '63-'64 scratch sheet, you can probably name your own odds against the likelihood of the new NBC-TV "Espionage" series inflicting any considerable damage on either "Beverly Hillbillies" or "Ben Casey," against which the Herb Brodkin-incepted series will be pitted in the all too vulnerable Wednesday night 9 to 10 period next season.

Yet oddly enough, it's the selfsame "Espionage," which has just gone into production at the MGM Elstree Studios in London, coupled with another NBC-TV series, "Harry's Girls," currently shooting in the south of France, that could provide U.S. tv with a whole new set of rule books and marginal productional patterns. Strictly aside from the entertainment quotient of the 60-minute "Espionage" and the half-hour "Harry's Girls" (although they'll have to be good to prove the point in question), both shows will be watched closely by the industry for the "historic" overtones and implications.

Not since the early tv days of Sheldon Reynolds' "Foreign Intrigue" and the assorted costumes and period pieces of Hannah Weinstein ("Robin Hood," "Ivanhoe," etc.) has there been such a concentration of designed-for-U.S. production of weekly tv series going on in Europe. But whereas the Reynolds-Weinstein product belonged to a more primitive period in the tv wars and were channeled into U.S. syndication marts, both "Espionage" and "Harry's Girls," with their firm NBC commitments (the latter already lathered up with Colgate sponsorship coin) represent, along with the current "International Showtime," something of a milestone as the first U.S.-produced shows out of Europe designed for weekly network slotting.

It's true that in the past some of the U. S. production know-how has gone into some sporadic hour specials that eventually found a berth on NBC, CBS or ABC, as, for example, the Elizabeth Taylor hour special on London, now in preparation for a fall showing on CBS, or the recent "Kremlin" special on NBC. It's also true that one or two British-oriented weekly series out of the enterprising Associated Television shop, have found berths on the U.S. networks in the past. But unlike either "Espionage" or "Harry's Girls," which have an indelible U. S. production stamp (with a couple of "Brodkin Boys," exec producer Herb Hirschman and producer George Justin on the former; the Joe Stein-Billy Friedberg combo on the latter), the sale of the British shows in the U. S. were angled more toward "residual" benefits rather than making shows in Britain and Europe primarily designed for the American viewer.

Singularly enough, the upbeat activity in London by U. S. production teams ("Harry's Girls" originally was slated to shoot at Elstree Studios but was moved instead to Nice because of wrangles with British Equity over rerun fees, parity with SAG, etc., but with likelihood that after 13 weeks of shooting in France it will commence production at Elstree now that British Equity seems to have softened its tone and demands) comes at a time when the whole future of vidpix production by the British companies is at the crossroads. The certainty that a $50,000,000 tax will be imposed on the British commercial tv outfits (ATV, Associated Rediffusion, Granada, ABC-TV, etc.) has precipitated drastic budgetary curtailments, and it now looks like most of the companies will either abandon or sharply prune their film operations.

This leaves the field clear for the American boys to move in. That British Equity is receptive to the idea is evidenced by their new willingness to play ball with the producers of "Harry's Girls" and "Espionage" on such matters as working permit clearances for U. S. performers and otherwise erasing much of the red tape aspects that heretofore hindered such production.

ATV's Co-ownership

With a full appreciation of what's at stake, the Hirschmann-Justin production team on "Espionage" and the Stein-Friedberg production duo on "Harry's Girls" are determined to deliver qualitative product and thus pave the way for a "new era" of location shooting in Europe for U. S. network shows.

With this in mind, "Espionage" is going all out to establish itself as a major hour entry in the certainty that, should it make the grade, NBC will get it off the "Beverly Hillbillies"-"Ben Casey" hook and ultimately shift it to a more favorable time period. For all the fact that 30 to 40% of the NBC underwriting has already been recaptured via a co-ownership deal with British ATV in a maneuver engineered by Gerald Adler, the enterprising chief of European operations for NBC Enterprises, Hirschman, well-schooled as a "Brodkin Boy" ("Defenders, "Nurses" and a tv track record that dates back to "Studio One"), has no intention of stinting on production. It may cost less to bring in an hour production in London, compared with Hollywood costs, but not much less. For Hirschman and his producer, George Justin, have ambitious plans for the series, which will give "Espionage" a truly international flavor, utilizing the top directors, writers and performers from both sides of the Atlantic. (Most of the writing, however, will be done in the U. S.).

Pilot entry was completed about six months ago, with Steve Hill as the star and Stu Rosenberg as director. "Weakling," the first of the 26-week regular series, with a script by Arnold Perl and with Rosenberg again directing, started two weeks ago. There will be no rush jobs, each installment to take about 10 days, although on occasion two crews will be going simultaneously, either at Elstree or on location somewhere in Europe.

Hirschman is shooting high, particularly in his yen for key British directors and writers who have thus far shunned the medium. Since "Espionage" is designed as no mere cloak-and-dagger series but will come to grips with historical stories reflecting what's happening around the world and thus give the viewer "something to chew on, by making a statement each week on the world around us," Hirschman is confident he can deliver them. He's going after the John Schlessingers (director of "A Time For Loving"), a Tony Asquith (he recently finished directing the Elizabeth Taylor-Richard Burton starrer "VIP"), perhaps a Tony Richardson if available. And along with the John Gays, the Adrian Spies, the Bob Doziers, the Arnold Perls and the Ernest Kinoys on the American side, he's scouting the fresh young writing talent identified with British films and legit. Spies' "Darkest Hour" on the present day struggle for control of the new nations, is typical of the "statement" quest inherent in the Hirschman approach.

He's brought in as art director one of the best in the film biz — Wilfred Singleton ("Waltz of the Toreadors," "African Queen," "Tunes of Glory," etc.), and as editor he has John Victor Smith ("Guns of Navaronne.")

If "Beverly Hillbillies" and "Ben Casey" divvy up the Wednesday night 9 to 10 laurels and leave "Espionage" to pick up the Nielsen leftovers, it's a certainty that it won't be for lack of a sincere, honest try on the part of NBC and "Brodkin's Boys."

One Touch of Vicas

Paris, July 9.

In sharp contrast to U.S. tv's conspicuous missout on the production of entertainment series on European soil (in the manner that film companies capitalize on European location shooting and studio facilities), quite the reverse applies to the networks' news-in-depth & actuality programming. In fact some of the most distinguished slice-of-life pictorializations and news-documentary specials have carried the "made-in-Europe" label, with the unique NBC European Production Unit, helmed by George Vicas, scoring some particularly notable contributions.

It was the Vicas unit, for example, that turned in the recent "Kremlin" hour tint special, perhaps one of the finest designed-for-U.S. tv shows to come out of Europe. It's a tribute to the Vicas touch that, for all the last-minute Soviet protestations and efforts to bottle up its presentation, only last week the Russian delegation at UNESCO in Paris joined with the American delegation in requesting a full-dress UNESCO showing. It's now headed for global distribution. As a landmark in the evolution of actuality programming, its reprise over the years is already assured.

Less than two years old, the Paris-berthed Vicas unit is wholly unique to U.S. broadcasting, with the man in charge enjoying the rare distinction of antonomy as — with all Europe as his oyster—he experiments with new methods of slice-of-life programming and striving for flexibility in achieving new pictorial dimensions. Almost from the start it was evident, with the production of "Fathers and Sons," the hour documentation of a then-&-now Germany. The unit achieved peak performance in "The Kremlin" and the Vicas touch is carrying over into a number of new offerings slated for airing during this summer and in the fall.

These include an already-completed unusual hour special on "Britain's Changing Guard," a probing of class distinctions and analysis of Britain's educational system to illustrate one of the basic problems that splits England today. In essence it's a commentary on the tight, tenacious hold that British class structure fastens on even the most individual of men.

In preparation is an hour color special on Paris fashions, a sort of insiders' look on how a fashion collection is born, with one of the world's leading coutouriers, Pierre Cardin, participating. This one will not even have a narrator; Vicas will let the people involved tell the story pictorially.

Also in preparation are two half-hour shows on the London and the Paris scenes of today, for incorporation in NBC's summertime "Report From—" series. And finally he's begun work on a 60-minute documentation of the French Army—from the First World War to the present, encompassing the present purge that's going on; the basic feelings of the military against the government and the emergence of the Army from a non-political instrument to its present involvement in politics stemming from the Algerian upheavals and government defiance.

Vicas gets an assist from less than a handful of people (his mainstays include John Peters as cameraman; Aram Boyajian (ex-CBS "20th Century") as chief editor; Warren Trabant as production manager, and Joe Nash, sent over from N. Y., as unit manager). Of Russian descent (speaking the language fluently), with occupational sorties in Germany, France and 485 Madison Ave., where he reported to Fred Friendly and "CBS Reports," he's thus gifted as a four-language tv impresario as he brings his varied background and knowledge into full play, enjoying not only carte blanche in scheming his own ideas, but executing them in all their detail and creation from start to finish. He hasn't had a bad one yet. In fact that "one touch of Vicas" is adding considerable lustre to the NBC slice-of-life tapestry.

Waldman Sees More Anglo-U.S. TV Coproduction

London, July 9.

There would probably be more telefilm coproduction deals between BBC and American television interests if U.S. tv'ers were more prepared to transcend established boundaries of programming. This is the considered opinion of Ronald Waldman, chieftain of BBC Television Enterprises, a department he has steered in just three years from non existence to what is estimated as BBC's profitable limb.

Waldman, who bears the ultimate responsibility for the Corporation's tv buying and selling and coproduction, indicates that the Anglo-U.S. coproduction pot is still simmering. One ingredient that is apparently keeping it off the boil is Yank producers' general reluctance to stray off the safe and narrow programmic pathways to pioneer new roads in vidfilm production.

Says Waldman: "If an American producer wants to go into coproduction with the sort of show that is being turned out all the time in America, then we are just not interested." If BBC is to be tempted into film, he says the stories at least must demand to be shot here or in Europe.

Perhaps the best example of the sort of material Waldman is after is the "Hornblower" project, which BBC made with MCA TV. Utilizing an Anglo-U.S. writer, an American director, British executive producer and crew, the show won critical acclaim on both sides of the Atlantic. Producers, too, are very proud of it. "But the American networks are scared to death of it," Waldman emphasises, "they just dare not take a risk on it."

The executive is not unsympathetic towards the American viewpoint. He readily conceeds that a U.S. web has a lot more finance riding on a coproduction that just the 50% put up for production costs. Situation is not entirely gloomy, however. Waldman can see a breakthrough coming. With "The Defenders," and to a certain extent "The Dick Powell Theatre" he sees a trend away from the hard tried formula programs.

What Waldman now hopes for is that, like Metro's "Harry's Girls," the "Hornblower" pilot will blossom into a series belatedly. Possibly when costume drama in America is less of a commercial risk.

Lotsa London In Susskind Future

David Susskind headed for London last week to lay the groundwork for the production of two 90-minute tv specials which he's hoping to sell to the networks for next season's telecasting. One show will be "The Velvet Knife," starring Peter Ustinov and Anthony Quinn, and the other will be "The Hollow Crown," a collection of readings which scored on Broadway last season and may return in the fall.

Susskind is also planning a London production of "A Thousand Clowns," which had a successful run on Broadway this year with Jason Robards as the star. Also in his plans are a Broadway production of "All In Good Time," as a vehicle for Ingrid Bergman.

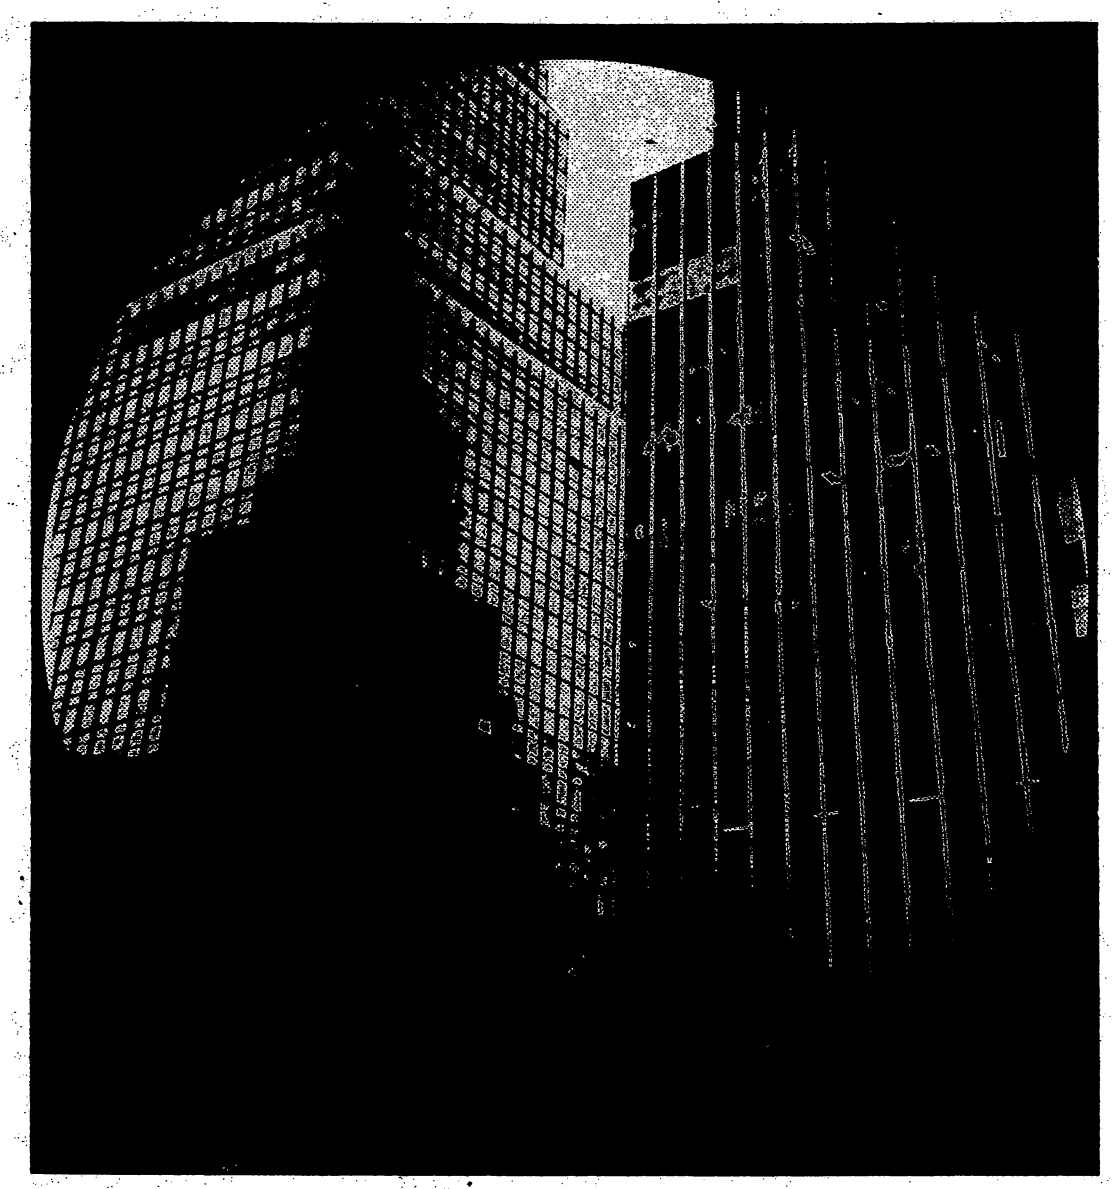
Susskind's agenda now calls for him to spend about one-third of each year in England. He's bought a London residence that formerly belonged to Mike Frankovitch, the film producer.

Cullen as Carson Sub

Bill Cullen has gotten the nod as the replacement host on the "Tonight" show for the week of July 20 when Johnny Carson goes on vacation.

Cullen, of course, is a longtimer NBCer with his "Price Is Right," but shifts over to ABC-TV with the show in the fall.

How the people of five great cities help choose their own television programs



In New York, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco, the managers of the American Broadcasting Company's owned television stations go to the public and find out what each community feels it needs on television. On the following pages you will discover how the ABC owned television stations help fulfill these serious civic needs.

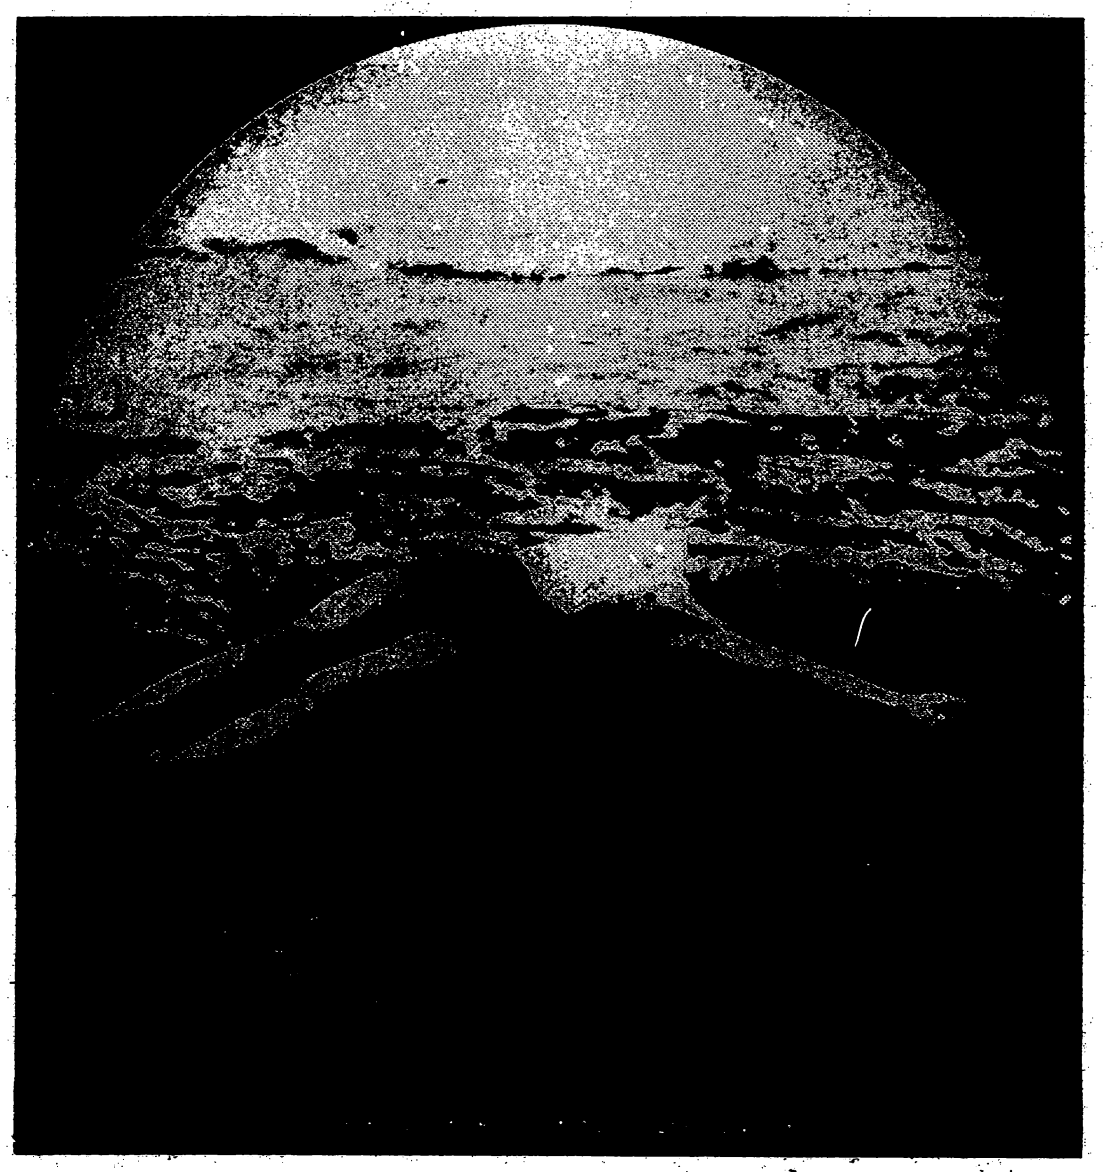
"If it were within your power to save one life this summer, wouldn't you want to know how?"



A new lifesaving method, mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, already has brought many people "back from the dead." People who apparently had drowned, or were suffocated by smoke inhalation, or seemed fatally overcome by electrical shock, were returned the precious gift of life by quick and proper application of the newly-devised lifesaving method.

Anybody, young or old, could administer it—if only he knew how. Working in collaboration with the Red Cross, Station WABC-TV set about to show and tell the people of Greater New York the proper method of using mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Timing their efforts to the swimming season, WABC-TV made a series of 60-second, 30-second and 20-second spots—then used them in a manner unprecedented in TV. They devoted all their Public Service time for one entire week to teaching mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

This lifesaving project is just one example of how WABC-TV works in collaboration with other community leaders to help bring about the solution to some of the problems of the city and the people it serves.

"Every fourth man in Chicago is a Negro. What is he like? What does he feel? How can Chicagoans learn more about their neighbors?"

In meetings with WBKB, responsible citizens of Chicago had devoted much time and thought to this significant problem. Many suggestions were offered, some approved, others discarded.

Station WBKB made its contribution to the solution of this problem by producing a film called "The Fourth Man." In this television essay, they follow the journey of a colored family, the Colberts, from Louisiana to Chicago, where they feel their children will find greater opportunity for leading lives in the American tradition.

Mr. and Mrs. Colbert are college-educated schoolteachers. He is a former U.S. Marine. Both are articulate about the hopes and ambitions they have for their family in their new location. They are also aware of the problems any family faces as strangers in a new community.

This 30-minute film presents to the people of the Chicago area a straightforward social document whose sole purpose is to create an opportunity for greater understanding among its citizens. It is a good example of how Station WBKB works hand in hand with other conscientious individuals and groups in the public interest of the community.

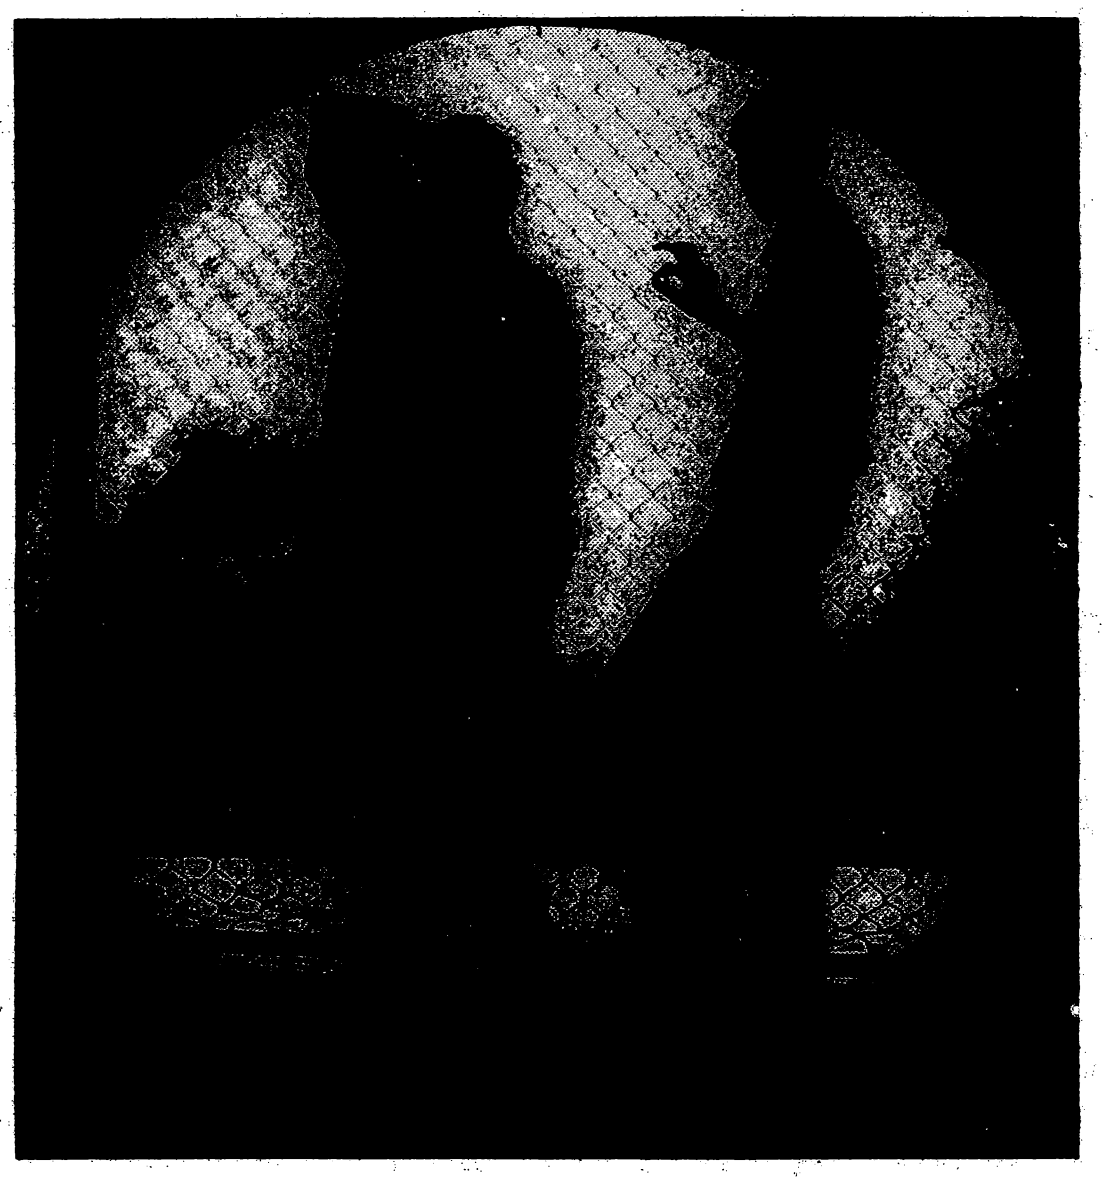
"The dropout problem in Detroit schools is alarming. Can television help explain to boys and girls why they should finish school?"



Television could, indeed. And Station WXYZ-TV devised an effective format for attracting the attention of young men and women of school age. In August, just prior to a new school year, "CAREERATHON" was presented to Detroit.

The nucleus of this ninety-minute TV session was a panel of eight prominent Detroiters prepared to answer all questions about schools and careers. The icing on the cake was the setting in the form of a "Sock Hop," with WXYZ Radio Disc Jockeys presenting musically-famous guest stars to provide music and entertainment.

Two hundred teenagers attended the studio dance. Six hundred queries about school were phoned in. Their answers were heard by thousands of youngsters of school age watching the show.

Dr. Samuel Brownell, Superintendent of Detroit Public Schools, one of the panelists, attributed the decrease in dropouts directly to this promotional effort. CAREERATHON is a good example of the teamwork between WXYZ-TV and its neighbors in the Detroit area.

"The city is outgrowing the police force. We need more officers and we need them fast!"

Police Chief William H. Parker sounded the warning, and the responsible citizens of Los Angeles listened carefully to what he had to say.

Station KABC-TV went into action. Labeling its project for police recruitment "Step Forward," the station taped a series of 1-minute and 20-second spots, narrated by Jack Webb, to be saturated throughout KABC-TV's programming. Filmed on location at Police Headquarters and the Police Academy, these spots explain the need for more young policemen, and encourage qualified young men to join the force of one of America's largest cities.

KABC-TV is also using radio to spread the word. And billboards. Posters. Bus cards. And theater trailers. A half-hour documentary film. Newspaper ads. Information brochures. All of the facilities of the station are being put to work to assure the success of this campaign.

"51,700 San Francisco area kids will be looking for jobs this summer. How can we help them?"

School was letting out. Fifty-one thousand, seven hundred young men and women soon would undertake the grim search for summer work. Jobs were scarce. What contribution could TV make toward helping these young people find employment?

Station KGO-TV was an old hand at coping with this kind of problem. In 1961, faced with the very same community crisis, they created a project called, "Summer Jobs For Students." It produced an increase of 63% in summer employment.

In June, 1962, KGO-TV broadened the scope of its activities to meet the need. They telecast special films on the subject, put on a unique one-hour panel program, ran extensive 20- and 60-second spot appeals. The station also worked out a community-wide program with civic officials and the California State Employment Service, and enlisted the wholehearted aid of other area television stations and all other advertising media.

This effort, with KGO-TV in the lead, helped place 15,500 students in summer jobs. For the job it did the station received a special citation from the United States Secretary of Labor, Willard Wirtz, and a commendation from California Governor Edmund G. Brown.

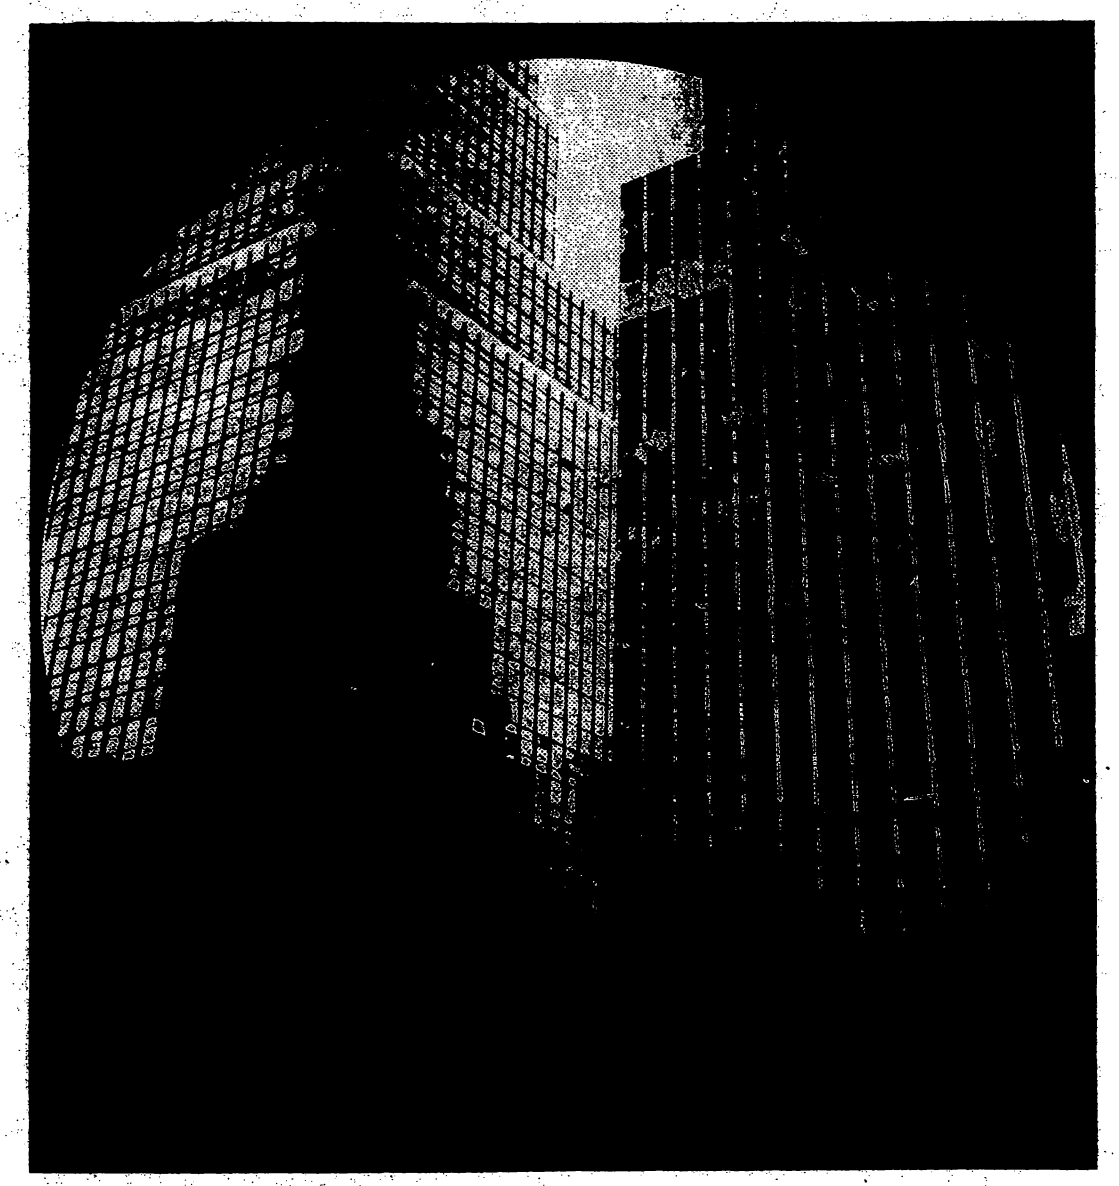
Five great cities breathe, live, grow, struggle with their vexing problems...



The ABC owned television stations are a vital, living part of the five great cities in which they live—and whom they serve. Like all conscientious citizens, they react when friends and neighbors call for help. To devote themselves to the common interest, to enrich the lives of the people with whom they share the metropolis, is not just part of the job. They look upon it as a full-fledged responsibility to be shared by man and his fellows—for the betterment of all.

WNBQ, Chi, In Dramatic Comeback Via Lloyd Yoder's 'New Look' Projects

Chicago, July 9.

The station that was the focal point in the FCC public hearings here a year ago last spring, getting the brunt of it when the public had the witness stand—and the same station that took a severe pelting from the press and talent unions some five years ago when Lloyd Yoder came in as general manager and kicked off some established personalities—has of late sprouted a halo. It took a handful of new programs and a couple of years to accomplish but, like a reformed bad boy, WNBQ has finally mended its tattered image in this community.

Seen over the span from Yoder's arrival in August of 1958, WNBQ is unquestionably the most improved tv station in the Chicago market. In 1959 it was programming, along with news and some ghettoized pubaffairs shows, an indifferent kiddie stanza and a dreary teenage record hop and deemed that sufficient for a local effort. The change has been drastic since, and a station that couldn't have won fifth prize in a five-station popularity contest two years ago did all right last April when the local Emmies were handed out, winning one for each of its three nominations.

The "new look" of the NBC o&o has been shaped chiefly by "Dateline: Chicago," the most ambitious weekly series on local television here—and perhaps anywhere; by Len O'Connor, a stylized analyst of local issues whose responsible, hard-boiled 15-minute commentaries get two exposures daily; by "Artists' Showcase," an estimable cultural offering that has the field to itself in Chi now that WGN-TV has dropped "Great Music"; by "It's Academic," a packaged highschool quizdown on the order of "GE College Bowl," that is favored with an early-evening time period; and by a stepped-up news effort, quantitatively if not also qualitatively.

More Public Affairs

The station that for nearly half a decade had been assailed for hoarding prime time and for operating as a "money machine"—taking from the community without giving anything back to it, as the charges went into the public hearings—is now prgoramming as much in prime time as anybody, and more meaningfully than most.

Granted WNBQ had to be pressured into it by trade unions, politicians and civic and religious groups that had petitioned the FCC for the hearings, and by the press which never really let up after the hostile reception it gave Yoder in 1958. Still, the new look programming (which actually started before the public hearings)

Don't Waste a Minute

Chicago, July 9.

WNBQ wrote a special commendation to operations director Gene Janson for service above and beyond the call of duty. Of all things, he instrumented the sale of a spot announcement.

About three hours before the unscheduled NBC-TV telecast of the National Open Golf playoff on June 23, necessitated by a three-way tie in the tourney covered the day before, Janson received his routine sheet from the network and noticed a station break in the middle of the telecast with an availability for a local blurb. It struck him, from previous routine sheets, that Zenith Radio Corp. had always shown a penchant for local spot buys within sporting events.

So he phoned WNBQ salesman Joe Lutzke at home and mentioned it. Lutzke in turn called Zenith ad veepee Bob Wallace at home and promptly got a verbal order for a blurb that was already in the house. Whole transaction took about 15 minutes.

WNEW Radio's New Biz Peak

WNEW Radio, N.Y., is heading for another record-breaking gross this year, based on earnings for the first six months. The Metromedia station grossed $3,449,000 during the first half, which was 10% ahead of the comparable period last year.

Last year's total hit an alltime peak of $7,162,000. It's believed that only WOR, N.Y., the RKO General outlet, is in the same class as far as independent radio station revenue is concerned.

Quinlan's Emmy Chant: 'Just One More Chance' On Awards Participation

Chicago, July 9.

WBKB veep Sterling (Red) Quinlan, who outspokenly opposed the local Emmy Awards this year and several times has made sounds about quitting the Chi chapter of Academy of Television Arts & Sciences, informed his staff by memo last week that he's going to give the organization one more chance to come up with a meaningful awards plan.

Quinlan told the ATAS members at his station that he would "support" the awards for just one more year "in deference to the persuasive pleas" of Academy officers and his fellow station managers, but, he added, "I am not convinced they are right." He said he doubted that the organization would ever find an award plan that would not do the Academy more harm than good, but he said that because he was basically in support of the idea of a local Academy he would go along with the awards next time. He advised the WBKB members to make their own decision about renewing in ATAS.

He stated in his memo, "A strong, driving Academy could enhance our industry, but it also must have certain attractions and benefits to members to make the Academy a worthwhile venture to join and support." Obviously a pullout from the local chapter by one station would hurt the organization here, but ATAS-Chicago looks okay for at least another year.

Wave of Firings Hits Chi WBKB

Chicago, July 9.

WBKB, long considered by the local trade to have the most "comfortable" personnel atmosphere of all the broadcast shops in Chicago, has suddenly become its own opposite with a succession of firings in the last three months. The dozen or more pink slips that have been handed out since the purges began has had a nervous and demoralizing effect on the staff, which is haunted now by a probably unfounded rumor that a total of 26 are ticketed to go, one at a time.

The wave of dismissals started with the axing of Don Dillion, who had joined the station around the first of the year as executive producer. Next to go was research director Howard Shepherd, and then in approximate order operations director Don Impy, performer Bruce Newton, weatherman Warren Culbertson and most recently veteran announcers Frann Weigle and Tom Mercein. In among these firings were assorted loppings of secretaries and staffers of lesser rank.

Those who also stand and wait are not at a total loss to explain the change in atmosphere. They trace it to an internal schism between the heads of the programming and sales departments.

FCC Renews KNBR-FM

Washington, July 9.

After six months delay, FCC gave a three-year renewal to NBC o&o KNBR-FM, San Francisco.

Renewal, granted through the Broadcast Bureau is without prejudice to recommendations in the Network Study Report or pending antitrust questions concerning NBC and RCA.

KNBR-AM received license renewal May 3.

NBC Int'l Lands First Lat.-Am. Samurai' Deal

NBC International has closed the first sales in Latin America on "Samurai," the Japanese-made "eastern" which the American company has dubbed into Spanish. There are 52-weeks of half-hours in the Nipponese telefilm skein, which start this month in Mexico City in XHGC. It is the first Japanese tv live action series sold in the Americas.

Pascual, a softdrink distributed in Mexico, has bought several markets in that country, according to NBC. The large Mexican regional was perhaps the first but not the only sale on "Samurai." Other deals have been consummated in Panama and Venezuela.

NBC salesmen are now out to close deals in Peru, Argentina, Uruguay, Colombia and Puerto Rico on the unique Jap-to-U.S.-to-Latin American actioner.

Daily News Credo Helps WPIX Spark On Telementaries

Formula for a local show that logs as pubservice and still gets an audience: Start with an exploitable subject, then add a hero, a heavy and a chase. In other words, make it like a western.

That's the advice of WPIX-TV's William Cooper Jr., half of the producing team that has given the New York Daily News indie a string of telementaries that have scored most impressively in the ratings (an Adolph Hitler hour was the highest rated documentary in New York tv history, local and network).

Other half of the team, Walter Engels, describes the modus operandi with a comparison: the PIX approach against the network approach is similar to the parent Daily News approach against the New York Times or Herald-Tribune approach.

Jazz journalism on tv has got the team some critical lambastings (which troubles both), but it also has garnered not only the big audiences but wide syndication of their efforts in the U. S. and abroad.

Cooper says he's in complete sympathy with the Daily News credo based on the Abe Lincoln proclamation, "God must have loved the common man because he made so many of them." He feels the station's approach gets the subway straphanger and the taxi driver because the guy is entertained—and along the way, he's bound to inadvertently at least pick up a couple of facts.

Engels defends the simple script approach via a survey he took with his college son and school mates. He handed them a script, asking that they underline everything that they did not thoroughly understand. To the younger generation, he says, terms like "beachhead," "Fascist" "Bolshevik" etc. are Sanskrit—"We forget that a decade and a half has gone by since World War II.

Another factor in the PIX telementary success, the producers say is their independence in putting shows together. They can, and have, cut into a print that has been finished to insert up-to-the-minute film or information. A case was the story that broke around Eva Braun's sister when their Hitler telementary was ready for airing. New film was available, and WPIX grabbed it up while, as

STORER SYNDIE WING IN MACHTRONICS DEAL

Storer Programs Inc., production and syndication wing of the Storer group, has pacted to handle all broadcast-connected sales of Machtronics, Inc., of California, makers of the new portable vidtape recorder, MVR 15.

Made for the tv industry, the 68-pound tape unit has been ordered by all five Storer stations. Hank Davis, marketing manager of Storer Programs, will drop other duties and take over the new sales department.

NAFBRAT's 'In Spite of' Award

Chicago, July 9.

National Assn. for Better Radio and Television Broadcasting apparently can't resist grinding an axe, even in the awards it hands out. Bud and Jim Stewart, who do "Here's Geraldine" on WBKB here, may be the first recipients of a broadcasting award that contains an "in spite of" clause. Their regional NAFBRAT citation reads as follows:

"For outstanding achievement in children's programming . . . presenting educational materials in an entertaining fashion . . . they have shown a warm understanding of a child's mind . . . evidencing a sensitivity to good child development . . ." And then the kicker:

"In making this award, it is noted that this fine talent is frequently diluted by the banality of some of the cartoons added to some of the programs in which these performers participate."

'Gospel Time' Resurrects Sun. Ayem For Comm'l Sales in Local Markets

"Gospel Time," the half-hour syndicated show of the swinging Negro religioso music, may extract a loud "Hallelujah" chorus from local broadcasters, not out of any religious fervor, but in praise of the Saint of Revenues.

Like ABC-TV's sudden success with the folknik "Hootennany' in an early Saturday night time slot, the even more specialized "Gospel Time" has proved a success in that video commercial graveyard, Sunday a. m.

Given a trial last fall in six markets by Pharmaco (via N. W. Ayer agency, Philadelphia), "Gospel Time" has expanded to 28 markets within 20 weeks. Howard Schwartz, producer of the show and prexy of Allied Productions, is planning a second year's production of "Gospel," and this time he'll most likely go the station-by-station sales route rather than with a single sponsor, Pharmaco's contract, up in October, has tied up the nation for the cosmetics and drug firm.

Schwartz says "Gospel" was sold to Pharmaco on a first call by Allied Production's distributor, ICS. Deal, closed without approaching the other 25 or so companies that regularly advertise to the Negro market, gave the sponsor heavy cost concessions on a 13-week trial in six markets. After the 13-weeks, Pharmaco had option to continue the show at the producer's price and firm 52 weeks, but still with total U.S. control.

From the outset, sponsor and N. W. Ayer ordered special ratings on "Gospel," finding that among the Negro populations the show continually scored in the 50's and 60's while averaging along with the other Sunday morning offerings in the regular ratings (2's and 3's, that is).

Besides checking the show's draw with its special audience, the sponsor also was playing it by ear re the acceptance of southern stations. Said acceptance, says Schwartz, has been 100%—and the

Schwartz Exits WINS To Helm WABC Radio

Walter A. Schwartz, assistant general manager of WINS, N. Y., shifted over from the Westinghouse station to become v.p. and g.m. of WABC Radio, the N. Y. flagship of the ABC Radio network.

Schwartz fills the vacancy created by the recent promotion of Hal Neal Jr. to prexy of the ABC radio owned & operated stations.

NAB Pubrelations Post to John Box

Washington, July 9.

John Box Jr., exec v.p. and general manager of WIL, St. Louis, Mo. was named chairman of the 1963-64 Radio Public Relations Committee of NAB.

Other appointees to the committee are:

Carleton Brown, prexy and general manager, WTVL, Waterville, Me.; Kenneth Giddens, prexy, WKRG, Mobile; John Henzel, president and general manager, WHDL, Olean, N.Y.; Rex Howell, prexy and general manager, KREX, Grand Junction, Colo. and Jack Lee, general manager, WPRO, Providence.

Also named were: Robert Mason, prexy and general manager, WMRN, Marion, O.; Loyd Sigmon, Hollywood; and Lester Spencer, president and general manager, WKBV, Richmond, Ind.

JACK DOUGLAS PREPS AMERICANA SERIES

Hollywood, July 9.

Jack Douglas has begun production on a new, non-fiction, color series "America!" for tv for the '64 season. The documentary of 39 episodes will deal with all phases of Americana from Broadway to Hollywood, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

"America!" will constitute the eighth non-fiction series to be produced by Douglas, seven of which are now in international syndication. Douglas' "The Golden Tee," 90-minute golf special, has just been acquired for distribution by CBS Films.

CBS Film Syndicate 90-Min. Golf Special

"The Golden Tee," a 90-minute special in color, on the finer points of playing golf, filmed by Jack Douglas Productions, has been acquired for domestic syndication by CBS Films.

Featuring Byron Nelson and nine other front-line pros, the special has been designed to enable televiewers to sit at home and absorb some 300-odd golf tips. Among the instructors are six U.S. Open champions, Julius Boros, Tommy Bolt, Gene Littler, Billy Casper, Lloyd Mangrum, and Nelson, as well as others.

"Golden Tee" is the first Jack Douglas-produced tv special. Previously, he had produced such series as "I Search for Adventure," "Bold Journey," and "Seven League Boots."

Crosley Steps Up 'Local Live' Tempo

Cincinnati, July 9.

Crosley Broadcasting's policy of developing and programming local talent to the hilt on its tv stations will be stepped up in the fall with the start of a new "Don Melvoin" 90-minute morning show on WLW-I, Indianapolis.

It is patterned after the weekday programs of music, vocals, games, contests and interviews of the successful shows of Ruth Lyons and Paul Dixon in Cincy, the Jimmy McClain show in Dayton and the Dean Miller show in Columbus.

James D. Shouse, board chairman, and John T. Murphy, president, told 50 Crosley execs at a three-day sales and program huddle here last week that local live tv programming is of value to communities and the industry generally.

Don Durgin, vice president of tv network sales for NBC, and Ed Bleier, ABC-TV veep and general sales manager, presented schedules of new programs for their webs.

Programs upcoming on Crosley stations were outlined by veeps and general managers George Gray, WLW-D, Dayton; John Babcock, WLW-I, Indianapolis; Walter Bartlett of WLW-C, Columbus, and James Burgess of WLW-T, Cincy.

Jack Frazier, Al Bland and Gene McPherson discussed promotional, programming and documentary films of the past year and future.

AUSSIE MART BREAKING OPEN

The Cowboy & The Kid

There's trouble on the syndication trail. MCA's salesmen, armed with "Leave It to Beaver" and a rating story, are trying to dry gulch Four Star's "Rifleman." Could be, however, that Kid Beaver will be gunned down in a crossfire of numbers.

Trouble started when a promotion piece titled "Research Finds," which MCA salesmen were circulating among station managements around the country, fell into the hands of Four Star Production execs in New York. "Research Finds" purported to be a "top 50-market study" of "Leave It to Beaver" vs. "Rifleman," or "to put it another way . . . family comedy vs. action-western. Source: ARB, March 1963."

Both the off-web properties were strong shows on ABC-TV for five years. The "Beaver" ammo was based only on the last rated ARB month. It showed that, with both shows in an 8:30 p.m. slot during the week, "Beaver" pulled a 19 rating to "Rifleman's" 13, a 27% share against a 19% share, in the top 33 New York Time markets. Breakdown also showed the top 17 central markets ("Beaver" 24 rating, "Rifleman" 17) and the top 50—"Beaver" 21, "Rifleman" 17. MCA claimed a 40% edge in "rates and shares."

There followed demographic breakdowns, showing "Beaver" ahead in all adults (10% more than "Rifleman"), young adults (40% more for "Beaver"), women (26% more), but allowing a slight edge to the Four Star property in male adults. In children (under 12), "Beaver" was shown to have three times the audience. "Beaver" is tops, the promo concluded, because he gets the whole audience.

The promo touched off an overtime, extra-help flurry of research in the Four Star Productions New York headquarters. Armed with giant tab sheets of figures, FSD veepee Len Firestone and ad-promo director Leo Gutman this week are on a "Beaver" hunt in earnest.

First off, says Firestone, MCA failed to mention that a Leonard Bernstein special preempted the regular "Beaver" competition for one of the four rated weeks during March '63, which undoubtedly gave the comedy a higher figure.

But the real clincher, Firestone feels, is in the five-year figures that his researchers came up with. ARB rates the top 50 markets three months during the year, and, over the five years, Four Star went back for comparisons of all fully rated months.

Conclusions: "Beaver" only topped "Rifleman" one time during the five years—that was the March '63 rating used in the MCA promo. Rating the November, March and June months through the five network years, "Rifleman" averaged a rating of 23.6 to "Beaver's" 18.5. This gave the cowboy a 38.4 average share to the kid's 32.4. It showed "Rifleman" to have a larger audience of men by more than 11,000,000, a virtual toss up in women (slight edge to "Beaver") and "Beaver" more kids by 50%. Says Firestone, "Rifleman" was against shows with more kid appeal then "Beaver," and the latter during earlier years was in an earlier, better kid, timeslot.

If the ARB evidence isn't enough, Nielsen's ranking sheet, available from 1960, gives "Rifleman" an average placement of 49th among all network shows against "Beaver's" average of 64th—and "Rifleman" further in a three-year rating summary averaged 19.1 against "Beaver's" 16.6—a 20% edge for the cowboy.

Jean Hendrix Does It Again

WBS-Sparked July 4 Parade Biggest Hoopla Since 'Gone With Wind' Premiere

By SAM LUCCHESE

Atlanta, July 9.

Patriotism is catching on in the Southland and WSB-TV is doing its share to encourage the badly needed movement below the Mason-Dixon Line.

Three years ago Jean Hendrix, assistant to Marcus Bartlett, general manager of the oldest television station in the South, sold officials of WSB-TV on the idea of a Fourth of July parade to stimulate a dormant love of country in the Deep South.

After much cajoling, she got a reluctant okay. To shorten a long—and delightful—story, Miss Hendrix's first (1961) parade attracted 200,000 enthusiastic onlookers. (It was the first such event in 25 years.)

This really jolted the WSB-TV bigwigs and immediately everybody wanted to get into the act. Biggest gesture came when general manager Bartlett cleared one hour of time so WSB-TV could air the

WICC'S Negro Newsman

Pittsburgh, July 9.

Regis Bobonis, for years a staffer on the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and more recently executive editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, has joined the WIIC news department to become the first Negro ever employed as a newsman in Pitt tv.

Mal Goode, also a Pittsburgher and now with the ABC news department, did a news show here on radio with WAMO and also worked on the Courier.

Bobonis, who once served as a panelist on the station in "Focus on World Affairs," will handle general assignments.

Brit. Pix Producers Resume Campaign On Telefilm Quota

London, July 9.

British film producers, whose campaign for a quota of British telefilm have so far been fruitless, are to have yet another stab at getting some sort of protection written into the Television Bill.

The Bill is currently in its second reading stage in the House of Lords (after its passage through the House of Commons) and, according to Andrew Filson, general secretary of the Federation Of British Film Makers, the Commons were so divided on it that there is every reason to believe the Government and the Opposition would welcome another chance to make changes to the Bill.

Federation, unlike the British Film Producers Association, is no longer pushing for a legal quota.

MURDOCH GOES THRU CEILING

By MURRAY HOROWITZ

Australia, a key market for American program suppliers, is shaping up as a commercial battleground, the warring parties being those who want to retain the status quo and those seeking a freer market. The way the kangaroo will bounce is being conditioned on what's now going on.

Listening to the two sides in the fracas is like being in on maneuvers. Those wanting to retain the status quo represent the current tv establishment in Australia. Those wishing to upset it represent the American program suppliers, who beef about articial price ceilings, division of product, and other characteristics of a cartel.

In the midst of these lines along came a new Australian tv operator, Ruppert Murdoch, who operates stations in Adelaide and "Greater Sydney." His company News Ltd. of Australia has a tie with ABC International, which serves as his buying agent and which has a minority interest in his operation.

Before Murdoch came along the situation was described as quite comfortable for the tv establishment there. There were some maverick rumbles, but the price ceiling remained at $2,250 per hour-long episode and half for a 30-minute episode. Murdoch with two new stations to put on the air was said to have felt he couldn't go along with the gentlemen's agreement there. He flew to the U. S. and bought up about $2,500,000 worth of product, lot less than the $4,000,000 initially reported, but a king-sized buy nevertheless. He was said to have paid more than the ceiling and he also bought two runs, rather than the one-run sale traditional for Australia.

That was weeks ago. Today, Murdoch is reported to own a 23% stock interest in TCN, which would have been his competitor in Greater Sydney. (Murdoch's station is in Wallongang, which is near Sydney, which Murdoch planned to program as if Sydney was part of the market). Deal between TCN's Sir Frank Parker and Murdoch on the stock apparently has eliminated the threat of Murdoch stepping out of line. He now is described as being a friendly part of the Down Under tv establishment.

Won't Keep Quiet

The forecast is that despite the Murdoch-Parker deal, the kangaroo just won t remain quiet. Those U. S. suppliers close to the situation see the market this way. Currently, with the elimination of Murdoch as a buying force, there are three groups vying for product down under. They are the Australian Broadcasting Commission, the present commercial telecasters in principal cities, and the new licensees granted in Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide, Brisbane, Perth and Hobart. The new licensees are commercial telecasters, too.

The number of sets in Australia is described variously ranging from 1,200,000 to 1,600,000. From the

'Ones' for the Money

Pittssburgh, July 9.

WIIC-TV, NBC affiliate in Pittsburgh which programs more than three hours of local-live Monday through Friday, next month observes the third anni of the daily live, hour strip, "Luncheon at the Ones," hosted by Alice Weston.

In its three years, "Ones" has racked up some impressive entertainment totals. More than 35,000 studio guests have been on hand to applaud more than 500 of the country's top entertainers guesting on camera. Besides the celeb lineup, more than 4,500 guests representing virtually every career and profession have also guested.

Show recently received a special bow from the local musicians union for featuring a different local band daily for a month.

FCC Orders WABC Radio to Share Nighttime Clear Channel With KOB

Washington, July 9.

FCC Monday (8) overrode ABC's vigorous objections and settled a 21-year-old case by requiring the web to share its New York clear channel at night with KOB, Albuquerque, N.M.

The 5-to-0 case, with two commissioners, Kenneth Cox and Lee Loevinger, not participating, marks the first time FCC has duplicated one of the 25 clear channels. The commission wants to duplicate 13 of them, but has held back at the request of House Commerce Committee Chairman Oren Harris (D-Ark.).

FCC recently wrote Harris that it wouldn't continue the clear channel moratorium any longer unless Congress itself stopped the commission.

Monday's decision means WABC, N.Y., must muzzle its 50,000 watts power at night on 770 kilocycles, cutting 702,326 people out of its primary service and 17,213,848 out of its secondary service.

FCC simultaneously gave Hubbard Broadcasting, Inc., Albuquerque (formerly KSTP, Inc.) authority to boost KOB's nighttime signal to 50,000 watts. It is also on 770 kilocycles and has been using 20,000 watts during the long fought case.

FCC rejected ABC's argument that it would be left with a N.Y. AM which was inferior to WCBS and WNBC, the clear channel stations owned by the other two webs. FCC said bringing the New Mexico station to maximum nighttime strength "will achieve a more suitable distribution of radio service."

"ABC has not demonstrated," the opinion said, "that competition among the radio networks would be substantially lessened by the requirement that WABC directionalize nighttime."

WBTM: BAD DAY AT BLACK MOUNTAIN

Greensboro, N.C., July 9.

FCC has revoked the license of Radio Station WMBT, Black Mountain, N.C.

The 500-watt daytime radio station is operated by the Mountain View Broadcasting Co., owned by Eugene and David P. Slatkin. Revocation goes into effect Aug. 25.

The commission said the Slatkins had misrepresented their financial qualifications, concealed from the commission the dissolution of the licensee partnership, made misrepresentations on numerous applications and had allowed the station to be operated by unauthorized persons.

WABC-TV's Big Pubaffairs Bid; '6 by Susskind'

WABC-TV, the ABC web's New York flagship, is making sweeping changes in its local programming this fall with a greatly expanded public affairs accent. Station, newly helmed by v.p. John O. Gilbert, has set a deal with David Susskind for the production of a minimum of six live specials covering the field of classical and contemporary drama. Similar deals with other producers along the same lines are also in the works.

WABC-TV is also introducing a late-night discussion program five nights a week. The station is also expanding its news with a series of five-minute wrapups during the morning and afternoon in addition to the complete roundups in the early and late evening. In addition, Gilbert has slotted putting on a one-hour morning service program for women. The station also will be working with local universities to present a daily college-level course of study.

Gilbert will spell out the local station's plans in New York Monday (15) to the trade at the Plaza Hotel. Similar presentations will be made by other ABC tv o&o's in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and San Francisco throughout next week.

DECKS CLEARED FOR MIKE DOUGLAS SHOW

Cleveland, July 9.

Concluding a long hassle, KYW-TV, the local Westinghouse outlet, has received permission from AFTRA to syndicate the "Mike Douglas Show," a 90-minute live show telecast daily in the afternoon.

Show is due to be slotted on other Westinghouse stations soon, although no starting date has been set. KYW could not proceed with the syndication until AFTRA agreed to the waiving of some fees.

NBC's Italo Sales

Rome, July 9.

NBC has sold over $20,000 worth of programs to RAI-TV, the Italian telenet. Among items included are the Dick Powell series and several documentaries.

Deal was signed here by NBC v.p. George A. Graham and Lane Blackwell, company program sales topper in London, and is the result of negotiations conducted with Italo web by NBC Italo rep Mrs. Isa Chiesa, who is credited by company spokesman with spurring sales of NBC product in this area "some 100%" since she was named to post.

While here, NBC officials were also honored with an official luncheon thrown by RAI-TV g.m. Ettore Bernabei.

WNEW-TV Dickers Herridge Series

Robert Herridge and WNEW-TV, N.Y., are in the midst of negotiations on an hourlong series for next season, the working title of which is "Theatre of Man."

Herridge, producer - director-writer, has been associated in the past with such ventures as WCBS-TV's "Camera Three," "Robert Herridge Theatre," a syndicated effort done in conjunction with CBS Films, and the "Telephone Hour." More recently he has formed a partnership with Bob Carrington and under the Herridge-Carrington banner, they are engaged in projects in tv, legit and films.

Herridge, asked about his forthcoming project with WNEW-TV, said they would be human dramas, drawn from world literature, fact and fancy, pertinent to our times. First outing for the project, as envisioned by Herridge, would be "Requiem for John Brown."

Trio Buys L.I. Daytimer, String of Weekly Papers

Three New York businessmen, with backgrounds in show biz and advertising, have taken over radio station WBIC, in Islip, L.I., and a chain of eight weekly newspapers in Suffolk County. The group consists of Irving Maidman, realtor and theatre owner; Gerald T. Arthur, former senior v.p. of Donahue & Coe; and Wilson B. Stringer, v.p. of Rowe-Stanford Advertising. They are the principal stockholders in Meridian Media Inc. and Sunrise Press Inc., through which they took over the new properties.

WBIC is a 250-watter which operates daylight only. The newspapers were bought from the estate of Kingsland Macy, late leader of the Republican Party.

That Fine, Fine Line

We're talking about the slender, shadowy line that separates illusion from reality.

Nowhere on television is it drawn finer than on NBC-TV's "Du Pont Show of the Week."

For here is a weekly series that does both the fictional play ("The Forgery") and the drama-documentary ("Comedian Backstage"); and such is the artistry applied in both categories that the program's make-believe has the complete conviction of reality...and its slice-of-life documentaries the impact of exciting fiction.

Half of Du Pont's 14 color dramas next season will be coming from the Directors Company, the Franklin Schaffner-Fielder Cook partnership which contributed such successes to this year's series as "Big Deal in Laredo" and "The Outpost." Already completed for the Fall is "The Takers" (see photo), a tale-of-intrigue in which Walter Matthau and Shirley Knight try to relieve Claude

Rains of nearly $2,000,000 in jewels.

Another seven plays in color will be the responsibility of David Susskind's Talent Associates-Paramount, Ltd. As long-time producer of the earlier, "Du Pont Show of the Month," Susskind served up such first-rate attractions as "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "Ethan Frome."

As for the half-dozen drama-documentaries, they'll again be guided by Irving Gitlin, executive producer of NBC News' Creative Projects. Among the unit's most provocative works this season were "Fire Rescue" and "Police Emergency." On next season's agenda: studies of such diverse quarry-chasers as a big-game hunter in Africa and an aspirant for the "Miss America" crown.

Thus shuttling between fact and fiction, next season's "Du Pont Show of the Week" will offer a total of 30 broadcasts (including ten repeats). Once again, meeting its own high standards will be its biggest challenge; for its record is one of the most enviable in all television. Now, that's a reality.

As Blurberies Come & Go, VPI Finds a Winning '63 Formula —On Other Madison Ave. Fronts

By BILL GREELEY

Into the commercial film business they come and go like no other branch of the television industry. Robert Lawrence Productions, Niles, Transfilm and Filmways are companies out of existence that were doing big volume at one time in the last few years.

Over - expansion has doomed some—the big studios, other facilities and staffs that slack times wouldn't support. Government nebnosing of one agency-blurbery relationship eventually folded another. The movement of hot producers and directors from shop to shop has shelled others.

As of now a hot riser on the scene is VPI Productions, and president (and holder of controlling stock) George Tomkins wants to keep it that way. Company's rise in its four years has primarily been due to the cornering of talent. Its continued success may well be due to diversification.

VPI, which will double the gross this year to $4,000,000 now ranks second only to MPO, so far a staunch survivor on this liquid scene. This year's boom followed a reorganization shortly after Tomkins took over with what the prez calls "people assets" in the form of an increase from one to seven directors and the formation of several subsidiaries.

Latest subsid is VPI of California. The Coast branch, which has a 10-year lease on new facilities at 1515 N. Western Ave., Hollywood, landed $250,000 in business in its first month of operation, Tomkins says.

Another new subsidiary, Video Prints, New York, reportedly will do from $300,000 to $500,000 this year in blurb print distribution.

Video Programs, headed by Thomas Naud Jr. (producer and packager of tv shows and feature films), produced Buick's "Hole In One" golf tourney recently on NBC-TV and has made a pilot with the network, "Let's Make Music," a quiz that may make the web's daytime schedule. "Hole In One," Tomkins says, will most likely be back, maybe via Buick again or maybe another sponsor and maybe as many as four times next year (show has a merchandising tie-in with the audience). Video Programs has yet another golf show in the works, a contest between pros, with syndication a possibility.

Feature films are another thing under discussion. Dick Feldman and Naud will head a subsidiary called Variety Pictures.

With all the extra activity, concentration will still be on commercials (VPI won 20 awards at this year's American Television Commercials Festival). In blurb production, Tomkins says, the trend is currently away from the three-way bid and also away from the fixed storyboard, touted in VARIETY by an agency exec recently.

Rather than bid or come in with a totally preconceived blurb, says Tomkins, the agencies like to pick their production talent, call them in and huddle on ways to improve the initial idea. The idea man, the creative producer and director, is the man now in demand, he says. Art, animation and print design folk are getting more into the act, and, says the prexy, agencies are currently hot for still photographers, because they believe the still boys can give a blurb composition and creative class.

Petry's Tint Take

Edward Petry & Co. reppery has questionaired its tv station list on color facilities with the conclusion that there is a breakthrough imminent in the use of spot tv tint facilities.

Questionnaire was pretested among 14 media execs and tv-radio veepees from top ad agencies with their suggestions incorporated into the survey.

Study showed that of Petry's 32 stations virtually all are equipped to telecast network color and 17 are equipped to telecast color film. Four can handle color tape locally and five are equipped to produce live color shows. There are an estimated 666,000 color sets in Petry's markets.

Currently only three stations charge extra for telecasting color blurbs. Fifteen can produce color commercials, and, of these, two have additional charges for production in color (others will quote charges on request).

Twelve stations have regular local color programs available for participations are full sponsorship.

Petry, per suggestion of the agency execs, is making the questionnaire available to TvB for a wider survey.

PG's Realignment

Cincinnati, July 9.

A realignment of responsibilities within the Proctor & Gamble general advertising department creates two new divisions and brings promotions for four executives, effective July 15.

Paul Huth, director of media, becomes manager of the broadcasting and media division, responsible for tv programming and media buying.

Joseph Beech Jr. will head the tv commercial production and art and package design activities. He has been advertising manager of the toilet goods division.

Russell L. Condit, associate manager of media broadcasting, succeeds Huth as director of media.

William R. Gurganus, manager of the advertising production division, will transfer to the P&G international division for the European Common Market, preparatory to assuming a major management position in Germany.

JWT IN REVAMP OF B'CAST DIVISION

J. Walter Thompson agency has organized a new broadcasting department under new veepee-director of broadcasting William Hylan, who recently moved over from CBS-TV. William R. Wilgus, veepee and manager of the Hollywood office, has been named associate director of the newly-organized department. He's been on a New York-Coast shuttle recently, and Hylan says he will continue to work out of both offices.

Robert Buchanan, formerly a tv account supervisor, has been promoted to manager of the broadcast department. John Ball, also formerly a tv account super, is upped to director of programs.

Ruth Jones, formerly head broadcast buyer in the agency's media department, becomes head of all network and station relations, including supervision of spot and network buying for both radio and tv.

Revue Operates at Peak Production As 11 Series Roll

Hollywood, July 9.

Revue studios reached production peak for this year this week, with nine series in production. A 10th series goes into production in mid-month, and an 11th in August. Revue is the leading telefilm plant with its 11 series, with Screen Gems next with seven, MGM-TV third with six.

Already in production for the 1963-64 season at Revue are "Wagon Train," "The Virginian," "Arrest and Trial," "The Alfred Hitchcock Hour," "The Jack Benny Show," "Channing," the Bob Hope anthology series for Chrysler, and "Kraft Suspense Theatre." "McHale's Navy" resumes production July 15, and "Challenge Golf" resumes production Aug 2.

No production start has been set for "Destry," which has been ordered by ABC-TV, but isn't due to air until either mid-season next semester, or the 1964-65 season.

Avert Last-Minute Strike in Canada

Toronto, July 9.

A threatened trans-Canadian strike of some 2,100 members against the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. was called off yesterday (Mon.) by the Assn. of Canadian Television & Radio Artists. Move was made by the union although 90% of the membership had previously voted for a strike.

Dennis Sweeting, the union prexy, said that the membership is asking, not for a pay hike, but for security provisions. Despite austerity asked by the Canadian Parliament, the state-owned CBC has matched the performers' 1959 level of $3,600,000 and agreed to contribute the equivalent of 2% of the actors' gross salaries to an insurance fund. The last agreement with CBC expired June 30.

Wolper's 7 on the Strip

Hollywood, July 9.

Due to increased tv activity, Wolper Productions has resumed its physical expansion program. The company's administrative offices and production facilities now will be housed in seven separate buildings along Sunset Strip in Hollywood.

Organization recently leased considerable space in two more office buildings and additional suites in another building previously annexed by David L. Wolper. All of the six annexes are adjacent or in the immediate vicinity of Wolper's main headquarters along Sunset Boulevard. Wolper hopes to centralize his production facilities and staff next year under one roof instead of utilizing subsidiary buildings.

AM RATINGS: BROKEN CRUTCH

2d Thoughts on '1st Impression'

Hollywood, July 9.

"Your First Impression," the Monty Hall-Art Stark daily daytime panel show on NBC-TV, is shifting to New York July 29 to tape a month's shows—20 programs in all. What appeared originally to be a simple move for a one-set daytime show, however, became a tremendously complicated affair with logistical problems equalling that of roadshowing a multi-set Broadway musical.

Hall, exec producer of "Impression" since it started on NBC-TV out of the Burbank studios 18 months ago, has been working on the move back East for four months. Once the obvious problems of setting up offices and housing for the staff—12 production personnel—were squared away, things really got complicated.

First physical problem involved the show's isolation booth. It's about three times the size used on any other show. When shipping arrangements were completed, it was found that no elevator in the RCA Building in New York was large enough to accommodate the booth. A new one is being built in the East.

Another massive problem arose with the program's photo files. Five different star still pix are used on each show. Hall's files, totalling 5,000 pix, are now being crated—and will have to be air freighted back to Hollywood when production resumes on the West Coast.

Several of the show's personnel already have had to make special trips to New York. Mary Markham, who books the guest stars, had to detour via New York from Denmark, to start lining up not only guesters but potential panelists. So far, she and Hall have been offered 100 names as panelists. From this total, Hall must select the 12 the show will use, which means he'll be auditioning round the clock for a week after he gets to New York.

In addition, Wes Kenney, show's director, is flying East to set up the crew, facilities, lighting and audio, as well as o-o'ing the set and new isolation booth.

Biggest headache, though, came from an unexpected source—the dressing rooms. In Burbank, an elaborate system has been worked out so that mystery celebs are "smuggled" in and kept hidden behind locked doors so that panelists can't spot them, even by chance. After a series of complicated maneuvers, the New York setup was resolved with dressing rooms for panelists on one floor; guesters on another, and, similarly, makeup rooms on different floors. It'll be a real musical-dressing room deal.

In addition to exec producer Hall, "Impression" troupe doing the L.A. to N.Y. back to L.A. routine includes M.C. Bill Leyden, Steve Hatos, producer; Nat Ligerman, associate producer; Kenny; Mary Markham; Hank Kovall, Steffi Sidney and Jerita Ingle, production assistants; Ivan Ditmars, ork leader; Wendell Niles, announcer; Jack Watson, NBC unit manager and several of his aides.

The four weeks' shows will be taped in three weeks, first one airing Aug. 12, troupe returning to California Aug. 24.

Republican Solon Prods Advertisers To Fight 'Federal-Slanted' TV Shows

Los Angeles, July 9.

"Advertising is under the gun in Washington and your very profession itself is threatened." This warning was sounded last week by Rep. Bob Wilson, chairman of Republican congressional committee, to admen and women from 11 western states in convention at the Ambassador hotel. He further cautioned the delegates to watch the word "regulate." Now before Congress, he added, are 175 bills to regulate advertising.

"I warn you against not solely a political party but a group of people who want unlimited power," Wilson reminded. "They are running rampant today under the guise of backing so-called public interest projects. Live wolves wearing sheepskins, the brain-trusters are masquerading under public interest camouflage while attacking those institutions that promote free choice.

"We now see a rash of Federally-slanted television programs. Robert Taylor will star in an opus glorifying the Departments of Health, Education & Welfare. Probably called 'Dr. Celebreeze.' A series on the State Department is in the works. Pictorialization of a book glorifying the administration's last campaign is due. The new head of

'Boy's Town' Going TV

MGM-TV is developing an hour-long telefilm series based on its 1938 release, "Boys' Town," which starred Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney.

Studio is planning the project for the 1964-65 season, and has held discussions with the networks on the venture. It deals with the home founded near Omaha by the late Father Flanagan, of course.

FCC Asks Broader Powers in Moving On Transfers, CPs

Washington, July 9.

FCC asked Congress to give it broader powers in reviewing applications for sales or transfers of broadcasts or construction permits.

Commission asked for deletion of the 1952 Congressional amendments to the Communications Act which prevented it from considering the "public interest" when acting on transfer applications. The amendments were designed to prevent the "Avco" practice whereby transfers applications were virtually open to all bidders during FCC consideration.

Avering it doesnt' want to return to Avco procedures, FCC said it should be given wider latitude in reviewing transfer applications.

The present practice, however, FCC said allows a broadcast owner to pick his successor. This runs counter to general "public interest" provisions used in FCC determinations of general license and renewal applications.

Commission, in its message to Congress, cited an example of how the new powers might be used if granted. It said it should at least have the discretion to "consider"

Greer Garson's 20th-TV Series

Hollywood, July 9.

Greer Garson will hostess a 20th-Fox TV documentary series if current negotiations with documentary toppers Malvin Wald and Jesse Sandler are finalized. Miss Garson would also do interviews on the proposed program. It would be a half-hour series, about great women.

Miss Garson and 20th-TV's documentary brass are also discussing the possibility of her starring in a 90-min. spec, and Wald and Sandler are now in negotiations with the networks on this project.

MEANINGLESS TO MOST AGENCIES

Chicago, July 9.

Will Pulse, Hooper and other radio rating services gain from A. C. Nielsen's withdrawal from the local radio research field?

Probably not. In fact, it appears more likely now that they'll suffer from it because Nielsen's quitting has had the effect of confirming what many agencies and advertisers have felt for a long time, namely that present audience research techniques are inadequate and the surveys virtually meaningless. The numbers may have been arrived at honestly, but they're simply not projectible when it comes to automobile or transistorized listening.

Foote, Cone & Belding, one of the major and more progressive ad agencies, is convinced now that all available radio ratings are worthless and has put it in the form of a ukase to all its time buyers to desist from buying spot radio by the numbers. Says Edward M. Stern, veepee and media director of FC&B, Chicago, "We've been telling our time buyers for some time that a lot of bad numbers is no better than no numbers—and probably worse. But now we're policing their use of ratings more vigorously, to the extreme of giving serious thought to terminating the employment of those who persist in using this kind of data."

Stern says the agency will be buying radio pretty much on its own judgment henceforth, off of such factors as a station's general programming, its coverage area, kilowatt power, location on the dial, commercial practices and intangibles like the quality of its newscasts and the meaning of the station to the community.

"If you do not have quantitative data to work with," he says, "you have to work more with qualitative values. We're not closing the door to the possibility of a new radio service that can be meaningful, but from the looks of things any radio buying in the future is going to depend to a great extent on intangibles—and particularly on the tone and type of programming the station uses seven days a week. From that we can draw some conclusions as to the kind of audience the station attracts, since we're no longer interested in the unreliable audience composition data the rating services give out."

Stern points out that this is not a new scheme of radio buying but really only a return to the old scheme that was used before audience research came into being. He indicates that the agency has also adopted a more cautious attitude with local television ratings and "will buy spot tv with the same eye to the qualitative factors." He said the agency would encourage radio stations to submit tapes sampling their programming, so that the time buyers can get to know the stations firsthand.

"We welcome all the help a station can give us in determining our buys," Stern says, "but unfortunately a station's own audience research is usually not acceptable. I suppose we might be influenced somewhat by such things as mail pull and the old Ma Perkins' seed offers that seem to show some proof of audience. The 'coupon pull' is certainly not the

RUKEYSER TAPPED TO SUCCEED ELLIS MOORE

Merryle (Bud) Rukeyser Jr., formerly director of program publicity, has been named director of press and publicity for NBC, replacing Ellis Moore, who has resigned after 11 years over policy differences.

Rukeyser has been with NBC since 1958, joining the press department as a staff writer from Young & Rubicam where he was in the tv publicity department. Before Y&R, he was with INS and the Albany Times-Union as a reporter.

Network Radio Doing So Well Ex-Affils Are Now Asking Back; ABC's Two-Year 120% Sales Hike

Whatever the sponsor-agency response to radio ratings (see adjoining story), network radio is riding the crest of a resurgence of advertising interest and while it remains less than an affluent medium, the wave of relative prosperity appears to be growing.

It's not only clients, old and new, who have rediscovered network radio as the "new medium buy," but stations across the country which once were flip about affil allegiance now are climbing aboard the web bandwagon. For them, it's a case of good biz, good relations with the FCC and a network schedule of news, pubaffairs and special events which can't be duplicated on the local level.

ABC Radio reports that with only one week gone in July, third quarter of '63 is already ABC Radio's best quarter in many years. In a little more than two years, ABC Radio's sales volume has increased by 120%.

CBS Radio reports that sales volume for the month of June was the highest in six years. Less than 20% of the network programming commercial time available is unsold at this time, a record CBS Radio status of eight years.

NBC Radio reports that sales revenues from advertisers in the first half of '63 were about 10% higher than those of '62—previously the web's best year since NBC Radio program format change in 1960. From April 5, 1963—the fifth day of the web's second quarter—to June 26, NBC Radio chalked up $2,658,774 in new and renewal business from 25 advertisers.

Other signs of the times are these:

CBS Radio instituted a rate hike effective June 1, of about 10%.

ABC Radio, which instituted a rate hike last January, expects another rate hike to be made next January.

Then there are the boom-boom impressions created by such men as Bob Pauley, ABC Radio prexy, as he speaks of his network. Pauley hails the Harris hearings in Washington as showing the fallacies of the rating services. (ABC Radio cancelled Nielsen and subscribed to the Sindlinger service). ABC Radio's prexy feels the upsurge in advertising interest is "only the beginning."

CBS Radio prexy Arthur Hull Hayes feels that no rating service really "gives a true picture" of the radio audience. Hayes is sticking with Nielsen, though, adding that "Sindlinger hasn't sold me as yet." He hopes that the NAB and RAB will do something to correct the rating situation. As to biz he feels there's nothing to diminish the upward curve, if all present indications prove out.

Hayes, Pauley, et al. in radio networking speak of the declining novelty of tv, the wearing off of glamour in the tv medium, the rediscovery of radio networking, making radio networking the shiek new medium to buy. Clients, ad agencies are now in fashion buying radio networks, was the way it was summed up by network execs.

Wasteland Revisited

Chicago, July 9.

A number of viewers called each night to complain when NBC-TV preempted the first 15 minutes of the "Tonight" show to cover President Kennedy's travels in Europe.

On the fifth night, WNBQ received a call from an irate Chicago viewer who said, "Haven't you heard? Newton Minow is gone. Give us back the wasteland."

Henry Defends Webs' Coverage On Civil Rights

Washington, July 9.

Letter writers to FCC complain in the largest number about the "amount, kind and timing" of commercials, according to FCC Chairman E. William Henry.

Added Henry: "Surprisingly enough I have found since I have been getting the chairman's mail, they resent canned laughter, which is a surprising thing. They resent loud commercials, and they resent extremes in violence and things like that."

Henry made the comment in a Sunday (7) appearance on ABC's "Issues and Answers" when he was interviewed by Bob Fleming, the web's Washington news bureau chief, and Bob Clark, an ABC correspondent. Other points made by Henry:

—He rejected the complaints of Dixie members of Congress that the nets have slanted coverage of civil rights stories against Southern whites. "I think," said the official from Memphis, "their (the webs) coverage has been full and what I have seen . . . has been fair."

—Asked about broadcast editorials, he observed: "I think it is very good that they (radio-tv stations) take positions on issues of public importance and knead and mold public opinion."

—Henry immediately picked up Fleming's suggestion that educational tv needs a new name, since the currently used tag isn't, figuratively speaking, very sexy. ("Some of us really don't want to be educated in the evening hours," observed newsman Fleming.) Said Henry: "I think it (a new moniker) might help. I think certainly they (educational tv promoters) need some more showmanship. They need after all to get an audience."

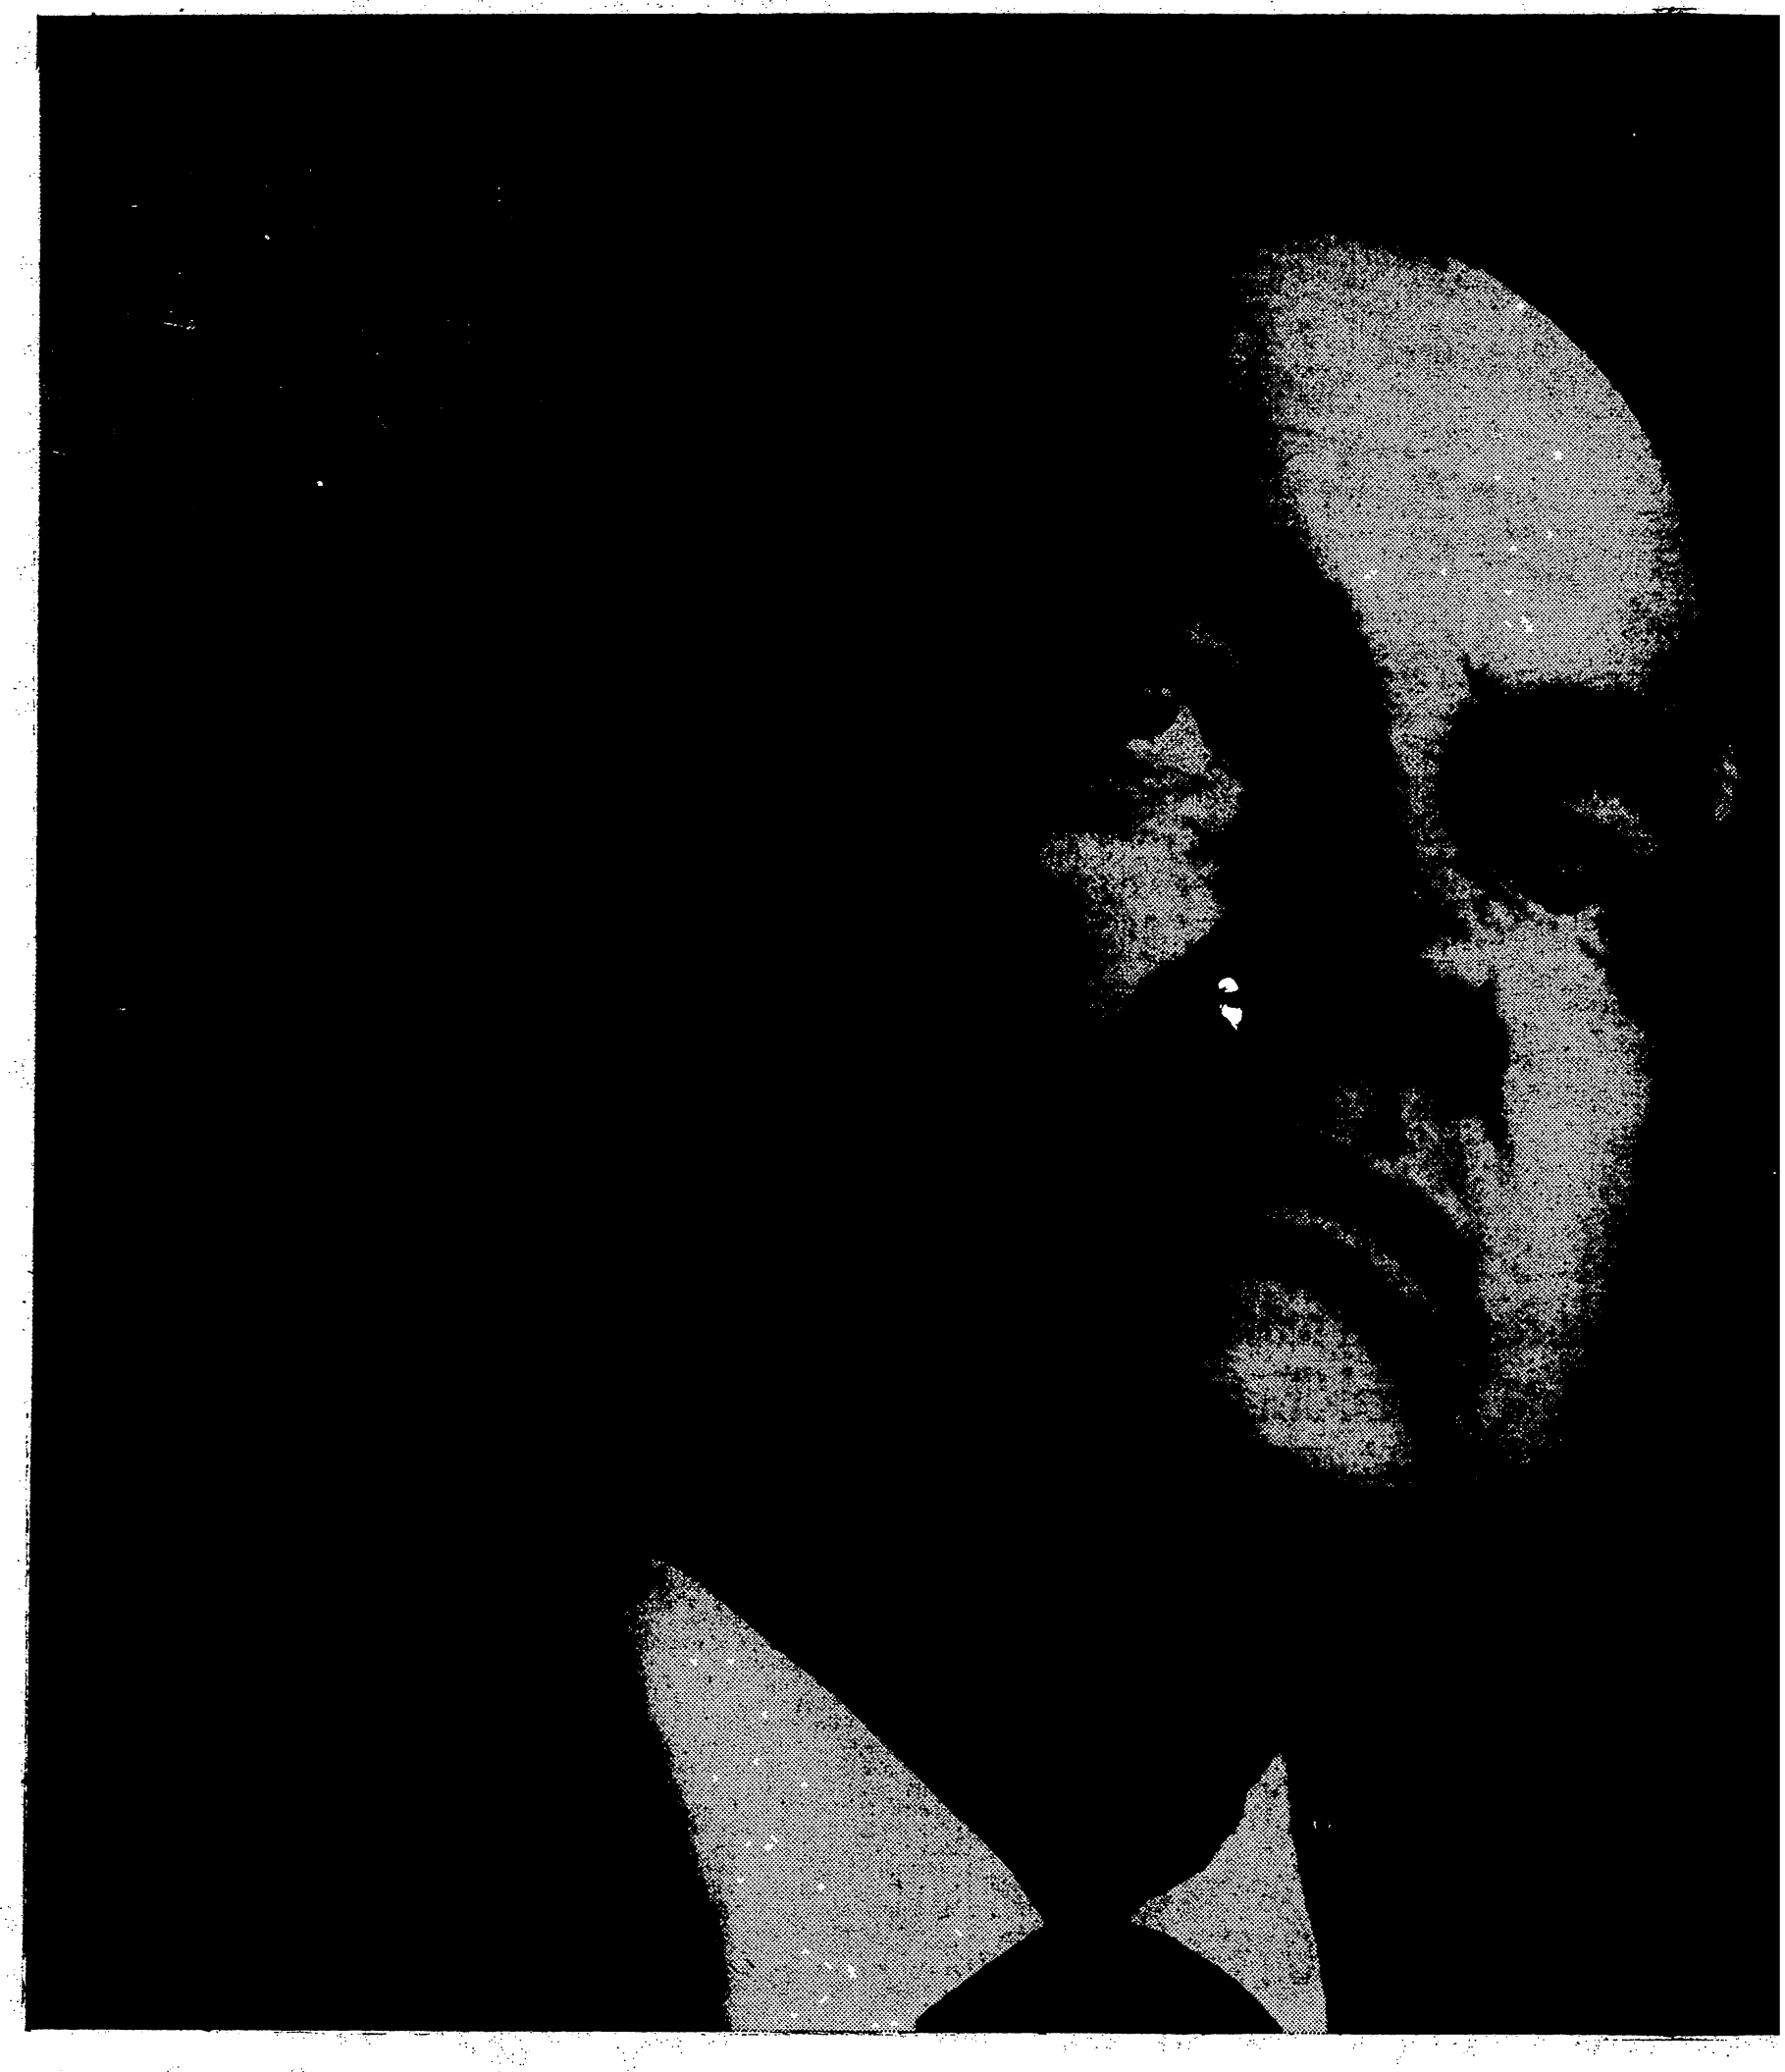
—On programming: "I think those whose tastes are in the majority are really over-programmed . . . I think the Commission, all seven of us, agree that the broadcasters have got to serve all substantial segments of the viewing public, not just those whose tastes happen to be in the majority and that there are certain types of public interest programs discussing important issues of the day, controversial issues of the day, a even entertainment types which are not profitable, and yet do serve the public interest, and therefore must be put on, but certainly not all the time—not even most of the time, but some of the time."

—What, asked Fleming, does he expect network programming to be 10 years from now? Answered Henry: ". . . There will be more stations and therefore more choices available to the public . . . We have recently done away with option time . . . and there have been some dire predictions that this is going to put the networks out of business . . . I think the networks 10 years from now will continue to be strong and be stronger."

SLF's $350,000 For NBC Specials

Savings & Loan Foundation, which bankrolled NBC-TV's documentary, "U. S. Route 1," will bankroll two more of the web's one-hour telementaries.

Like "Route," both shows will deal with Americana. First, titled "The American Spectacle," will be produced by "Route" producer Lou Hazam. Second, "The Red, White & Blue," will be produced by Don Hyatt. S&LF investment is close to $350,000.



Harlequin-and-Host

Quickly, now, which has more facets—the Hope Diamond or the Hope Robert?

It's no contest, really. And viewers soon will be seeing still another side of the fellow who's already distinguished himself as a comedian, singer, golfer, political analyst, camp-follower and Crosby-detractor.

For next season Robert will be host of NBC-TV's brand-new drama series, "Bob Hope Presents the Chrysler Theatre."

Not that he has any intention of deserting the variety programs with which he's so warmly identified. Fact is he'll be doing five of these next season, along with two comedy-dramas in which he'll star and a 90-minute Christmas special. These eight programs are grouped under the title, "Chrysler Presents a Bob Hope Special."

Even at this stage in its preparation, the "Chrysler Theatre" shapes up as one of next season's outstanding drama series.

One of its presentations will star Jason Robards, Jr., in "One Day In the Life of Ivan Denisovich," an adaptation of Alexander Solzhenitsyn's best-selling novel. For Robards, the performance will mark a first appearance on film for television.

Another of its plays will be Rod Serling's "A Killing at Sundial," the author's first television script in three years this side of "The Twilight Zone." Melvyn Douglas, Angie Dickinson and Stuart Whitman will head the cast.

Obviously, Host Hope will be in pretty good company. We'd say the Chrysler programs will be in pretty good company, too, for they'll be part of a schedule that ranges from established favorites like "The Virginian" and "Sing Along with Mitch" to showroom-fresh entries like the "Mr. Novak" dramas and Imogene Coca's "Grindl." It takes no telescopic lens to foresee a banner NBC-TV season.

VARIETY-ARB SYNDICATION CHART

VARIETY's weekly tabulation based on ratings furnished by American Research Bureau, highlights the top 10 network shows on a local level and offers a rating study of the top 10 syndicated shows in the same particular markets. This week five different markets are covered.

Both the network and syndication study features the total area homes reached and the metro area ratings on each show. The total area homes reached reflects the audiences on the basis of the total market area examined. The metro area ratings are based on the metropolitan markets within the total area examined. Top 10 shows, both network and syndicated, are listed on the basis of their showing in the total area homes barometer.

Various branches of the industry, ranging from media buyers to local stations to syndicators will find the charts valuable.

Over the course of a year, ARB will tabulate a minimum of 247 markets. The results of that tabulation will be found weekly in VARIETY Coupled with the rating performance of the top 10 network shows, on the local level, the VARIETY-ARB charts are designed to reflect the rating tastes of virtually every market in the U.S.

atre managers; 23 directors (which includes drama coaches, casting directors, legit directors; 9 radio announcers; 32 production managers (including various types of production ahsistants); 18 booking agents; several publicists and even a few producers, as well as clerical personnel.

Unrepresented in listings are such groups as the actors and writers, who are not required to place themselves on Service Rolls when they file for unemployment insurance, as others must.

Miller notes that greatest number of people placed has been in the clerical classifications, though he states that "a few" from other areas have found work through the service. He cites recent example of a legit director signing on to helm summer camp little theatre presentations and of a film director who found work with an armed forces lensing unit.

Often, according to Miller, Service staffers attempt to re-route erstwhile industry workers into other fields. He admits, however, that this is not often successful because "most would rather work a third of the year in showbusiness at good pay than a full year elsewhere at reduced rates.

Miller expresses hope that as Service listings become more known throughout the industry, an increased number of workers may be placed. He adds that Service is in constant touch with other U. S. areas and hopes to spot local workers in other locales, if, of course, they are agreeable.

'Kin' Wins Reprise

"A Kin To Win," Canada's first home participation tv show which debuted in 1961, is returning this fall on CFCF-TV, Montreal.

E. Roger Muir, head of Merritt Enterprises which packages the show, said a U.S. version is now being readied. Sylvia Train Ltd. of Toronto handles syndication throughout Canada.

fall, on a syndicated basis, I think most of the stations that carried the network show will pick it up. I expect to have about 25 to 50 radio stations by the end of the year. No other plans except a couple of books." (He's had half-a-dozen published, including "Klondike Fever"—he was born in the Yukon—on which the Ziv tv series was based.) Berton has left for Hungary doing some freelance pieces for Toronto Star. With him is Hungarian-born tv cartoonist George Feyer.

Berton's controversial article teed by noting that nearly half the new outpatients in Ontario psychiatric hospitals are under 16, and quoted a psychiatrist as attributing it to "the stress on sex in our culture . . . but the official morality is based on postponement. All early sexual experiences for this reason, are surreptitious and associated with shame." Berton wrote, " . . . teenage sex is here to stay, and we adults have been helping build the kind of society in which it flourishes . . . We have managed to equate sexiness with popularity. And we have sold the package to the kids for straight commercial gain."

WASHINGTON — A CITY IN TROUBLE
With Robert MacNeil, narrator
Producer: Jim Karayn
Director: Frank Slingland
Writers: Karayn, MacNeil
120 Mins., Thurs.-Fri., 10 p.m.
WRC-TV, Washington (tape)

This two-part documentary, shown in 60-minute segments on two different nights, was noteworthy for its courage. For the show, produced by NBC news for its Washington o.&o., trod where Angels fear, in the nitroglycerine-jellied world of Washington race tensions.

Its chief drawback may have been that it merely carried coals to Newcastle-on-Potomac which is already too painfully aware of its unique problems in this area. The show would have been a better network bet, for the information, education and edification of the rest of the country. Word is, it may yet be aired nationally, so the objection is a tenuous one.

For all of that, the documentary was well done. The product of enormous research and preparation, it at least put a frightening can of worms in perspective. Technically, the show was first rate except for a tendency to be overtalky which, however, did not detract from its overall polish and impact.

Part One looked at D.C.'s considerable race problem; Part Two set out after solutions. The former was somewhat more interesting as well as being the better done of the two.

The shows looked at all facets of the problem: in the only city in which they are the majority, Negroes are hemmed in by job, housing, educational and sociological barriers. In the shadow of the Capital they are denied, discriminated against and ghettoized. Compounding the problem is the fact the District of Columbia is administered by an impotent government hamstrung principally by Congressional committees which are manned primarily by Southerners.

This was all etched in picture essays backed by taut narrative and by interviews strategically spaced. Interestingly, the one note of moderation was struck by a "typical" Negro chosen to reflect his people in Washington. Interviewed leaders usually tend to extremes.

Part Two, featuring much the same cast of characters, was highlighted by a panel of two senators, one House member, an Urban League official and a Washington Board of Trade (Chamber of Commerce) leader debating whether or not the District should have self-government.

Although the debate got nowhere, it was lively. Otherwise, Part Two touched on the positives of the situation which reside mostly in the army of those trying to do something about the Negro's lot. The summation was on a hopeful note.

THE PRESIDENT'S JOURNEY
With Frank McGee, Peter Hackes, Sander, Vanocur, Robert Abernethy Producer: Chet Hagan
Director: Robert Priault
60 Mins.; Fri. 7:30 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
NBC-TV (color film)

On top of the heavy television coverage of President Kennedy's recent trip to Europe, NBC News delivered this excellent one-hour report on the journey itself and its political significance. Highlights of the President's speeches abroad were interspersed among the more informal shots of JFK and of the European crowds that turned out to greet him.

The President's visit to the Berlin wall and his subsequent impassioned address to West Berliners was dramatically accented. On a less factional note, the show gave detailed coverage of the President's trip to his ancestral home in Ireland. Also interesting were the closeup shots of JFK and the new Pope.

During the show's final quarter, Frank McGee moderated a discussion of the President's trip by three other NBC correspondents, Sander Vanocur, Robert Abernethy and Peter Hackes. They threw a sharp spotlight on the underlying struggle between Kennedy and de Gaulle and also made some interesting observations on the European trip's impact on the crucial 1964 Presidential elections.

TALENT SCOUTS
With Merv Griffin, Harry Sosnik Orch, others
Producer: Irving Mansfield
Director: Grey Lockwood
Writer: George Foster
60 Mins., Tues., 8:30 p.m.
CBS-TV from N.Y.

"Talent Scouts" has been on the television spectrum since virtually the inception of the medium. It had its genesis with Arthur Godfrey and since then various emcees have kept it alive. Its current status is as a one-hour summer replacement and it should do well on the hot-weather circuits.

Its staying power as a 60-minute session will have to depend on the type of talent the scouts bring over. On the initial layout, the searching party of names were not too adventurous. They stayed mainly on the tried and true paths. It was a safe and frequently attractive show, although the zest of the unorthodox was lacking.

There are three major ingredients from which this show can draw. Of course, the talent is the main item, the interviews with the scouts is another, and there can be times when emcee Merv Griffin can assert himself. However, his opportunities are rather limited because of the time element. He did inject himself affably during the interviews and did bring out some interesting facets of the names during these briefies.

A rather distinguished party brought up the acts. They comprised Vaughn Meader, who was an act on last year's opening show; Hugh O'Brian, Lauren Bacall, Liza Minelli, Jean Pierre Aumont, and George Maharis. Latter even talked briefly about his difficulties before and since he left "Route 66." The acts were of good calibre and fairly safe subjects since nearly all have been in New York cafes previously. The Big Three, a big girl flanked by two big boys did well in folk-styled tunes; Ronnie Martin, a brother of comedian Corbett Monica, who has been at the Bon Soir, also impressed as a low-pressure zany, and Michael Allen scored with a nervous type of scat singing.

Liza Minelli, daughter of Judy Garland and director Vincent Minelli, now appearing in "Little Mary Sunshine" brought over Tracy Everitt, a modern song and dance man who showed a highly disciplined dance routine and sang "[illegible]" displayed [illegible] of comedy [illegible] the Blue [illegible] modern [illegible] Maharis [illegible] Theresa [illegible] who sang [illegible] additional [illegible] hour's stand [illegible] that during [illegible] performers can

DuPont Show of the Week

A surprisingly good dramatic outing for "DuPont Show of the Week" was telecast Sunday (7) the tail-end of an uneven dramatic season for this showcase. Tabbed as an Associated Rediffusion co-production, the slick ironic drama starred Jack Hawkins and Pamela Brown, two pros who can get the most out of a line and a situation.

With producer-director Fielder Cook at the helm, the Berkley Mather teleplay, titled "To Bury Caesar," sustained suspense and interest over its 60-minute span. The teleplay had this fascination: it dealt with the life of a British member of parliament, and its theme of infidelity and double dealing among the high and mighty is a rarity on tv. It's to be wondered if any teleplay about such themes focused on a member of Congress could ever be made and telecast today by an American network.

While the Mather teleplay was slick and suspenseful, it didn't have the dimensions and depths that would make it a memorable outing. Nothing, for example, was given of the m.p.'s political position, whether he had any, or what he was, or represented. Yet, the story line had his considered four times for a cabinet post, a post which he never received because of unjust whispers about a wartime incidence of cowardice.

The story line confined itself to his and his wife's ambitions, his wife's nasty infidelity and the double-dealing of her journalist lover. The focus was narrow, but within that focus, it came off well and it was well played. Leading strong support were costars Nigel Davenport, Ken Griffith, and the other players.

Ladies of the Press

In contrast to a recent "Ladies of the Press" program when the panel interviewed themselves when they had no guest, this WOR-TV, N.Y., half-hour airer came up with heavyweight champ Floyd Patterson in its Friday (5) session.

Obviously a timely guest, Patterson proved articulate in handling queries from the panel which included Joan Cook of the Times, the Herald Trib's Harriet Stix and the AP's Joy Miller. Most of the session naturally concerned integration.

Patterson said he went to Birmingham when he read about dogs attacking Negroes. "Being a Negro," he said, "I felt it was my fight too." New York, he added, is heaven compared to Birmingham of Mississippi.

Patterson's title match with Sonny Liston in Las Vegas July 22 was duly noted. Withal, this was one of the more absorbing programs of "LOP." Producer Clifford Evans deftly moderated.

60 Mins., Sat., 10 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

At a time when Granada Television has introduced two successful Victorian dramatic skeins across the commercial network, Associated TeleVision has come up with one, too. And like its predecessors, this series also is in the click category.

Devised by veteran scripter Ted Willis, the series deals with the earliest days of scientific crime detection and is centered round a rather eccentric but purposeful police sergeant who is consistently fighting "the authorities" in pioneering new methods of snaring the villain.

Hinged on a rather cliched plot involving the murder of a husband by his wife's lover (who in this case was the family doctor) the storyline was nonetheless polished and professional and unwound naturally.

But what tipped the balance to take the segment caught out of the routine class was the glorious helping of Victorian atmosphere, largely attributable to designer Tom Lingwood's sets. From hansom cab and shady drinking parlor to the clothes and the niceties of Victorian etiquet, the program had all the signs of a genuine antique Nothwithstanding the flopperoo role he played in another police series, John Barrie (Cork) came over admirably as the cop as dedicated as Sherlock Holmes but about twice as human.

William Gaunt, who plays Cork's young and inexperienced assistant, made the best out of a role that offered him little to do in this initialler. Doubtless the role will be developed as the series of 13 progresses, but meantime he provided an adequate foil to the lead.

While there were no standout performances among the many supporting characters, director Christopher Morahan extracted some solid portrayals and the overall presentation of the segment made prospects for the series look good.

Camera direction, for instance, was right up front. With deft use of closeup during story climaxes, Morahan also kept the yarn moving over its few barren narrative

SUMMER POP CONCERTS
With Cleveland Summer Orchestra, Louis Lane conducting; Vronsky & Babin; Eunis Podis; Ernest Kardos; Paul Bedford, host.
Producer-Director: Don Rumbaugh
120 Mins., Sat., 9 p.m.
CENTRAL NATIONAL BANK
KYW-TV, Cleveland (live)
(Fuller and Smith & Ross)

On the anniversary of the 25th season of the Cleveland Pops, KYW-TV brought to the area a pleasant, summer evening of relaxation as a four-camera team, capably handled by Don Rumbaugh, captured the light and graceful melodies of a predominately Strauss night.

Conductor Louis Lane at his best-his youthful, gracious and deft leadership came through to the television audience with an impact that should help the Pops in ticket sales for the remainder of an ambitious anniversary year. As guests, the concert presented the husband-wife pianist team of Vronsky and Babin whose rendition of Mozart's Concerto For Two Pianos was a highpoint of their evening's work. It marked their first showing with the Summer group, and the success of their work should reflect additional appearances by this team long known to the Cleveland scene.

Paul Bedford did the narrating and attempted to capture the leisure tone of the evening with his seat at the front of the stage. Unfortunately, members of the audience blocked him, and hurt rather than made for atmosphere. Two interviews also were done—one live with Vronsky and Babin just before the program began, and this was effective. However, the taped session with Lane, Eunis Podis, pianist, and Ernest Kardos, concertmaster, failed to capture the spirit of gayety that prevails at a summer Pops.

Perhaps a visit to the audience; to the waitress who sold the refreshments or even an intermission interview in the corridor would have carried to the home audience a truer reflection of the lightness and relaxed tempo that has become part of the series.

The station's art work in program identification along with the considerate use in commercials by Central National helped make the entire program a credit to telecasting. Significantly, the fact that it was done live didn't hamper the attendance as a substantial crowd of 5,523.

TREASURE CHEST
With [illegible] others
Producer: Bob Barry
Director: [illegible]
60 Mins.; Thurs., 12:30 p.m.
KSTP-TV, Minneapolis-St. Paul

[illegible] the most successful locally produced tv show, Stan [illegible] KSTP-TV "Treasure Chest" is going into its eighth [illegible] profitable year for the Twin Cities NBC affiliate.

Never waiting for cosponsorship or a packed studio, this five-days-a-week daytime audience participation program on this occasion was sans its regular color, the reason being it was doing the first of a two-day remote in Anoka, a Minneapolis suburb. But even without color it was replete with its customary lively action, fun and entertainment for an extra large turnout in the suburb's school gymnasium which seats many more than the studio.

Much of "Treasure Chest's" appeal can be credited to topdrawer producer Kenn Barry, director Bob Sears and personable Jim Hutton who has plenty on the ball when it comes to emceeing and handling people. All are station staffers.

For this remote, Barry had on stage with him such Anoka dignitaries as its mayor, school superintendent, Chamber of Commerce president and postmaster to play some of the games with the feminine contestants enlisted from the audience.

Games and contests are of a sort to evoke plenty of laughter and winners receive silver dollars and other prizes. There's never a dearth of voluntary gal stage participants. For one of his stage stunts Hutton had a feminine trio acting and otherwise performing.

On this show, too, was Sparky the Seal from St. Paul's Como Park Zoo. The animal's tricks won much applause. Also present was the Vikings' star pass catching end Jerry Reichow to handle footballs tossed him by some of the gal audience participants.

As always, it was 40 minutes that undoubtedly gave its audience a goodly measure of pleasure.

YOUR FUNNY, FUNNY FILMS
With George Fenneman
Producer: Albert Z. Freedman
Director: Loring d'Eusseau
30 Mins.; Mon., 8:30 p.m.
PROCTER & GAMBLE
ABC-TV, from H'wood

"Your Funny, Funny Films" has one slight difficulty—the films ain't so funny. This summer replacement for "The Rifleman" is based on the interesting idea of showcasing amateur-made films, but the material on the preem did not have enough surprise and humor to carry a half-hour prime-time stanza, even in the summer time.

George Fenneman registered as an ebullient host with a good repertoire of wisecracks to sustain his assignment. He brought on the amateur movie-makers with brief intros before rolling the films. One reel was a typical home movie about a baby and a gooey cake, but how cute can you get? Another reel was an attempt to tell a story of some American soldiers fighting the Japanese on Guam. It was totally inept yet not so inept as to be funny. The best sequence was a 40-year old home movie made in England. This had what the other films lacked—a sense of style.

If this show would venture into a more experimental area of amateur movies, it undoubtedly could come up with some arresting curiosities, but the kickoff indicated a determination to stick closely to the conventional type of home-made movies, as if Americans were not already bored stiff by the films made by their neighbors.

A DAY ON THE MOON
With John Wingate, moderator; others
Producer-Writer: Stanley Friedman
Director: Ralph Giffen
60 Mins., Tues., 9 p.m.
PARTICIPATING
WOR-TV, N.Y. (film, tape)

A documentary on lunar travel for an indie station is an ambitious project. RKO General's WOR-TV, N.Y., an indie with group station backing, in "A Day On the Moon," might have carried it off much better had it sliced its program to half an hour.

The show, hosted by John Wingate, didn't have sufficient footage or pictorial excitement, for the full 60-minute span. To the credit of producer-writer Stanley Friedman, he assembled some fascinating clips on what a trip to the moon would be like. He also had quite a number of experts, most of whom were articulate and to the point.

Without sufficient supporting footage, though, the hour tended to resemble a lecture rather than a good documentary. Not helping the situation at all were what seemed to be countless commercials in the show. With tighter editing it could have been a "look-at-us" example of what an indie station could do with its own resources on a big question.

the FCC, William Henry, who is even fuzzier-minded that Newton Minow, has stated he wants more public service time. This means that the government propaganda mills will be turning out spots and films at a furious clip. You know what happens at renewal time for licenses to those who do not choose to cooperate.

"Now I don't believe you in the advertising field are going to watch your livelihoods being taken away without a fight. As a former advertising man I know that in the past we have hesitated to fight what we know in our hearts are unfair and destructive governmental attacks on advertising. We must expose the efforts of those who serve self-interest under the flimsy guise of correcting imaginary ills and evils.

"You've got to get a little angry with people. You've been accused of stirring up the natives with artificial wants. Such people would put medicine back to the era of tobacco-juice poultices and bat wing compresses. You have to prove big brother Arthur Schlesinger, Jr. wrong. He says capitalists, and that includes anyone who believes in private property, are too stupid to fight, that they will go down without a protest. You just have to stop being good guys and become defenders of your own future."

what the industry considers FCC harassments.

It's even true that the more laise faire elements of the industry were given a setback by the NAB board of directors supporting Collins. At the recent Washington meet, NAB board nixed a proposal by its own code board that it water down code provisions regarding commercial time limitations on tv. The move was motivated by the FCC's proposal to adopt the NAB code provisions regarding commercial time limitations. Thinking of the more rugged individualist broadcasters was if the FCC wants to make the self - regulating commercial time provisions law, then water down these self-regulating provisions until they become meaningless and thereby defeat the FCC takeover move. NAB's board of directors, with the support of Collins, nixed that manuever.

Yet, there's a whole string of suspicions still dividing many influential broadcasters and Collins, even those broadeasters who go along with him on some issues. The string started when NAB prexy Collins and then FCC chairman Minow echoed each other on the "vast wastelands" of tv and it drew its biggest bead recently when Collins stated that as a matter of conscience broadcasters should examine cigaret tv commercials and their appeal to the young. (NAB board of directors now is hoping the tobacco industry will draw new tv commercial guidelines for cigaret advertising, thereby getting broadcasters off the hook. Such a move would take the issue away, or at least minimize the issue, for the NAB code boys.)

The five-man committee which is slated to watch over Collins, acknowledged to be no easy task, is composed of the chairman of the joint board and the chairmen and vice chairmen of the radio and tv board. The five are: William B. Quarton, chairman of the joint tv-radio NAB board, James Russell, chairman of the tv board; Glenn Marshall, vice-chairman of the tv board; Ben Strouse, chairman of the radio board; and Dick Chapin, vice chairman of the radio board.

Cooper put it, one of the networks was checking the possibility of a deal with some third vice president.

Engels and Cooper are busy with fall production, with some interesting, exploitable subjects in blueprint. One is the story of Mussolini's last day, a fictionalized film version that was shot with the people who tracked him down on the actual locations made a few days after his slaying. The film, salted away for all the years since its making, turned up when the team was researching the recent documentary on the Italian dictator. Another project in the works is the story of a Siberian prison camp as illustrated and told by an escaped prisoner. Still another will cover exploration of the South Pole then and now.

Not all of the Engels-Cooper efforts have been hits. There was "The Sleeping Giant," an investigation of South America today. No hero, no heavy, no chase.

goes well beyond the minimum effort, the sop, that would have sufficed to call off the dogs. And even more important than the change in programming has been the change in station attitude. It seems to enjoy the new role it's assumed in the community.

No matter how you look at it, "Dateline: Chicago" is a remarkable undertaking for a local tv station. It's a tall order even for a network, with considerably better resources, to deliver a provocative documentary every week. While seldom excellent, the "Dateline" opuses are usually good and nearly always worthwhile. One installment, "One Palace: FOB Chicago," dealing with the Versailles exhibit at the Art Institute, recently copped an Ohio State award; others have received lesser accolades, and collectively they've reaped a good press, something WNBQ has badly needed for several years. Most of the installments have been sponsored, and, incidentally, they're in addition to news specials and a few other prime time documentaries the station preempts prime time for over the season.

While he does not speak for the station as the editorialists do, Len O'Connor's commentaries probably have more wallop, and carry more believability, than the sum of all the station editorials (tv and radio) in the market. A veteran newsman of the stripe who won't be bulled or bullied, O'Connor has waged a personal war on civic corruption in all its forms and has taken on some tough and sacred customers. Not a sensationalist, a scandal-monger nor a witch-hunter but a reputable reporter, O'Connor has added immeasurably to the station's news stature in this niche and to its service of the community.

'Artists' Showcase'

"Artists' Showcase" has obvious image values, both cultural and benevolent, being a longhair Sunday afternoon series that gives exposure to young professional soloists and, additionally makes use of WNBQ's firstrate concert orchestra batoned by Joseph Gallichio. Hosted by former opera singer Louis Sudler, who's now a prominent businessman, it's classy fare in spades. Also strictly in the do-gooder category is "It's Academic," reflecting the wholesome side of the teenage generation.

As for the progress in news, WNBQ's regularly scheduled output has been increased about 50% since Yoder came in as steward. Furthermore, Dorsey Connors, one of the casualties of Yoder's early programming raids, was reinstated a couple years ago with a new 15-minute femme format on weekdays; and Jack Eigen has been on with a video version of his nightly WMAQ interview show Sundays at midnight since just before the FCC hearings. Religious programs have been shifted to choicer Sunday timeslots within the past year, and "City Desk," a sort of local edition of "Meet the Press," is notching its 12th year on the station.

The Chicago NBC station still lacks the showman's flair—that knack for the fresh and inventive entertainment format it was famous for during Jules Herbuveaux's stewardship—but it has come a long way from those two doses per day of "Bingo at Home" in 1958, and an even longer way from the indifferent kidshow and the dreary record hop of the following year.

the application of an educational group applying for a commercial station up for transfer in a market with several other commercial outlets.

FCC said it wants to use the sought-for powers in exceptional, not general, transfer cases.

Commissioner Robert Bartley submitted a separate statement requesting an amendment giving FCC far ranging scope in reviewing transfer applications.

Bartley said the aim of his proposed amendment is to prevent a "derogation of service as a result of the 'buying and selling' of broadcast stations."

He said a transfer should be approved to the person who will provide improved service.

WNBQ

goes well beyond the minimum effort, the sop, that would have sufficed to call off the dogs. And even more important than the change in programming has been the change in station attitude. It seems to enjoy the new role it's assumed in the community.

No matter how you look at it, "Dateline: Chicago" is a remarkable undertaking for a local tv station. It's a tall order even for a network, with considerably better resources, to deliver a provocative documentary every week. While seldom excellent, the "Dateline" opuses are usually good and nearly always worthwhile. One installment, "One Palace: FOB Chicago," dealing with the Versailles exhibit at the Art Institute, recently copped an Ohio State award; others have received lesser accolades, and collectively they've reaped a good press, something WNBQ has badly needed for several years. Most of the installments have been sponsored, and, incidentally, they're in addition to news specials and a few other prime time documentaries the station preempts prime time for over the season.

While he does not speak for the station as the editorialists do, Len O'Connor's commentaries probably have more wallop, and carry more believability, than the sum of all the station editorials (tv and radio) in the market. A veteran newsman of the stripe who won't be bulled or bullied, O'Connor has waged a personal war on civic corruption in all its forms and has taken on some tough and sacred customers. Not a sensationalist, a scandal-monger nor a witch-hunter but a reputable reporter, O'Connor has added immeasurably to the station's news stature in this niche and to its service of the community.

'Artists' Showcase'

"Artists' Showcase" has obvious image values, both cultural and benevolent, being a longhair Sunday afternoon series that gives exposure to young professional soloists and, additionally makes use of WNBQ's firstrate concert orchestra batoned by Joseph Gallichio. Hosted by former opera singer Louis Sudler, who's now a prominent businessman, it's classy fare in spades. Also strictly in the do-gooder category is "It's Academic," reflecting the wholesome side of the teenage generation.

As for the progress in news, WNBQ's regularly scheduled output has been increased about 50% since Yoder came in as steward. Furthermore, Dorsey Connors, one of the casualties of Yoder's early programming raids, was reinstated a couple years ago with a new 15-minute femme format on weekdays; and Jack Eigen has been on with a video version of his nightly WMAQ interview show Sundays at midnight since just before the FCC hearings. Religious programs have been shifted to choicer Sunday timeslots within the past year, and "City Desk," a sort of local edition of "Meet the Press," is notching its 12th year on the station.

The Chicago NBC station still lacks the showman's flair—that knack for the fresh and inventive entertainment format it was famous for during Jules Herbuveaux's stewardship—but it has come a long way from those two doses per day of "Bingo at Home" in 1958, and an even longer way from the indifferent kidshow and the dreary record hop of the following year.

FCC Asks Power

the application of an educational group applying for a commercial station up for transfer in a market with several other commercial outlets.

FCC said it wants to use the sought-for powers in exceptional, not general, transfer cases.

Commissioner Robert Bartley submitted a separate statement requesting an amendment giving FCC far ranging scope in reviewing transfer applications.

Bartley said the aim of his proposed amendment is to prevent a "derogation of service as a result of the 'buying and selling' of broadcast stations."

He said a transfer should be approved to the person who will provide improved service.

THE UNFINISHED AMERICAN REVOLUTION
With Mark Olds
Producer: Bert Cowlan
Director: Don Luftig
Writer: Phillip S. Gelb
30 Mins., Thurs., 11:30 p.m.
WINS, New York

While the orientation of broadcasting's news coverage has most certainly shown segregationists in a bad light, neither the networks nor many local stations (so far as is known from this view point) have actually taken an editorial stand. Group W's WINS Radio in New York did just that in this "documentary editorial" aired three times, with the final broadcast next Sunday (14) at 10 p.m.

WINS general manager Mark Olds narrated, interspersing his comments with excerpts from President Kennedy's forthright integration speech, and highly dramatic interviews with Negroes who have been deeply involved in the various demonstrations, jailings etc. Olds capped the half-hour with a strong plea for understanding and sacrafice on the part of all citizens, "because, sure enough, this unfinished revolution; the revolution of justice and equality and dignity for every man, woman and child without regard to color or creed, the revolution that a world that wants to survive has been waiting for, this revolution is here with us—here and now. It may cause me some concern and even discomfort; it may make me, personally, worried and uncomfortable for a while—but I too will change a little, and act, and risk something. Unless you are willing to say something like this, then the American revolution is a lost cause."

Using the President's speech as a peg, Olds segued into interviews and pickups covering situations in Harlem, Nashville, Danville (Va.) and other centres of the Negro struggle. Point was made doubly forceful by the selection of very articulate and sincere Negroes who were able to vividly communicate their courage. Production and direction brought the whole off with dramatic impact sans sensationalism. Bill.

HOSPITAL IMMUNITY CONTROVERSY
With Bill Tompkins, Bill Hampton, guests
Producer: Art Schreiber
Director: Dick Orkin
45 Mins.: Thurs. 10:15 p.m.
KYW, Cleveland

One of the key issues being argued in the closing days of the Ohio Legislature is the bill to give immunity from suits to non-profit hospitals. Approved by the House it is now Senate Bill 66, and has caused many a pulse-beating argument between lawyers, nurses, doctors—and all others affected. KYW's news department, in a 45-minute presentation, talked to many in an effort to bring to the public the pros and cons.

Ably-written and narrated by Bill Tompkins, the up-to-the-minute stanza tied together many interviews conducted by Bill Hampton in his talks with attorneys represented hospitals who spoke for the bill; attorneys who have brought suit for negligence; lobbyists for the nurses; Blue Cross, etc. It all was professionally done and made for good listening.

Generally proponents said immunity would mean lower hospital costs; less fear by the medical fraternity; better administration by hospitals, etc. Opponents debuked any cost saving by hospitals let alone passing it on to the public; less assurance that the public would not become a party-be-damned customer; permit greater hospital negligence, etc.

Tompkins traced the story of Ohio's history in the immunity fight, even to the case in which immunity was banned. It would have been effective if the individual involved, or his family could have been interviewed. It also might have added to the stanza if patients now in hospitals, or having just been hospitalized could have lent their views, or perhaps a cross-section of the public could have been sounded out.

The station made it a point to stress it would present the facts, and not its own views. Perhaps, since KYW does editorialize, it could have taken—upon completion of the documentary—an editorial position; one that could have lent station authority and summation to the program. Mark.

THE NICE KIDS
With Mayor Cowger, County Judge Marlow Cook
Producer-Director: Jim Caldwell
45 Mins., Thurs., 10:45 p.m.
WAVE, Louisville

First of a two-part documentary on Louisville area teenagers and juves, produced by WAVE News and Special Events, and in preparation over a period of weeks, this show digested source material from a recent questionnaire sent to a cross-section of more than 150 Louisville civic leaders, who were asked to list what they considered to be the area's most pressing problems. One of the problems mentioned most often was juvenile and teen-age behavior.

Youthful Mayor Cowger and County Judge Cook, a U. of Louisville sociologist, a high school principal, youth employment officials, and a number of teenagers had a lively discussion of the subject. Facts brought out were that while old time criminal delinquency is on the wane, irresponsible vandalism is increasing at a terrific rate. Local instances of juves damaging statues in parks; beer-drinking parties by teen-agers in the parks, and other disorderly conduct has the adults worried. Most agreed that teenagers now have less responsibility, and parents were given a share of criticism for shirking parental duties in being too busy to provide necessary discipline for their active offspring.

Comments from adults and teen-agers provided no answer to the problem, but this frank and honest airing should stimulate thinking on the subject, and in this respect considerable good should result.

Jim Caldwell, WAVE staffer, who is also a member of the State Legislature, deserves kudos for the research and spade work in gathering facts about one of today's problems and calling for sober thought and constructive corrective measures. Wied.

So Much Business CBS Has to Create Fresh Business Affairs Units

A new unit, called business affairs-sales, has been formed within the business affairs department of CBS-TV, which is topped by Salvatore J. Iannucci Jr., v.p.-business affairs.

Function of the new unit, to be supervised by Bernard S. Krause, director of business affairs, is designed to consolidate contract functions which in the past have been divided between network sales and business affairs.

Previously, Iannucci explained, there were two separate contract negotiations, one for program sponsorship, which was handled by business affairs, and one for facilities, handled by network sales. Under the new plan only a single negotiation for each sponsorship will be needed.

Krause announced the appointment of Richard N. Burns and Anthony G. O'Malley as assistant directors, business affairs-sales.

Britain's Barbara Windsor Nixed as Carson Guestar

Barbara Windsor returned to London and her regular BBC-TV series, "The Rag Game," without taping the Johnny Carson videoshow as scheduled last Wednesday (3) on behalf of "Sparrows Can't Sing," upcoming Carthage-Janus Films coproduction which Joan Littlewood directed in England. The American Federation of Television & Radio Artists refused to okay the guest-shot under its restrictive regulations against foreign videotalent.

Miss Windsor and her agent, Peter Charlesworth, came to the U.S. on a quickie crash program of interviews—press and radio—in behalf of the film, in which she appears. AFTRA okayed the AM interviews but regarded the Carson-NBC'er as violation of "work permit" regulations.

Rhone Joins Filmways

Hollywood, July 9.

John Rhone, who has been assistant to exec producer Harry Ackerman at Screen Gems, has joined Filmways as production assistant to producer Dick Wesson on the new series, "Petticoat Junction," which stars Bea Benaderet.

Rhone was also associate producer on SG's "Dennis the Menace."

also eventually have two stations vieing for ad coin on a seven day basis.

The indie outlet is also scheduled to face the new competition of BBC's second network, which bows in April next year. This web, a prime time only project at the moment, will be on 625-lines and in the UHF waveband. It will start in London only, spreading to other highly populated areas by degrees and therefore coming into competition first with the major stations on the commercial network.

With this broad pattern now apparent and the new Television Bill through the Report stage, the shouting is dying down. And it has become obvious that despite the upcoming levy the present contractors are anticipating being in the tv biz long after '64. Certainly, they are beginning to relax after a long period of uncertainty and muddle.

For not even at the inception of the commercial web—which politically speaking, "came in the back door" and right against the tide of Parliamentary opinion—was there as much varied thinking and conflict of interest. Nor was there ever such thrust and parry between the industry and the government. And the fact that all this has been underscored by a seeming lack of understanding in political circles of how the tv business works has faced the British commercial tv executive with confusion and anxiety.

It is genuinely believed by experienced executives in top trade circles, that the imposition of the levy on advertising coin was brought in by mistake. It is being said by some observers that by some error the levy plan was announced before full approval of Tory Party top brassers had been attained and before its ramifications such as a cut-back in programming budget, were fully realized.

The idea of the levy—which was supposed to be a parallel in the tv business to the film world's "entertainments tax"—was immediately seized upon and strongly supported by Laborites who have been needling the Government about the "excessive profits" garnered by the big independents. But in this instance, Labor MPs and the show biz unions, who together brought an end to the old entertainment tax, were diametrically opposed. Unions, like the rest of the industry, are united against the levy. Nevertheless, the government felt it could not now back down on this issue.

Faced with a levy which, as they thought, would cripple them, the major contractors (not noted, incidentally, for their close cooperation) hastily produced some figures which illustrated their "impossible position" to the Postmaster General. Move later proved a major mistake.

The Minister, who tore the statistics to shreds because the companies had calculated that they would be levied on gross advertising receipts (which meant they would pay duty on 15% agency commission, i.e. money they never received) began to mistrust the contractors, sources reveal. Meantime, the PMG received representations from the advertisers who indicated that they would be prepared to spend around $300,000,000 or more on television advertising thereby throwing up enough revenue to finance two commercial webs.

It is reported that Bevins misinterpreted this and told the admen that if they intended to spend this type of coin on tv, they could do so on the existing channel. And in the light of this, the levy, he calculated, should stay.

But when the admen later pointed out that the big clients were interested in prime time exposure and that one channel with ad time restrictions could not handle the volume of business as envisaged, the minister was sceptical.

On top of this clamoring for more tv from the independents, etc., BBC found itself in a position where it is having to borrow money from the City (around $30,000,000) to launch its second network which, inside sources reveal, it would have preferred to delay.

BBC still does not know how its additional airtime is to be financed other than the government recognition of its duty to make funds available. BBC's suggested $6 hike in the set-license fee does not set well with a government facing an election in the not too distant future.

But while BBC was angling for a delay, other powerful influences in the picture, namely the electronic interests, (i.e. set manufacturers) have mounted so much pressure for the early introduction of a 625-line channel, in order to boom their flagging business, that the Corporation has been forced to come across with the April '64 starting date.

By the same token, the electronics lobby is now thrusting for another commercial web (on 625 lines) earlier than 1966 as promised. And it is pushing forward the introduction of color video—more expense for BBC— in the same drive to stimulate new buying of receivers.

Illustrative of some of the complexities involved in the electronics lobby alone is the fact that Pye Electronics, part owner of ATV, is in fact largely instrumental in speeding up additional BBC competition.

Further complicating the issue, is the fact that the contractors speak with many voices. For instance ATV is for a second indie web and Associated-Rediffusion against it—which means the Government is not dealing with a coordinated industry, save, of course, against levy.

Ironically, it is on this factor—which apparently was a mistake—that it has stood firm.

fing themselves a ball in the sun as production moves along on the initial 13 weeks of the Metro series that's headed for the Friday night 9:30 to 10 period on NBC. If there's anything that approximates a "having your cake and eating it too" situation—this is it. For seldom has a series taken shape under such ideal circumstances and working conditions. Seven of the 30-minute shows are already in the can. There's a Tues.-Wed.-Thurs.-Fri. shooting schedule (including the location shooting in and around Nice, Cannes, Juan-les-Pins and the hillside towns and villages. (Most of the first 13 will be localled on the Riviera).

For the second 13-week cycle, the cast and crew will move either to Metro's Elstree studios in London or to Paris as the jumping off places for location shooting in different capitals of Europe.

With the current berthing of "Harry's Girls" in Nice, Metro by a strange coincidence has come full cycle on use of the Studio de la Victorine facilities there. Years ago, when the pix industry was still growing up, M-G-M was responsible for the building of the Nice studios and it was there that Rex Ingram shot "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Though long since abandoned by Metro, many French pix producers have since been utilizing the compact facilities (nine features were turned out in the past year), and now Metro, via its television subsidiary, has recaptured it as the official home of "Harry's Girls."

When Joe Stein, Billy Friedberg and their bilingual crew depart in late August, the studio is slated for razing. Because of its proximity to Nice Airport, those arriving and departing planes zoom too close to the sound stages for comfort.

Meanwhile, the boys and gals are living the good life, even though an arduous one (seldom less than 12 hours a day). Nobody's had time to go in the water (except for occasions when Blyden's femme troika is being put through the inevitable bikini routine or funning it up on a rented yacht for publicity stills or a Life mag layout). Certainly the "travails" of shooting on the Riviera are of a variety that's easy to take.

It's strictly a pro operation, a compact unit (about 20 in all) of Americans, Frenchmen and Englishmen whose know-how and artistic merit transcend any language barrier. Stein as exec producer and Friedberg as producer are, of course, showmen from way back, well versed in the fine arts of tv making. Since both have earned their stripes many times over as writers, they're also doubling as script supervisors (writers are recruited on a freelance basis with such stalwarts as Wedlock & Snyder, Will Glickman, Leo Solomon, Syd Zilenka, Tony Webster, Lawrence & Maggie Williams, et al, sending them over from the J.S.)

Longtime Hollywood pro Dick Kinon checked out of Four Star (where he last worked on "Ensign O'Toole") to take over directorial reins on "Harry's Girls." On deck as associate producer is Teddy Joseph, an Englishman with a pix career spanning "African Queen" (for Sam Spiegel), to "Cleopatra" (both the early days in London and the "Egypt period"). For cameraman, "Harry's Girls" has one of the best in France—Marcel Grignon, perhaps best known for his Bardot pictures. Sascha Kominka heads up the French unit (rank & file crew members are card holders in the French pix industry).

The outdoor commissary at Victorine studio is strictly out of a Renoir painting. Yet oddly enough, because Stein & Friedberg adhere to a French shooting schedule (12.30 to 7:30 without a break, unless the crew and cast are out on location) the commissary is used by just about everybody but the "Harry's Girls" company. Daily some 100 people from Cannes, Nice, Monte Carlo and environs beat a path to the studio. Perhaps today, they say, they will use me as an extra. All day long they sit around the commissary sipping an aperitif and chatting. Ex-models in various stages of dress and undress, real estate agents in quest of a few extra dollars—"Harry's Girls" attracts them all. Few are chosen. (There is more concern about finding featured performers for individual segments and flynig them down from Paris or London.) But to watch them congregate daily and head for the commissary has become one of the unusual spectacles.

One day an American showed up in the crowd. He turned out to be George Laboda, the Colgate tv factotum who watches how the sponsor's bucks are being spent. He was so enthused with what he saw, it took a bit of doing to get him winging back to the States. He was all for joining the commissary contingent—a sort of lone American in "Cannes 100."

Aussie Mart

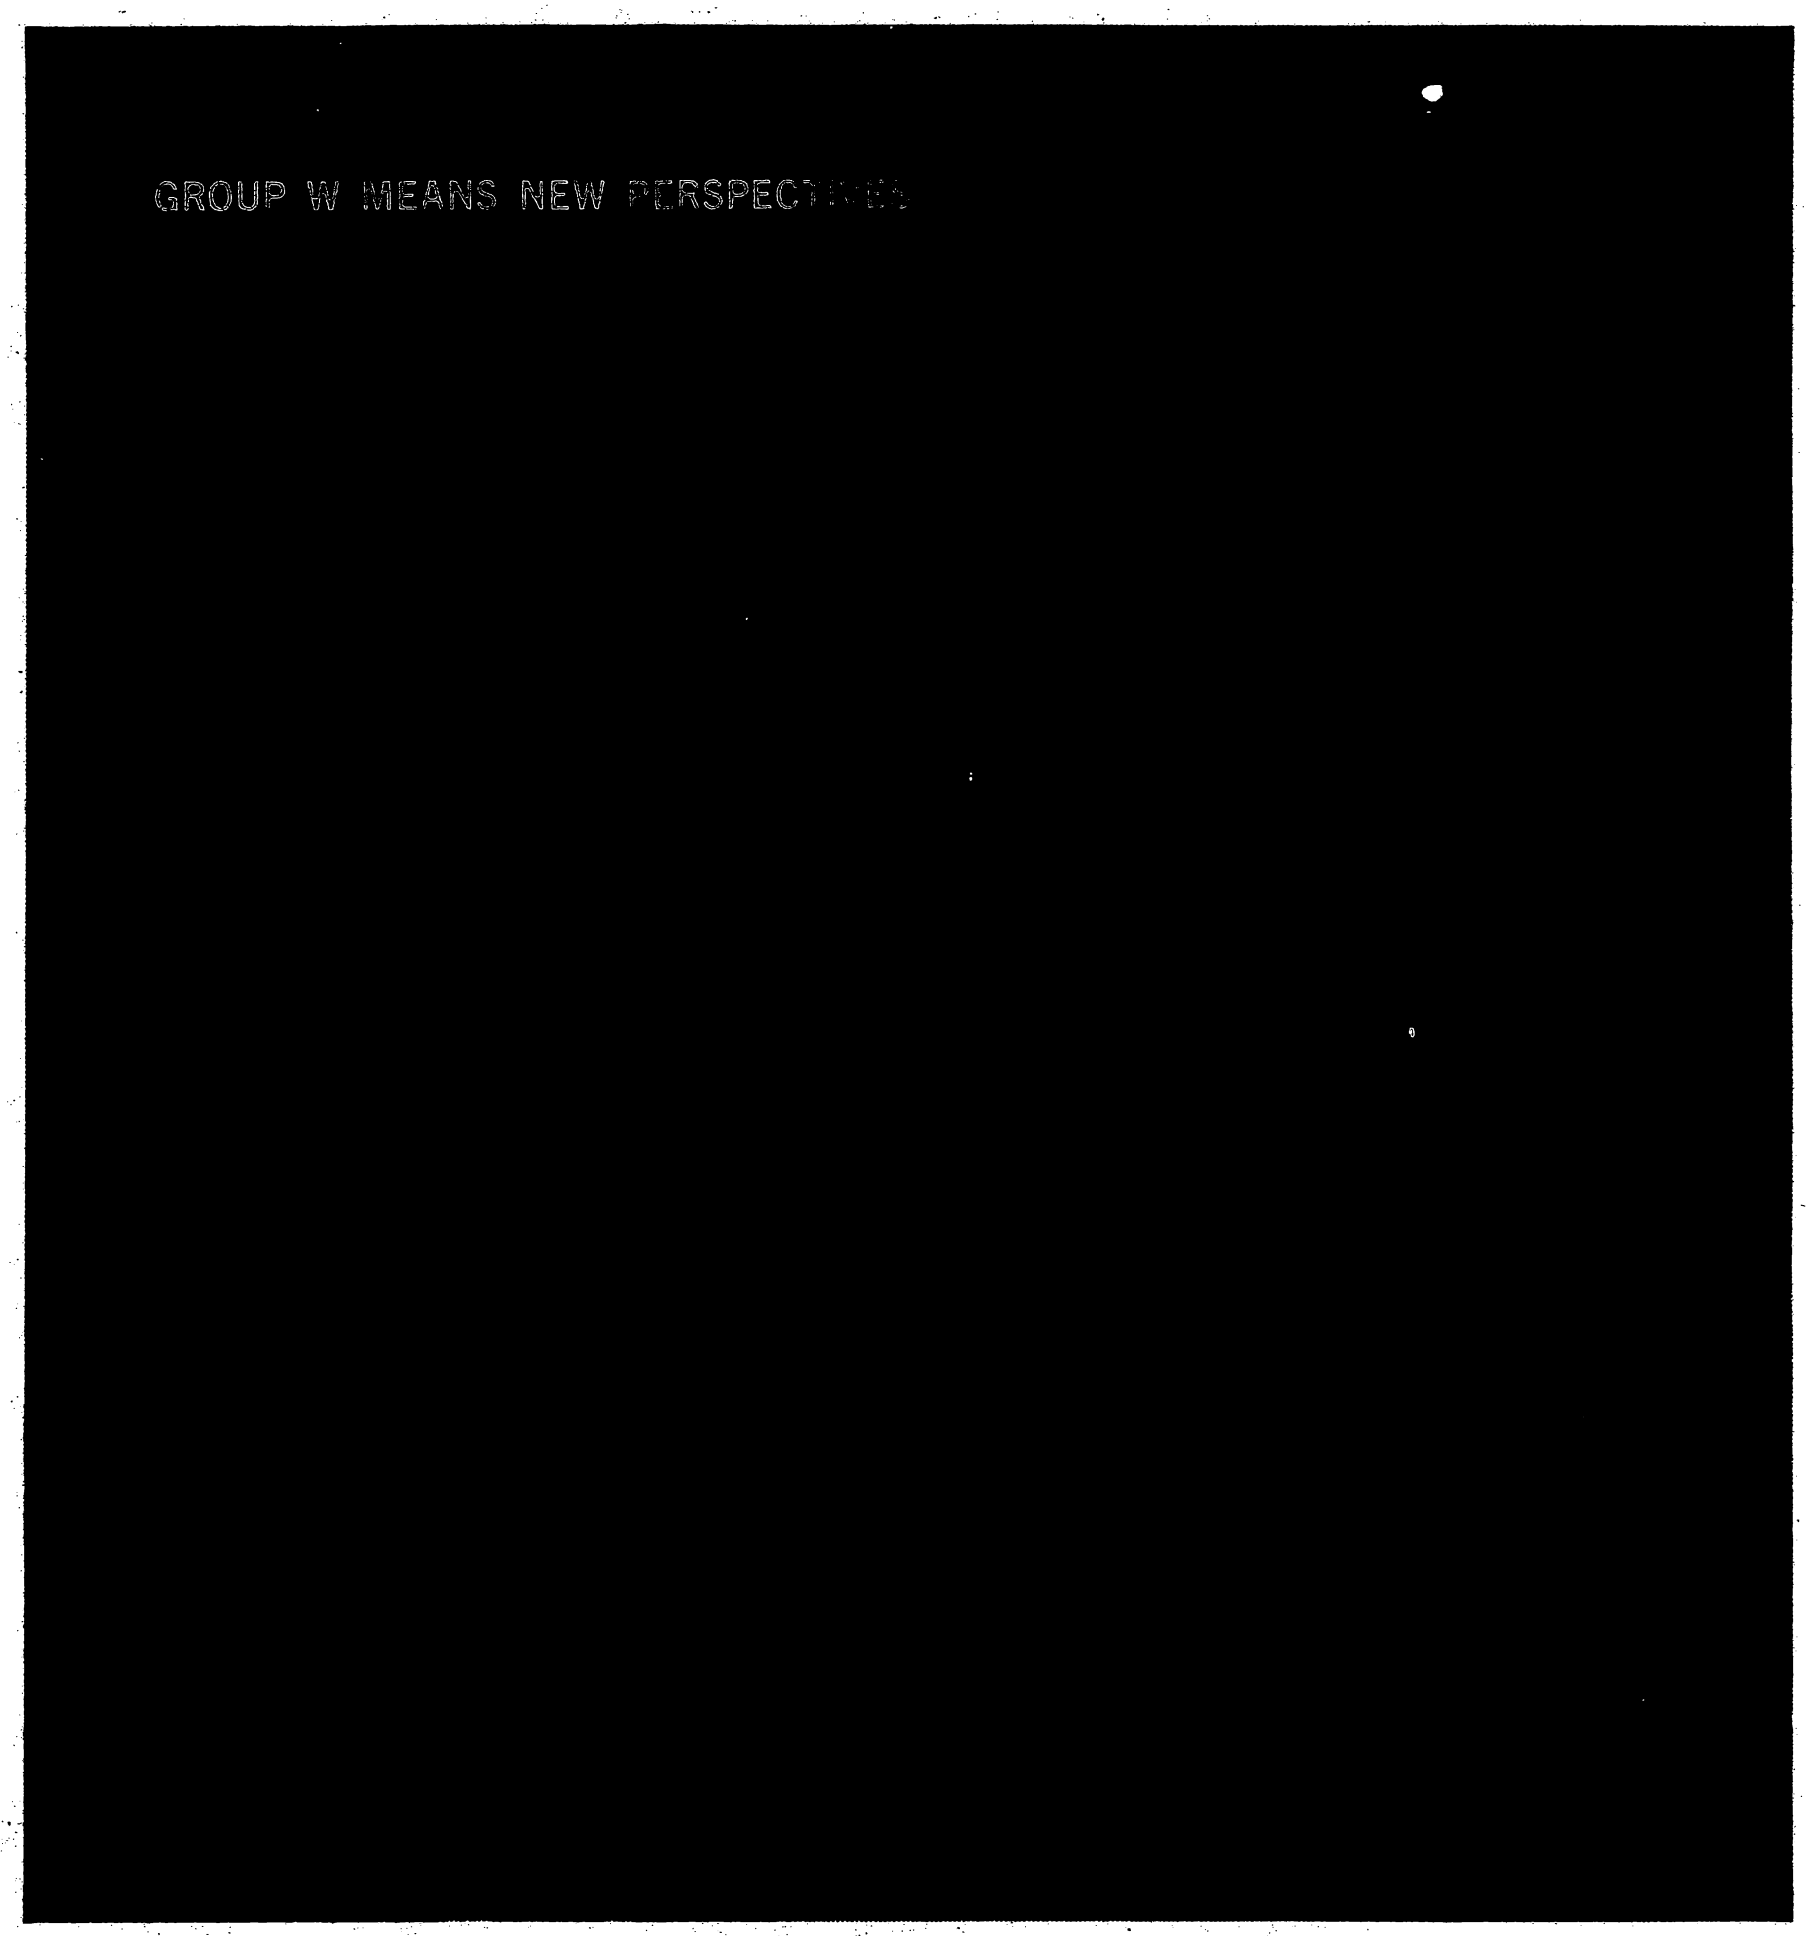
viewpoint of what is secured for programming against what is secured from advertisers for time charges is said to be out of line in Australia. The market uses primarily American product for its programming.

With new stations coming on the air, with the competitive air growing sharper, the cozy price and program allocations of years past just won't go in the future, according to the forecast of American exporters. The kangaroo will bounce, but good, is their prediction.



AMERICA: THE ARTIST'S EYE

A series of cameo films blending history and art. Fifteen programs for television tracing America's growth through its art. A Group W-Westinghouse Broadcasting Company-project. Dramatically narrated by Fredric March and Florence Eldridge.

In one program we watch a bare-knuckle prizefight through the eyes of American Primitive George Hayes. In another we share modern artist John Marin's view of "Tunk Mountain." "America: The Artist's Eye" is more than stunning visual sequences. It's a service to television audiences. To our national museums. To a greater understanding of our country's heritage.

Produced by the combined talent and resources of Group W, "America: The Artist's Eye" represents a Group effort to bring enlightened television to the public. And the Group W stations are in the position to do just that. They have creative manpower, management, and financial resources greater than the individual station. They have the local flexibility no network can match. These resources represent an opportunity as well as a responsibility to serve their communities in ways neither individual stations nor networks are capable of doing.

With programs like "America: The Artist's Eye," Group W demonstrates the ability of the broadcasting Group to develop new areas of responsible programming.

ABC Option Time Stand: Reverse It

Washington, July 9.

If FCC decides to let its option time decision stand, it should at least give webs, stations and advertisers a longer transition period, ABC said.

In asking reconsideration of option time nixing, the network told FCC it should reverse its decision.

The web argued the decision "inadequately" evaluated "the very grave consequences that would result" to ABC. Net said the combination of defections in some markets and lack of affils in others would have a far more serious effect on it than on the other webs.

ABC gave a long economic and philosophic dissertion on the benefits of option time saying the concept has "rendered commendable service to the industry and public for over 20 years."

Its nixing, the web continued, would result in poorer entertainment shows and less pubaffairs programming.

As for giving networks and others affected more time to adjust to the decision, ABC said in similar instances when established practices were overturned, FCC granted longer transition periods.

'Gospel Time'

show has been produced in Southern stations, sometimes with mixed choirs (with full union support, "Gospel' uses amateur choirs with professional singing groups). Only negative reaction, says the producer, has been a smattering of crank letters from white supremacists, charging station managements with turning their facilities over to Negro entertainment. Station, sponsor and producer have ignored the missives.

In 28 Markets

Show now is seen Sunday mornings in New York, Chicago, Washington, Memphis, Atlanta, Macon, Ga., New Orleans, Baltimore and elsewhere among its 28 markets. But Schwartz feels that selling stations instead of a sponsor will bring the show to Philadelphia, Los Angeles and Texas (no cities in the big state to date) and other important centres.

As for the Gospel talents, the show has been a bonanza. Schwartz says there are currently seven or eight professional gospel groups who travel steadily throughout the year. Their income per performer (groups are almost always quintets) comes to about $6,000 a year after travel expenses of about $5,000. Video exposure pays a group $700 total, and they are almost always hired for two appearances. First residual is $525, and with "Gospel's" durable musical format, there are bound to be repeats beyond the first.

Gospel singers also make money on record dates, but the business only recently is coming up to standard. For "Gospel," Schwartz has a deal with Veejay of Chicago, one of the leading gospel disk labels, for LPs built around the show.

Among the top gospel groups, the producer lists the Caravans, Soul Stirrers, Ellisons, Twilights, Roberta Martin Singers, Highway QC's and the Spence Taylor singers.

Currently "Gospel Time" performers are playing the Spoleto Festival in Italy. For Rome tv and future sale in Britain and the U. S., Allied Productions will vidtape the 90-minute Spoleto presentation as a special.

will be shipped to Europe for broadcast the following day.

Participants in the program include former President Dwight D. Eisenhower; former British Prime Minister Anthony Eden; Jean Monnet of France; and Heinrich von Brentano, of West Germany. Origination points will include N. Y., Denver, London, Brussels and Bonn. Broadcast is slated in the U. S. from 12:20 to 1:25 p.m., with a repeat the same night from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Medicine Hat, Alta. — Co-Ax Television (1962) Ltd., has been given approval by the federal department of transport to operate a piped tv system in Medicine Hat. A late fall start is expected. Distribution would cover stations CHAT, Medicine Hat; CJLH, Lethbridge; KFBB, Great Falls, Mont., and KRTV, Great Falls.

Kansas City—Bruce B. Brewer Jr., formerly editor of a local trade magazine, has been named promotion director of KUDL radio here. Brewer will handle publicity and advertising for the 24-hour, 5,000 w. station.

TV Real Estate

plagued by the shifting web owned studio fortunes.

NBC Relinquishes Two

NBC recently closed the Colonial Theatre with the folde of "The Price Is Right" at that network. That followed the shuttering in N. Y. of the Ziegfeld Theatre. Web, at the same time of the Colonial Theatre shuttering, opened the Peacock Studio at 30 Rock, housing latest developed color facilities, etc.

At the peak of the film push on the web, CBS-TV in N. Y. also shuttered some studio facilities, but for the past few seasons, web, retaining its program mix, has stabilized its N. Y. facilities, with the renovated 57th Street plant standing ready in the wings.

NBC-TV next season nighttime finds itself without game shows, with only two variety shows, Jack Paar and Mitch Miller, both coming out of N. Y., with "DuPont Show of the Week," but with virtually every other regularly scheduled nighttime program strictly on film. Going the film route for NBC-TV has virtually depleted the nighttime activity for next season of NBC-TV's huge Burbank plant. That's the reason for the reported big push on NBC-TV's part to lease its Burbank studio facilities for CBS-TV's "Kaye" and "Garland" weekly outings next season.

CBS-TV Coast facilities, with Kaye, Garland, Red Skelton, Jack Benny, et al., is reported to be operating at full capacity, with sets standing in the hall because of crowding. CBS-TV, which also has expanded its own film operation, has acquired Republic Studios on the Coast. Major tenant at the web's Republic lot is Four Star. Web also is filming its own series there, including "Great Adventure," "Rawhide," and "Gunsmoke."

It's a vexing never ending problem in lining up talent and shows for the yearly three-network race. For many, what is more vexing, is the real estate needed, as shows collapse and build, as tastes and winners alter the complexion of real estate requirements.

end in audience measurement, but often it's something that can be used. When it comes to a quantitative indication, almost anything is better than what we have now. All the agencies have been relying on a broken crutch far too long."

There's no doubt that station salesmen and reps will be running up and down Madison and Michigan Aves. with the latest Pulse and Hooperatings for a long time to come. But many another important agency has at least verbally renounced the numbers game in local radio, and if enough of them turn it into firm policy, the way FC&B has — with the stress on programming, good commercial practices and other qualitative factors—the reps may have to arm themselves with something more than a pocket-piece, and the condition of radio stands to be vastly improved.

Jean Hendrix Does It Again

1962 parade, which brought out a nosecount of 250,000 spectators along historic Peachtree Street and an equal number of stay-at-homes who watched it on The Tube.

Thursday (4) WSB-TV's third annual 'Salute to America" to promote patriotism drew around 300,000 (the biggest crowd since the "Gone With the Wind" premiere in December, 1939, according to Chief of Police Herbert Jenkins). And it was estimated that many others within reach of WSB-TV's picture beams saw it on tv.

As soon as one Glorious Fourth parade reaches its conclusion, Miss Hendrix goes to work on the next one.

So this year's event reached a new high entertainment-wise.

Six divisions were needed by Grand Marshall L. W. McPherson to move the 100-unit parade along the line of march with thousands of cheering kids clutching and waving an American Flag distributed for free by American Oil Co.

Miss Hendrix, of course, had celebrities on hand, including actor Victor Jory, a three-time parade participant serving as honorary Marshall; Lt. Comdr. Jackie Cooper of NBC-TV's "Hennesey" show; Jock Mahoney, the current (13th) Tarzan, and Peter Brown from ABC-TV's "Lawman" program.

76 (Er,. 85) Trombones

In addition, 14 marching bands, including one of 76 trombones (actually 85) representing Atlanta's Municipal Theater Under-the-Stars, which will present Meredith Wilison's "The Music Man" this summer with home town boy Bert Parks as Prof. Harold Hill.

While Army, Navy, Marine and U.S. Air Force planes swept overhead, the services were well represented, each headed by color guards and top ranking brass from the military installations in this area. It was not designed to be a show of force, but it did breed confidence that the armed forces were on the job.

Politicos, of course, had their place in the line of march, including Georgia Congressman Charles Weltner, Mayor Ivan Allen, Jr., state, county and city officials.

There were Girl and Boy Scouts by the hundreds, cowboys and cowgirls astride spirited steeds, Indians and one entire division devoted to the Shriners, including a drum corps, color guard, patrol, provost guard, oriental band, Arab guard, Chanters, Red Devils, 10 trick automobiles and other motorized equipment. These latter always add excitement to any parade and the Shriners are forever ready, willing and able to participate.

A Sheriff's Posse, riding 15 Palomino horses and led by Fulton County Sheriff Ralph Grimes and the only blue fire engine in the world, manned by American Legionaires, were other features.

Personnel from WSB-TV in the parade included Ray Moore, Don Stewart, John Beckman, Charlie Welsh, Fred Briggs, Hal Suit and John Palmer, while WSB Radio (oldest radio station in the South and which spawned WSB-TV) was represented by Aubrey Tittle, Jimmy Dunaway, Bill Buckner, Tommy Thompson, Bob van Camp and King Elliott.

And, to the eternal delight of the young fry, Popeye and Brutus, Deputy Dog and other familiar tv characters participated.

Last, but not least, Confederate units were sprinkled along the line of march, proudly bearing aloft the Southland's beloved Stars and Bars.

There was only one parade casualty. Charlie Cash, WSB-TV's rotund public relations chief, was helping prepare the Tarzan-Safari float, which featured the jungle by (Mahoney's 42) surrounded by a jaguar, ocelot and monkeys. One of the monks nipped Cash's left hand and he had to get a tetanus shot. The simian came out of it okay.

SUMMER SPECTACULAR
With Maurice Chevalier, Joan Regan, Winifred Atwell, Margo Henderson, Carla Fracci, John Gilpin, the Wimbledon girls' choir, the Corps de Ballet from the Arts Theatre Group
Producer: Francis Essex
Director: Malcolm Parker
60 mins., Sun., 8:25 p.m.
Associated TeleVision, from London

Sparking a season of summer variety specials which slip into the Palladium Sunday night prime time slot, this Maurice Chevalier show was a disappointment. The great French entertainer is still able to catch and caress an audience from the moment he walks on, but this glimpse of the maestro of vaudeville caught him with some old age showing.

He appeared in only the last few moments of the outing, although he was the voice-over compere for the whole production, and made with a half-dozen of his favorite songs including "Thank Heaven For Little Girls," a Gershwin selection comprising "I Was So Young," "Please Do It Again" and "Lady Be Good," a couple of French numbers and, finally, he bent his souffle voice round a Twister. However, his delivery was halting —and at times even creaky—and lacking in his usual zestful bonhomme. To be fair, the audience didn't seem to notice and gladhanded him, thunderously.

Prior to Chevalier's straw hat and cane routine, producer Francis Essex compiled a string of acts representing a stock British variety show layout. Such competent, but unexceptional turns, as Margo Henderson who pulled off some neat impersonations of stellar names; Joan Regan, with her charming pipes and Winifred Atwell who tinkles a honkey-tonk piano with zip and zing, gave the show a decent start although the production cried out for a few handouts from the originality department.

One uplifting factor was a ballet sequence danced by Carla Fracci and John Gilpin which was not too obtrusive among the more mediocre acts linked, as they were, to a single theme, the piano. Watt.

move "Captain Kangaroo" from its 9 to 10 a.m. berth to an hour earlier. "Kangaroo" at that Saturday a.m. hour was up against stiff cartoon kiddie competition. The 8 a.m. berth for "Kangaroo" was considered better for Saturday. It's the same berth Bob Keeshan and his crew hold Monday through Friday.

Web, with another hour in its Saturday daytime schedule, added "Quick Draw McGraw," a Hanna-Barbera cartoon which was in syndication, sponsored by Kellogg on a national spot basis. In addition, there will be a new cartoon series, titled "Tennessee Tuxedo."

In its web run, Kellogg will have a weekly quarter hour of "McGraw." Others riding with "McGraw" are General Foods with a non-competitive product and various clients. Delux-Redding and other sponsors will be included on "Tuxedo," which will have General Mills taking a weekly quarter hour.

Saturday daytime lineup for the fall will be as follows: "Kangaroo," from 8 to 9; "Alvin Show," 9 to 9:30; "Tuxedo" and "McGraw," from 9:30 to 10:30; "Mighty Mouse Playhouse" at 10:30; "Rin Tin Tin," at 11; "Roy Rogers" at 11:30; "Sky King" at 12 noon; and 12:30 to 1 p.m., a children's educational series, to be produced under the wing of CBS News.

Last summer it was back in network's July-August lineup replacing Garry Moore and currently, spelling Skelton.

Lineup of celebrity presenters already booked for this summer includes Carol Burnett, Harry Belafonte, Robert Goulet, Joan Crawford, Helen Hayes, Mickey Rooney, Lauren Bacall, Carol Channing, Liza Minnelli, Edie Adams, George Jessel and George Hamilton.

Comments Mansfield: "Often there is an underlying desire of the star to offer an important showcase for a promising talent close to them. For example, Helen Hayes asked us if she could appear to present two youngsters from the Academy of Dramatic Arts she feels have outstanding acting potential. We taped them doing a Chekhov excerpt. Last year, Floyd Patterson, then heavyweight champion of the world, came on to present a young singer, Mickey Alan. Both had gone to Wiltwyck School. Robert Goulet appeared to present his understudy in 'Camelot' Col. Shorty Powers, information head of NASA, flew up from Cape Canaveral to bring with him a vocal group he had seen working there and admired.

"It's the old story," Mansfield muses, "Everybody likes to play David Belasco or Ziegfield or Gus Edwards, spot a star on the rise."

Inside Stuff—Radio-TV

George Heinemann, manager of public affairs for NBC-TV; Don Fedderson, program manager of National Educational Television and Radio Center, New York; and William Harley, prexy of National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters, Washington, are among the principal guest speakers taking part in a Northwestern U. graduate school symposium this summer on educational television. Other participants will be Dr. Bryghte Godbold, exec veepee of Midwest Program on Airborne Television, Lafayette, Ind., and Chalmers Marquis, program manager of WTTW, the educational station in Chicago.

Broadcast stations will be asked to garner public contributions for NAB prexy Le Roy Collins' project to use radio and television in reducing illiteracy in the Dominican Republic. The NAB board of directors approved Collins' suggestion to cosponsor the Dominican plan with the Albert Parvin Foundation, U.S. Supreme Court Justice Douglas and the Alliance for Progress. NAB will provide up to $15,000 to help produce 100 half-hour programs in Spanish, adopted from the "Operation Alphabet" series originated by WFIL, Philadelphia. Contributions garnered by stations are for obtaining 2,000 television and 50,000 radio sets needed for the project.

Among toy manufacturers that are heavy advertisers on television, Mattel has led the field in spreading its tv budget on a 52-week basis. In VARIETY's June 19 issue, a story erroneously stated that Mattel advertised on tv only in the fourth quarter for the Christmas trade. In fact, Mattel is the top spender on network tv, allocating its money on a year-round basis for the past eight years.

NEWPORT'S JAZZTRAVAGANZA

Tango's Italo Comeback; RCA Yens Modugno & Mina; Other VV Notes

By ROBERT F. HAWKINS

Rome, July 9.

The tango is making a strong showing in Italian recordings this summer, despite such more-publicized trends as the hullygully, tamoure, etc.

In fact, the current rating-topper, Adriano Celentano's "Tangaccio" and the equally strong backing, "Grazie Prego Scusi" (Clan) are both tangos, effectively modernized in words and styling to conform to the current idiom. "Kriminal Tango" is another current pop, while Tony Dallara's "Tu che Sai di Primavera" is likely to rate a lot of juke mileage this summer.

Oddly enough, one of the songs which some time back helped reintro the tango into local tastes, "Un Tango Italiano," was never a top seller here despite San Remo songfest projection and a fine Milva recording.

Reported, but not confirmed, that RCA offered Domenico Modugno $160,000 to leave Fonit, and that RCA is also attempting to woo Mina away from Italdisc.

Miranda Martino taping a TV show based on Naples and its songs for RAI-TV, the Italo telenet.

Fonit signed Marina Moran to one-year pact.

Richard Anthony in Rome to record series of songs. Columbia bringing out his first Italo LP for occasion.

Capitol rushing Wayne Newton's recording of "Heart" onto the local market to take advantage of initial impact made with Italo version of song by RCA's Rita Pavone, who has already sent it zooming in very similar styling.

Similarly last season, Adriano

'Bach Battalion' Etc. Win 2,000 Teen Recruits As Mpls. Station Fights R&R

Minneapolis, July 9.

Started less than two months ago by some of the elder rock 'n' roll stamper-outer staffers at Time-Life's non-network local WTCN Radio with the objective of discouraging that sort of music among teenagers, what's called the "Teenagers Underground Music Society (TUMS)" now claims to have issued 2,000 membership cards.

WTCN Radio avowedly largely confines its programming to only "the sound of beautiful music," which means the higher quality melodies, and the Society is in line with a current campaign to bring youngsters into its listeners' fold.

In order to join the Society "underground movement" the teenager is required to sign a pledge not to mention Chubby Checker in young children's presence, to slip "Sheherazade" on the turntable at any Twist party when they shouldn't be, but happen to be present, and to register complete disgust at any Elvis Presley mention (boooo), etc.

Called "music jungle fighters," members are enlisted in such "underground units" as the "Beethoven Brigade," "Bach Battalion," "Dvorak Division" and "Puccini Patrol."

Maine Batoner Gets 5G Fine on Income Tax Rap

Portland, Me., July 9.

Ellis J. Corey, Waterville orchestra leader and music store operator, was fined $5,000 in Federal Court here when he pleaded guilty to evading $10,400 in U.S. income taxes. A six months jail sentence was suspended and he was placed on probation for two years.

Corey was indicted for evading taxes for 1958 and 1959. The 1959 charge was dismissed by Judge Edward T. Gignoux who ordered Corey to pay $33,000 in taxes, penalties and interest.

WB Rolls 5th Anni Meet July 21-23 in Burbank

Warner Bros. Records' Fifth Anniversary Convention will be held July 21-23 at the Burbank, Cal., headquarters of the diskery and at the Beverly Hilton Hotel. Over 100 out-of-towners, including distributors and sales staffers are expected to attend the meetings.

The event will be topped off by a banquet July 23 at the Hilton at which several artists from the WB talent roster will perform. The convention will be the first national conclave with all distribs present since the diskery was founded in 1958.

Singapore-Malay Tie Puts Warners Into Orient Mkt.

Warner Bros. Records has set a deal with its Singapore-Malaya licensee, the E. S. Isaac Co., whereby the latter will produce local diskings featuring Malayan and Chinese artists aimed to sell in the Orient and released via the WB trademark.

Product made under this agreement will be recorded in Singapore and Kuala Lumpur, with the tapes then flown to Calcutta for processing by EMI's Dum Dum plant. Finished disks will be airfreighted for sale in Singapore, Malaya, Thailand, South Viet-Nam, Hong Kong and Macao by the representative distributors of Warner waxings in the Far East.

The first group to be signed under the WB-Isaac deal is a local combo called the Sundowners. Their initial diskings for Warner will be issued later this month.

INTERLOCHEN SYMPH EYES '64 SOVIET TOUR

There's a chance that the Interlochen Symphony under the direction of Dr. Joseph Maddy will tour the USSR next summer. Ann Ronell, newly-elected to the board of advisors of the Interlochen Arts Academy (Mich.), is working on the arrangements.

Miss Ronell, songwriter, among whose credits are "Who's Afraid Of The Big Bad Wolf?" will huddle with Madame K. Furtseva, head of the Ministry of Culture in Moscow, about the Interlochen tour while attending the Moscow Film Festival this month.

This will be Miss Ronell's second trip to Moscow in connection with the US-USSR coproduction film, "Meeting At A Far Meridian," which her husband, Lester Cowan, is producing.

Decca Bowing Fall Line Via 3 July Sales Meets

Decca Records is holding a series of regional sales meetings in July to introduce its fall line and unveil promotional plans to national sales staffers.

The opening conclave, gathering the company's western division, will be held at the Clift Hotel, San Francisco, next Monday (15). A meet for the southwestern, midwestern and north central divisions is set for July 17 in St. Louis. On July 19 the southern and eastern divisions will convene in Albany.

CALL SUPER BASH TOPS IN 10 YEARS

By DAVID B. BITTAN

Newport, R.I., July 9.

After 10 problem-filled years and one premature obituary, the Newport Jazz Festival has proved it is here to stay. Commercially and artistically the super jazz bash finally is worthy of being called an institution.

More than 35,000 attended the four-day festival Thursday-Sunday (4-7) and backed producer George Wein's contention that a jazz show can make money while retaining its musical integrity. Wein was blessed with perfect weather.

The would-be beatniks, who all but killed the festival in 1960 with their disgusting hi-jinks, were definitely in the minority this year. Those who did show up in Newport were conspicuous by their absence at the Freebody Park Festival itself.

The barefooted, bearded, shirtless and shorts-wearing males frankly admitted they had no interest in jazz but were there for the "Newport thing." They weren't quite sure what the "thing" was but the myths pictured a place with beer, blondes and beach in abundance. Those who carried the beer-swigging too far were quickly throttled by an augmented police force which clearly showed it would take no nonsense.

The importing of out-of-town gendarmes confused the jazz visitors, many of whom discovered they knew more about Newport than the police from whom they were seeking directions.

As usual, the police hauled in a sizable number of post-juveniles for drinking in public. Most of the troublemakers, however, gave home addresses in the Rhode Island - Massachusetts - Connecticut area.

Some Newport burghers complained of the presence of the outlanders and the commotion caused by the annual invasion. But the resort merchants did anything but cry on their way to the bank. The festival brings an estimated $1,000,000 in business to Newport each July.

Winnipeg Symph Winds Season $16,487 in Red, Inks New Tooter Ticket

Winnipeg, July 9.

Annual meeting capping 15th season of Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra revealed operating costs of $213,175 and a deficit during the season of $4,800. Auditor's report also showed an increase in the accumulated deficit to $16,487.

Symphony operated on grants totaling $122,425, of which $30,000 was provided by the Canada Council and the balance by local supporting groups. Boxoffice and subscription revenue reached a record $85,950. Highest individual budget item in the report was $135,000 for musicians' salaries.

Symph gave 59 concerts to a total audience of 88,950. This was an increase of 15,345 over the previous season for three more concerts.

Annual meet also revealed that Victor Feldbrill has been reappointed musical director and conductor. Guest artists scheduled for the 1963-64 season, opening Oct. 10 for 26 weeks, include Benny Goodman, Lois Marshall, pianist Witold Malcuzynski, violinist Christian Ferras, pianist Byron Janis, Morley Meredith and basso Yi Kwei Sze.

Justice A. M. Monnin was elected president of the organization for his second term.

Meantime, the symph and local Musicians Assn. have signed a new contract for the 1963-64 season. Pact calls for a basic weekly wage of $70 for the 26-week season and a season minimum salary of $1,820. Agreement also states that a minimum of 15 hours work is mandatory during any contract week.

Col's John Hammond Hits U. S. Jazz 'Monopoly' Myth—Europe More Hip

By JOE X. PRICE

Hollywood, July 9.

Columbia Records' John Hammond was in town last week long enough to direct the cutting of four Herb Ellis Sextet sides, visit a friend who had twins and destroy a few ill-founded theories regarding American jazz before winging to Newport, R. I., for the July 4 opening of The Newport Jazz Festival.

No. 1 target of the myth-blasting was America's "monopoly" on jazz innovations and pace-setting. "Actually, England'h taste in jazz is about five years ahead of ours," said the youthful 53-year-old disk-producer authority. "I know, because the first records I ever made were for England."

Testimony to that is the number of expatriate jazz greats living and working in Europe, according to Hammond. "Don Byas, Bud Powell, Kenny Clark, lots more. They're happier there than they ever could be here because of the sustained progressiveness in Europe.

"Actually, the best modern jazz in Europe is Czech. Karel Krautgarten has the swingingest big band I know of. Then there's Karel Vlach —that's the best European commercial band. Saw him in '58 at the World's Fair in Brussels. They swung.

Versatile Cont'l Tooters

"Funny thing about that, too. European musicians seem to be more versatile than ours. When I was vice president of Mercury (late '40s), I recorded musicians from the Czech Philharmonic who sat in on jam sessions; their trombone man was equally great as a jazz man as he was in classics." It was while at Mercury, too, that Hammond gave a then unknown young oboe player named Mitch Miller a job as a&r producer.

"This is not to belittle American jazz, don't misunderstand," Hammond qualified. "I'm just saying that European musicians don't copy

Dave Kahn Files 350G 'Credit' Suit Vs. ASCAP

Los Angeles, July 9.

Claiming ownership of a number of film scores in which he says he was deprived of any credit, composer-arranger Dave Kahn is demanding $350,000 damages in a Superior Court suit filed against Raoul Kraushaar, American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers and Omar Music Co.

Kahn charges misrepresentation and invasion of common law property rights. He also asks an accounting. He claims that he arranged and orchestrated compositions and scores used principally as background music for "Abbot and Costello Meet Captain Kidd," and several teleseries such as "Hopalong Cassidy," "Lassie" and "Mister Ed." Kahn contends that Kraushaar was falsely attributed with authorship in certain cases, and that plaintiff was deprived of all credit.

Philips Buys RCA Espanola Plant In $1,000,000 Deal

Madrid, July 9.

Bernard Ness ended his tour of duty with RCA Espanola last week and left to take over the presidency of RCA Victor Mexicana.

Before leaving, Ness negotiated sale of the RCA plant and physical assets to Philips for a sum at $1,000,000. RCA Espanola, with Guillermo Caram installed as general manager, has taken over offices in the Madrid Towers and will now press all product through Philips.

The 10-year old RCA plant here, one of the first U. S. enterprises to set up industrially in Spain, never achieved RCA standards in production. In addition, the operation was handicapped until recently by government price controls.

In an improved economic climate shorn of a burdensome overhead, RCA appears better prepared to augment club sales that have been prospering in association with the merchandising wing of Reader's Digest. In addition, RCA expects further development in the Spanish market by taking the lead in cutting disk prices.

RCA-Reader's Digest club release of classics sold 30,000 12-record packages in eight months at a unit price of $25.

PICKWICK HALTS MONTE LP AFTER HE BEEFS

Pickwick International, distributor of low-priced disks, has agreed to stop releasing an LP tagged "Spotlight on Lou Monte" following a suit brought in N. Y. Supreme Court by the Italo singer. He charged that the album was unauthorized and contained only three songs sung by him. The action also sought $500,000 damages.

Hearing was held July 3, at which time Pickwick agreed to cease distributing the platter. Monte, in his complaint charged that the album which also carried the singer's picture, was "perpetrating a fraud on the public." He noted that he signed a pact with Frank Sinatra's Reprise Records in 1961 which is still in force.

The album had been sold in chain stores and music shops. It was advertised in newspapers as a low-priced item, selling at 99c. In his suit, Monte claims that his disks have grossed over $2,000,000 since 1962.

Fishbein Back to Marks As Exec V.P. Replacing The Late Robert Marks

Larry Fishbein will return to the E. B. Marks Music fold later this month as exec v.p. to fill the opening left by the recent death of Robert B. Marks. Joseph Auslander is also being upped from comptroller and assistant secretary to general manager. Arnold Shaw remains as general professional manager.

The firm's work in the educational and serious-music fields will continue to be handled by Robert Silverman and Felix Greissle. Fishbein has several years behind him in the music biz and also was a classmate at Dartmouth of Herbert Marks, the pub's prez.

Marks has become increasingly active in the legit-film area, snaring the music to "Tovarich" and the Italo pix, "Mondo Cane," "8½," "Women of the World" and the upcoming "Venere Imperiale." Also forthcoming are the scores to Alexander Cohen's "Baker Street" and "Barnum," as well as the music for David Susskind's fall tv series, "East Side, West Side."

Pete Seeger Preeming Berkshire Barn Season

Lenox, Mass., July 9.

The Berkshire Music Barn opens its season of folk and jazz concerts with Pete Seeger, Saturday afternoon (13) and Sunday evening (14). "An Afternoon in Africa," featuring the Herbie Mann Sextet and Chief Bey & His Royal Household, is set for the afternoon of July 20; and Louis Armstrong, the next night.

A hootenany, with Scruggs & Flatt and others is penciled in for July 27; The Dukes of Dixieland, July 28. Ray Charles is set for July 31, this show being produced by the Barn at the Pittsfield Boys' Club's new auditorium.

March's 'Follow,' Winding's 'Surfin'', 'Irma' Track, Mann's 'Gate' Top LPs

LITTLE PEGGY MARCH: "I WILL FOLLOW HIM" (RCA Victor). Peggy March, a 15-year old songstress from Philadelphia who catapulted into the bestseller lists with this album's title song, is a typical teenage talent. She has an immature style which appeals exclusively to the Coke set. Her repertory is made up of a collection of contemporary rocking ballads, like "Dream World," "Oh-Oh, I'm Falling In Love," "My Teenage Castle" and "I'll Never Forget Last Night," among others. Sammy Lowe provides excellent backgrounds.

KAI WINDING FEATURING KENNY BURRELL: "SOUL SURFIN'" (Verve). This is a fine pop instrumental session which includes Kai Winding's chart-riding rendition of "More." Also included is a top-flight job on "Sukiyaki." Winding and Claus Ogerman arranged the material for this session and both have done a solid job of keeping things musical as well as rhythmic. The surfing beat is present throughout. However, the tunes have also been given a slick melodic feel thanks to the arrangements, Winding's trombone stylings and the guitar work of Kenny Burrell. The tune collection is in a hip pop groove, and the LP should turn up strong action.

"IRMA LA DOUCE" (United Artists). Andre Previn has composed the music for Billy Wilder's filmization of "Irma La Douce" and has done so without going to the original score for the Broadway production which was a musical version. Only one tune from the Main Stem original is included, "Our Language of Love," and it's not featured prominently. Previn has composed a lilting musical background which is light and breezy most of the time, and has its moody moments too. His music, written for underscoring purposes, registers as such with no particularly outstanding themes. It's often quite pretty though, with a soft Parisian feel.

"HERBIE MANN RETURNS TO THE VILLAGE GATE" (Atlantic). This followup session to his very successful "Herbie Mann at the Village Gate" waxing presents the flutist and his group in a swinging return engagement. It should register with the same effectiveness as his first set. Present are the driving Afro-Latin rhythms that have been a Mann trademark, along with his spirited work with the bossa nova. His own lyrical work on flute, plus the often-exciting stylings of other members of his unit, make this one of the hipster's best collections. He has written four of the five pieces included. His writing, as well as his playing, lend a unique excitement to jazz that few others have been able to create. This platter should serve both Mann and Atlantic in fine stead.

"JOHN SEVERSON PRESENTS SUNSET SURF" (Capitol). Another in Capitol's array of surf music, this session has been arranged and conducted by Jimmie Haskell and spotlights guitar work by Glen Campbell on occasion. The emphasis here is on the music rather than on a particular group. The result is an outing that should please pop music surf fans. Severson is the editor-publisher of Surfer magazine, which gives the set some further identity with its theme. Some of the tunes included have a soft ballad mood and others drive rhythmically. All are presented with nice melodic content. The LP looks good to capture a piece of the surfing coin.

"THE WARM WORLD OF JOAO GILBERTO" (Atlantic). The bossa nova's soft-spoken boss, Joao Gilberto, is given a slick outing in this Atlantic session, his second for the diskery. Recorded in his native Brazil, the set will please bossa buffs and, in particular, friends of Gilberto. His light, yet probing vocal touch, is displayed with clarity here as he puts lotsa feeling and knowhow into a set of bossa tunes, many of which are new to Yank ears. Gilberto's guitaring is a smoothly integrated part of his performance, making for a unique musical blend in which both voice and guitar seem to combine into one instrument.

"55 DAYS AT PEKING" (Columbia). Dimitri Tiomkin, one of the most active composers in the film industry, has come up with a big score for Samuel Bronston's "55 Days at Peking." There are strong lush themes and other dramatic action music. Andy Williams is present on this waxing singing the main theme, "So Little Time," a smooth and simple ballad. There are other themes like haunting "Moon Fire" which also register nicely. These, interspersed with the action scorings, make up a solid soundtrack session that could be due for some turnstile and programming activity.

WOODY HERMAN: "ENCORE" (Philips). Woody Herman's present herd gets a fine showcasing in this set, waxed during a performance by the unit at Basin Street West. Mixing a big ballad sound with some driving efforts, Herman & Co. has a solid unit going that has kept pace with the musical times in providing some hip sounds as well as some less daring styling. The band gets off swinging big effects throughout, while not ignoring the soloists either. These two elements combine for a solid musical blend that will provide programmers as well as customers with action incentive.

"THE GREAT ESCAPE" (United Artists). UA's "The Great Escape" looms as a strong boxoffice contender and Elmer Bernstein's music for the film likewise has the sound of cash in its grooves. Strongly indicating the moods and themes in this picture of an escape from a Nazi POW camp, the score has a main title march theme that could step out on its own. The LP also contains some selections with an emotional vitality. Not all the pieces can stand alone, but there is enough identifiable material here to make this session a strong entry in the current soundtrack sweepstakes.

THE SHACKLEFORDS: "YOU AIN'T HEARD NOTHIN' YET" (Mercury). The Shacklefords are a group of country singers who present their music in an exciting and harmonic fashion that could catch on with the folk and country buffs. There is a strong folk flavor in much of their work. It's all wrapped up with slick instrumental stylings by the group, featuring guitars and banjos. There's not much of the commercialism apparent in most of the country-folk groups waxing these days. Instead, the unit just sings out in a forthright manner. Tunes are all originals and the elements in this session combine for a strong country-folk session.

THE GOSPEL PEARLS STARRING BESSIE GRIFFIN: "SWING DOWN SWEET CHARIOT" (Liberty). With the gospel train steaming firmly along these days, diskeries are hitching up their cars with increasing momentum. This latest waxing in the religoso groove spotlights the Gospel Pearls starring Bessie Griffin. The unit puts over its material in the spirited manner that has been projecting the gospel idiom deeper into national music tastes. Miss Griffin pushes lotsa feeling and drive into her vocal work, and the Pearls don't let her down with their strong-driving spirit. This has been one of the front-runner units with audiences in the various religioso niteries that are springing up around the country. This Liberty disking offers proof of why they're in demand.

LAWRENCE WELK
Presents His New Double Hit Dot Record
"BREAKWATER" B/W
"SCARLETT O'HARA"

ITAMAR: "SONGS OF YEMEN AND ISRAEL" (Vanguard). In the recent wave of ethnic recordings, there has been no neglect of the folk songs from Israel. Latest import from that country is this arresting singer who comes equipped with a fresh sheaf of material in the Hebrew and Yemenite idioms. Itamar exploits his wide-ranging voice with striking dramatic impact and should reach a broad audience even if the material is specialized.

"POPE JOHN XXIII" (Mercury). This LP is an excerpted portion of "The Sounds of The Vatican," a three-disk portfolio of sounds from the capitol of the Roman Catholic religion. The album follows the highlights of the reign of Pope John XXIII, the recently-deceased leader of the Roman Catholic church. Included are moments from his coronation, his address to the Ecumenical Council, the Ave Maria, remarks to Vatican pilgrims and other highlights. It is a fine documentary, which should be of considerable advantage to schools as well as an inspiring document for students of the Mass and those interested in religion, Catholic or not. It is an often-stirring presentation, with an explanatory narration.

"KEEFE BRASSELLE SINGS DIXIELAND" (Merry-Go-Round). There's a bright dixieland feeling to this session which gives Keefe Brasselle a chance to exercise his pipes to solid effect. The repertoire included here is from the familiar dixie songbag, including such as "Beale Street Blues," "Mississippi Mud," "If I Could Be With You," "Sweet Georgia Brown," "Baby Won't You Please Come Home" and others. Brasselle swings with a controlled abandon through these ditties and turns in a strong effort. Backing is also in a solid groove, provided by a group consisting of Sol Yaged, Al Foster, Dick Brady, Frank Hubbell, Roy Burnes, Al Chernet and Jack Six.

Top Singles Of The Week

(The 'Best Bets' of This Week's 100-Plus Releases)

THE McGUIRE SISTERS . . . . . CORDIALLY INVITED
(Reprise) . . . . . Summertime
The McGuire Sisters' "Cordially Invited" (Lisa Ann) shapes up as a standout ballad right on the teenage target with its sentimental, but sharply written lyric which this group projects in appealing style. "Summertime" (Jonathan*) is still another seasonal entry, but this one is weighted down by cliches.*

NEIL SEDAKA . . . . . THE DREAMER
(RCA Victor) . . . . . Look Inside Your Heart
Neil Sedaka's "The Dreamer" (Rondak†) gives this young singer another teenage ballad neatly aimed at the romantic teenagers. "Look Inside Your Heart" (Rondak†) is another ballad in a similar groove due to catch spins.

ROY HAMILTON. . . .MIDNIGHT TOWN-DAYBREAK CITY
(MGM) . . . . . Intermezzo
Roy Hamilton's "Midnight Town-Daybreak City" (Trio†) shapes up as a standout ballad with a fresh idea that this singer projects in a highly potent style. "Intermezzo" (Schuberth) is a fine version of this lilting standard.*

ROBERT DE CORMIER FOLK SINGERS . . . . . AMEN
(Command) . . . . . Dance, Boatman Dance
Robert de Cormier Folk Singers' "Amen" (Okemao) rolls into the gospel groove with a highly polished religioso carried along with a powerful beat and some excellent singing. "Dance, Boatman Dance" (Fall River†) is a rousing sea chanty, also dished up by this ensemble with a commercial gloss.

JOSE JIMINEZ . . . . . JOSE & CLEOPATRA
(Kapp) . . . . . Part II
Jose (Bill) Jiminez's "Jose and Cleopatra" (Dana) hitchhikes on the current run of the "Cleopatra" film with one of this comic's funniest scripts. It's a clever rib of the pic's extravagant budget with Bill Newkirk pitching the questions. This extract from a recently released album should pick up considerable jockey spins.*

EDDIE LAWRENCE . . . . . METS PHILOSOPHER
(Coral) . . . . . We Love Yuh Mets
Eddie Lawrence's "Mets Philosopher" (J. J. Robbins) turns the misfortunes and mishaps of the N. Y. Mets' baseball team into a solid laugh entry in the groove of his trademarked "Old Philosopher" routines. "We Love Yuh Mets" (J. J. Robbins*) is more of the same and good too.*

JOE HARNELL ORCH . . . . . HUD
(Kapp) . . . . . Come Away With Me
Joe Harnell Orch's "Hud" (Famous), title song of the current Paramount pic, registers as a highstepping instrumental with a nervous rocking beat right in the contemporary idiom. "Come Away With Me" (Cavalcade*) is a Latin-styled melodc entry also rating attention.*

MARV JOHNSON . . . . . COME ON AND STOP
(United Artists) . . . . . Not Available
Marv Johnson's "Come On And Stop" (Mellin†) gives this young singer a good rocking number which he turns into a striking production to grab spins from the teenage set. "Not Available" (Jobete†) is another rhythm slice with a more routine idea at its base.

RUBY & KATHY. . . . . HEARTACHES, HEARTACHES
(King) . . . . . Your Little Band of Gold
Ruby & Kathy's "Heartaches, Heartaches" (Sonle-Sundown†) could come out of left field as a country ballad delivered with an unusual and highly effective sound by this femme duo. "Your Little Band of Gold" (Sundown-Beaik†) is another interesting backwoods slice marked by a good vocal and a catchy instrumental interlude.

PRINCE GEORGE . . . . . THE SWINGING PREACHER
(Epic) . . . . . Five-Four Time
Prince George's "The Swinging Preacher" (B. F. Wood) climbs aboard the current gospel train with a hard rocking slice that could stir up a big storm on the juke circuit. "Five-Four Time" (Duchess†) shapes up as another solid rocking entry.*

QUINCY JONES ORCH . . . . . JIVE SAMBA
(Mercury) . . . . . Comin' Home, Baby
Quincy Jones Orch's "Jive Samba" (Artillery†) takes a number out of the modern jazz repertory and whips into a potently swinging instrumental which should nab plenty of spins on all levels. "Comin' Home, Baby" (Cotillion†) is another jazz standard arranged with a driving beat.

DIMITRI TIOMKIN . . . . THE PEKING THEME
(Columbia) . . . . . Moon Fire
Dimitri Tiomkin's "The Peking Theme" (Bronston) from "55 Days To Peking," shapes up as a highly attractive instrumental in this big orchestral rendition. "Moon Fire" (Bronston*), from the same film, is another lilting side for easy listening.*

STAN APPLEBAUM . . . . . WHATEVER LOLA WANTS
(Warner Bros.) . . . . . Sandy's Theme
Stan Applebaum's "Whatever Lola Wants" (Frank) brings back this showtune click in a svelte instrumental format featuring some fancy pianistics on top of an orch and choral arrangement. "Sandy's Theme" (Knollwood*) is another slickly orchestrated slice.*

WILLIAM BELL . . .SOMEBODY MENTIONED YOUR NAME
(Stax) . . . . . What Can I Do
William Bell's "Somebody Mentioned Your Name" (East†) is slow-tempoed gospel-flavored ballad delivered in solid blues style by this singer with some savvy choral backstopping. "What Can I Do" (East†) reverts to a straightforward rocking groove, also with strong chances.

LEEDS-CROWN'S JOINT 'BOOK OF THE BLUES'

"The Book of the Blues" is a kingsize joint publishing venture of Crown and Leeds Music—former for the book trade, Leeds for the music business—comprising 100 indigo laments, fully annotated by Frank Driggs, edited by Kay Shirley, with preface by John Hammond and introduction by Orin Keepnews. It's fully, as the title indicates, a compendium of blues, all Leeds (and subsidiary Pickwick Music and Duchess Music) copyrights, including guitar and banjo chord arrangements along with the full pianoforte copies.

Additionally there is an elaborate discography and it's surprising how prolifically some of these relatively little known titles have been recorded. Richard M. Jones' "Trouble In Mind," for example, has almost 80 different recordings. The works and the interpretive artists are a galaxy of the American jazz scene from the pre-1920s to date; among the many songsmiths and singers are such names ar Lil Green, Bessie Smith, Satchmo, Big Bill Broonzy, King Oliver, Clarence Williams, Porter Grainger, Mary Lou Williams, Ma Rainey, Alberta Hunter, Jimmy Witherspoon, Perry Bradford, J. Mayo Williams, Fats Waller, Andy Razaf, Buddy Johnson, Charlie Parker, Jimmie Cox, Hudson "Tampa Red" Whittaker, Pinetop Smith et al.

"The Book of the Blues" ($7.50) is not only an excellent compendium and an obvious gift item but truly a jazz treasury. Abel.

Tin Pan Valley

By RED O'DONNELL

Nashville, July 9.

Bill Denny resigned as Columbia Records' local manager to head up Cedarwood Music pubbery, owned by his father Jim Denny, who's been on ailing list for more than year.

Marathon Pictures Corp. is filming a feature, "Country Music on Broadway," here for fall release. Producer is Victor Lewis of Toledo, and director, Detroiter Victor Duncan. Although it has no plot, per se, the story line touches career of late Hank Williams. His son Randall (Hank Jr.) and his widow Audrey have roles; ditto money invested.

Country and western acts in the film include Flatt & Scruggs, Skeefer Davis, Ferlin Husky, Ralph Emery, Hank Snow, Whitey (Duke of Paducah) Ford, Bill Anderson, Roy Drusky, Stonewall Jackson, Ralph Emery, Buck Owens, George Jones, Wilma Lee & Stoney Cooper, Ole Joe Clark and Merle Kilgore.

Cadence chief Archie Bleyer in to helm disk cutting via his artist Johnny Tillotson.

When c&w chanter Faron Young tours Europe in early August he'll be accompanied by wife Hilda and their children. It'll be homecoming for Hilda; she's native of Germany although she came to U.S. as child.

The Jordanaires wing to Hollywood next month to cut the soundtrack for Elvis Presley's new film.

Acuff-Rose Artists Bureau chief Jim McConnell lining up show for next October at Carnegie Hall. Package to include Tex Ritter, Flatt & Scruggs, Sue Thompson, George Hamilton IV, the Anita Kerr Singers, Bob Luman, et al.

Johnny Wright—whose partner Jack Anglin was killed in auto accident last March—cutting some Decca singles; first he's ever recorded.

or not, the ancient watering spot has taken on a new look and spirit in the 10 years since the festival burst into being. The festival and the hundreds of thousands it has attracted must be given some credit for the rebirth of Newport.

While production, staging, lighting and sound was superb, it could be that Wein let his shows run too long in his zeal to pack in as much good jazz as possible. Even the most rabid jazz fan was a trifle weary after hearing four evening sessions, some close to five hours in length, two afternoon concerts —plus an afternoon panel.

Wein cannot be blamed entirely. It has become fashionable to make "in-person" albums at Newport and the firms outdid each other in an attempt to get their artists on tape at Newport. Columbia, United Artists, RCA, Atlantic and ABC Paramount all were at the scene and RCA taped the entire festival for use by Voice of America. With many artists being recorded, it was hard to make time for all. The result was, for some fans and critics at least, too much of a good thing.

While the recording made for some problems, it also helped produce the highlight of the festival —and one of the most exciting hours in the 10-year history of the jazztravaganza.

Joe Williams & Nina Simone

This was the fantastic response Friday night (5) to the big voice of Joe Williams, finally coming into his own after less-than-brilliant success since leaving Count Basie. Typed as a blues singer with Basie, Williams, one of the most gifted of all vocalists, is much more than a blues man.

With his Newport performance being taped for RCA, Williams went on well-rehearsed with a seven-piece all-star band behind him playing special arrangements. Excitement mounted as he whipped through several favorites, grew as he sang "April in Paris" and exploded when he went into "Every Day I Sing the Blues." Hundreds were dancing in the aisles as Williams sang chorus after chorus.

His ovation was perhaps the greatest in Newport history, equalling and maybe surpassing Duke Ellington's 1956 appearance.

Another vocalist also scored a big hit, Nina Simone with her soulful singing and piano playing opening night (4). Like Williams a complete entertainer as well as singer, Miss Simone did her poignant version of "Porgy" and also pleased the crowd of some 7,500 with an African work song and some blues.

Other Thursday night high points featured the hard-driving Cannonball Adderley group featuring superb musicianship, and the teaming of traditionally clarinetist PeeWee Russell with modernist Thelonious Monk, with both playing exceptionally well and with no clash in styles.

The 9,000 who attended Friday night's concert marveled at the trumpet artistry of Dizzy Gillespie, applauded the continuing musical growth of Gerry Mulligan and cheered the teaming of underrated saxman Sonny Stitt with the powerful Maynard Ferguson band.

The Duke and Solal

There was a slump in the jazz quality of the Saturday night session (6) with Duke Ellington, as usual, whipping up the most enthusiasm. In exceptionally good form at the piano and mike, Duke led his astonishing group of jazz veterans through a cluster of familiar arrangements. A capacity 12,000, the biggest crowd in three years seemed to ignore the fact that the Duke failed to supply any significant new musical works.

Sunday night's session (7) featured the festival debut of the talented French pianist, Martial Solal.

Highlights of the afternoon sessions included Saturday's appearance of six top practitioners of a dying art, tap dancing, gathered together for a sparse crowd of about 1,000 by Dr. Marshall Stearns, who would have done himself and the audience a favor by doing less talking and allowing more dancing. It was hard to choose between the artistry of Honi Coles, Charlie Atkins, Pete Nugent, Charlie Cook, Chick Green and the comic Ernest Brown.

The "New Faces in Jazz" show Friday afternoon featured Paul Winter's well-rehearsed sextet; the mature, musicianly and professional-like Pennsbury High School Stage Band from Bucks County, Pa., led by Don Smith; the unusual singing style of Ada Lee; the thoughtful piano of McCoy Tyner; the powerful organ playing of 19-year-old Phil Porter; the interesting accordion work of Angelo DiPippo, and the far-out sounds of Tenorman Joe Daley and his trio.

The Diz and Clark Terry

The spotlighting of the trumpet was another of the high points of the festival. Gillespie, with his soaring, explosive style, showed why many consider him the king of the trumpet, if not of all jazz. But Clark Terry, a member of the NBC house band and a former Ellington sideman, played at practically every performance and displayed technique, taste and imagination seldom if ever approached by any trumpeter. His version of "Stardust" as a member of the Newport "house band" Thursday night was a classic.

Another "house" trumpeter, veteran Howard McGhee, currently on the comeback trail, was almost on a par with Terry. Nat Adderley, Ferguson, Art Farmer (who appeared with Mulligan), Ruby Braff (a member of the George Wein all-stars who played Saturday night) and the fantastic trumpet crew of Cootie Williams, Cat Anderson and Ray Nance were other hornmen featured at the festival.

The "house band," also featuring tenor sax veterans Coleman Hawkins and Zoot Sims (Both in good form), kicked off this year's festival Thursday, ably emceed by the Voice of America's Willis Conover.

The Adderleys

Adderley, on next, was most effective on "Brother John," featuring Yusef Lateef on oboe, and "Jazz Samba." Altoman Adderley, his brother, Nat, an extremely able and unheralded cornetist; multi-instrumentalist Lateef and the driving rhythm section of pianist Joe Zawinul, bassman Sam Jones and drummer Louis Hayes make up what could be the best combo in jazz. This group shows the results of hard work in producing an integrated combo sound.

Miss Simone followed, the Monk-Russell team came next and a young Stan Kenton band finished out the evening. Kenton played many of his older arrangements, including three alto men on "Stompin' at the Savoy" featuring Cannonball, ex-Kentonian Charlie Mariano and current lead man Gabe Baltazar.

Kenton's pretty young vocalist, Jean Turner, sang several tunes; particularly in good taste was the old Ellington tune, "Day Dream."

Ferguson and Mulligan

Ferguson opened the Friday night session, with Chicago deejay Sid McCoy as emcee. The always exciting Ferguson band was joined by saxman Sonny Stitt, whose free-swinging style fits Maynard's crew. Mulligan, featuring trombonist Bobby Brookmeyer, trumpeter Art Farmer and guitarist Jim Hall, supplied a subdued, cool contrast to the hotter Ferguson approach.

Williams, aided by a band including Terry, McGhee, Hawkins and Sims, was on next with an astounding performance which would have been an ideal climax for the entire festival. The Lambert-Hendricks singing group, now featuring Yolande Bavan, had the unenviable task of following Williams. The unit clearly showed it misses Annie Ross. Gillespie, featuring guest star vibesman Milt Jackson and flutist-saxophonist James Moody closed out the evening with an impressive set.

'Jazz Priest'—Rev. O'Connor

Saturday night's session, with the Rev. Norman O'Connor, the "jazz priest" serving as emcee, opened with the George Wein all-stars in only "traditional" blowing of the entire festival. Wein himself disdains the use of labels for jazz, and this is a good attitude, but the playing of this group is certainly a far cry from that of Adderley or even of Paul Winter. High spot of this set was the roaring trombone of Al Grey on an instrument virtually ignored for most of the festival. Veteran tenorman Bud Freeman also played well, as did Braff. Wein was at the piano.

Ramsey Lewis, a somewhat tricky although talented pianist, came on next with his trio. His playing is somewhat in the commercial or pop vein, as is the singing of slim and beautiful Nancy Wilson, who followed him. Many jazz purists were squirming during this hour or so.

Modernist Sonny Rollins, once one of the better tenor saxophonists, showed he has lost his jazz feel in his attempts to experiment. Rollins, disdaining melody and even rhythm, seems to be concerned with sound rather than with music. He did perk up, however, when joined by veteran Hawkins, who doesn't exactly play oldtime tenor although he was with Fletcher Henderson 40 years ago.

Buffs looking for new sounds from Duke Ellington were disappointed. But the old sounds like "Rocking in Rhythm" "Diminuendo and Crescendo in Blue," featuring tenorman Paul Gonsalves, brought the crowd to its feet. Two effective newer arrangements were "Silk Lace," featuring the scholarly calrinet of Jimmy Hamilton, and "Lullaby of Birdland." Man for man, there isn't a band which approaches the Ellington unit for musicianship. Tap dancer Baby Lawrence also did a turn with the unit.

A high school band from Westwood, Mass., opened Sunday night's closing program. Mainly a recording session, the program featured Solal, the Dave Brubeck Quartet, organist Jimmy Smith and his trio, the Herbie Mann Sextet, the John Coltrane Sextet, and singer Dakota Staton backed by a 10-piece band.

And then it was "so long" until next year for assorted jazz fans and critics, who seem to come from stranger and more distant points each year.

A few, but not many, could return for the Newport Folk Festival, also scheduled for Freebody Park Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 26-28, featuring some of the biggest names in the folk field.

Hammond

Americans anymore. The influence is now two ways—we on them, they on us."

Hammond was upped to the post of Director of Talent Acquisitioning for Columbia just two months ago. Prior to that he was music critic for several leading British publications in the '30s, became president of Keynote Records after his discharge from the armed forces in 1946, and his influence on both the performance and appreciation of jazz throughout the world has been consistently powerful.

Biggest single influence on American jazz of late, Hammond contends is the bossa nova. "The bossa nova brought straight melody line back to jazz. I think this was a great height for modern music."

Important O'Seas Mkt.

Running theme occupying Hammond's and Columbia's thinking these days is the overseas market. Principal reason stems from the fact that Columbia is now riding high with a subsid, CBS Records. Columbia initiated CBS Records specifically to hypo overseas sales. Some 557 artists are now heard in 30 different nations on the CBS label or subsidiary thereof.

"Jazz is one of our biggest commodities for overseas consumption," Hammond added happily. "You don't have any language barriers."

Finland's branch of CBS Records is called Oy Musikki-Fazer-Musik Ab, a wholly owned subsidiary. Other fancy names belong to the Japan subsidiary, Nippon Columbia Co. Ltd; Mexico's is Discos CBS; Germany's is CBS Shallplatten Gmb H and in France, it's Arteco.

Asked if, as a result of European participation in jazz, musicians are now instructed to pitch their riffs differently to please foreign tastes, Hammond answered negative. "I just tell them—be yourselves, boys," so it's business as usual. "Don't forget, too, European names have been invited to the Newport concerts since '59."

Skedded for recording in the '63 Newport concert are Thelonius Monk, Dave Brubeck, Paul Winter, Pee Wee Russell, Clark Terry, and French pianist Marthial Solal.

Italo Tango

Celentano's localized version of Ben King's "Stand by Me"—as "Preghero"—hit high in the ratings, much higher, in fact, than the King original, which it also closely resembled. King is now in Italy for series of p.a.'s and recording sessions under the Saar banner, and has taped "Stand by Me" and "Don't Play that Song" (now also recorded in similarly styled Italian by Peppino di Capri) for a RAI-TV show, "Music Hotel."

The "Cantagiro," tour of Italy by a group of competing singers, has received much press and even more public attention, causing several riots in places touched. It winds later this month in Fiuggi, where finals are held and prizes awarded to vets and newcomers with best vote tabs. Organizer Ezio Radaelel providing feature for labor film on traveling event.

Messaggerie Musicali has come up with an effective promotional gimmick. It is sending out 150,000 copies of a 45EP record containing fragments of its "summer songs," featuring Frank Sinatra, Betty Curtis, Lou Monte, Gene Pitney, Connie Francis (in a strong rendering of "Malafemmina"), Rocco Granata, Johnny Dorelli, Tony Williams, Bobby Rydell, Chubby Checker, and many others. Most non-Italian singers (except Sinatra) sing their tunes in Italian, following current trend here. Disk should give dealers a good come-on idea of upcoming fare.

Gadabouting Artists

CGD's version of "Stessa Spiaggia Stesso Mare" in Piero Focaccia version (Italdisc has it also, per Mina) is company's top seller. Company also reports visits from Hans Jecklin, in from Zurich base to talk CGD representation for Switzerland; Betty Curtis to Hamburg for TV tape of German version of her "Canzonetta Romantica."

Jacques Brel in from Paris for some RCA recording stints and a RAI-TV appearance on a new variety stanza. His new ones are "Bruxelles" and "Les Bourgeois." RCA has five in current top 20 pops. Sergio Endrigo's "Se le cose stanno cosi" looks to follow his previous "Io che amo solo te" into hit class. It's a romantic song with haunting trumpet backing.

Ornella Vanoni back to singing after legit interlude and in great shape with "C" Eri anchi tu" (Ricordi), done in her inimitable manner.

Italo fan mag (Sorrisi e Canzoni) shipping a free recording of Peppino di Capri's "Roberta" to all girls who (per birth certificate) can prove they are called that. CAM records reports flood of applicants; average age, 18-20.

A La Italiana

George Chakiris, who recently left for States after winding "Bebo's Girl" here, has recorded two songs in Italian inspired by pic: "La Ragazza di Bube" and "Sei tu Sola" (both CAM).

Francoise Hardy readying two new Italianized songs, to follow up her highly successful "Tous les Garcons," "J'Suis d'accord," etc.: "Le Temps de l'amour," "L'Amour s'en va," "C'est a l'amour augeul je pense," and "Comme tant d'autres."

Inside Stuff—Music

Columbia Records and singer Robert Goulet went all-out for each other during the singer's recent two-week stretch in Los Angeles, where he appeared at the Cocoanut Grove. He waxed the first Christmas LP of the year in Col's studios. Artist & repertoire producer Jim Foglesong flew from New York with conductor-arranger Frank Hunter especially for this session. Goulet was also guest of honor at a cocktail party hosted by Col's local distrib, was a featured guest at the ground breaking for a new Music City store in Torrance, broadcast live from a KMPC helicopter which was taking him to Torrance, was a guest on a Jack Benny CBS-TV show taped for fall airing and taped his first appearance for Steve Allen's syndicated nighttime tv show.

"Sound of Violence: the Juke-Box Rackets" will be reprised by Armstrong Circle Theatre July 17 via CBS-TV. Narrated by Douglas Edwards and written by Art Wallace, the show examines the juke industry from the standpoint of corruption and gangsterism by means of actual events dramatized for tv.

Dimitri Tiomkin, Vet Pic Composer, Cuts 1st Single From His 'Peking' Score

Composer Dimitri Tiomkin, who has written the musical backgrounds for over 140 pix, came into a disk studio last week for the first time to wax a single aimed at the teenage market. Although several of his tunes have stepped out of pix to become disclicks, the writer never actually cut a platter for the singles market until now.

The Tiomkin disk for Columbia Records features two tunes from his score for Samuel Bronston's "55 Days at Peking," "So Little Time" and "Moonfire." Although he has had offers to work in recording studios, the composer says he has avoided working in the disk medium because of heavy film commitments. Further projects with the Col diskery are a possibility.

Stolz Waltzes in From Israel for Berlin Disking

Berlin, July 9.

Vienna "waltz king" - composer-conductor Robert Stolz came here directly from Israel, where he maestroed seven concerts (a return within one year), to conduct a new two-LP album for Ariola (Bertelsman-Disc Club) fall release. It is titled "The Most Beautiful Melodies of Robert Stolz."

Besides the Berlin Symphony Orchestra, Stolz's supporting artists are Rudolf Schock, Erika Koth, Renate Holm, Ferry Gruber, Melitta Muszely, the Cornel Trio, The Sunnies, Monika Dahlberg and others.

Stolz's "From Johann Strauss to Robert Stolz" concerts in Tel Aviv (six at the Freddie Mann Auditorium) and one in Jerusalem have also been put into album form.

Pye Ups Lou Benjamin

London, July 9.

Louis Benjamin, director and general manager of Pye Records, a leading independent diskery, has been upped to the post of managing director.

Benjamin joined Pye in 1953 as sales controller after a varied career in other forms of show biz.

Combo Review

LANCE HARRISON DIXIELAND JAZZ BAND (5)
Pillar and Post, Vancouver, B.C.

When the previous operator could not make it in this small basement bistro dubbed the Pillar and Post by virtue of its unique structural format, Lance Harrison moved in with his Dixieland combo and has been jamming the 110-seater since he opened in May.

Harrison leads on clarinet, sax and banjo, with Jack Fulton on trombone, Don Clark (or Stew Barnett) on trumpet, Frank Mansell at the 88 and Stan Perry on drums. They all have had big band experience in both Canada and the U.S., including local nitery stints at the Cave and Isy's. Their tunes are recognizably simple and the rhythm is free wheeling and infectious.

The quintet's repertoire is basically a Chicago-style Dixieland and a typical set includes classic but seldom-heard tunes such as "That Da Da Strain," Art Castle's "Sobbin' Blues," "South" and "Sidewalk Blues," plus hardy perennials like "Muskrat Ramble" and "When the Saints Go Marching In."

Harrison's remarkable versatility is exemplified in the easy way he shifts from clarinet to tenor or soprano sax and banjo as tune selection dictates, Clark's trumpet supplies the necessary drive while Fulton's trombone provides melodic harmony. Mansell's fine ragtime piano and Perry's steady beat at the drums round out this solid group, and when Barnett sits in for Clark on trumpet on occasion there is no appreciable difference in the sound.

On Friday and Saturday nights youthful femme vocalist Judy Ginn is added and host is personable Bob Smith, whose longrunning "Hot Air" jazz show on CBC radio lends a hip air of authority to his emcee chores. Room policy precludes liquor and admission at $2.25 per head covers snacks and pizza. Doors open at 9 p.m. and place shutters at 4 a.m.

Crowds, as noted, have been good since Harrison and crew moved in and while many find the rhythm okay for dancing, most simply absorb with satisfaction the dynamic Dixie dispensed by this aggregation. Shaw.

'Comedy Calendar' as Hip Tome for Disk Jockeys

Keyed to disk jockey and kindred topical usage, George Schindler's "Days, Dates & Data: A Calendar of Comedy" is, as the title indicates, a compendium of day-by-day information. This is interlarded with gags and comedy.

There are legit historical dates and events but Schindler's dominant accent is for the lighter touch. The jokes like some of the dates are flexible, i.e. interchangeable from one week to another, or even by the month, unless it's strictly of the seasonal genre, viz., Xmas, Easter, 4th of July and the like. Schindler self-publishes via his Show-Biz Comedy Service at $12.50. Withal, a utilitarian manual although some of the dialect jokes will have to be edited or elided. Abel.

Pitt's Civic Arena Urges Skitch Henderson O.O. Its Improved Sound System

Pittsburgh, July 9.

Tony Cortese, promotion director for Pitt's Civic Arena, knew that someone in New York had been "bum rapping" the building because of its sound system but it wasn't until last week that he found out the culprit was Skitch Henderson.

Henderson had worked the Arena with the ill-fated "Evening with George Gershwin" and this show was the first to use the permanent stage. That night the sound was horrible but it was the first time officials and contractors heard it under show conditions and it was rejected by the building. After six months of engineering changes, Stromberg-Carlson finally got all the bugs out and the system was accepted by the authority. The building now has concert hall quality for all its musical presentations.

In his letter to Henderson, Cortese pointed out that the New York Philharmonic was coming in September after a complete checkout by Columbia Artists and that he might ask such stars as George Tozzi, Tony Bennett, Count Basie and Ray Charles how they liked the sound in the building.

Last year, such names as Carol Burnett, Jerry Lewis and Harry Belafonte were happy with the system when they appeared with the Civic Light Opera. But when artists were offered dates in the building and knew Henderson, they were reported to have asked him about the conditions there and invariably he turned thumbs down.

Cortese is confident that his letter to Henderson will have the maestro look more kindly upon the $22,000,000 building and "hope, in the very near future, to be able to put our service and equipment to work in your behalf and await the opportunity to do so."

Compromise Ends Dana's $175,000 Suit Vs. Roulette

Los Angeles, July 9.

In a compromise agreement before Superior Judge Otto M. Kaus, two master tape recordings with skits by Bill Dana will be destroyed. Comedian originally filed $175,000 damage suit against Roulette Records, charging that Roulette had distributed two of his "Jose Jiminez" records without his consent.

Roulette claimed it had bought master tapes in good faith three years ago from the N.Y. Trustee in Bankruptcy for a company to which Dana had sent tapes for possible exploitation purposes. In settlement, the diskery consented to turn over recordings to Bill Dana Productions Inc., and Dana agreed not to make any claim for royalties.

Peter Udell and Gary Geld changed the name of their indie Pogo Music and Pogo Productions to Geld-Udell Music and Geld-Udell Productions.

Brenda Lee, sales mainstay of Decca Records, has inked a new pact with the diskery, the terms of which include over $1,000,000 to be paid to the chirp over a 20-year period. Deal also involves provision for her to appear in films via Universal Pictures, like Decca an MCA subsid. Miss Lee has been a consistent winner in both the singles and LP sweepstakes since her disk debut seven years ago, the entire time of which she has been a Decca pactee.

Mercury: Fabian

After several years under the aegis of Bob Marcucci and the manager's Chancellor Records, singer-actor Fabian has signed a deal with Mercury Records whereby Merc will distribute platters he waxes for his Jaydo producing operation. Merc will be releasing the first two sides under the three-year deal later this month. These sides, incidentally, will be Fabian's first disk entry into the folk field as the tunes will be country-oriented. In order to make the Merc pact, it's understood that Fabian had to buy out of his prior agreement with Marcucci, providing the latter with a $65,000 settlement.

Capitol: Mort Sahl

Comedian Mort Sahl is now on his fourth label with the signing last week of the hipster-comic by Capitol Records. Sahl has spent time on Norman, Reprise and Verve Records prior to this latest move. His deal with Capitol is for three years and he will have an LP out via his new imprint shortly.

Capitol: Johnny Burnette

Johnny Burnette has switched his disk affiliation from Liberty Records to Capitol. He'll cut his first sides for his new imprint shortly under supervision of Jim Economides. Singer's past clicks include "You're Sixteen," "Dreamin," "Little Boy Sad" and others for Liberty.

Warner Bros.: The Marketts

The Marketts have switched to the Warner Bros. label from Liberty. They'll wax under producer Joe Saracino. Femme rockers will cut both singles and LPs under their new affiliation and are prepping an album for fall release. Group's current single is "Woody Wagon."

Columbia: Ernie Hecksher

Ernie Hecksher, society bandleader at Frisco's Fairmont Hotel for years, has swung from Verve Records to Columbia. Batoneer last week sliced his first shellac for Col in Hollywood studio, an album with arrangements by Van Alexander. Col's Coast chief, Irv Townsend, supervised.

Smash: The Angels

The Angels, femme vocal trio that recorded "Till" and "Cry Baby Cry" on the Caprice label, has signed a long-term recording pact with Smash Records, the Mercury subsid. Their recordings will still be independently produced by FGG Productions. First release for Smash will be "My Boyfriend's Back" b/w "Love Me Now." In the past five or six weeks, Smash had also signed Kenny Dino and Ivory Joe Hunter.

Brighton: Honey Sanders

Legit singer-actress Honey Sanders has been signed by Brighton Records. Her first session, "Johnny Guitar, My Restless Lover" and "Some Like It Cool," will be arranged and conducted by Broadway musical director Pembroke Davenport. Plans call for the songstress to wax 12 addifional tunes for release as an album this fall. Following her initial disk session the chirp leaves for a strawhat musical tour.

Columbia: Chuck Rondell & the Sorensen Bros.

New vocal group of Chuck Rondell & the Sorensen Bros. has been inked by Columbia Records. The unit came to the diskery's attention via a detective who is working on the site of the company's new plant, under construction in Santa Monica. He passed a tape of the group to Col a&r execs.

N. Y. Nitery Ops Rediscover Art of Bonifacing—Stress Personal Touch

The art of bonifacing is returning in New York niteries. The smaller spots which long have been unable to buy names are suddenly finding that there are still many assets that can be publicized into increased business. The new stress is on personal attention for the customers by the owner. Some feel it's as potent a pitch for repeat trade as a performer who catches on.

With the advent of names as the major attraction in cafes, many owners receded into the background. Some were rarely seen around their establishments. Others confined their activities backstage and in the office. Comparatively few greeted the customers personally, listened to the varied praises and beefs of the customers and took steps to rectify the latter.

Indications are that this is now changing throughout the industry. Many owners are being seen more frequently and some have even been known to order a round of drinks on the house for favored parties. These practices have been known to pay off in the form of repeat trade even during the same show.

Yorkville's 'Mein Host'

Personal hosting is especially evident in the smaller New York niteries. Many have taken the viewpoint that the smallseaters cannot afford performers with a following, and therefore must build one themselves. Although the Yorkville spots have had a picturesque breed of boniface for the past few years, it's hinted that the owners will be even a greater draw in their own spots.

A Yorkville newcomer, Henry Butz, who recently bought the Grinzing, for example, is an accomplished musician who plays the drums and accordion and spends the bulk of his time serenading the customers.

Butz changed the format from a batch of girl singers to a single performer with some repute. Moreover, he's relying a great deal on his own efforts rather than those of performers in his bid for increased biz.

Also in Yorkville, Max Loew, a Continental from way back, spends a great deal of time giving personal attention to customers. He's one of the few nitery owners skilled in the

Los Angeles, July 9.

"Wilt the Stilt" Chamberlain, erstwhile Frisco Warriors basketball player, has taken over ownership of local Basin Street West from Herb Greenberg.

Nitery, currently featuring Dinah Washington, has booked top jazz attractions since it opened a year ago. Ish Evans will be general manager.

Chamberlain for several years has owned Small's Paradise in New York's Harlem.

ITA Slates Tieup With Stix Ag'cies To Hypo Com'l Biz

International Talent Associates, New York-based agency which has been spreading in recent months into tv and films, has set into motion a plan whereby it would deliver artists and production material to out-of-town agencies for development of commercials and such in the hinterland markets.

ITA's Dick Birkmayer and Arnold Brown, head of Arnold Brown Associates, tv-radio commercial production firm repped by the agency, were in Cleveland a few weeks ago for exploratory talks with out-of-town commercial producers, many of whom are located in the Cleveland area.

Reps of several hinterland percenteries came to Cleveland to discuss the plan which would help the out-of-towners compete with the larger Gotham and Coast plants now handling a lion's share of the commercial biz.

The ITA tieup with the hinterland outfits would give the midwesterners a direct line to New York and production sources there, plus contact with the bigger operations in securing talent and preparing productions. So far, it's reported, several out-of-town offices are interested in the plan, but no specific deals have been set.

ITA has been fairly active in the commercial field with clients like the Brothers Four who presently do spots for Viceroy Cigarettes, the Limeliters who used to rep L&M cigs and, most recently, the Journeymen who have been inked via the agency to be the spokesmen for Schlitz Beer. Latter deal was recently made with the Leo Burnett Agency in Chicago. The folk group has already recorded and filmed its first sessions for the agency.

Other recent ITA deals include the setting of Judy Henske and the Brothers Four for roles in Sam Katzman's Metro pic, "Hootenanny," which begins lensing next Wednesday (10). Miss Henske has also been inked for CBS' "Judy Garland Show," whose first taping will be this Sunday (7), and Peter Roberts has been set for a new three-year deal as WOR, N. Y., radio personality.

Refurbished Conn. House Preems Full-Wk. Vaude

East Haddam, Conn., July 9.

The Goodspeed Opera House, recently refurbished for theatrical presentations, opened its first full-week vaudeville bill last night (Tues.) with a seven-act card which called for a midterm intermission. Layout, booked by vet agent Mark Leddy, includes The Valenos, Grant (a magico), Bobbi Martin, Bob Lewis, George Carl, Gil Horner and The Wallace Bros.

Lewis and the Wallace Bros. appeared in both halves of the bill.

Balmy Skies Perk A.C. Holiday Take

Atlantic City, July 9.

The long Fourth of July holiday and ideal weather boomed business. Some resort operators asserted that trade rose as much as 30% over the similar 1962 period.

George A. Hamid Jr., who with his father owns the Steel Pier, said that business there was up at least 20% on Independence Day, while the following day it was 30% better. These percentage figures were approximately the same for Saturday and Sunday to give the pier one of its best Fourth of July periods in its history.

The sharp rise in patrons held good for most businesses in the resort, including amusements, hotels and restaurants. Louis St. John at the Central Pier called business 22% better while Robert McAllister at the Steeplechase rated it 15 to 18% ahead. Night club and motion picture operators also were heartened with the influx.

The city provided a fireworks display from the ends of the city-owned Garden Pier and the Million dollar Pier on Thursday night. All seasonal spots are now in full operation with several new places seeking the vacationists' dollar.

"Hello-Goodbye!" with a cast of six, opened Friday night (5) in "Theater in the Sky" atop Hotel Madison to fair notices. A modern burlesqued takeoff of the Cinderella tale, it's combination of a revue, vaudeville and musical.

'63 N.M. STATE FAIR ON OATER STAR KICK

Albuquerque, July 9.

Lots more alfalfa circuit stars are in the finalized entertainment lineup for the 1963 New Mexico State Fair, as okayed by members of the fair commission at a board session held here last week.

Show is set Sept. 12-22, with rodeo competitions on nine nights. Film, tv and disk artists will be sandwiched between the bulls and wild broncos. Singer-actor Jimmy Wakely repeats again this year as emcee all nine nights, a task he's held four of last five years at the expo.

Other oater stars set for the show include Doug McClure, tv western actor, Sept. 14; Red Foley & Minnie Pearl, hillbilly singers, Sept. 17-18, and Rex Allen, film-tv actor-singer, Sept. 19-20.

Filling in will be some pop singers. Among them will be Anita Bryant, Sept. 12-13, and the Andrews Sisters, Sept. 15-16. Don Ameche's International Showtime TV Circus is set for two performances on the final two nights of the fair, Sept. 21-22, sans any rodeo cowboy competitions.

Must Integrate New Orleans Aud

New Orleans, July 9.

A three-juge Federal Court has ordered desegregation of the Municipal Auditorium and declared a 1956 Louisiana anti-racial law unconstitutional on its face. The 1956 law requires segregated seating at athletic and entertainment events.

In handing down the decision, the court stated that "New Orleans here and now must adjust to the reality of having to operate desegregated public facilities."

"Time has run out. There is no defense left. There is no excuse left, no excuse which a court, bound by respect for the rule of law, could now ligitimize as legal justification for a city's continued segregation of governmental facilities."

The court granted a preliminary injunction Wed. (3) which restrains the city from continuing a policy of segregation at the auditorium.

The injunction, sought on behalf of officers of the New Orleans branch of the Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, grew out of the city's denial of the use of the auditorium to the NAACP in 1962 for a membership meeting.

Ashton to Produce Nude Show at Castaways, L.V.

Las Vegas, July 9.

Barry Ashton has been signed to produce a 30-girl nudie show for the new Castaways Hotel, where Garwood Van is entertainment director.

The Castaways, formerly the Sans Souci, has been taken over by Ben Jaffe, landlord of the Tropicana, who also owns the Castaways in Florida. He is adding 178 rooms to the 85 now open.

The casino, headed by Everett McCarlie, aims for a Sept. 1 opening.

Panto Tradition Defers to Today's Space Cadets

London, July 9.

Britain's traditional pantomime gets a sharp setback with news that the London Palladium's Christmas show will be a Robert Nesbitt production called "The Man in the Moon." Leslie Macdonnell, Moss' Empire boss, stressed that the decision did not mean, necessarily, that the Moss' Empires circuit was through with pantomime.

"But," said Macdonnell, "Children these days are very space minded and probably know and care more about astronauts than about "Cinderella" or "Puss In Boots." 'Man In The Moon' will have all the things needed for a good Christmas show. Entertainment, laughs, spectacle and music."

The scifi musical is still in the embryo stage, with no completed book and no cast engaged. But it is skedded to open on December 23 and, if it clicks, it will probably go into the provinces following a long Palladium run.

Texas' Progress In Desegregation

Dallas, July 9.

Racial curtain that has existed for decades between Negroes and whites in Texas' hotels, restaurants, theatres and other public facilities is gradually and calmly being raised. In many areas where strict segregation was once enforced a Negro is no longer refused service because of his skin.

Demonstrations have been scarce. Violence has been almost nil.

In many cases, desegregation in Texas has been strictly voluntary, with a marked increase since recent uprisings in troubled southern cities.

A survey among the 10 top Texas cities reveal that most of the cities' theatres are integrated now.

In Dallas the State Fair Music Hall admits Negroes as well as all local theatres.

All theatres in San Antonio are desegregated as well as in El Paso, Corpus Christi, Amarillo, Beaumont. Still barring Negroes are theatres in Waco, and several other cities including Laredo.

Redcross Joins Newly Formed TAM as V.P.

Bob Redcross has joined the newly formed Transworld Artists Management as veepee. Transworld will specialize in the personal management of musical performers, especially those in the gospel field.

Redcross had been road manager for Billy Eckstine and Frankie Lymon. As veepee of Transworld, he'll start working with Marion Williams, Alex Bradford and Princess Stewart; who for the past year-and-a-half have been starred in "Black Nativity," which ends its European tour this summer, prior to a 40-week U.S. tour starting in September.

Names Eye Catskills as Big Hotels Up Act Budgets to Meet Stiff Competish

Name acts are eying the Catskill Mt. belt of New York in ever increasing numbers. Indication of the growing hill-country budgets is seen by the talent lineups of the two largest hotels in the area. Eddie Fisher, who got his start at the Grossinger Hotel, Grossinger, played that inn over the weekend following July 4, and its arch rival, The Concord, blew itself to one of the most expensive talent parlays in its history.

On the holiday, the Concord had Milton Berle and on Saturday (6) it had a layout topped by Robert Goulet and Carol Lawrence which was large enough to warrant an intermission. The Wiere Bros. and the Step Bros. were the show's other components.

The trend toward bigger shows in the rustic area is also evidenced by the fact that the larger booker of the region, Charlie Rapp, has been combining acts into units. The Juan Carlos Copes Argentine Ballet, merged with several Latin turns, has been touring several of Rapp's hotels, and he has another Latin unit topped by Diosa Costello. In addition, a flock of standard names have been plying the hills, many of them playing two hotels a night. Thus, the paychecks this year during the four-day holiday have been higher than they have been in years over a similar period.

As the hotels get larger, the talent requirements expand. The Concord, for example, has about 1,500 rooms and Grossinger's a somewhat lesser amount. The Brown and Raleigh hotels in the same area are also kingsized and now find huge talent outlays necessary. Other Catskill inns have also been forced to seek out names as competition from the top spots becomes more fierce.

Some hotels have been able to keep down the nut by sharing their headliners with other inns that evening. Thus, one performer working two different spots the same night will frequently slice

Miniature Golf, Wrestling Help Old Orchard Beach Tally $4½-Mil Annual Biz

Old Orchard Beach, Me., July 9.

Gay, gaudy Old Orchard Beach, Maine's answer to Coney Island, is again painted awaiting face and awaits its thousands of summer visitors. Old Orchard is as well known to Montrealers as Mount Royal. During the summer months its 4,580 year-round population grows to almost 100,000 with a majority of the visitors Canadians.

It's almost impossible to operate any type of business here without French speaking help.

Yesteryear, name bands all played the Pier here. But miniature golf and wrestlers have taken over. This season, however, the Palace Ballroom has booked several top bands and rock 'n' roll acts in another effort to compete with Massachusetts' Revere and Salisbury Beaches.

Bobby Rydell moves in July 3 followed by Stan Kenton & Orch, July 5; Johnny & the Hurricanes, July 10; Peter, Paul & Mary, July 20; Bobby Dee, July 24; Maynard Ferguson Orch, Aug. 2; The Dovells, Aug. 7; The Beach Boys, Aug. 14; Lionel Hampton & Orch, Aug. 23; Everly Bros., Aug. 24, and The Four Seasons, Aug. 31.

"Sun, Sea and Fun" are the ingredients which bring an estimated $4,500,000 worth of business into this community annually. More than 3,000 are employed during the summer compared with a local winter job figure of about 250. There are more than 150 hotels, motels and rooming heuses, and almost double that number of beer parlors, restaurants and cocktail lounges.

Marlene's Mexico Stint

Mexico City, July 9.

Marlene Dietrich opened a 10-day stand Thursday (4) at the Terrazzo Casino.

'Drum' Beats at Vegas T'bird Until Labor Day

The current legit musical, "Flower Drum Song," at the Thunderbird Hotel, Las Vegas, will remain until Labor Day. At that time a 10-week show will be installed until the doubleheader, "High Button Shoes" and "Anything Goes," begins around Dec. 20. Dick Shawn has been inked to do the comedy lead in both shows.

Monte Proser, producer at The Thunderbird, is currently in New York shopping for the interim musical, and looking for additional talent for the upcoming legit twosome.

Ford Tunes Up 7 Variety Units For '64 Line Unveiling

Chicago, July 9.

Ford Motor Co. is prepping its annual variety cavalcade to promote its line of 1964 autos to dealers and distributors throughout the country, and this year it will be kicked off by a main announcement show at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu. Six other variety units will tour the U.S. along with a film produced by Wilding Inc., which is also putting together the shows.

The Hawaiian fete takes place Aug. 25 and 30 and Sept. 3. Vic Damone headlines, along with Carmen Cavallaro, the New Christy Minstrels, Jaye P. Morgan, Toni Steele Dancers, an orchestra and the film that introduces the new line. Dealers qualified for the trip to Hawaii through a sales contest run by E. M. McDonald Co., the sales promotion firm that made overtures to purchase Wilding a few months ago.

The 36 district shows (plus one management show in Detroit) will be split between six traveling units, consisting of a singer, six dancers, a musical unit and the film. The sextet of thrushes to topline the traveling units are Fran Warren, Marion Marlowe, Diane Hall, Anita Ray, Louise O'Brien, Molly Bee and Betty Madigan. All the shows are being produced for Wilding by Chet O'Brien.

Ford is reluctant to discuss the cost of the entire operation, but it's estimated that shows will run up a tab similar to that of last year.

INDO-RUSSO CIRCUS ACTS EXCHANGE TOURS

Bombay, July 9.

An Indian Circus Team is en route to Moscow and will tour Red towns and cities as part and parcel of regular Russian Circus over a period of three months.

In this connection, a small team of Russian acrobats played with an Indian Circus troupe in Bombay and other cities earlier this year.

B-Girl Raps Shutter Two Hub Niteries for 2 Wks.

Boston, July 9.

Two Hub niteries, accused of B-girl activities by the gendarmes in May, and recently on a big name jazz kick, were ordered to shutter for two weeks starting Monday (15).

The Boston Licensing Board took the action Tuesday (2) against the Gilded Cage and the Tic Toc Lounge, both under the same management. During a May 29 hearing, a vice squad patrolman told the board that he was asked by waitresses and femme entertainers to buy them drinks at the spots.

Owner Alan Swartz informed the board that he has now eliminated all femme entertainers and waitresses and features only male jazz bands. The lifting of the licenses for the two week period comes at the dullest time of year in the nitery trade in Hub.

Black Bros.' 'Big Show of 1963' Highlights the New Season at Blackpool, Eng.

Blackpool, Eng., July 9.

Billy Cotton's show band, Jimmy Edwards, and the King Bros. topped the lavish layout in George & Alfred Black's "Big Show of 1963," which started for the season last week in this holiday town. It is the major show of this English resort and will be followed in August by a production topped by comedian Max Bygraves, now at the Alhambra, Glasgow.

Other revues which have opened incude "The Five-Star Show" at the nearby Winter Gardens Pavilion, with David Whitfield, Pinky & Perky, the Dallas Boys, Vernons Girls, Maria Neglia, Derek Dene, Hope & Keen, the Fred Iles Trio, and the Starlight Girls. It's also a Black Bros. production.

Jimmy Clitheroe, Peter Butterworth and Albert Burdon are English comedy actors in a comedy, "We're Frying Tonight," at the Grand Theatre, and also under the banner of Geo. & Alfred Black. An ice revue, "Ice Parade of 1963," presented by Leonard Thompson, is at the Icedrome.

Other shows are on North and Central Piers, at the Queen's Theatre, Tower Circus, and ABC Theatre. Operating costs of the town's live show biz program is estimated at $900,000.

N. Y. Nightclub Biz In Summer Slump

Night club owners do not expect New York to be much of a summer festival this year. They are witnessing the unpleasant sight of customers leaving town for the resorts, and an insufficient amount of visitors replacing them. Much of this woe is attributed to the New York World's Fair set to open next April. The café men believe that many who would normally come to New York this year are holding off for next season to get a greater money's worth.

This is especially evident by the decreased amount of tours hitting the niteries, according to some owners. There is less bulk business this season than at any summer in years. The tours that have come into the night clubs are not as heavily populated as those in former years. And there have been many evenings when the amount of trade from that source was negligible.

The past July 4 holiday saw summer business at one of the lower levels. In fact, several niteries anticipated this low point by staying closed. The Royal Box of the Americana closed for one week following Eddie Fisher's exit on Tuesday (1) to Della Reese's bow yesterday (9).

The Persian Room of the Plaza Hotel also remained closed all last week and reopened Monday (8) with Betty Johnson headlining. The Blue Angel will relight tomorrow (Thurs.). The Copacabana also anticipated that this summer would not pay dividends. However, operator Jules Podell made it a summer policy to have an opening every two weeks as a constant peg for publicity.

In former years, the Memorial Day, July 4 and Labor Day holidays saw thousands of tourists hitting New York which compensated for the loss of native business to resorts. This year there has been no such influx. Some blame the fair, others the loss of major conventions (also waiting for the fair), while some blame conditions generally. But whatever the reason, the downbeat is not one that will promote prosperity.

New York hotels had some lift this week with the gettogether of the Jehovah's Witnesses. However, the observation made during their confab of several years ago evidently still applies. "They came with $10 and the Ten Commandments and broke neither."

Pat O'Brien Beats July 3 Deadline To Run Vs. Adams for AGVA Prexy

Actor Pat O'Brien will run against incumbent Joey Adams for the presidency of the American Guild of Variety Artists. O'Brien's acceptance came in before the July 3 deadline to give Adams the first opposition he has had for the office in two years.

Adams' perennial opponent, Penny Singleton, had been declared ineligible to run following a 10-year suspension and the union ruled that Paul Valentine wasn't nominated. Dick Gregory and Jack Haley were the other nominees. But Haley indicated he didn't want the post and will run as first veepee.

O'Brien's acceptance gives the AGVA insurgents a complete ticket for the first time in many years. There is now opposition in all posts. He is also running for national board member at large.

Haley vs. Gus Van

Haley will have as his opposition for the first vicepresidency former AGVA prexy Gus Van. Nominations for second veepee are Harry Richman, Buddy Walker and Johnny Woods. Running for third veepee are Charlie Brett, Candy Candido, Billy Grant, Billy Lee, Armand Marion, John Shirley and Paul Valentine. For recording secretary, Linda Compton, Carlo Corelli, Roy Rogers, and Sally Winthrop are the nominees. Frank Ross, Russell Swann and Arthur Tracey are pitted against each other for treasurer.

Board members from Atlanta nominees are Mattie King, George Petras and Ruth Weber; Buffalo, Paul Benson and Joey Woods; Detroit, Bill Hart, Tommy Timblin and Al Tucker; Kansas City, Louis Bond, Barbara Clinton, Buddy Hughes and Harry Otto; Philadelphia, Dick Jones and Harry (Lifty) Lewis; Providence, Joe Forte and Dick Martin; San Francisco, Ernie Fast, Jimmy Jamerson and Vince Silk.

Candidates at large for the national board of which 15 are to be elected are Will Ahern, Olga Alexcago), Lew Black, Charlie Brett, Eddie Burnett, Russ Byrd, George Church, Lenny Collier, Leonard Connor, Carlo Corelli, Sally De May, Joe Evans, Larry Ford, Jimmy Francis, Joaquin Garay, Don George, Johnny Gibson, Gus Gor-

Damita Jo Loses $2,400 In Furs to A.C. Thieves

Atlantic City, July 9.

Thieves entered the beachfront hotel suite at Hotel Ambassador ocupied by Damita Jo, who was appearing with the Larry Steele show at Club Harlem, and stole furs valued at $2,400.

Jewelry in the rooms was untouched. The singer, who reported the theft to police Wednesday (3), closed her engagement at Harlem same night and left next day for a date at Grossinger's in the Catskills.

'Hootenanny' Capacity $5,100 At Vancouver Bowl

Vancouver, July 9.

With 5,100 paid admissions at $1 per head, "Hootenanny Under The Stars" in Stanley Park's outdoor Malkin Bowl last Sunday (30) proved the biggest entertainment draw of 1963 in Vancouver to date and a successful gamble for promoter Howie Bateman.

Bateman, who operates the folk-oriented Inquisition coffee house, promoted the outdoor venture in cooperation with CHQM radio and assembled 12 acts for the three-hour show. The forecast called for unsettled weather conditions and to cover the possibility of rain Bateman took an option on the 2,800-seat Queen Elizabeth Theatre and sold that many advance tickets.

The hold on the Q.E. had to be confirmed or released by four p.m. on Sunday and at three p.m., with the sun shining brilliantly. Bateman phoned the theatre and cancelled. At four p.m. the deluge of rain came and the promoter was almost ill. But the clouds literally had a silver lining, the rains stopped, the sun came out again, and at 8 p.m. the bowl was jam packed with all 4,281 seats filled, aisles and grass slopes crammed and more than 2,500 still outside gates and unable to get in.

While the Hoot clearly demonstrated that entertainment at $1 a copy can't go wrong, it confirmed the increasing impression that folk singing is big with the masses. Of the 12 acts on stage, individual folk singers who clicked strongly were Ed McCurdy, Bud Spencer and Bill Roberts. The Clansmen and the Cumberland Four were the pick of the groups and satirist Dave Broadfoot, the only non-ethnic on the bill, had the crowd roaring at his Canadian humor.

Bateman plans a repeat on Aug. 5, a Monday when Theatre Under The Stars has its off night.

NEW BOOKING TIE AIDS SCOT VAUDE HOUSES

Glasgow, July 9.

New booking tie between the Pavilion Theatre here and the coast vaudery of Ayr Gaiety means more scope for interchange of vaude talent in Scotland. It stems from appointment of Eric Popplewell, joint-owner of the Ayr theatre, as a director of the Pavilion. He will now be in charge of casting for the Glasgow theatre.

The Ayr Gaiety is a w.k. vaude nursery and has shaped many little-known artists for stardom in Glasgow and London. According to Popplewell, the switch means that a large performer pool is immediately available for both theatres. It also helps to ensure the continued stay-open policy for the Pavilion, which may take on a new look in its lineup of shows.

"We will be trying to develop the Pavilion into a No. 1 music-hall," Popplewell told VARIETY. The Pavilion-Gaiety pool system will now enable performers to be retained for a summer season at Ayr and a winter at Glasgow, thus bridging gaps which occur frequently at present.

Steve & Eydie Deny They Breached Rochester Pact, Claim Promoter Reneged

Singers Steve Lawrence & Eydie Gorme have levelled a series of countercharges against Rochester (N.Y.) promotor Dennis Ritz and his "Stars for a Summer Night." Ritz previously filed a $150,000 breach of contract suit against the couple, claiming that they walked out on a scheduled date for him on June 14.

Lawrence and Miss Gorme contend that Ritz breached the contract by failing to fulfill conditions stipulated in the pact. Ken Greengrass, the couple's personal manager, and also a party to Ritz's suit, claimed that the promoter was unprepared to put on, or even rehearse a show and his clients were prevented from performing because of the lack of preparation.

According to Greengrass, no arrangements had been made for rehearsals. Contract called for eight hours of rehearsal time over two days. A hotel room was to have been made available. But it was only through the help of a local agent, Art Argyries, that the couple were able to get a local ballroom in which to ready their act.

Greengrass also asserted that the stage which was to have been built in the Red Wing Stadium, scene of the concert, was not constructed. Nor were there chairs or lights for the musicians. In addition, there was no piano, no stagelights ordered and the sound system was not installed because the promoter allegedly had not paid for the system.

Because of these factors, Greengrass declared, he felt that Ritz himself had breached the contract by failing to carry out conditions stipulated in the agreement. Greengrass said that he felt justified in advising his clients to leave.

House Review

Olympia, Paris

Paris, July 9.

Bruno Coquatrix presentation of a musical revue, "Cherchez La Femme" (Look For the Woman) in 40 scenes and two acts. Stars Coccinelle; features Little John, Najarros (4), Playboys (4), Harry Mimmo, Pierre Doris, Roselyne Roy, Robert Riquet, Sylvana Blasi, Bernard Dumaine, Olivieri, Adorables (10), Ravissantes (6), Boys Team (5), Michele Alba; book and lyrics, Andre Hornez; music, Paul Anka, Gilbert Becaud, Bruno Coquatrix, Michel-Louis Bernard, Andre Horne, Pierre Delanoe, Jacques Martin; staging, choreography and costumes by Luska; sets, Jacques Cherix; musical direction, Daniel Janin. Opened June 25, '63 at Olympia Music Hall, Paris; $5 top.

Vaude, except for video, is practically dead in the U.S. but very much alive here. With summer a death knell for straight two-a-day, most houses revert to revues to keep open. Olympia is doing it with Coccinelle a noted man-turned-woman, legally as well as showbizwise, headlining its show.

Now except in smoky boites, where tourists have the delicious feel of acceptable wickedness, femme travesty numbers are usually a gag mainstay of revues and frequently turn up in an offbeat film. Producer Bruno Coquatrix has built his show around Coccinelle who takes the boards for the first time. However, she's known by tourists, especially Yanks, from her days at the old Le Carrousel nitery.

There is no doubt that many will go to see her. She is no longer male for she has been married and legally has the monicker of Jacqueline Dufresnoy on the biological switcheroo bit. And they will not be disappointed. She shows all in a strip number and her best crack during a stroll through the audience in a revealing dress is to the effect that the bosoms are firm and in place since they are quite new, only four years old.

And this hormone-laden miss can walk down the perennial staircase with the feather costume, do an interlude with draping her own dresses, and give out purring songs in a husky, veiled voice that seems querulously feminine albeit still containing a travesty tone. She manages to make the freakish pull an asset and does acceptably as a femcee in this show.

Olympia director Bruno Coquatrix has wisely not tried to ape the classic Folies-Bergere and Casino De Paris via unique mechanical effects and nudes. He has stuck to the general format of production numbers interspersed by acts. However, he has also stamped the revue with the Olympia pattern via a rock & roll interlude, well chosen house acts and a comedy patter duo to intro the numbers.

This gives it appeal for young and old locals and also throws in nudes for the expectant outlanders plus the usual can-can number. Coccinelle acquits herself well and shows what will and hormones can do over nature.

Little John does his smooth and dextrous balancing on a cane. The Najarros have a hefty woman, two husky daughters and the small husband giving out with a gay knockabout acro act that has know-how in its balancing and execution.

Harry Mimmo imitates various type nationalities walking, along with impressions of noted American terpers and tapdancers. He also raises this to a good comic level via his irrepressible risible patter and earthy showmanship. This is an old style act that still is as fetching as ever.

Sylvana Blasi, Roselyne Roy and Robert Piquet do acceptable song intros to numbers or spots on their own. Pierre Doris and Bernard Dumaine do yeoman comic patter and presentation work abetted by the low comic appearances of fall guy Olivieri.

Adorables (10) are a smooth dance group and are well backed by the Boys Team (5) and the Ravissantes (6) who can also terp as well as add to the show's nudity. Sets by Jacques Cherix are wisely suggestive and economical but blend well with the colorful costumes of Luska.

Luska has also done neat choreography for this kind of show, with a deeper and slimmed down modern ballet in a takeoff of the esoteric pic, "Last Year in Marienbad," that clicks and reveals a solid dancer in Michele Alba. Playboys (4) register in a well conceived rock medley.

This show appears likely to be the first Olympia revue to run through the summer since Josephine Baker's a few years ago. It has something for curious youngsters, who may come in, as well as the oldsters on its general adherence to pattern. Mosk.

Meader Shapes New Act Away From JFK Routine

Vaughn Meader is attempting to expand his comedic scope by working on a new act which will involve skits. He will have Bucky Searles and Donna Jean Young with him in a new turn to be unveiled in the fall. Gary Belkin is scripting.

Meader takes the view that he shouldn't hinge all his efforts on his President Kennedy impersonation. He has been doing less JFK in recent weeks, sticking only to the press conference bit and expanding topical humor. He'll break in the new solo bits in a September tour of U.S. Army bases in Germany.

Andy Williams Mopping Up in N'west—Hits 150G Sellout Before Tour Rolls

Seattle, July 9.

Andy Williams is big in the Pacific Northwest, with a three-city, 12-performance tour sold out before it began in Portland Friday (5) and a gross take for the tour of more than $150,000.

Booked by Northwest Releasing Corp., Williams, with the Henry Mancini orchestra and the New Christy Minstrels, played to SRO houses at the Paramount, Portland, July 5-6, opening at the Opera House here Monday (8). Seattle stand, virtually SRO before opening, runs through Saturday, with added show that night at 11 p.m.

The two performances in Portland Civic Auditorium grossed $32,000. Three in Vancouver at the Queen Elizabeth Theatre, July 15-16, are SRO with $35,000 in till and Seattle stand looks to do $90,000 or more, according to Zollie Volchok, NWR topper (with Jack Engerman). Sellout before tour began is unprecedented, Volchok said.

'Establishment' Back To Strollers After Tour

"The Establishment," the satirical revue imported from England which has run for 300 performances at The Strollers, N.Y., will close for the summer this Saturday (13) and will relight Sept. 9 with a new fall edition "The Establishment, Round 2."

The performers, John Bird, Jeremy Geidt, Eleanor Bron, John Fortune and Carol Simpson, have been pacted for Toronto's Eaton Auditorium, July 29 to Aug. 7, and the Fisher High School Auditorium, Ottawa, Aug. 8 for three days. They follow with a four-weeker at the hungry i, San Francisco, starting Aug. 12.

his normal price because of the greater overall take.

However, the July 4 holiday, which had many inns filled to capacity, was not a prognostication of things to come. Many felt that the intense heat in New York City preceding the holiday forced some families to dip into the regular vacation budget. This holiday period also had some hotels moaning the blues on the ground that sales figures were below last year.

The fact is, some say, that the major business is going to the larger hotels. The feeling is that unless some of the smaller inns expand their capacity so that they too can afford headliners, they'll continue to lose out to the big hotels.

Normally July 4 is the portent of things to come in the mountains. However, despite the generally good business in many spots, it's believed that this will not be a blockbuster summer in the hills. Competition from other areas for the younger trade has manifested itself.

The cruise ships are plying the seas at capacity during the summer. European travel is also cutting in. Many innkeepers feel that they need names to help them overcome both domestic and foreign competition, but become discouraged at the prices now being asked by those who can help turn the tide.

Inside Stuff—Vaude

Lorain Manners (Mrs. Georgie) Price, divorced wife of the comedian-stockbroker and onetime prez of AGVA, who died in Mexico City on June 26, created redtape problems for her kin, among them Mrs. Penny Larsen, their daughter, who resides in New Hope, Pa., and is correspondent for VARIETY in Bucks County. Miss Manners belied her 53 years at her death and her passing was sudden, presumably as result of a heart attack. Besides the paperwork involving the U. S. Consulate and the hospital, there were such other petty complications as "two Mexican undertakers fighting over the remains," according to Mrs. Larsen, who adds, "I think Lorain would have appreciated all the drama."

Liquor taxes in Georgia are the highest in the nation. Last year the industry paid the state $14,300,000 in taxes and another $4,800,000 to local governments. This explains why 86 proof legal whiskey costs around $1.25 per drink in niteries and dineries, and clubs with bars in operation. There is a tax of $2.95 a fifth of whiskey, or 56% of the retail purchase price.

Camels, hired from Chipperfield's Circus, will be ridden by men from the Jordan Arab Army at the Military Tattoo at Edinburgh International Festival which begins in August. Over 100 members of the desert patrol, including 50 military bandsmen and a 40-strong pipe and drum band, will take part. They are replacing French naval pipers who were to have played this year, but will now appear in the 1964 tattoo.

The desert men can't bring their camels with them because of quarantine and travel difficulties, hence the decision to hire from Chipperfield's, one of Britain's top circuses. The patrolmen will ride the camels round the ancient esplanade of Edinburgh Castle. Cast of 750 performers at the 1963 Tattoo will also include Gurkhas, Irish Guardsmen, and men of the Royal Army Medical Corps and many Scot regiments. More than half of the 200,000 tickets for the 28 performances have already been sold. The tattoo will run from Aug. 16 to Sept. 7. Six performers are already sold out.

art of kissing hands. In this era, it's a different experience for femmes. Helen & George Eberhard, of the House of Vienna, are rarely out of sight in front of the house. In Greenwich Village, Trude Heller of the Versailles and Eighth Wonder, has become a personality.

Even in Big Cafes

Even in the larger spots, there is a greater stress on personal activity of the owners or executives. For example, Eddie Risman, the Latin Quarter's general manager, is often at a table on the balcony overlooking the operation. Jack Silverman, of the International, is frequently seen near the door and is first to greet customers. Even Jules Podell, of the Copacabana, is seen extending a rough, but hearty set of greetings from a vantage point. Max Gordon is constantly at the Blue Angel.

Bonifaces have come to believe that an absentee owner is a detriment to a nitery. They have taken the leaf from yesteryear operators that the eternal vigilance of an owner is necessary for many reasons. One of which is greeting the customers, and another is keeping the help in line.

The restaurateurs have never abandoned personal attention, which many say is one reason why many straight eateries have been able to meet the stiff competition of niteries even though the price differential is negligible. Again, the collapse of the expense account economy makes it mandatory that the owners give more attention to their livelihood.

They are studying and looking over every facet of the operation. Many have found that it's better for all concerned. Everybody gets a better deal. The help performs more efficiently, service is better, and the customer is frequently flattered by the fuss made over him.

presented Wednesdays and Thursdays, with two shows on Friday and Saturday. Ben Tarver is general manager for Ronalee Productions, which is presenting the attraction.

At the new Deauville Hotel's Westminster hall the Gilbert & Sullivan "Mikado" was the first offering of the Music Carnival which will bring in similar shows according to boxoffice results.

New on the bistro scene is Basin Street, a spot which has never gone over too well under a number of names. Harold Abrams teed off with Tommy Edwards, Thelma Carpenter, Sarah McLawler trio featuring Richard Otto and the Flamingos.

Lionel Hampton was moved into the Hialeah while Billy Daniels replaced Damito Jo as the Club Harlem headliner. Lou Monte and Alan Kent came into the 500 Club. Jack Jones, Kay Carole, Bat Morrisey and the Four Tops are at LeBistro. Gene Baylos and Tommy Leonetti head the show at the Black Orchid, now a restaurant club.

Proser's Showmanship Punches Up Sonny Liston's Vegas Training Hqtrs.

By FORREST DUKE

Las Vegas, July 9.

Monte Proser has used his veteran showmanship to add glamor to Sonny Liston's training headquarters at the Thunderbird Hotel which he describes as "unlike anything else in the world."

Liston is training at the hotel, where Proser's production of "Flower Drum Song" is current. Floyd Patterson, his opponent in the July 22 rematch of their world championship heavyweight fisticuffs go, skedded for the Convention Center here, is loosening up daily at the Dunes "Convention Hall"—a more traditional setting for fight training.

On a revolving marquee in front of the Thunderbird, Proser has put "Ash Resnick Presents Sonny Liston, World's Heavyweight Champion, Training Daily at 2 p.m." Resnick is the hotel exec in charge of its sports program.

In the theatre restaurant, where "Flower Drum Song" is presented nightly, the regular stagehands have erected a ring that they can remove in 45 seconds, replacing it with Liston's punching bags.

On each side of the stage are double life-size photos of Liston in action. Members of his crew are introduced, plus the various celebs who invariably show up, such as Sammy Davis Jr., Gov. Grant Sawyer, Donald O'Connor, Frank Fontaine, Hank Henry, Dick Shawn, Betty Grable, Dan Dailey, Kay Stevens, Maxie Rosenbloom, Mitzi Gaynor, George Kirby and Joe Louis.

While Liston is battering away at his sparring partners, rear-projection announcements, and photos of the champion's previous fights are flashed on a large screen. When it comes time for Liston to skip rope, he does so to the canned music of "Night Train" and other tunes.

The theatre seats 600, and is always filled to capacity at $1 per person. The money collected goes to pay the training "camp" expenses. Members of the audience can buy drinks, just as if they were watching the regular show.

Proser, who "got Barney Ross out of the smelly gymnasiums and opened his training headquarters at Grossinger's" about 25 years ago, says that the present setup at the Thunderbird will be a permanent one, because Las Vegas has become one of the nation's most important boxing centres. Hotel prexy Joe Wells and athletic director Resnick will see to it, says Proser, that future boxers will train here, "in the most beautiful, and only air-conditioned training headquarters in the world."

Penny Sues AGVA And 4 for $75,000

Hollywood, July 9.

Penny Singleton, suspended by AGVA for 10 years last June 6 on two charges allegedly against the interest of the national body, brought suit against the union and four members today (Tues.) in Federal Court here. Named also were Johnny Francis (ne Pellozzi), the complaining witness against her; Vincent Silk, chairman of the AGVA trial board; Sid Marion, trial board member; and Irvin Mazzei, Western Regional Director for AGVA.

The actress, through her attorney, William Ferriter, filed three counts, (1), asking for an injunction, (2), breach of contract, for which she demanded $50,000 general and $25,000 punitive damages, for alleged illegal conduct; and (3), bias and prejudice by the trial board. On the latter count, Miss Singleton charged Harold Berg, national AGVA counsel, Bobby Faye, national administrative secretary, Mazzei, Silk and Marion had used "coercive" methods, prohibited by section 610 of the Landrum-Griffin Act. Actress is a former president of AGVA.

Meg Myles Doubling

Meg Myles, of the "Enter Laughing" cast, has been signed to double into the Blue Angel, N.Y., when it reopens tomorrow (Thurs.) after a short hiatus. She will do the second show only. Rest of the bill in the main room includes Lenny Maxwell and The Wayfarers.

Making his U.S. nitery bow in the Angel's Lounge will be Dudley Moore, a British jazz pianist who is in the "Beyond the Fringe" company. He will work the Lounge following his regular chores in the show at the Golden Theatre.

Four Sells & Gray Circus employees were injured and three show horses killed last Wednesday (3) when a truck transporting the animals overturned here. The circus appeared in nearby Manchester prior to the accident.

Hospitalized were Richard Howald, 40, of Toledo, driver of the truck; and Oney Delmangano, 17; Raymundo Delmangano, 20; and Manuel H. Hernandez, 32, all of Sarasota, Fla.

Rome Hilton Highly Lauded

Rome, July 2.

By general consensus, Rome's new hotel, the Cavalieri Hilton, is the conservation piece of the week, now that it's finally open and viewable.

Though the Pope's death put an understandable damper on opening festivities at the latest addition to the Hilton skein—several VIP planeloads and a like number of gala affairs were cancelled—Romans are now flocking to the new landmark which dominates the city and Saint Peter's from one of the Eternal City's seven hills, Monte Mario.

Comments were generally very favorable although some printed notices inevitably had a political tint. Thus a leftwing daily gave most of its space to a list of "high" prices to be charged to rich visitors—though bowing also to "pulchritude" of the hostelry's femme staff members. Other remarks centered on the tasteful execution, designed not to clash with traditional Rome and thus prick local sensitivities, of every facet of the hotel. In fact, some felt excessive caution had been used, with a certain "somber" effect in many interior color schemes.

Functionally, and apart from its 400 rooms, its staff of 600 (95% Italian citizens), its incomparable view of the city which should alone prove a permanent draw, the Cavalieri fills several longstanding needs.

Above all, it provides Rome with ideal facilities for conventions and large-scaled single events, which heretofore had to be curtailed in scope (or held in other cities) for lack of proper, practical, and accessible (Cavalieri takes over 500 cars easily) physical sites. The hotel's ballroom can seat 1,200 at a banquet, and even hold 1,600 for standup affairs. It can also be divided into separate rooms, each in turn equipped with lighting, projection equipment, etc. These facets especially caught attention of early show visitors.

Elsewhere, the Cavalieri boasts a roof garden restaurant, the Pergola, a US-styled Coffee Shop, a ground-floor dining spot, the Belle Arti, the Elisse, a nitery-restaurant which will feature high-calibre shows and names, and the Sale dei Cesari, four interdependent rooms for private receptions and the like. By the spacious pool, there's another snackery.

Result is likely to be that the Cavalieri Hilton will be a visitors "must" item, as well as one of the very few, perhaps the only, hotel where Roman residents will "go" to dine or give parties.

Naturally, the "what's this going to do Via Veneto?" query is an obvious one. The answer is: nothing Traditional Rome hoteliers don't appear worried, feeling they will continue to keep their traditional customers, and that the Cavalieri will help ease the current load as well as bring in a "new" wave of visitors of its own.

And, though the Hilton has its own stores and is self-sufficient in that and in almost any other way, tourists will still likely will want to drive into town for a personal o.o. of Rome's boutiques, restaurants and monuments.

Cugat's Madrid Nitery

Madrid, July 9.

Xavier Cugat will extend his late-spot operation to Madrid next year with his takeover of the summer garden spot, Villa Rosa, and will re-name it Casa Cugat.

Catalan-born Cugat says he intends to stage two types of shows—one bringing the best in Spanish entertainment for the tourists while the other, for Spanish clientele, will feature top-billed cabaret talent from the U.S. and selected global capital cities.

Motel Plaza, N. Y.

Betty Johnson (with Jimmy Lyons), Milt Shaw Orch, Mark Monte Continentals; $2.50-$3 cover.

Betty Johnson, a newcomer to the work-force in the posh inns, is a personable and knowledgeable newcomer to this show biz sector. With a genesis in a family gospel act, she is well schooled in fundamentals, shows a rich and unerring voice and makes singing an appealing pastime. In addition, her attributes include good floor presence and tiptop couturing. Her white chiffon gown, with a sequined bodice by Rosalie Macrini, was a study in quiet and dignified beauty.

This is the second season in which the Sonnabend management is going through with its summer policy. After a week's hiatus, the Persian Room has relighted with a format that calls for experienced singers who have not yet crashed through to the toptime but have the potential of being suitable for the winter season. Also, it makes the Persian Room one of the few posh entertainment spots available during the summer. It was a successful policy last season, and indications point to another bonanza during a time when the room used to lie fallow.

Miss Johnson shows the potential of being picked up for subsequent employment during more prosperous periods. There is one big drawback evidenced on her opening night. The tunes she selected were offbeat for the greater part. She rarely allowed herself the luxury of familiarity, a facet which makes it more difficult for the audience and frequently detracts from her other assets.

For example, at times she seemed like a maid with a mission —that of giving composer Bart Howard his rightful place in the tin pan alley firmament. Howard is best known for "Fly Me to the Moon" and he is a prolific writer who has cleffed some lovely songs, but for some reason hasn't ignited in the popular marts. As laudable as the idea is, a medley of six Howard compositions plus five others put the act in comparatively strange territory. It seemed too great a concentration on unfamiliar items.

It's the major fault in Miss Johnson's present turn. Otherwise, she seems a singer that the couvert spenders could go for. Her qualities are brought out more strongly with Jimmy Lyons' backing of the Milt Shaw band. Latter provides enticing dansapation as does the perennial Mark Monte Continentals. Per usual, John Fossati gives tone to the tape. Jose.

Edgewater Beach, Chi

Chicago, July 2.

Sarah Vaughan (with the Kirk Stuart Trio), Edgewater Beach Guys (4) & Dolls (6), Don Davis Orch; $2-$2.50 cover.

The Polynesian Village would seem an unlikely room for Sarah Vaughan, or for any hip act for that matter, but g.m. Gene Barrett's choice proved a wise one and the songstress opened to a well-filled and enthusiastic crowd in the capacious room. She was in top voice, and crooned her way through a wide range of tunes in a 50-minute show that had them clamoring for more.

What keeps Miss Vaughan at the top is readily apparent after a few numbers — her cello-like voice ranges easily from silky smoothness to a deliberate sandpaper roughness, her arrangements are musically sophisticated and tasteful, and she can blend traditional and modern phrasing in both jazz and ballad tempi until they are one of a piece.

Considerable credit goes to the Kirk Stuart Trio, the unit that travels with her, for it is their adroit backing that provides the added texture necessary to project a solo thrush in this sizable room. Miss Vaughan's songalog for this show ranged from such newies as a buoyant version of "I Feel Pretty" and a tender handling of "Maria" to such vintage Vaughan as "Misty," "Tenderly," and "Poor Butterfly." She also clicked with "The More I See You," "The Lady's In Love With You," "Baubles and Bangles" and "Broken-Hearted Melody."

The Guys & Dolls curtain-raiser continues to show the astute hand of producer Robert Simpson's savvy staging and disciplined direction. Their array of hors d' oeuvres from Broadway hit legituners has the built-in insurance of familiarity and popularity, and their dancing is fresh and choreographed imaginatively. Featured comedy vocalist for this outing is Lillian Duke, who scores with a jazzy "Ain't She Sweet," but overplays her mugging and raucousness in "Little Girl From Little Rock."

Troubadour, L.A.

Los Angeles, July 3.

Olatunji & Co. (15); Addis & Crofut; $1.50 admission weekdays, $2.50 Saturdays, plus one-drink minimum.

Something new has been added to this citadel of folk entertainment. Olatunji and his African musicians and dancers in a lively presentation of native talent. Olatunji, who hails from an area south of the Sahara and is a member of the Yoruba tribe, already has recorded four albums for Columbia of his wild songs and instrumentations, and will present some of them here for next four weeks bonused with exciting native terping.

Clamor is the best description for artist's show, backgrounded always by African drums and instruments which reduce the atmosphere to a din. Olatunji himself performs on two giant drums standing six feet high, and he's lined up a collection of musicians who give out with lightning-fast rhythms (?).

Highlighting evening are three native dances, where both men and women appear, particularly one called a "challenge dance," various performers trying to out-solo the others and as primitive as their tempo is torrid. Five femmes and 10 men compose troupe, which is slated to appear three times nightly.

Folk-singing Steve Addis & Bill Crofut, more representative of Troubadour type of entertainment, open the show with their clever routines and do seven numbers. Tops here is the lively "Newspapermen Meet Such Interesting People." But their repertoire, accompanied by such strings as guitar and banjo, also includes English rounds, Old French songs and a medley of American-German-Indonesian origin. Whit.

Purple Onion, S.F.

San Francisco, July 1.

"Parade" revue; Jerry Herman, writer; Hal Martin, producer; staged by Edmund Balin; musical direction, David Williams; designed by Don Roberts. With Carole Cook, Tucker Smith, Beverly Sanders, John Castello; admission $2.50.

A cast of four polished, energetic young people, newly arrived from Los Angeles, manages to make "Parade" an evening of triumph over uneven and often inferior material.

The show is an unbalanced mixture of sharp satire, which mostly comes off, and pretentious balladry that doesn't. Even in the latter the performers cannot be faulted. They're doing their best against heavy odds.

Leading the cast (in advance publicity, at any rate) is Carole Cook, a discovery of Lucille Ball who appeared on the latter's tv show and is indebted to her for much of her comic style.

Miss Cook is most effective in a monolog impression of a Texas ayem disk jockey who wakes her listeners with a hymn, "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam." She also stars as the sleepy dance partner of lithe, limber Tucker Smith in a takeoff on "Specter of the Rose" and "Sleeping Beauty."

Tucker is displayed to best advantage in a reminiscence of vaudeville, "I'm Just a Two-a-Day Man", doing soft-shoe routines. Miss Cook's singing voice isn't on a par with the other three voices in the company, which are featured in some embarrassing ballads. These are done mostly by Beverly Sanders, a silky-smooth songstress/dancer, and John Castello, an engaging, urbane personality.

Very effective are some takeoffs on tv commercials and a skit about the homey Rockefeller family, Rocky and Happy, called "Just Plain Folks."

"Parade" arrived here from New York by way of Los Angeles, where it is said to have been a considerable success. It is hard to believe Southern Californians are that easily pleased. For although this revue is a bright romp, it needs better material. Este.

Talk of Town, London

London, June 30.

Sophie Tucker (with Ted Shapiro); Robert Nesbitt's "High Life," with Peter Regan, Tricia Money, Christine Craig, Trotter Bros.; Line (30); choreography, Billy Petch; decor, Tod Kingman; costumes, R. St. John Roper; orchestrations, Burt Rhodes, Sydney Simone and Frank Deniz Orchs; $7.50 minimum.

New words or phrases to praise Sophie Tucker are difficult to find for they have all been used before as garlands to her commanding professional knowhow. They will probably all be used again before she makes her retiring bow which, happily, looks to be a long way ahead.

Okay, Miss Tucker has slowed down a little, maybe. She possibly declaims rather than sings more now than in the earlier days. But, immaculately gowned, and in complete control of what is one of her favorite floors, impeccably accompanied by vet pianist, Ted Shapiro, she is supremely show biz.

She starts with "Don't Stop The World For Me," goes into the question of "How Are You Doing In The Love Department," is a standout in "Dark Town Strutters Ball," "Mimi" and, ironically, "I Don't Want To Get Thin." She finishes with "Sophie Tucker's Little Lover Pills" and the inevitable "Some Of These Days."

Miss Tucker is in that class of artists of whom it can be said that what she sings is less important than how she delivers. Prior to her stint, Robert Nesbitt's "High Life" revue continues as a pleasant, glamorous aperitif. Trotter Bros., a puppeteer tun, is the new act, replacing the juggling Trio San Remo.

The two orchestras, Sydney Simone's and Frank Deniz's, as usual do a sock job. "The Talk of the Town" continues as one of London's most satisfying spots for a lively night out. Likely successor to Miss Tucker is comedian Tony Hancock. Rich.

Hacienda, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 5.

"Les Poupees de Paris;" produced by Nat Hart; created by Sid & Marty Krofft; presented by Warren Bayley; $4 minimum.

Although creators Sid and Marty Krofft are no longer connected with the "Les Poupees de Paris" company which opened here after several false starts, this edition, which played the Seattle World's Fair and recently in New York, is basically the same as the original Krofft show current at P.J.'s restaurant in L.A. Running 45 minutes, it is presented three times nightly, and so that youngsters may attend the dinner show, the nude puppets wear bras at the first performance.

A few technical boo-boos kept the preem from running smoothly, but they are certain to be ironed out after a few nights of warming up in this showroom. The Krofft brothers have shown remarkable ingenuity in weaving their puppets —most of them three to four feet high—into situation comedy and drama. A brief description of the show could be "a miniature Lido de Paris," as it contains singing, dancing, ice skating, a sexy swimming pool scene, and of course, the nudes.

The taped voices of Liberace, Mae West, Charles Boyer, Edgar Bergen and Edie Adams are cleverly used to delightful effect. The sets are superb, and the musical score just right. Presented by Warren Bayley, "Les Pouppes de Paris" is in for an indefinite period. Duke.

Primadonna, Reno

Reno, July 2.

"Paree Ooo La La" Revue (13) with Wick & Brand, George Prentice, Al Tronti Orch (10); produced, staged and directed by Bill Turner and Alan Smith; two drink minimum.

After the initial two weeks of operation, it's strongly indicated Ernie Primm's new showroom in his Primadonna Club in downtown Reno will become a favorite with both locals and tourists. The room, seating 275, is located on the second floor of a new big addition to his Virginia Street casino directly opposite Harolds Club.

The room is intimate, warm and smartly decored, with seating on two levels. The compact band stand is located to the right of the stage, allowing for full use of the boards for the productions. Attention has been given to sound and lighting equipment for good result.

It's unfortunate that the calibre of the opening show fails to match the status of the room. The three Smith-Turner production numbers, featuring six line girls, four nudes, two production singers, femme dancer, fall below the standards expected in Nevada show rooms. There's a lack of originality and inventiveness in the choreography and staging, and the dancers work in uninspired manner.

Selection of femmes, particularly nudes, was obviously hurried or the ranks of potentials was limited. Costuming and props rate only so-so mention. Doing creditable jobs in the three productions ("Paree Ooo La La!", "Jungrala," and "Cavalcade of Girls") are production singers Roger Cudeny and Teri Randal. Featured femme dancer is Irmgard Eicke, who makes her entrance from above stage via trapeze bar. Miss Eicke is terp-spirited, but fails to express personality.

High point of the show comes with the Wick & Brand segment of fast-paced comedic routines and a wealth of throwaway lines. Bob Wick ably handles the clown role with Ray Brand setting up the situations and playing the straight man. Duo is well-rehearsed and timed, much of the material is fresh and new to this area, and boys present pleasing stage appearance.

George Prentice wins attention with his hand puppets, manipulated from behind many-windowed building facade prop. Mannequins include a boy-girl courtship, rabbit, cat, skunk, devil and monkey. Use of one puppet swatting another with paddle is overdone and tiring from repetition, but provides top visual appeal. Vocal characterization rates good audience endorsement.

Backing entire show, presented three times nightly, is the Al Tronti orch, which capably handles the many-cued one-hour offering. Musical arrangements are by Emil Baffa, Nennie Neihaus, Hall Daniels and Les Baxter.

Show slated to run through July 24. Long.

Riviera, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 2.

Liberace, Barbra Streisand, Dick Humphreys, Joyce Roberts, Jack Cathcart Orch (17), Riviera Dancers (12); presented by Elias Atol; stage direction, Milt Bronson; $4 minimum.

After an absence of five years, Liberace is back at the Riviera with the same glittering corn which has established him as one of the phenomenal novelties in the biz. The singer-88er's warmly extroverted showmanship, complete with three spectacular costume changes, is an unchanging type which has made him a legend, with, as he aptly puts it, "new converts every night."

The star makes even such a worn-out number as "What Kind Of Fool Am I?" palatable, and he does a fine bit of new biz with "Mack The Knife," playing it in its original form, as a Swiss music box, and as bossa nova. The antiquated Twist also shows fresh life via the Liberace treatment, giving credence to his honorary "Mr. Showmanship" title.

Special credit for the success of the turn should go to conductor Gordon Robinson, fronting the Jack Cathcart orch (17), the smooth staging by Ray Arnett, and the sets by Glenn Holse.

Barbra Streisand, in her debut here, is a most pleasant nitery surprise. She has an interesting look and an interesting sound, which of course is necessary to set her apart from other canaries. She puts subtle excitement into a fluid voice with an excellent range; she has dramatic facial expressions and overall movements; moreover, she has a wonderful flair for low-pressure comedy dialog.

Miss Streisand's numbers have hip—or even avant gards—arrangements, and she applies her distinctive tones to such as "When The Sun Comes Out," "My Honey's Lovin' Arms," "Cry Me A River," "Coloring Book," and "Happy Days Are Here Again," sensitively backed by Peter Daniels at the piano. Patrons who are tired of assembly-line singers will be quite happy with Miss Streisand.

Dick Humphreys, with Joyce featured, stars in his own production number with authority and grace, backed by 12 other dancers.

This bill in until Aug. 5 when Louis Armstrong returns. Duke.

St. Regis Roof, N. Y.

Charles Turecamo Orch and Walter Kay Trio; $3 cover.

It may be because the St. Regis is the only major hostelry with a roofgarden in town or it may be, as Americana Hotel executive v.p. and g.m. Claude C. Philippe stated only last week on The Fitzgeralds' WOR radio chitchat program—that the past 20-30 years has created a "new sophistication" amongst Americans, because of increasing world travel—but this spot certainly is booming. The St. Regis, still one of the top class inns in town, seemingly is not averse to mass biz. Fact is, the masses—and many of them on the night caught not of the particularly "sophisticated" or "jet set" genre— dominated the turnout. Business being what it is, so long as they wear shoes and bring money, who cares?

This "face value" appraisal, while obtuse to "reviewing" a room's annual summer stint, however is pertinent vis-a-vis a traditionally class dancing-dining spot such as the St. Regis. However, they were out in strength and terped to Charles Turecamo's tiptop tunes with esprit and in full evidence of their Arthur Murray training. Walter Kay's sprightly trio, a winter season fixture at the St. Regis' new La Boite (facing the Maisonette), spells the personable Turecamo and his savvy syncopators. Latter was long at the Eden Roc in New York and probably returns there when Peter Duchin encores a second semester at the Maisonette. Latter proved that the room can get along sans entertainment and with only good cuisine and dansapation, all this of course part of the new Balsa management's economy thinking.

The St. Regis Roof has retained its original Josef Urban pink-tinted decor; it dates back to when that outstanding theatrical designer was a fixture on Florenz Ziegfeld's staff. Some of the same yesteryear standards of service also remain, depending of course on the actuarial statistics of the veteran staff. Young but savvy Rudy Melzer is at the door, aided by Pierre (ditto at La Boite) when Rudy takes off on vacation. Abel.

Mister Kelly's, Chi

Chicago, July 1.

Mort Sahl, Patricia Scott, John Frigo Trio; $2.50 cover.

Mort Sahl, the advance guard in the resurgence of social and political commentary onstage, is more and more taking on an image as a satirical elder statesman, albeit a youthful one. He's still as sharp, acerbic and insightful as ever. But the collegiate charm that used to mask his rapier thrusts has worn thin, and the spastic delivery that completed his role as an awkward post-adolescent rebel now comes off as disconnected.

It's apparent that Sahl finds the New Frontier a more amorphous target than the Republican bumbling that he used to score. In his own words "you can't attack the Democrats, because in this country you can't attack someone until they've done something." Too, he was always better at roasting personalities than he was policies, and the current Harvard-staffed Establishment in Washington apparently is not as vulnerable to his intellectual sharpshooting as were the corporate execs who manned the Ike administration.

Sahl's best sallies are still in the political arena, such as his comment on the usefulness of the President's trip to Europe: "All they can say about JFK in German is that he got a better reception than Hitler." These, like a good political cartoon, throw a sudden beam of light on a murky situation. He is unevenly effective with his asSahlts on such targets as the Black Muslims, the Time mag 40th anni party.

This is a quick return for Patricia Scott, and advisedly so. She's one of the more musically sound and vocally inventive thrushes to support a headliner at Mister Kelly's for several years. She's a seasoned songstress, but approaches her numbers with freshness and zest and has a genuine feel for jazz phrasing.

A couple of small points of cavil in regards Miss Scott's turn: First, her gown was totally unflattering and inappropriate to her singing style. Secondly, her catalog of lesser-sung tunes diminishes in impact because there are no standards or evergreens to provide contrast. Mor.

Sands, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 6.

Paul Anka, Allen & Rossi, Bill Carey, Shirley Kirkes, Copa Girls (12), Antonio Morelli Orch (23); produced by Jack Entratter; stage direction, Harold Dobrow; $4 minimum.

Comedy headliners Marty Allen and Steve Rossi are 100% billed with singing star Paul Anka in their latest invasion of the Copa Room; their material, mostly new, is the best nitery nonsense to come along in years. Impresario Jack Entratter is fortunate to have them in his stable.

Despite his youth, Anka has hit a top level stride in sophisticated delivery, both in song and dialog, some of the latter being very funny. Initialing with "Falling In Love With Love," he does special lyrics to "It's All Right With Me," dedicated to his bride of four months.

Other numbers, well-paced and well-arranged, include "My Kind Of Girl," "It Had To Be You," "Down By The Riverside," and a medley of his hit compositions, including "The Longest Day" theme. Strong assistance comes from his own musicians, integrated into the Antonio Morelli orch (23): Eddie Karam, conductor; Chino Pozo, bongos; Bob Mallory, drums; and Leo Ball, trumpet.

Allen & Rossi romp through their peak presentation here; romantic singer Rossi is just the right sponge for outlandish Allen's unique brand of comedy, which includes topical spoofs on the "Cleopatra" film and the Playboy Clubs —with the dumpy funster portraying a "Bunny."

A handsome holdover production number by Renne Stuart which features vocalist Bill Carey, dancer Shirley Kirkes, and the dozen Copa lovelies balances the bill, in for three weeks. Duke.

Cork Club, Houston

Houston, July 3.

Buddy Hackett, Bobby Breen, George Arnold Dancers (10), Mel Arvin Orch (11); $2 entertainment charge.

Buddy Hackett proves here that his comedic successes are result of material, timing and all-around professional presentation, for he's no longer the funny little fat man. Instead, he's thin and bearded (for a film), but returns are the same.

Comedian has casual approach, and his stories all appear to be ad libs. Some of best lines concern his losing weight. Other routines include a trip to Miami on his honeymoon, getting his wife a pizza pie in a snow storm, training a dog and buying a cemetery plot.

Every now and then material has a blue tint and he occasionally uses a three-letter word during his 54-minute stint, but nothing is actually offensive. He's drawing big and appreciative audiences.

Bobby Breen still has pleasing pipes and personality he exhibited as child singing star. Tunes, during his 20 minutes, include "My Blue Heaven," "Make Someone Happy," "What Kind of Fool Am I," an oldtime medley, a clown medley and begoff "Because of You" with special lyrics. In clown medley, it was feared that "Vesti la giubba" might be a little too ambitious, but he handles well to excellent returns.

George Arnold Dancers, all attractive, open show with Paris number, and are on for six minutes. Mel Arvin Orch is excellent for show backing and dancing.

Show plays two weeks. Skip.

International, N. Y.

"Latin Fire Revue" (8) produced by Tony Raye; with Bernie Allen, Vinnie Monte, Renny Trio, Mambo Aces, with Tina; choreography, Lou Renny; Michael Durso orch; Doc Cheatham Rhumbas; $5.50 minimum.

Jack Silverman's International has switched to the Latin-American styled revue with this offering. It is completely new, with the production numbers following the familiar Latinesque pattern — rather lusty but unpretentious. There are five Spanish-type beauties in three production bits, with two drummers and a pianist added to Mike Durso's band to play the production. Show is below par for this spot.

The Mambo Aces, two lads and a comely miss (Tina), stands out in this lineup. Trio tries a few songs but hits its stride when dancing. Best number outside of their finale is the Cha-Cha as it was done in the old Havana, in Miami and in London. The limbo dance is the trio's windup with the smaller of the two boys going under the bar only about a foot off the ground. Scored nicely.

Vinnie Monte, billed as a recording artist, sports a nice voice and excellent choice of tunes. His "Moon River" and "Sorrento" are the top songs, both done with skill.

The Renny Trio, two attractive femmes and a talented youth, do nicely with their terp numbers, especially the lad. One of the gals is in and out with specialty dances, some of which were favorably received.

Bernie Allen, a comic who obviously has been around, clicks here although some of his bluer gags seemed way out of place. His bit about "writing" the numbers "Volare" and "Rambling Rose," as an excuse to sing such tunes, is well done, and could be developed. The finale, when he emulates a German space expert, is geared for lotsa guffaws. It, too, could be built up, and some of his other material dropped.

Durso's band plays a fine show, per usual, while Doc Cheatham has a trio for patron dancing.

Wear.

Cave, Vancouver

Vancouver, B. C., July 6.

Juliet Prowse, Ken Colman, Tony Marks & Rosita, Chris Gage Orch (13); $2.25 admission.

Juliet Prowse, in her third local outing since she broke in her nitery act here a year ago, is the reason why Cavemen Ken Stauffer and Bob Mitten are again happily warbling "It's so nice to have a Prowse around the house".

The talented Miss Prowse has almost completely revamped the act displayed in her last appearance and has several new faces in her accompanying quintet of male dancers. But the format of slick showmanship is still dished out in the same highly entertaining style.

Still included is the "Turn It Into Musical" production number which retains the Camille and Cleopatra parodies and replaces the Joan of Arc spoof with Lady Godiva and Catherine the Great satires. The Cleo bit remains the showstopper, hotter than ever now that the 20th-Fox opus is in release, and Miss Prowse tongue-in-cheeks it to the hilt.

New items of note are the precisely routined opening by Miss Prowse and her five fellows and the delightful merry-go-round ballet and modern jazz number which evolves from Miss Prowse's song, "Love Makes The World Go Round". Tony Charmoli's imaginative choreography is matched by Miss Prowse's superb terping, and Jerry Fielding's scoring of the waltz music from "Carousel" is expertly cut by the Chris Gage orch under Andy Thomas' baton. Dick Sternberg, sitting in at drums for Miss Prowse, is an asset throughout.

Miss Prowse can handle satirical song lyrics with style and savvy but sagely limits her straight vocal stints to the simple ballad, "The More I See You" and a swinging "I'm Shooting High". Ray Agahayan's costuming is a big plus. She goes from here into an eastern strawhat production of "Irma La Douce", in a part that seems tailored perfectly to her talents.

In direct contrast to Miss Prowse, Ken Colman is a hometown singer who broke his act in elsewhere and comes back to native environs for a major debut. He has been featured for the past few weeks on a CBS-TV "Showcase" regional program and was understandably nervous in his first "big room" live appearance but recovered quickly to chalk up an impressive entry with his lively songalog, personality and stage presence.

Colman finds a swingy groove with his opening "Something's Coming" from "West Side Story" and stays with it for "Come Rain or Come Shine", among other numbers. He finishes strong with "Swing Low Sweet Chariot".

He needs more work on his stage movements and timing at this phase in his development. But with the youthful zest Colman projects, his personable looks and his good pipes, he has all the basic essentials for a potential click.

This is the second time around for magico Tony Marks and his curvaceous assistant Rosita. His slick sleight-of-hand scores with tablers as he manipulates cigarets, cards and finger stalls with deft dexterity. He also registers heavily with his production of a whopping white rabbit for a silk handkerchief. Shaw.

Cocoanut Grove, L. A.

Los Angeles, July 4.

Kay Starr, the Stanley Boys (4), Freddy Martin Orch (14), Allyn Ferguson Rhythmic Strings (10); $3 cover, $3.50 weekends.

Though she was grassrooted to an extent in L.A., in that it was in the City Of The Angels she first began to wing it to some wide attention as a performer, Kay Starr oddly enough hasn't played a local nitery in 14 years. Further, this is her baptismal appearance in the Grove.

She clicks over the 43-minute haul and by the time she wheels in her "Fortune" (literally almost, as well as figuratively) for a finale she not only has sewn up the auditors, she has pretty well plumbed all styles of vocalizing. Her pipes are as potent as they were a dozen years or more ago and she seems constantly improving her control of both upper and lower tremolos.

Midway in turn The Stanley Boys (4), who have been backstopping Miss Starr for some seasons now, slip onstage and add presence and punch as well as counterpoint. Highlights in turn are Edith Piaf's "If You Love Me," the spiritual "Good Book" at uptempo, the folktune "Two Brothers" and "Some Day." The Stanleys "Smile" while Miss Starr does her quick-change into tramp togs and returns to lighten the mood with "Nobody," "Side By Side" and the "Wheel"-off.

On Tuesday night (2) opening 525 covers were clocked, exceeding management's expectation. These are Dog Days for nightclubs here, but Miss Starr looks likely to cut a trim fiscal figure—and intensify the puzzle as to why she doesn't work more niteries. For years she has confined herself to a scattering of dates (mostly in Nevada), rarely crossing the Mississippi.

Freddy Martin's orch of 14 and Allyn Ferguson's Rhythmic Strings (10) alternate between shows and meld for the performance—and that is some backstopping, maestro'd by Martin—for any nitery singer. Was.

Nevada Lodge, Tahoe

Lake Tahoe, July 2.

"Vive Les Girls" Revue (18) with Marya Linero, Mario & Sheila, Sbardella Bros. (3), Enrico & Elise, Jean Vallin, Bonny Baker, Al Bell Orch (10); produced and directed by Frederic Apcar; costumes designed by Jose Luis Vinas, created by Lucia Boetti; no cover, no minimum.

Add Lincoln Fitzgerald to the list of Lake Tahoe casino operators offering top calibre entertainment from a major showroom. Shutters were removed from his new Topaz Room last Tuesday (25) to enthusiastic endorsement for both the facility and the talent in Frederic Apcar's Tahoe edition of "Vive Les Girls."

Fitzgerald, who also operates the Nevada Club in Reno, has expanded his Tahoe lodge to double its previous size. The facility now offers a 10,000-square-foot combination theatre-restaurant, lounge and bar, a coffee shop, hotel rooms, chalets, convention rooms, and a greatly enlarged casino area.

Located on the North Shore of Lake Tahoe, the lodge's major competitors are the Crystal Bay Club (with lounge entertainment only; now billed are the Novelites, Frankie Fanelli Group, and the Sawyer Sisters), and Frank Sinatra's Cal-Neva Lodge (with Vince Edwards and Ford & Reynolds current topliners). Until the remodeling, the Nevada Lodge offered live entertainment from small stage behind the main casino bar.

Design of the theatre-restaurant-lounge is unusual by Nevada standards. A lounge area, seating approximately 200, (with no food service) is located immediately in front of the stage. Flanking the area at the rear are two higher level bars, totaling 120 feet. A raised area to the left of the stage, and running full length of the room, is reserved for dining.

Only one section of the dining area, however, has an unobstructed view of the stage. It's obvious, however, that most of the dining section will be vacated by the time the first show goes on at 10:45. But complaints can be expected from those (seated in the blind areas) expecting to dine and see the show at the same time.

Apcar, who enjoyed a long-run success with "Girls" in Las Vegas, has brought basically the same show to the Tahoe shores, and if opening night response is any criterion it's in for a similar click.

First-nighters ignored the mike and lighting difficulties to give the entire one-hour show an impressive mitt endorsement—and deservedly.

As a producer, Apcar shows savvy and know-how. And he also has an eye for femme selection—for both talent and visual appeal. All are lookers, the nudes with beautiful statistics, and all showcase to god individual advantage.

Accent, naturally, is heavy on the French, with productions and title selections following the Gallic theme. Costuming, staging, choreography, and musical score are impressive and show originality. Marya Linero, a dark-haired, statuesque beauty, is spotted as the lead dancer of the five nudes, Elise Vallee and Jean Vallin are professional on the production-singing chores, Bonny Baker shows much talent and personality in the vocal-terp departments, the Sbardella Bros. expertly fill the comedic spot, and two dance teams (Mario & Sheila, Enrico & Elise) are interspersed for good advantage.

Backstopping the show in commendable fashion is the Al Bell Orch, playing from behind scrim at rear of stage. Credits for the choreography go to Ron Lewis.

Hotel Roosevelt, N.O.

New Orleans, July 5.

Dick Contino, Lee Raymond, Leon Kelner Orch (11); $2.50 weeknight minimum, $4 Sats.

Dick Contino displayed remarkable virtuosity and enchanted first-nighters (4) in Seymour Weiss' plush Blue Room in a 45-minute show. He's in for two weeks and his act will undoubtedly attract repeat patrons.

Appearing here for the first time in several years, Contino's musical wizardry and technical skill holds the tableholders spellbound. Part of his professional charm is his versatility. He's also a singer with considerable appeal.

Contino is assisted this trip by Lee Raymond, who is a trombonist, trumpeter and singer. They blend instruments with a brilliance that nets plenty of hot mitting.

Contino opens with "Billy Bailey," segues into "Yours" and "Come Back To Sorrento," then squeezes out "Never On Sunday" and "Lady Of Spain." But it is the theme music from "Exodus," with Raymond on trumpet, that Contino scales the musical heights.

Leon Kelner and his house band provide excellent support for Contino and Raymond. Band keeps floor packed during the terp sessions between shows.

Contino is in until July 17.

Living Room, N. Y.

Choo Choo Collins, Bobby Bell, Arthur Todd, Bob Ferro Trio; $4.50 minimum.

A major tragedy in the nitery trade this time of year can be a failure of the airconditioning plant. A cafe is normally dead when that happens and it has to be an extraordinary kind of bill that will hold an audience under these conditions.

Choo Choo Collins is probably the reason why the audience didn't desert the Living Room. She has, through personal contact, built up a sizable mailing list. And she also has been bringing in quite a few people into niteries during her frequent local forays.

Miss Collins is still on a talent upbeat. She continues to improve with every local airing. This time she has come in with special material as well as well worked out arrangement. One of her numbers salutes virtually every newspaperman in New York in appropriate rhymes. Another has to do with stock market acquisitions.

Miss Collins seems at her best in arrangements which give her opportunity to roam the higher ranges. Per usual, standards are her main item, and she makes it nicely in this room.

Bobby Bell is of the anything for a laugh school of comedy. He covers a wide circuit of subject matter from zany impressions to one-liners to stories. He works rapidly, rarely staying long enough in any one category to make his mark in a particular subject. Nonetheless, he gets laughs and he walks off a winner here.

Bill is completed by Arthur Todd (New Acts), and the Bob Ferro Trio showbacks the talent capably. Jose.

Flamingo, Las Vegas

Las Vegas, July 5.

Jack Carter, Leslie Uggams, Mattison Trio, Russ Black Orch (12); presented by Morris Lansburgh; lighting, Hugo Granata; $4 minimum.

Leslie Uggams, whose exposure on the Mitch Miller tv singalongs has made her a hot property, is making her Vegas debut with comedian Jack Carter, who has long been a hot property here. The combination should do extremely good biz for Morris Lansburgh's gambling oasis.

Carter brings in a generous supply of new material for this outing, including topical observations on the British sex scandal and the impending patter of more little feet around the White House. He's still one of the best impressionists, doing accurate carbons of any celeb you can name—however, he modestly says he can't do a good JFK, because "it always comes out like James Cagney."

His devastating takeoff on a rock 'n' roll singer is a classic, and his reprise of a dandy bit of special material called "Showmanship" is most welcome.

Miss Uggams, a refreshing, delightful personality, is a beautiful young girl with an excellent voice. She offers such numbers as "People Like You" (in which she declares she's happy to be working before a live audience instead of a tv camera), "Once Upon A Time," "Cool, Cool, Cool of the Evening," "Man I Love," "They Don't Make Them Like That Anymore" (in which she salutes famed stars by singing their trademark songs, after making an onstage costume change), a stirring blues medley, and a rousing parade-band medley.

Nat Jones does a fine job as Miss Uggams' 88er, as does drummer Jim Fitzsimmon on drums, both sitting in with the Russ Black orch (12).

The Mattison Trio, two males and a femme dancer, are the curtain-raisers. The handsome group do brilliant footwork in a salute to Rodgers & Hammerstein. The whole show is pleasingly illuminated by Hugo Granata.

Next: Gordon & Sheila MacRae, Aug. 1. Duke.

Village Gate, N. Y.

Nina Simone, Sonny Terry & Brownie McGhee, Lucho Navarro; $3 cover.

Versatility, distinctive style and a growing warm rapport with the audience make Nina Simone one of the top draws—and top money makers—at this Village cellar.

Turn includes a jazzed-up African chant, a Hebrew Hora, a bongo-whistle bit by sideman Notego Joe, a ditty by Carl Sandburg, a weeping folk tune, "Lass from the Low Country;" Oscar Brown Jr.'s cynically funny, "Forbidden Fruit," and, for encore, a stomping, low-down blues vocal with driving ragtime self-accomp on piano. The lass is versatile.

Miss Simone's group includes besides Montego Joe, Lyle Atkinson on bass; Phil Orlando, guitar, and Al Schachtman, guitar.

For authentic, deep south blues, blind harmonica man Sonny Terry and guitarist Brownie McGhee are for real. Their vocal style is coarse and true, and Terry's harmonica is virtuoso in the blues medium. These are genuine folk without the nik.

In a return is Lucho Navarro with his remarkable vocal imitations. Bill.

Inquisition, Vancouver

Vancouver, B.C., July 1.

Ed McCurdy, Dave Broadfoot, Jubilation Singers (3); $1.50 admission.

Inquisition owner Howie Bateman has taken a leaf out of the current international festival's notebook with this double teaming of folk singer Ed McCurdy and satirist Dave Broadfoot and the resulting combination turns out to be better than the best of "Spring Thaw" and more important than "Earnest", two of the fest's more impressive offerings.

McCurdy, a wandering minstrel since his last Vancouver appearance at the late Arctic Club, offers substantial proof that he is still one of the performing greats in the folk field. Although limited to some extent by effects of a recent throat ailment, the way in which he uses his voice is skilled artistry.

Opening strongly with a powerhouse hymn, "Walk Along In Glory", McCurdy changes mood subtly with a soft ballad, "Trowbridge Fair," and adds humor with an old English oddity, "The Silver Sty". He parodies the vocal gymnastics employed by various singers with some amazing vocal flexibility of his own as he ranges through "Worried Man", then returns to straight format with sensitive and tender treatment of "Black Is The Color".

He scores with another humorous ditty, "There Was An Old Soldier," and his trademarked "Frankie and Johnny", and closes set with his own original, "I Dreamed Last Night". A fave here for years, McCurdy easily satisfies his enthusiasts.

Broadfoot, a lanky homegrown North Vancouver product who has achieved more acceptance since he moved east several years ago, was brought in by Mayor Moore to star in "The Best of Spring Thaw" at the Vancouver festival and subsequently booked into the Inquisition. The return of a native is always a touch and go proposition, but Broadfooot quickly dispels any doubts about his stature as one of Canada's ranking satirists.

He works easily, almost diffidently at times, and reaps continuous chuckles plus hearty belly laffs. On the current festival he notes directors' reactions to comments by Toronto Star critic Nathan Cohen: "I got plenty of Nathan". His skits are sharp, particularly the Royal Canadian Mountie sketch with the redcoat who uses a Volk-sled, the kind with the dogs in the rear, and his next door neighbor borrowing routine.

Jubilation Singers spell off headliners with short session of folk tunes and emcee chores are diligently handled by Bateman, complete with his customary aplomb. Shaw.

Club Village, Dallas

Dallas, July 3.

Jean Shannon, Howard Stafford Quartet; private club, no cover or minimum.

Jean Shannon, a hit in the past at other local bistros, clicks solidly in her initial outing at this plush suburban intimery. Zany comedienne unleases a wealth of fresh one-liners and brief gags to good response. Though the subjects are w.k., her material and saucy delivery reach home.

Miss Shanon, abetted by fine pipes, neatly delivers "All God's Chillun Got Rhythm" and "He's Got the Whole World in His Hands" for a pace change, and salutes Sophie Tucker with a lusty "Some of These Days."

Blond retains surefire segment from previous shows, donning straw skimmer, shedding skirt to reveal shapely gams and belting a medley of minstrel era Dixie songs, winding with "Rockabye Your Baby" for hefty palming and a big 30-minute score. Howard Stafford combo dishes solid showbacking and offers slick terp tunes between shows.

Show plays a fortnight, with the Smart Set due July 16. Bark.

New Acts

PEDRO VARGAS

Songs
30 Mins.
Chateau Madrid, N. Y.

Pedro Vargas, the Mexican singer, has been a fave in the Latin American sphere for more than a quarter century. His records have topped the charts in the warmer climes for many years and his fame as one of the great romantic singers of his generation has been undisputed. However, he hasn't worked in the personal fields in the areas that are normal for VARIETY's New Act scriveners, so this is for the record.

Vargas, despite his longevity in the field, has one of the finer voices. His song style is lush and florid, the vocal timbre is robust, and his technique is such that the ladies need only close their eyes to envision a romantic physical figure.

Vargas is only slightly handicapped in his first New York venture at Angel Lopez's Chateau Madrid. He demonstrates his staying power on sheer singing ability. With a fluent knowledge of English, Vargas could vary his routine with some small talk and some charming asides. A singer with his wealth of experiences would have much to say to American audiences. Nonetheless his New York bow indicates that it is a great pity he didn't make the North American trip sooner in his career, possibly during the time when Latin singers were in great vogue here. He is one of yesteryear's greats with much to offer today. He's a vintage performer enriched by time. Jose.

JOEY HOLLINGSWORTH

Songs, Dances
42 Mins.
Gatineau, Ottawa

Joey Hollingsworth has been a familiar on Canadian television for several years as a tap dancer. Now he has upped his terp quality, added chant and produced a nitery routine. His tapping still dominates the act and at times, via style, is reminiscent of Bojangles, with delicate but excellently-timed steps and a strong, subtle sense of rhythm. Besides, Hollingsworth lets the customers know he revels in the joy of the foot beat.

His warbling shows nice pipes but the stint tends to drag from overweight — tunes that depress. Arrangements are neat. His attempts at comedy are weak and should be omitted or strengthened. As they are, they're worked in without warning; tablesitters are taken by surprise and aren't sure if they're supposed to laugh. Stanza also has a brief session on big bongo drums which doesn't add much.

Hollingsworth is good material for any nitery bill and with his clicko tap terp would be strong for television. Gorm.

RUSS BYRD

Songs, Comedy
50 Mins.
Candlelight Inn, Clearwater, Fla.

Russ Byrd has attained a local following through emceeing, local television work and occasional fill-ins, but appearance at Candlelight Inn is first fullfledged nitery act.

Baritone, well aware of the demands of the bistro bunch, perches atop a bar stool in openers, "I Want To Be Around" and "Coloring Book." His voice, vigorous and lyrical, lacks training, but seasoned showmanship savvy enables him to intersperse singing with proper or not so proper patter in accordance with customers' tastes. Fresh, new material is sprinkled with dehorned barbs aimed at Senior Citizens of the area. He claims right to pronounce nearby city "Tampur," since Mr. Kennedy gets away with saying "Kubra," tells of his car being picketed by NAACP members demanding that he replace two whitewalled tires with black, and accuses new Candlelight manager Frank Girard of "putting alcohol in drinks again."

His act is highlighted by an appealing version of "Heart in San Francisco," and finger-snapping renditions of "Birth of the Blues" and "Just In Time," which prompt repeated demands of "one more time." Byrd's plusses include personable front, a keen insight into the likings of his listeners, a trick of moving the mike far away for softening high notes and the ability to blend with inexperienced backing of Chuck Hamilton, piano-organ, and Bill Dean, drum and traps. The stint, geared for niteries and lounges, is easygoing entertainment. Olie.

ARTHUR TODD

Songs
18 Mins.
Living Room, N.Y.

Arthur Todd has obviously been around but hasn't tenanted VARIETY New Act file as yet. He's a tall, personable baritone of fullbodied voice and a catalog that should hold up well in most situations. Despite the failure of the airconditioning system on night caught, Todd overcame this tremendous handicap with a vigorous song selection.

Todd works mainly in a big manner. He has robust pipes which are kept carefully controlled, and which work out well for the musical comedy tunes he assays. Todd can also do justice to a ballad. During his encore period, he performs with greater ease and a more informal mien by opening his collar. It seems to give him a wider personality range. Jose.

GEORDIE HORMEL & HIS TRIO

Songs
45 Mins.
White House, Minneapolis

Geordie Hormel, perhaps best known as Leslie Caron's ex and the heir to the Hormel Packing Co. fortune, has packed up a nifty prize in the form of a highly gifted trio which shapes as a socko nitery comer. Hormel deserves lotsa credit for putting this combo together. Individually and in toto, his trio smacks of jazz class.

A versatile musician himself, Hormel mainly handles the vocal end of the act but also fills in on piano and takes a pleasing turn on the vibes. Leader opens each trick at the 88. After warming the keys in a few neat selections, he makes way for Pat Moran. From then on, the act really soars.

Miss Moran, onetime pianist with Terry Gibbs' band and combo, is a standout instrumentalist in the Errol Garner tradition. She definitely rates as one of the top femmes on the ivories. Equally adept are Charles Green on bass and Milt Turner, who spent four ears with Ray Charles' aggregation, on drums. It's a mellow, well integrated group offering quiet, easy listening jazz. Hormel's vocals are less rousing than the trio's backing although he does right well on such slow ballads as "Warm is the Word for You."

Current three-week outing is the foursome's third since getting together this spring. They previously appeared at the Lighthouse in Los Angeles and in an L.A. suburban spot. Act is a surefire b.o. draw in this locale. Hormel's name is wellknown here in his home state, and the White House was jampacked at midweek show caught. Future bookings appear to be speculative, but there's a possibility of a European tour this fall and a jaunt to Russia in early '64. If Hormel's diverse interests don't squelch things, act should be in line for plenty of bistro and recording offers. Rees.

Likelihood is that Yarnell's name will be dropped from the ballot because he too was given a 10-year suspension.

There are three wives of present AGVA employees running for office. Ruth Weber, wife of Rex Weber, Boston rep of the union, is running as Atlanta delegate. Linda Compton, wife of the Chi rep, is a candidate for recording secretary, and Sally De May, married to Sid De May, in charge of the AGVA Youth Fund, is running as delegate at large.

Baltimore's Future as Road Date; Final Season for Guild at Ford's

Baltimore, July 9.

Legitimate theatre in Baltimore, which has been moving uncertainly from season to season for last few years since it was stated that Ford's Theatre, city's only legitimate house, was being sold to department store chain for redevelopment of property as parking lot, will definitely continue through next season, according to Morris Mechanic, owner and operator of Ford's who will build new theatre to replace it.

Mechanic disclosed, with Willard Keefe of Theater Guild, that Guild subscription series will include six shows, five of which are to be shown at Ford's.

The sixth, "Camelot," will be booked into the new Civic Center for one week May 11 because by that time, department store chain will have taken over Ford's for razing.

Revelation that "Camelot" would be shown at the civic center, a $14,000,000 structure seating around 13,000, raised a few eyebrows here. Building has been used for circus, ice shows, concerts, "The Mikado," jamborees, Royal Ballet, ice hockey games and other events.

Most programs, have come off satisfactorily, save for "The Mikado" and The Royal Ballet. Patrons of those objected to the vastness of the building, the sound, line of vision, aisle vendors and decision to play them there at all.

Mechanic, though, will lick these problems, he said. He's going to reduce the size of the Center by erecting a "riser" section of 1600 seats close to the stage and by having a curtain brought down from ceiling to establish intimacy needed for legitimate productions.

The closed-in seating capacity, he said, will be about 2,500, including both riser section and first levels on either side of stage.

He said he feels that he can do better financially, in one week at the Civic Center, than he could do in two weeks at Ford's.

"I'm gambling," Mechanic said, "but I'm going to make it work."

The new theatre, which will replace Ford's, will be built as part of Charles Center, in-city redevelopment project. Budgeted at about $4,500,000, it will have auditorium suitable to for both proscenium and semi-arena staging and will hold about 1,500 to 1,800 people.

Catholic Family Trade And Summer Theatres; List 9 As 'Completely Objectionable'

Albany, July 9.

The Evangelist, official weekly publication of the Albany Catholic Diocese, in a summary Thursday (4) for Catholic family guidance to plays current or upcoming at Summer houses, listed three as for "family," 20 for "adults," nine as "partly objectionable," and nine as "completely objectionable." Evangelist was relying on reviews printed earlier in The Sign of Jersey City.

Family entertainment can be found in "Little Mary Sunshine," "Man for All Seasons," "Wildcat."

Plays for adults are: "Boy Friend," "Calculated Risk," "Call Me Madam," "Carnival," "Come Blow Your Horn," "Corn Is Green," "Desert Song," "Fantasticks," "Far Country," "King and I," "Lord Pengo," "Man and Superman," "Mother Courage and Her Children," "Oklahoma," "Paint Your Wagon," "Pgymalion," "Red Mill," "Showboat" and "Unsinkable Molly Brown."

The "partly objectionable" stage offerings are: "Brigadoon," "Damn Yankees," "Finian's Rainbow," "Guys and Dolls," "Kiss Me Kate," "Pajama Game," "Skin of Our Teeth," "South Pacific" and "Tender Trap."

"Completely objectionable" group comprises: "I Am a Camera," "Irma La Douce," "Long Day's Journey Into Night," "Night of the Iguana," "Period of Adjustment," "Shot In the Dark," "Strictly Dishonorable," "Sunday in New York" and "Threepenny Opera."

"Shot in the Dark" had productions at three area summer theatres last week.

The National Repertory Theatre Foundation has moved its headquarters in Manhattan to an eastside maisonette.

500TH PLAY STAGED

Gage's Count Between Sundry Theatres of His Connection

When the curtain rings up July 29 on "Oklahoma" at the Allenberry Playhouse, Boiling Springs, Pa., it'll mark the 500th production in the 25-year career of the stock theatre's managing director, Richard North Gage. Of the presentations, more than 200 have been produced at the Allenberry, founded 15 years ago by Gage and Charles A. B. Heinze. The Playhouse season, which began late in April, runs 28 weeks through October.

Before embarking on the Allenberry venture, Gage was associated with community theatre groups in Harrisburg, Pa.; Youngstown, O., and Charleston, W.Va. He also directed the Milford (Conn.) Players and produced shows for the armed forces at Yuma, Cal.

Appellate Rules Stahls Repudiated 'Lady's' Contract

N. Y. Appellate Division has reversed N. Y. Supreme Court Justice Owen McGiven's dismissal last February of Herman Levin's suit to prevent the eviction of his production of "My Fair Lady" from the Mark Hellinger Theatre, N. Y. Justice McGiven, in deciding in favor of defendants Max and Stanley Stahl, owners of the Hellinger, ruled the production had violated its contract with the theatre.

Contract violations cited by McGiven concerned two-for-one discount tickets and advertising procedures. However, the Appellate Division, in a three-to-two reversal last week of Justice McGiven's decision, stated that it appeared the Stahls broke and repudiated their contract with Levin by instructing the Hellinger boxoffice to stop the sale of tickets to "Lady" as of December, 1961.

The Main Stem production of "Lady" closed last Sept. 29 at the Broadway Theatre, N. Y., having moved there from the Broadhurst, to which it transferred when evicted from the Hellinger. The Appellate Division ruling obviously can't help "Lady" at this late date, but it's possible Levin may now institute a claim against the Stahls for alleged monetary damages.

'FRINGE' TOURING CO. STARTS ON BROADWAY

The touring edition of "Beyond the Fringe" which opens Aug. 5 at the Hartford Theatre, Los Angeles, will debut July 22 on Broadway. The company will go into the Golden Theatre, N. Y., while the original British troupe vacations for two weeks. Following the fortnight stint, the road company will plane to the Coast.

Cast for Alexander H. Cohen's carbon of his Broadway presentation will consist of Patrick Carter, William Christopher Patrick Horgan and Paxton Whitehead. Cohen, who imported the British revue by arrangement with London producers William Donaldson and Donald Albery, also staged the Broadway production, a function he'll repeat for the road facsimile.

The L.A. date is scheduled to run three weeks. A four-week engagement at the Geary Theatre, San Francisco, starting Aug. 26 follows. Show will then play a week each at the Orpheum Theatre, Minneapolis, and the Pabst Theatre, Milwaukee, prior to moving to Chicago for an Oct. 7 opening at the Studebaker Theatre there. The Broadway production is now in its 38th click week at the Golden with Alan Bennett, Peter Cook, Dudley Moore and Jonathan Miller performing their own material.

The London original is still at the Fortune Theatre in that city where it opened in May, 1961.

Lacey as the Rat Wife

Edinburgh, July 9.

Catherine Lacey is to take the small but important role of the Rat Wife in Ibsen's "Little Eyolf," believed by many to be the most subtle and searching of his plays, when it is substituted for the same playwright's "When We Dead Awaken" at Lyceum Theatre here during second week of the International Festival. Role was made famous long ago by Mrs. Patrick Campbell.

"Awaken" was cancelled owing to casting difficulties.

Show will be mounted by the 59 Theatre Company, with Michael Elliott directing. Designer is Riette Sturge Moore, and the lighting is by Theatre Projects. Cast includes James Maxwell, Dilys Hamlett, Avril Elgar and Eric Thompson.

'She Loves Me' $290,000 in Red

"She Loves Me," now in its 12th week at the O'Neill Theatre, N.Y., has a deficit of over $290,000 on its $300,000 investment. The musical cost $244,985 to produce, but operating losses of $50,192 on a four-week out-of-town tryout and $18,638 on a week of previews at the O'Neill brought the tab on opening the show at that house last April 23 to $313,815.

The overall operating profit for the presentation's first nine weeks at the O'Neill ending June 22 was $20,174. That reduced the unrecovered costs on the venture, according to an audit of that date, to $293,641. That amount isn't figured to have changed much in the two weeks since the accounting.

The musical's top gross during the nine-week period was $48,384 on which the operating profit was $6,165. On $38,144, the tuner's smallest take for that stretch, the operating profit was $814. Barbara Cook, Daniel Massey and Barbara Baxley costar in the musical, produced by Harold Prince, in association with Lawrence Kasha and Philip McKenna.

Based on the Miklos Laszlo play, "Parfumerie," the tuner has a book by Joe Masteroff, music by Jerry Bock and lyrics by Sheldon Harnick.

OFF-B'WAY VENTURES RE-SPROUT OVERSEAS

Two entries, of off-Broadway origin, were given their initial European presentations last month. "O Marry Me," Lola Pergament's musical version of Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," with music by Robert Kessler, opened an English engagement at the Theatre Royal, Windsor. It was a 1961 presentation at the Gate Theatre, N. Y.

"The Coach With Six Insides," Jean Erdman's adaptation of James Joyce's "Finnegan's Wake," was performed at the Festival of the Two Worlds, Spoleto, Italy, with Miss Erdman and others of the off-Broadway production repeating their roles. The company is scheduled to play the International Theatre Festival in Paris prior to returning to New York. "Coach" was presented last season at the Village South Theatre, N.Y.

Sadler's Wells Deficit

London, July 9.

Norman Tucker, Director of Sadler's Wells Theatre, forecasts that the theatre may have a deficit of around $84,000 over next year's activities. Two years ago the theatre was in the red to the tune of about $224,000. This had been reduced to about $140,000 but after next year the deficit could easily be back at $224,000 market.

Tucker claims that, even with consistently full houses, the present price of seats would not cover costs. He and his directors were considering re-blocking the seats so that there were more expensive seats available.

It was hoped to avoid raising the prices of the cheaper ones.

Five new productions are planned for the 1963-64 repertoire, "Der Freiscutz," "Peter Grimes," "Atilla," "Hanzel and Gretel" and "Janacek."

'Simple Man' in 65G Deficit Rattle; Merrick Stokes Engine for '63-'64

By JESSE GROSS

"Rattle of a Simple Man," one of the four imports presented on Broadway last season by David Merrick, folded last Saturday night (6) at an estimated $65,000 loss on its $75,000 investment. Only two of the foreign originals are still running on the Main Stem. They're the click British musicals, "Oliver" and "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off."

The other import brought over by the producer during the 1962-63 semester was "Tchin-Tchin," which ended an unsuccessful Broadway run last May. "Oliver" and "World" are Merrick's only New York entries at present. He's also represented on the road, though, by a touring edition of "World."

The producer, who during the height of the legit season usually has several more shows in operation, will start bringing new product to the Main Stem at the end of September with the openings of "The Rehearsal" at the Royale Theatre and "Luther" at the St. James Theatre. Both are British originals.

Skedded for a late October opening at the Broadhurst Theatre, N. Y., is Merrick's production of "110 in the Shade," a musical version of "The Rainmaker." His production schedule also includes a musical workover of "The Matchmaker," as well as numerous other tuners and straight plays.

"Rattle" cost $50,963 to produce with special advertising costs of $11,000 raising the tab to $61,963. However, that figure, according to a June 1 audit, was reduced to $46,719 after the deduction of $15,244 in operating profit on the comedy's four-week out-of-town tryout.

An overall operating loss of $11,228 was registered by the Charles Dyer comedy in its first seven weeks at the Booth Theatre N. Y., leaving the presentation with a deficit of 57,947 as of June 1. On the basis of business since then, unrecouped costs are figured to have climbed to around $65,000. The comedy, which Merrick presented with British producer Michael Condron, costarred Tammy Grimes and Edward Woodward in

Legit, Opera, Film Stands Set Up Bus Service

Woodstock, N.Y., July 9.

Woodstock Playhouse has taken the initiative, with the Guild Cinema, the Turnau Opera Co., a local restaurant and a cafe, in arranging for bus service which will bring vacationists from neighboring resort communities into Woodstock, four nights a week, in time to take in a legit performance, attend a motion picture or hear opera, and to return to their bases the same evening.

Hotel and motel proprietors within a 30-mile radius have been asked to contact Edgar Rosenblum, at the Playhouse, if they wish to participate in expansion of the bus transportation.

Woodstock, in The Catskill Mountains, is an art center.

Six Tuners Pend, Might Put Italy Back On the Map

Rome, July 9.

It is hoped here that the fall may see a comeback of the musical theatre in Italy. If current plans jell, there'll be six new shows plus two revivals hitting principal Italian centres during the 1963-64 period, as against only three during the past season.

Garichei-Giovannini staging of "My Fair Lady," opening early in November in Milan with Delia Scala, Gianrico Tedeschi, and Carlo Ninchi is the most eagerly awaited new item. It will however only play Milan and Rome, according to current plans.

Also on the fall agenda are two musicals based on the same personality: the legendary bandit Masaniello. One, titled "Maglietta Blu" (Blue Shirt), will be written and directed by Eduardo DeFilippo and will be produced and acted by Domenico Modugno. Modugno recently played a similar role, that of the bandit-patriot Rinaldo in Garinei-Giovannini's successful "Rinaldo in Campo."

The second "Masaniello" will star Macario and Nino Taranto and should start at Milan's Nuovo Theatre in November. Other sure starter is Carlo Dapporto, in a still-untitled review.

On the maybe list for this fall are a return to the musical stage of Anna Magnani in an item penned by Michele Galdieri, who has written most of the actress' past musical hits, plus another review to star Mario Pisu and Marisa Del Frate, slated for a tentative October debut.

Revivals include Garieni-Giovannini's "Rugantino" — actually a move-over from its Rome run—which opens in Milan this fall before hitting Broadway, courtesy of Alex Cohen, next year; and another G-G hit of the past, "Buonanotte Bettina" (Goodnight, Bettina). "Bettina," revived this past winter with a cast headed by Walter Chiari and Alida Chelli, fared so well (some say it hit a high $5,000 per day) during its repeat Milan run that it will hit the road again come next season.

SEE 16 WEEKS FOR 'LADY' IN MANCHESTER

Manchester, Eng., July 9.

London production of "My Fair Lady" is set to open its U.K. tour here Oct. 31 under the H. M. Tennent banner. It will stay at the Opera House for 16 weeks.

When it winds its London Drury Lane run Oct. 19, it will have notched up 2,281 performances, a record in the theatre's 300-years' history. It has been seen there by over 4,000,000 customers; at one time the advance booking reached a figure of $750,000.

The London cast, headed by Charles Stapley, Tonia Lee, James Hayter and Zena Dare, will be seen here.

15 As Core of Seattle Repertory; Opens With 'Lear'; 30-Week Plan

Seattle, July 9.

Seattle Repertory Theatre, being created here by Stuart Vaughn for the Center Playhouse, will begin its 30-week season Nov. 13 with "King Lear."

The theatre will be an Equity house, with Vaughn expecting to pay above Equity minimums. Selection of the 15-player nucleus is nearly completed, but contracts are not yet firm, with the exception of two—Helen Quarrier, who is also Mrs. Vaughn, and Pauline Flanagan.

Following "Lear" will come Max Frisch's "The Firebugs"; Christopher Fry's "The Lady's Not for Burning"; Anton Chekhov's "The Sea Gull" and Robert Ardrey's "Shadow of Heroes."

Vaughn will direct the Shakespeare, Fry and Ardrey productions and his associate director Andre Gregory will stage the Frisch and Chekhov plays.

While Vaughn is rehearsing the "Lear" cast for the Nov. 13 premiere, Gregory will be preparing the "Firebugs" cast for a first performance Nov. 20. The other plays will be scheduled to open at intervals of five weeks or longer. The last, "Shadow of Heroes," expected to go on the boards in March.

The plays will continue in a rotating schedule for the 30-week season.

The repertory theatre, backed by an underwriting fund of $200,000 by Century 21 Center, is expected to lose around $70,000 the first season. Ticket prices have not been set, but Vaughn is hoping to have a sliding scale of $3.50, $2.50 and $1.50. A campaign to sell series tickets is planned to begin soon.

William S. Taylor is business manager of the new company. The 15 players, plus Gregory and technicians are due here the first week in September.

The Mackerel Plaza

Westport, Conn., July 1.

Theatre Guild production (associate producer, Kenneth Mays) of comedy in three acts by William McCleery, based on the novel by Peter De Vries. Staged by Cyril Ritchard; decor, Stewart Chaney. Stars Hal Holbrook, Loring Smith. Opened July 1, '63, at Westport Country Playhouse, Westport, Conn.; $5.50 top.

Andrew Mackerel ..... Hal Holbrook
Hester Pedlock ..... Mary Foskett
Mrs. Cool-Paintey ..... Katherine Raht
Frank Turnbull ..... Loring Smith
Molly Calico ..... Carol Rossen
Ed Meesum ..... Joseph Bernard
Mrs. Calico ..... Philippa Bevans

Pun-prone Peter De Vries' novel of several years back, "The Mackerel Plaza," obviously read a lot better to the Theatre Guild than it sounds in the William McCleery stage translation introduced at the Westport Country Playhouse. Even by summertime's kind standards the piece scarcely justifies the effort to date, and substantial major reconditioning is indicated.

As play fare the comedy about the romantic and theological meandering of a small-town liberal minister lacks excitement, labors too hard to utilize the book's bright lines and goes to pot in a poor last act. In his direction the usually expert Cyril Ritchard doesn't manage to make the key character worth the interest. Nor is it for sure that the casting of Hal Holbrook is right as the idealistic parson who resorts to clandestine loving to protect the hallowed memory of his late wife; such a dominie might conceivably be theatrical fun, but it doesn't happen that way in "The Mackerel Plaza."

The title, incidentally, is the name intended for a shopping center planned by a conniving real estate developer against the wishes of the cleric widower. The good fight is lost because the Reverend Mr. Mackerel has had the bad fortune to succumb to the attractiveness of a transitory redhead, while he would have done better by himself and his church had he properly assessed his admiring housekeeper.

In the broadly-written role of the congregation's big benefactor who spends most of his time confessing his past amours, Loring Smith is quite helpful. Carol Rossen fits the visual requisites of the gal whose figure conquers the clergyman, but the part is too complex to emerge with definition. Mary Foskett is effective in the conventional role of the loving housekeeper. Philippa Bevans is diverting as the giddy mother of the roving redhead.

Stewart Chaney's setting serves to provide the inner sanctum where the parson attempts his love-making and the parlor where, considering the small cast, a surprising number of characters sometimes traipse in to give De Vries' admirers a pun for their money.

The Absence of a Cello

New Hope, Pa., July 2.

Michael Ellis production of three-act comedy by Ira Wallach; stars Fred Clark, Ruth White, Murray Hamilton. Nancy Wickwire, Ruth McDevit; directed by James Hammerstein; setting, Clarke Dunham; lighting, Robert Brand costumes, Georgene; opened June 24, '63, at Bucks County Playhouse.

Marian Jellicoe ..... Nancy Wickwire
Andrew Pilgrim ..... Fred Clark
Celia Pilgrim ..... Ruth White
Emma Littlewood ..... Ruth McDevitt
Perry Blewitt ..... Walter Moulder
Joanna Pilgrim ..... Marilyn Wayne
Otis Clifton ..... Murray Hamilton

"The Absence of a Cello" is a pleasant, brittle witty piece with audience appeal that could, with astute carpentry, plus a top comedy director such as George Abbott or someone who can give playwright Ira Wallach a firm constructive assist, prove a Broadway moneymaker and a good bet for films.

Based on the author's novel of the same name, the play concerns a nonconformist research scientist whose financial problems force him to apply for a position with a large appliance manufacturing company.

Since the comedy is swift-moving and only two hours long, any suggested changes would have to be in the form of rewrites rather than extensive cuts.

The main structural fault lies in the lack of clear differentiation between two basic plot conflicts. Is the playwright's paramount concern a man's decision whether or not to sacrifice his personal values for the family financial gain or is the main issue an organized family "snow-job," staged to convince a pompous personnel director that genius too can be forced to fit the corporate mold through sacrificing individuality.

Despite this lack of complete clarity over whether main issue is individuality versus conformity, or personal integrity versus love-loyalty, and although the first act laughs are slow in coming and act three is overly studded with similes, the play contains some rapid-fire dialog which kept opening nighters laughing like backers.

The adroit cast is exceptionally well-balanced. Fred Clark, vet actor, is superb as the cello-playing scientist who masters the hang of delivering organization cliches with sarcastic perfection and a priceless grimace. Ruth White is fine as his intellectual wife, who attempts to hide her background of college degree and self-authored textbooks under a clubwoman, slick-magazine-reading guise. Murray Hamilton gives a perceptive portrayal of the personnel-man and supplies love interest for attractive Nancy Wickwire, the scientist's single sister. Ruth McDevitt is hilarious as a well-meaning neighbor with a penchant for shoplifting because "everyone needs a hobby." Marilyn Wayne and Walter Moulder are acceptable as the Radcliff daughter of the house, and her stuffed shirt fiancee, characters which in their present form lack sufficient depth and plot purpose to render them believable.

No Chi-Chi, She, Writes Peggy Wood; Deplores Report on East Haddam

Editor, VARIETY:

Your Robert Echelson's piece about The Goodspeed Opera House was about as snide a composition as I have ever read, anyplace. Jean Dalrymple and I are going to treasure the description of two old pros as "Chi Chi" (sic) as our reward for the years of work we have put in to get this marvelous old theatre restored and functioning.

Is it of no interest to VARIETY that one more theatre is in operation rather than that one more theatre has been torn down?

And so the Last Haddam "natives" (they are going to love that!) "snub" the whole business? Now do you call that news? The Stratford, Conn. "natives" in interviews only last week in the Sunday Times declared they hadn't thought much of the Shakespeare Festival Theater when it was first proposed to the town but, as one man put it, "With all those people coming to see the plays they were bound to spend some money in the shops and it has turned out real well." The residents of Stratford, Ontario, according to Dr. Tyrone Guthrie's book, "A Life in the Theater," told him and Tom Patterson over and over again, "It can't be done. It can't be done." So what's so remarkable about the East Haddam folks?

As for the apparel of the customers, isn't Echelson being a little class-conscious? The Goodspeed's hope is that it will attract people from all over the country, as in Central City (where the only other building like The Goodspeed in this country exists) and as in Aspen, Col.

Maybe Echelson should raise his sights.

Peggy Wood.

(Robert Echelson, Hartford correspondent of VARIETY, covered the Goodspeed Opera House opening period as a feature story. He expressed the "native" opinion of the restoration, saying "Most feel the house is mainly for the downstate Connecticut and New York City money set who supplied the tax-free moola. East Haddam natives seem to feel the "chi-chi" set will dominate and influence its operation." It is this comment which Peggy Wood seemingly finds "snide." The Goodspeed, built in 1876, reportedly represented a restoration investment of $700,000. There are 345 seats. Echelson also alluded to the policy of formal dress at the Tuesday openings, scaled at $6.50.—Ed)

Shows Abroad

A Severed Head

London, June 28.

Donald Albery (for Demar Productions Ltd.) presentatoin of a three-act play by Iris Murdoch & J. B. Priestley. Staged by Val May; decor, Graham Barlow. Stars Robert Hardy, Heather Chasen, Sheila Burrell, Paul Eddington. Features Monica Evans, Barbara Leigh-Hunt, Christopher Benjamin. Opened June 27, '63 at the Criterion Theatre, London. $3.15 top.

Martin Lynch-Gibbon ..... Robert Hardy
Georgie Hands ..... Monica Evans
Antonia ..... Heather Chasen
Palmer Anderson ..... Paul Eddington
Rosemary ..... Barbara Leigh-Hunt
Alexander ..... Christopher Benjamin
Honor Klein ..... Sheila Burrell

The skilled veteran playwright J.B. Priestley has collaborated with the sardonic novelist Irene Murdoch in adapting her early book for the stage. Somehow the result hasn't fully jelled and its transfer from the Bristol Old Vic to the West End does not promise much boxoffice activity. Val May has staged the play with briskness but has not tutored his mummers sufficiently to prevent a jarring clash of acting styles. Some play with ponderous seriousness, others strive for ready farcical yoks. Missing is the seemingly essential, modulated tongue-in-cheek relish. Paul Eddington and Heather Chasen come closest to what is needed.

The plot is virtually a game of sexual musical chairs. Of the cast of seven, only one (Barbara Leigh-Hunt) is apparently not popping in or out of bed with one of the others. In between their mattress activity they yak about their problems with varying degreees of wit and effect.

Robert Hardy has a wife and a young mistress and also falls in love with the half sister of a psychoanalyist who is having affaires with his, Hardy's, wife, Hardy's and, for incestuous kick, his own half sister. Hardy's brother also takes a swift pass at Hardy's mistress On the printed page there was miss Murdock's disciplined wit and smooth flow of narration.

In stage form there is some brightly witty dialog and the evening does not drag even though it rarely touches the come heights that if promises. Hardy as the bewildered hero is too energetic and tends to bring the high style spoof on promiscuity down to bedroom farce level. As previously noted, Eddington and Miss Chasen play their roles of the psychoanalyst and the frothy wife with superb, stylish comedy, aided by some imaginative touches of direction .

Monica Evans as the young mistress wavers. She has some excellent moments, but others, perhaps it is the fault of the adaptation, in which she wobbles into almost ludicrous melodrama. Sheila Burrell, the incestuous half sister who is an anthropologist, and a rather sinister character,has to cope with an overdrawn part and does it with dark skill though its impact is exaggerated. She will be remembered in future legit history as the actress who, if the audience's eyes are not deceived, so quick is the scene, appears naked to the waist in bed with her brother (As the Lord Chamberlain becoming benevolent?) Barbara Leigh-Hunt and Christopher Benjamin carry out routine roles competently.

The small Criterion stage is ingeniously mounted with slick moving inserts in Graham Barlow's imaginative decor. Rich.

Say It In French

Dublin, July 3.

Len Gould Productions presentation of comedy in three acts (five scenes) by Frank Byrne. Staged by Barry Cassin; setting, James Mahon. Stars Arthur O'Sullivan and Deanna Shenderey. Opened July 2, '63 at Gas Company Theatre, Dun Laoghaire, Dublin; $1.50 top.

Julia ..... Ruth Durley
Patsy ..... Sheila Donald
Joseph ..... Arthur O'Sullivan
Leo ..... Eamon Morrissey
Paulette ..... Deanna Shenderey
Nelson ..... Neil Ryan
Peter Pilkington-Price .... Peter Mayock

With Irish theatre currently short on comedy this piece about a French showgirl's impact on middle-class family of Dublin saloon keeper, tickled the customers even if it left no lasting joy. Establishment of situation is a bit labored, but author Byrne has a good sense of comedy character and has provided some dialogue and situations good for yoks from the customers.

Comedy is exploited by characters very much larger than life in a good realistic set. Barry Cassin makes his players work hard for the laughs, and once over the creaky opening situations it moves amusingly, mainly due to Arthur O'Sullivan as unpretentious saloonkeeper with a typical Dublin approach to life. Piece enables Byrne to get off cracks on late marriages, matriarchal influence on Irish sons, shady political deals and current London model-girl news.

In Ruth Durley he has a twittering mother-figure who projects more than comedy, veering to farce. Deanna Shenderey imported from London for the central role, gives a caricature impression of a French girl but she's easy on the eyes in the role and keeps the attention of the males in the audience. Peter Mayock is a comparative newcomer to Irish stage but he has a nice style as a lanky silly-ass comic and makes the most of his business and lines. Young girl of the family, played by Sheila Donald, is pale impression; son (Eamon Morrissey) is stock overgrown student character but injects some fun into mother's boy role.

Cassin directs with considerable pace in a small set, and piece should have prospects after tightening first scene. Max.

Revival of Edmond Rostand's "Cyrano de Bergerac," with John Colicos playing the title-role, is the third play at the current Stratford (Ontario) Festival. As staged by Michael Langham, from Brian Hooker's translation, the three-act play is a personal triumph for Colicos. Other main roles are filled by people who more than satisfy vocally and physically.

All the characters in this romance existed, though Rostand has used license in the manufacture of the three-sided comedy-drama of long-nosed Cyrano, (John Colicos); redhead Roxane (Diana Maddox); and blond Christian (Peter Donat).

Richness of voice, with clarity of emotion in his unrequited love for Roxane, make of this Cyrano a sympathetic character. This is especially evident in the famous balcony scene, where he deputizes for Christian, and in the famed "Nose" speech in which Christian twists him about his deformity. Actor is seemingly brilliant in his swordsmanship.

Dianne Maddox does well as the beloved, Peter Donat ditto as Christian, William Hutt is excellent as the staunch friend of Cyrano. Notice also due Leo Ciceri as the cold Compte de Guiche caught up in his passion for Roxane, and Eric Christmas, the pastry-maker-poet and feeder of all the bums of Paris.

Rich and inventive staging of Michael Langham, glowing costumes and production values of Tanya Moiseiwitsch and Desmond Heeley all are assets. McStay.

'Carousel' $82,800, 'Lady' 55G (4), L.A.; 'Milk' $46,780, Chi; 'Sound' $42,342, D.C.

San Francisco will have three musicals again this week with the move into the Geary Theatre tomorrow (Thurs.) of "Milk and Honey." "Stop the World—I Want to Get Off" transferred from the Geary last Saturday (6) to the Hartford Theatre, Los Angeles. The other two Frisco tuners, both big grossers last week along with "Carousel" and "My Fair Lady," in Los Angeles, are "Camelot" and "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

The booking of "Milk" in Frisco constituted a change of plans for the musical, which cut short a stand at the Shubert Theatre, Chicago. It had originally been scheduled to play Chicago through Nov. 9. The "Mary, Mary" company in Detroit closes next Saturday (13) and it's figured the other touring edition of the comedy in "Philadelphia" may layoff soon, prior to reopening on the Coast for a fall tour.

Estimates for Last Week

Parenthetic designations for out-of-town shows are the same as for Broadway, except that hyphenated T with show classification indicates tryout, RS indicates road show and BT indicates bus-and-truck production. Also, prices on touring shows include 10% Federal tax and local tax, if any, but as on Broadway grosses are net; i.e., exclusive of taxes. Engagements are for single week unless otherwise noted.

Where subscription is mentioned, the gross is the net after the deductions of commissions. Grosses for split weeks are projected when shows play guaranteed dates.

the role he originated in London. The presentation had a 12-week run at the Booth.

"Oliver," now in its 27th week at the Imperial Theatre, N. Y., is figured to have earned a profit to date of about $270,000 on its repaid $250,000 investment. Deduction of 20% of the profits to the original British management, plus an allowance of around $6,500 for unincorporated business tax, leaves a balance of approximately $213,500 for equal distribution between Merrick and the backers.

The latter's share represents a profit of about 43% on their investment. As of a June 1 audit, profits of $150,000 had been distributed equally between Merrick and the backers. Clive Revill and Georgia Brown in the role she originated overseas costar in the musical. Donald Albery, who produced the Lionel Bart adaptation of Charles Dickens' novel, "Oliver Twist," in London, is partnered with Merrick in the Broadway presentation.

The two companies of "World" are figured to have thus far netted about $445,000 on a repaid $75,000 investment. Deduction of 25% of the profits to the original British management, plus an allowance of around $12,500 for unincorporated business tax, leaves a balance of approximately $321,250 for equal distribution between Merrick and the backers.

The latter's share represents a profit of about 214% on their investment. As of a June 1 audit, profits of $287,500 had been distributed equally between Merrick and the backers. The two companies of "World," produced by Merrick in association with London producer Bernard Delfont, are headed by Anthony Newley and Anna Quayle in New York and Joel Grey and Julie Newmar on the road. Newley and Miss Quayle are repeating the roles they originated in the London production of the musical which has book, music and lyrics by Newley and Leslie Bricusse.

On Broadway, "World" is in its 41st week at the Shubert Theatre. The touring presentation is at the Hartford Theatre, Los Angeles.

Burnett $88,602, Dallas; Raye-Wallace 70G, K.C.; Skulnik $23,061, Philly

The Carol Burnett-starrer, "Calamity Jane," in the final frame of a fortnight's engagement at the State Fair Music Hall, Dallas, was the top grosser in the stock sampling below. "Wildcat," costarring Martha Raye and George Wallace, did well at the Starlight Theatre, Kansas City, and Menasha Skulnik in "Come Blow Your Horn" was a strong draw at the Playhouse in the Park, Philadelphia.

Business was off from the previous week at the Stratford Shakespeare festivals in both Connecticut and Ontario.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Figures on the recently ended 1962-63 season at the 600-seat Komoedie Theatre in Basle reveal that house is probably one of the busiest legit stands in Switzerland. Komoedie staged 26 new productions in 10 months, with a total of 751 performances including guest stints and out-of-town engagements. Number of playing days has been 312, and 15 shows have gone on tour to other Swiss cities plus Germany, Austria, Luxemburg and Italy. Artistic topper is Egon Karter. For next season starting Aug. 19, new productions will number 28, first being Peter Ustinov's "Photo Finish," followed by the Swiss bow of Brendan Behan's "Hostage," Aug. 26; the Friedrich Deurrenmatt comedy, "Hercules and the Stable of Augias," Sept. 18; Oscar Wilde's "Ideal Husband," Oct. 2; and Bertolt Brecht's "Man is Man."

B'way Blah; 'Succeed' Sole Sellout; 'Oliver' $58,259, 'Tovarich' $33,223, 'Forum' $43,135, 'Loves Me' $30,788

Broadway was clobbered last week as business continued on the decline for the third successive stanza. Most shows, holding to form for the July 4 session, registered enormous drops. The situation is expected to continue bleak for the rest of the month, although a few shows may get slight increases. Traditionally, boxoffice activity doesn't undergo major revitalization until early August.

The only show to record a capacity take last week was "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," a repeat of the corresponding week last year. "Succeed" also bettered its previous week's take, as did "Enter Laughing," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf" and "Rattle of a Simple Man," which folded Saturday (6). There are 14 productions on the boards now. The Aug. 3 exit of "No Strings" will reduce that number to 13, providing there are no shutterings in the interim.

It's likely, however, that there'll be other closings before the summer is over. On shaky ground are such offerings as "Pajama Tops," "She Loves Me" and "Tovarich."

Israeli's Best Legit Season, But Not an American Play on Boards; Stage Actors Earn $200 a Month

By JOSEPH LAPID

Tel Aviv, July 9.

Tel Aviv's legitimate is winding up a highly successful season. Habimah's b.o. was 80% higher than previous season. Habimah which is the Israeli National Theatre and will visit the U.S. next year, has sold in its two halls some 750,000 tickets. This in a city of half a million inhabitants.

Boom is explained as follows: (a) the company gave up certain artistic pretensions for the sake of the boxoffice (b) the local audience got tired of foreign performers and is turning back to the traditional (c) a talented young generation of Hebrew writers is conquering the stage (d) there is still no television in Israel.

Sex was rampant. Habimah presented "Irma La Douce," Ohel theatre had "A Shot in the Dark" and the Haifa Municipal Theatre played Brendan Behan's "The Hostage."

While American plays were heretofore an integral part of each theatre's repertoire, for the first time in years, not a single American play was performed on any stage. Since in all other aspects of Israeli life, the American influence is increasing, the only explanation left is that no recent American work has caught the Israeli managerial immagination.

The most popular dramatist here is the late Bertolt Brecht. His "The Caucasian Chalk Circle" in the Haifa Theatre was an immense success and Ohel Theatre is now coming out with "Schweik in Second World War."

(Hitler will be represented by a puppet, in order not to offend the Israeli audience).

There are about half a dozen theatre performances every evening in Tel Aviv, usually well attended. The public is highly theatre-oriented and actors gain a high measure of popularity, reserved in most countries for film stars. Despite which they earn a pittance. Since all the theatres are repertories, the actors get a monthly salary, which doesn't exceed $200. (Though a dollar is worth twice to three times its buying power in the States).

Habimah, which presents six to eight new plays in a season, works on a budget of $400,000. Of this 85% is covered by ticket sales (a ticket costs $2-3) and 15% of the budget is subsidized, partly by the American Israel Cultural Foundation of Manhattan.

Spreading Influence of Off-Broadway; Its Fare Seen Much In Hayloft s

Off-Broadway is exercising a strong influence on this season's fare at the Town & Country Musicals, East Rochester, N.Y. Six musicals are being presented at the spot this semester and of those three have off-Broadway ties.

Of the three, only one is an off-Broadway original. That's "The Fantasticks," which opened the semester at the spot June 25. The other two are Broadway oldies which have been given click off-Broadway revivals. They're "The Boys From Syracuse" and "Anything Goes."

The off-Broadway production of "Fantasticks" is still running at the Sullivan Street Playhouse, N.Y., where it preemed May 3, 1960. "Syracuse" is at Theatre Four, N.Y., where it opened April 15 to sock notices. "Anything," in which Andy Devine will star at the Town & Country, ended a 239-performance run off-Broadway last December.

"West Side Story," with Larry Kert repeating the role he originated on Broadway, is current at the East Rochester showcase. It's in the second week of a fortnight's stand and is to be followed by "Syracuse" for a single stanza, starting next Tuesday (16). "Carnival" follows for two weeks July 23-Aug. 4, then "Anything" the week of Aug. 6-11, with Pat Carroll in "Gypsy" closing the season Aug. 13-25.

CHEEK-BY-JOWL PIANISTS

Five on Consecutive Eves At Theatre Champs-Elysees

Paris, July 9.

Exceptional parade of piano concerts at the Theatre des Champs-Elysees recently, with interesting b.o. results. Usually, concert halls try to avoid booking the same type of artist two or three nights in a row. Here, tied in with the theatre's 50th anniversary, Artur Rubinstein, Rudolph Serkin, Byron Janis, Claudio Arrau and Robert Casadesus followed one another on succeeding nights.

Rubinstein, pappy of 'em all, drew approximately $17,000 for the evening at a $6 top. Serkin grossed $7,000, Janis got $8,500, Arrau about $3,500 and Casadesus about $6,500. The latter four were sold at $4 top.

Theatre's top gross for the year probably was the $60,000 (approx) garnered one evening by Maria Callas, with Georges Pretre conducting the RTF orchestra. Ducats were scaled at a $30 top.

Gift of Marble, Italy's Donation To Culturama

Washington, July 9.

Italian Government has offered to give all the marble needed to construct the proposed National Cultural Center. President Kennedy has revealed, thanking Italy for the "generous" and "splendid" offer.

Center officials were hesitant to put a money value on the gift, but one said it would probably be worth between $500,000 and $1,000,000, depending upon the type of marble finally chosen. Roughly 250,000 square feet will be required.

Discussions concerning the gift, it developed, actually started about 18 months ago between Roger L. Stevens, chairman of Center trustees, and Italian government officials.

In another development, the first major league foundation has made a financial commitment to the Center. The Ford Foundation pledged $5,000,000, with the check to be handed over as soon as the Center has raised $15,000,000 elsewhere.

Center officials say they have received about $9,000,000 in donations to date, although presumably a lot of that has been spent. The Center must pay all its operating expenses, salaries of office personnel, etc.

ALLEY'S $900,000 DRIVE TO MATCH FORD GRANT

Houston, July 9.

Alley Theatre has launched the biggest drive of its career—the raising of $900,000 by Aug. 1. The money must be raised to qualify for a $2,100,000 grant from the Ford Foundation, largest ever to a theatre.

Dudley C. Sharp, former Air Force secretary, has been named drive chairman.

Money raised will be used to build a new theatre building.

New West End Theatre

London, July 9.

Another new theatre is planned for the West End. It will be on the site of Drury Lane's Winter Garden which has been dark for a long time. The playhouse will be part of a development scheme involving $4,200,000. Attached to the theatre will be a restaurant and bar, shops, apartments and an underground car park. The theatre will seat between 500 and 600 people.

Winter Garden Theatre opened in 1919 and was bought by the Rank Organization in 1945.

Sara Greenspan Exits Guild After 38 Years

Sara Greenspan, who's been with the Theatre Guild for 38 of its 44 years of operation, will retire next Thursday (11). She was given a farewell party yesterday (Tues.) at Sardi's Restaurant, N.Y., by Armina Marshall, Philip Langer and Warren Caro, officers of the Guild.

Miss Greenspan, who's been business manager for the firm for almost 20 years, joined the organization in 1925 as secretary to the late co-founder, Theresa Helburn. She and her husband, Meyer Levy, leave next Friday (12) for a two-month tour of South America. Her duties at the guild will be taken over by Anna May Franklin, secretary to guild attorney H. William Fitelson.

Jacob's Pillow Clicks Its 30th

By JAMES L. CONNERS

Lee, Mass., July 9.

The 30th anniversary of Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival opened June 25 with a performance by the Ballet Espanol Ximines-Vargas in the barn-like theatre, following a characteristically pre-curtain talk to "My Friends" from founder Ted Shawn, and the traditional garden party for guests. Perfect weather prevailed. There was enthusiastic, and sometimes colorful, repsonse from the audience.

Shawn, who suffered a heart attack two years ago, was in a mood at once reminiscent, jovial, religious and challenging. Speaking of the first performance at the Pillow—picturesquely located on the side of a mountain in the Berkshires—Shawn recalled the July 14, 1933 afternoon when the premiere was given. Staged in what is now the rehearsal hall, the dancers were a troupe of young men Shawn had inspired to follow him. Audience, then numbered 45.

Shawn explained that the public performance had been the brainchild of F. Cowles Strickland, founder of the Berkshire Playhouse in nearby Stockbridge. Shawn's most vivid recollection of that day was one of "skepticism."

However, the dean of serious American dancing said, and repeated, that his plans had a way of non-materializing, while his dreams "invariably come true." Striking a spiritual note, Shawn commented that "Dancing is the greatest demonstration of God's activity on earth."

"Dancing," he added, "is the maker of all the arts. They are all born through or out of it."

Despite Shawn's age, he is always thinking of the future: "How can I top this year's program next year, and next year's by the one which follows."

After submitting a report on the fortunes and misfortunes of last year—a leak over the stage which required "a major reroofing job," the winter snows that badly damaged the cottage named in honor of his long-time partner, Ruth St. Denis," etc.—Shawn launched into a plea for "participation" by the audience. The stamping of feet, clapping of hands, and shouting of "Bravos" during the performance had a "therapeutic value."

Shawn conceded that he is "a ham" and is "corny," but contended that both "ham" and "corn" contribute to nourishing entertainment.

Art Lewis Maps London Tuner on Joe Grimaldi

London, July 9.

Arthur Lewis plans a late fall opening for his production of the Ron Moody musical, "Joey, Esq.," based on an incident in the life of Joe Grimaldi, the clown. The London-resident American producer explains that the show will not be a pre-Broadway tryout, but is an English project.

Moody has written the book, lyrics and music and will also play the title role. It will be his first West End appearance since he portrayed Fagin in "Oliver."

Lewis intends to import a director and choreographer from the U.S., but the cast not yet engaged, will be predominantly British. No theatre is set.

Moody began working on the musical 12 years ago, and says he has turned down a number of film and legit offers in order to concentrate on it.

Of 55 Houses, 40 Dark In Paris As French Go Loco For L'Auto

Paris, July 9.

Paris has (a) the most legit houses of any major city and (b) the most new and revived plays every year, but (c) goes slow theatrically in the summer. In fact with the Frenchmen's madness for autos many legiters begin to drop Sunday performances as early as April and are now going dark as early as May rather than the usual late June and July closings.

Over 40 of the 55 legit houses are closed but several will be reopening in late July and early August for any visitor biz. This week Marcel Achard's seven year bonzanza "Patate" comes back to the Saint-Georges after a brief hiatus as well as the hoary but fave piece "L'Aiglon" to the Chatelet and the long-running Claude Magnier farce "Oscar" to the Potre Saint-Martin.

State-operated Opera-Comique reopens in August and the Varieties brings back the hit Robert Dhery musical comedy "La Grosse Valse" while Robert Thomas' suspense item "Eight Women" returns to the Bouffes-Parisiens. Mime Marcel Marceau, sans words and so acceptable for any tourists, expects to continue his one-man show through the summer at the Renaissance and an old Barillet and Gredy hit, "Adele's Giff," comes back to the Ambigu with originator Gaby Syvlia.

Theatre De Tertre continues with Ibsen's "Rosmersholm" and the Vieux-Colombier will go the summer with its hit Federico Garcia Lorca reprise "Blood Wedding." In fact a Spanish version of the play will come to the Athenee for a few weeks to try to hit the growing worker group of Spanish-speaking peoples here.

Add some perennial spicy comedies like "Cherie Noire," with Yank actress Marpessa Dawn, "Choir Boys" and "Boeing-Boeing," plus festivals, to make up the brunt of straight summer legit. The operetta "The Merry Widow" at the Mogador also holds on.

But the leading summer fare is always the musical revue featuring nudes, one name and big or little production numbers. The Folies-Bergere and Casino De Paris are the leads in this type of classic fare and are both sporting solid shows and look to go on for years yet.

Music Halls rule two-a-day vaude in favor of revues. Alhambra has tried with an African Ballet for only so-so results while L'Etoile has brought back the Yank gospel show "Black Nativity," which hit last January, for a short profitable run.

Olympia has built a revue around female impersonator Coccinelle, now a "real woman" after an operation, "Cherchez La Femme," which may go the summer on her or his tourist pull. ABC has a nude show as does the European, and the Concert Mayol goes on with its smaller scale but racier undraped entry.

'WILDCAT' PARTNERSHIP

Carmel Quinn's Legit Debut With Announcer McMahon

Ed McMahon, announcer on the Johnny Carson NBC-TV "Tonight" show, will costar Aug. 13-18 with singer Carmel Quinn in "Wildcat" at the Packard Music Hall, Warren, O. The musical is being presented there by John Kenley who's done extremely well in the past headlining Hugh Downs, the "Tonight" show announcer when Jack Paar was host.

Miss Quinn, of radio, video, cafes and St. Patrick's Day, is making her legit debut on the summer theatre circuit this year. Besides "Wildcat," she's also playing some dates in "Finian's Rainbow."

Beating the Jinx; Regulars Duck 'West Side Story'

Dayton, O., July 9.

Paul Shawhan's summer theatre is two-thirds of the way through a six-week Memorial hall season, in better shape than any of his predecessors since John Kenley's successful 1957 season. With the musical comedy phase of the season over, Shawhan reports he has had only one financial dud, "West Side Story."

"I expected that one to make money," he said, "and it did attract a good young audience but we didn't get the regular theatre goers."

He said the opening production, "Music Man," made money primarily because Lila Gage and Norwood Smith, the stars, worked for less than their normal price out of friendship.

"Can Can," last week's production, did the best gross of all, with a 75% house (60% is the break even point) primarily because of attraction of Jack Kelly from tv and Susan Johnson's following.

Miss Johnson, a real talent with a big voice, sparked "Unsinkable Molly Brown," the third production and second most popular. Memorial Hall seats 2,500.

Shawhan notes advance sales are good for the final productions, Edgar Bergen and Ilka Chase in "You Can't Take It With You" and Tab Hunter in "The Tender Trap." He says, "Our nut will be down considerably for these two because they are not musicals and we do not have the cost of an orchestra." The Bergen production will be staged here but "Tender Trap" is a package production, made up in Hollywood for a tour of the country.

Paul Winston failed to complete the 1958 season, and Douglas Crawford suffered a similar fate here in 1959. The theatre was dark in 1960 and James Alex suffered big losses both in 1961 and 1962.

GEORGE BOROFF TOPS L.A. PRODUCERS GROUP

Los Angeles, July 9.

George Boroff, operator of Circle Theatre, has been named president of the Theatrical Producers Assn. of Southern California, setting up shop again after a three-year hiatus. The organization is to be a negotiating body in dealing with all theatrical craft unions. It originally was formed at the suggestion of Willard Swire, former Actors Equity exec.

Paul Levitt, operator of Players' Ring and Gallery, is veepee; William D. Swanson, Las Palmas Theatre, secretary; Robert R. Schaefer, legal counsel, and Jack Proctor, public relations counsel.

Broadway producer Morton Gottlieb returned to New York recently from Europe where he arranged for a London production of his Broadway presentation of "Enter Laughing" and worked out plans to bring over the British play, "Chips With Everything," for an Oct. 1 opening at the Plymouth Theatre, N.Y.

Atlanta Names: Bert Parks (Native), Merman, Raye, And Met's Blanche Thebom

Bert Parks will make his first professional appearance in his home town of Atlanta when he headlines there July 23-28 in "The Music Man" at the Theatre Under the Stars. The 5,400-seater, which began its season last Monday night (8) with the Ethel Merman Show, has Martha Raye in "Wildcat" scheduled for next week. From July 30-Aug. 4 the offering will be "Flower Drum Song," with Yau Shan Tung, Yin Sun and Don Driver.

"Flower" will be followed Aug. 6-11 by the Met Opera diva, Blanche Thebom in "Call Me Madam" and Aug. 13-18 by Ann Blyth in "Carnival." Eric Mattson and Pittman Corry are back as producer-director and choreographer, respectively. Christopher B. Manos is executive producer, Stevenson Barrett, musical director, and Richard Hughes, production stage manager. Hughes will direct "Music Man" and "Flower."

What's Right With Broadway

WALTER KERR is on vacation. During his absence, personalities in the theater world will substitute for him. Today's guest is Broadway producer Alexander H. Cohen.

By Alexander H. Cohen

While the official number of members in the Critics Circle is limited to the working press and while the working press in the person of Walter Kerr is vacationing, I would like to answer those amateur critics who think that the fashionable thing to do this season is to aim broadsides at the theatric l industry.

First of all, let us acknowledge the recent "discovery" that flop shows lose money. Indeed they do—millions of dollars—and, deservedly so. But that does not seem enough reason to overlook the many more millions earned by the hits. The commercial theater, when it gives the consumer what he wants, is commercially sound. Otherwise, might I suggest that all of us who produce for Broadway would have long since sought employment elsewhere. I am one of many producers who can go to work any time he pleases in commercial or toll television, producing shows or working for Hollywood. Why don't I? Because, happily, I do well on Broadway and, when I do, so do my employees, my associates and my investors.

Rousing himself from the gloom generated by the thought of Broadway's bankruptcy, our armchair critic's next complaint is that "the public can't buy tickets. The theater parties have them all!" Aside from the consideration of the hundreds of millions of dollars that theater parties have raised for deserving charities, one wonders if perhaps it is not time to start thinking of these audiences, who patronize the theater at advanced prices, as members, individually, of the public.

"Okay," our critic concedes, "so you can get tickets! But, at $6.90, who can afford to buy them?" Armies of bleary-eyed customers are staggering out of four-hour cinematic treats, having paid a dollar an hour for their labor; others of their kind are riding back uptown from off-Broadway's vanity shops (those basements which have been financed by the entrepreneur's mother-in-law, whose donation of $7,000 has enabled her daughter's husband to mount and run "The Tulip Bulb" for a weekend) pleased with themselves for having spent only $5 a ticket, a reasonable price made possible by the generous consideration of the craft unions. While all this financial frivolity is going on, a lot of the legitimate theater's cheap seats are going begging.

This Is a Business?

Then there's the critic who says, "You call that a business! C'mon—it's fun and all, but a business?" Yes, my friend, and a very efficently run one. For instance, a musical spectacle involving the varied talents of 150 people —principals, singers, dancers, musicians and technicians of varying types, is completely mounted in a six-week period, having first been designed by qualified experts in each department. We are seldom, if ever, taxed by overtime. Our scenery is constructed and our costumes manufactured according to exact specifications on a rigid schedule and, together with properties and tons of sound and lighting equipment, is delivered to a theater on a particular day and assembled in a matter of hours at a firm contracted price. Moreover, our grosses are totaled daily, our accounts are presented weekly, and our profits are distributed monthly.

"But," says our critical economist, "your production costs have more than doubled in two decades." True, but only in direct proportion to the nation's economy. Labor costs, material costs and creative costs have all risen—just as they have in every other industry. One inevitable result is that failure is more expensive than it ever was—witness either the Edsel or "Lorenzo." Inevitably, too there is less room for mediocrity. It is worth noting that this year three of the craft unions have received cost-of-living wage increases, all unions are sharing in pension plans, the city has added a 2½ per cent occupancy tax and advertising lineage rates have gone up. In spite of all this, the price of admission to the public has remained the same.

Our self-appointed faultfinders then complain that "too much of what Broadway offers is imported." So are some of our best wines, books, paintings, cars and cheeses.

"Broadway never does anything new" is a strange complaint to encounter in an era in which every department of the theater has made major breakthroughs. The steps from Odets to Miller to Albee have been consistent and progressive.

Electronics Bows In

Technically, the full use of contemporary electronics in lighing and sound has completely changed the mechanics of the theater. Next season's introduction of subtitling for the Italian musical "Rugantino" will bring in another electronic possibility. Production design has moved drastically from Belasco's realism to Alswang's abstractions.

"Theaters are physically uncomfortable," says the patron, and this complaint has been justified. Following the example of City Playhouses in New York and Jujamcyn Theaters on the road, Lawrence Shubert Lawrence jr., the new managing director of the Shubert empire, has alloted a fortune for the refurbishing of the Shubert chain. Every theater in New York is presently undergoing a face-lifting and extensive renovation.

Turning from amateur to professional critics, New York State's Attorney General has a complaint—one which must be considered seriously, but which should not be exaggerated. The Attorney General alleges that some of the financial arrangements made by certain promoters are open to question and that legislation may be necessary to correct certain malpractices.

He is, I believe, correct in his concern. Every season some newcomers, wooed by hopes of vast profits engage in the business of producing a play and because of their inexperience are unfamiliar with established practices. Mostly they fail, fold their tents and quietly return to some other pursuit. To the best of my knowledge, all professional producers, who are members of the League of New York Theaters, conduct their business in a meticulous way according to accepted professional and ethical procedures. The formation of limited partnerships is subject to the scrutiny of the Securities and Exchange Commission and standard theatrical certified public accounting procedures are strictly adhered to.

Producers are not transients—the day of the fly-by-night who stranded a company in Kansas City went out with gaslight. Producers are creative business men who have the courage to invest their energy and resources in the commercial theater. And what have they done?

The last criticism we always have is what a bad season it has been. In 1962-'63, the theatergoer was able to see revivals, foreign imports and American originals, among which were:

"The School for Scandal," "Oliver!," "Beyond the Fringe," "Strange Interlude," "Mother Courage," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," "Never Too Late," "Enter Laughing," "Dear Me, the Sky Is Falling," several hit-holdovers from the previous season, and plays which did not succeed by Tennessee Williams, S. N. Behrman and William Inge.

The total output of any living art form fluctuates from year to year. Some books are good, some don't make it; some movies are sellouts, some fold quickly; a new painter enjoys a vogue, while others continue to paint with less critical acclaim. So, too, with the theater, and, surely, it is the continuity of production, season after season, that is irrefutable proof of the basic health of the industry.

In Praise of Artistic Deficits

Sir Tyrone Guthrie Argues That a Loss May Be Proof Of Integrity

Winnipeg, July 9.

Sir Tyrone Guthrie, guest speaker at the Manitoba Theatre Centre fifth annual meeting, stated that deficit financing in Canadian theatre is a hopeful sign that artistic integrity is being directed toward the creation of a national theatre. MTC's accumulated deficit of $37,466, and last season's loss of $10,810 was not disturbing in the least, rather it was a sign that local theatre was triving to expand its artistic horizons.

Guthrie insisted that the necessary impetus required in creating a national theatre was by not compromising artistic integrity for commercial reasons. "The important thing is that more people are coming to the theatre every year, and that the purpose of theatre is being redefined by operating as a public benefactor rather than a strictly commercial operation."

Further, he said, that one of the most important facets of maintaining a high calibre is to have management always one jump ahead of the audience and public taste, and that condescending to make money was not right.

In reference to theatre generally, he said that two of the invisible assets are "the pleasure it affords and the prestige it gathers," and he credited local theatre as being a fine example of society creating for itself.

Canada, he said, is only beginning to develop a style of society of its own. Regional theatre, he hoped, would be the beginning of the emergence of a distinctly Canadian style of acting.

Guthrie expressed the hope that some sort of co-operation between MTC and the new Minneapolis Theatre, of which he is artistic director, could be arranged. "The two theatres are founded on the same impulses and have the same aims" and are "steps in the creation of the right kind of national theatre, with roots across the country."

2 Barnums (No Bailey) In Prospect as Tuners

Broadway is again scheduled to get two musicals cued to the life of circus showman Phineas T. Barnum. One is the Alexander H. Cohen presentation, slated for a Main Stem opening next April 22 in conjunction with the N.Y. World's Fair. The other, using songs written for the show which Ida Martucci had planned producing, is now earmarked for a Broadway debut next January under the production auspices of Mark Forbes, formerly director of advertising and publicity for the Lane Bryant stores.

The Cohen vehicle, for which Jerome Chodorov wrote the book and Marian Grudeff and Ray Jessel the music and lyrics, is titled "Barnum." That same tag identified the musical which Miss Martucci had intended producing and it's also the tentative label for the Forbes venture. Miss Martucci had planned using a book by Romeo Muller with Eddie Heyman and Milton Kaye supplying the lyrics and music, respectively.

Songs by Heyman and Kaye are to be used by Forbes, but instead of the Muller book, he's got a script by Franklin Lacey, who collaborated with Meredith Willson on the story for "The Music man." Forrest Tucker, who played the title role in "Music" on the road for over three-and-a-half years, is scheduled to play Barnum in the Forbes presentation.

Mayo-O'Shea Pairing In Meadowbrook' 'Fiorello'

Virginia Mayo and her husband, Michael O'Shea, will costar Sept. 19-Oct. 6 in "Fiorello" at the Meadowbrook Dinner Theatre, Cedar Grove, N.J. The spot will presen. Diana Dors in "Pajama Game," starting next Wednesday (10) and then Fernando Lamas in the role he originated on Broadway in "Happy Hunting." "Game" is scheduled to run through Aug. 4 with Lamas booked for an Aug. 7-25 stand.

Also on the Meadowbdook sked is "Silk Stockings," sloted for an Oct. 10 opening with Earl Wrightson and Lois Hunt costarred.

Factional Fight Boosts Fred Miller Membership

Milwaukee, July 9.

Membership in the Fred Miller Theatre, local stock group, has reached a new high of 1,300. The bulge resulted from a treatened take over by a dissident group of Miller supporters. Mickey Morton, their leader, set out to get 400 new sponsor-members, but recently decided to turn over the newcomer bloc to Jack McQuiggan, the new Miller producer.

Morton's group enlisted 440 new members, and another group supporting the present incumbent board recruited another 500 new members, bringing the overall membership to about 1,300. McQuiggan welcomed the support of the new members. He said both groups were interested in "good theatre."

Andre Mertens, 59, Dies From Injury on Trip; Chairman of Columbia

Zurich, July 9.

Andre Mertens, 59, chairman of Columbia Artists Management Inc. of New York died here today (Tues.) from complications following a bad fall suffered some weeks ago in Hamburg. Although Mertens had been seriously ill with a heart attack three years ago, it is stated that this was not involved.

Originally German born, funeral services and burial will be in the family plot near Berlin. His wife Clara is the sole survivor. They had long made their homes in Manhattan and Westport, Conn. Mertens, the son of a concert impressario, was head of the opera division in the German Ministry of Culture but resigned and moved to Vienna when Hitler took over. He was a Lutheran.

In Vienna he served as CAMI rep and this in turn led to his joining the home office in New York. He headed his own section and personally represented Leontyne Price, Renata Tebaldi, Maureen Forrester, F. Tagliavanni, William Warfield, Cesar Sieppi, Gold & Fitzdale.

A frequent talent scout in Europe, Mertens had brought the Berlin Philharmonic to the U. S. in 1955, thereby reestablishing musical relations with the former enemy country.

Menotti Fest

while, she has intensity, expressiveness in emotional and lyrical moments which are the tools a born artist brings on stage from the first moment.

"Gospel-Time" has this year replaced "Black Nativity" with equal interest and the most notable voice among the different groups (Roberta Martin Singers, Lorraine Ellison Singers, Twighlight Gospel Singers etc.) is the one of Ernestine Washington, defined by Italian critics as "the most bluesy" of all.

Among the dance attractions, the program listed "Four Ballets" by the Marie Rambert group—but out of the four only three have been presented. A classical, rather cold version of "Don Chisciott"; an excellent rendition of Antony Tudor's "Gala Performance" with the ballerinas Anne Truscott, Ariette Taylor and Elsa Ricagno; and special for Spoleto: "The Travellers"—a ballet in Kafkaian mood choreographed by Norman Morrice to music by Leonard Salzedo, which has as background an air-terminal and depicts in all its aspects our, by now famous, "age of anxiety."

In a recent wire to President John F. Kennedy, Actors Equity pledged to continue its "long-standing fight for equal rights for all in the field of the theatre" and, among other statements, said, "We applaud your action in utilizing all the means at your disposal to combat the unlawful and immoral deprivation of American citizens of their equal rights and opportunities."

Hub's Charles Playhouse Opens 'Pirandello' Oct. 1

The Charles Playhouse, Boston, plans opening its 1963-64 season Oct. 1 with "Six Characters in Search of an Author." Other offerings scheduled for the spot's seventh semester include "Rhinoceros," opening Nov. 13; "Man and Superman," opening Feb. 5; "The Hostage," opening March 11, and "The Glass Menagerie," opening April 15.

A musical, to be selected, is slated for presentation at the house starting Dec. 26.

Tent Showmen Planning Patriotic Wax Museum With Stage Techniques

Philadelphia, July 9.

Local triumvirate of Lee Guber, Frank Ford and Shelly Gross, who parlayed a small investment in a summer tent operation into a national theatrical corporation, are diversifying.

As a major side project for 1963, Music Fairs has leased ground floor space in the Bourse Bldg., within 150 yards of Independence Hall to open new $250,000 American Wax Museum. Idea: life-size figures of historic Americans.

Music Fairs' ninth year of operation finds group with five of its own tents in Valley Forge, Pa.; Haddonfield, N. J.; Painters Mill, near Baltimore; Westbury, L.I.; Gaithersburg, Md., near Washington, and West Springfield, Mass., this last in association with Wally Beach.

"The six Music Fairs will run a combined total of 93 weeks this summer with an average nut of $25,000 per week for a total expenditure of $2,325,000," said Ford, who is secretary-treasurer.

"This does not include the cost of the one-nighters at three of the tents, which feature such attractions as Duke Ellington, Alan King, Al Hurt, the Weavers, the Kingston Trio, Dave Brubeck, Stan Getz, Miriam Makeba and others," Ford added.

The summer season is not only the Music Fair's biggest in terms of playing weeks, but also in the calibre of names signed for attractions. The star roster includes Milton Berle, Hugh O'Brian, Will "Sugarfoot" Hutchins, Patrice Munsel, Robert Alda, Earl Wrightson, Mamie Van Doren, Lee Grant, Keely Smith, Andy Devine, Juliet Prowse, Martha Raye, Dorothy Collins, Jane Morgan, and Fess Parker.

An innovation this year is the midweek matinees at all six theatres. "We are now playing eight performances a week," Ford said. "Increased cost of doing business, plus increased demand by older customers, such as Golden Age clubs and other organized groups has brought back the low-priced matinee."

By arrangement with David Merrick, Music Fairs recently completed a 33-week bus-and-truck tour of "Carnival," covering 109 cities. Mimi Turque has replaced Elaine Malbin in the lead for "Carnival" now playing the tent circuit, and the production goes to Israel to open at the Habima Theatre, Tel Aviv, Aug. 18.

A film project was scuttled over weekend. Group had purchased Barbara Tuchman's Pulitzer Prize-winning best-seller "The Guns of August" for $35,000 to make into a film. Nathan Kroll spent three week is Europe trying to locate film clips for World War 1 background but couldn't locate ones wanted.

American Wax Museum will capitalize on its proximity for the several million history-minded tourists who visit Independence Hall annually. Over 100 figures are to be seen in 20 different tableaux, which also feature sound theatrical lighting, rear-projection screens, color and an overall "Legend of America" theme.

Gus Schirmer Circulating

Director Gus Schirmer Jr. is moving around the summer stock circuit. Last week's presentation of "Kind Sir," starring John Forsythe, at the Lakewood Theatre, Skowhegan, Me., was staged by Schirmer, who's moved on to Owings Mills, Md., to direct "The King and I," headlining Jane Morgan, for its opening there next Tuesday night (16) at the Painter's Mill Music Fair.

He's also the stager for the production of "Rain," in which Edie Adams is to open July 23 at the Packard Music Hall, Warren, O.

Tuner Promoters Seek SEC Sanction

Wish to Peddle Shares to Public for 'Sammy Run' and 'Apollo and Miss Agnes'

Washington, July 9.

Two New York partnerships, formed to produce two musical comedies, have asked the Securities & Exchange Commission to approve public stock sales to finance the ventures.

The Sammy Co. seeks sanction of a $400,000 limited partnership offering to produce "What Makes Sammy Run?" and The Apollo Co. wants to float $450,000 to work for "Apollo and Miss Agnes."

General partner of The Sammy Co., which is pegging its shares at $8,000 each, is Joseph Cates. He will produce the show and receive 50% of the net profits plus 1% of the gross box office receipts of each company presenting the musical.

"Sammy" book authors Budd and Stuart Schulberg and composer-lyricist Ervin Drake will receive a total royalty of from 7.5 to 9% (depending on the show's run) of gross boxoffice receipts for each week of the run.

"Apollo" general partner is Bob Banner who coauthored the book with Alice Banner and Alan Scott and will direct and produce the show. Scott also supplied the lyrics, and the music was done by Marilyn Scott and Keith Textor.

Shares will go for $9,000 each for the musical which is based on Jean Giraudoux's "Apollo de Bellac," a one-act play. It is scheduled for a special tryout in Dallas and the principal members of the cast will be David Wayne, Nancy Dussault and Reginald Gardner.

Bob Banner is to get half the net profits, plus a $5,000 director's fee and 2% of the gross weekly box office receipts, Wayne is to receive from five to 7.5%, subject to a minimum guaranty of $2,750 per week, if he appears in the Broadway production. The authors are to get an aggregate of 6%.

Bracken Succeeds Ewell With Touring 'Take Her'

Eddie Bracken succeeds Tom Ewell next Monday (15) as star of the touring production of "Take Her, She's Mine." The Henry and Phoebe Ephron comedy is at the Blackstone Theatre, Chicago.

Bracken, who'd been costarring at the Red Barn Theatre, Northport, L.I., in "Come Blow Your Horn," had to be replaced in the comedy for its final stanza at the barn this week. He withdrew from the show last Saturday (7) to prepare for his new assignment.

The role vacated by Bracken in Northport has been taken over by Daryl Hickman.

Pageant Still Blooms In Carolina; Andy Griffith Guests in 'Lost Colony'

Manteo, N.C., July 9.

With television personality Andy Griffith as special guest and a top "crowd attraction, Paul Green's "granddaddy" of outdoor symphonic dramas, "The Lost Colony," was off and running here Saturday night for 58 performances through Sept. 1. It was the 1,157th performance, and the opening of the 22nd production season since 1937, for the oldest and longest-running outdoor play in America.

It was "Tercentenary Night" at the Waterside Theatre, in recognition of the 300th anniversary of the North Carolina charter. Griffith, who played Sir Walter Raleigh in "The Lost Colony," 1949-53, was introduced at intermission by Mrs. Fred W. Morrison of Laurinburg and Washington, chairman of the producing Roanoke Island Historical Assn.

William I. Long is a new director this year. Leading roles this season are in the hands of Tommy Hull, Marjalene Thomas, Gordon Clark, Bob Grubbs and Mary Wood.

Long replaced the late Clifton Britton of Goldsboro as production chief after having served as technical director of "The Lost Colony" for 14 years. Britton died during the past year.

MANITOBA PROJECTS AS SWIRE MOVES IN

Winnipeg, July 9.

Manitoba Theatre Centre, at its annual meeting last week reported a deficit of $10,810 in its fifth year of operation. Combined with a carryover deficit from past seasons, including capital expenditures of $15,254 written off, accumulated deficit inereased to $37,466. Gross revenue was $255,429, compared with $209,654 the previous season. Of the gross revenue, $104,918 was attributed to various grants and donations.

Expenditures were $266,239 compared with $217,319 the previous season. Production costs were up $19,523 to $128,289, an increase of 18 per cent, but ticket revenue increased only 11 per cent to $137,600.

Meeting confirmed the appointment of Willard Swire, former exec director of American National Theatre & Academy as managing director. John Caldwell was appointed executive producer, and Denny Newman, producer of the Chicago Lyric Opera has been loaned by the Theatre Communications Group of the Ford Foundation to review the organization's ticket selling methods.

Jack Beech was elected president, succeeding Desmond Smith, and John Hirsch was appointed artistic director for a three year term.

The 1963-64 season, commencing Oct. 4, has scheduled, "Under the Yum Yum Tree" with Austin Willis; "Five Finger Exercise"; Brendan Behan's "The Hostage"; "Pygmalion" with Frances Hyland; "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," and three plays to be announced.

Sherri Malinou has taken over the ingenue assignment in the off-Broadway production of "Riverwind."

CBS Daytime Emoters 'Moonlight' In Stock

Performers connected with CBS daytime television dramas are going in for stock moonlighting this summer. They include Mary Foskett, John Baragrey and Don MacHenry of "The Secret Storm," Ronnie Welsh and Robert Mandam of "The Edge of Night," Rosemary Prinz of "As the World Turns" and Bernard Grant of "The Guiding Light."

Miss Foskett is playing summer theatres in the tryout of "The Mackerel Plaza," Baragrey is teaming with Nancy Walker for "Call Me Madam" and MacHenry is to appear in a production of "Thieves' Carnival," with Joe Hardy, producer of the daytime tv serial, "Love of Life," directing.

Welsh is spending the summer in the resident company at the Elitch Gardens Theatre, Denver, and Mandam is to do two weeks of Shakespeare in Washington. Miss Prinz is scheduled to play the title role in "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" at the Grand Theatre, Sullivan, Ill., the first two weeks of August. Grant was at the Grand last week in "Critic's Choice," in which he's appearing this week at the Cherry Country Playhouse, Traverse City, Mich.

Dear Gretchen:

When Jimmy seated me next to your table at Sardi's two months ago, my first reaction was, why not? Although I knew you had never done the role, I also knew that I wasn't really taking a chance with you.

I am talking about the role of Annie in ANNIE GET YOUR GUN at the Westchester Dinner Theatre and the reason I wasn't taking a chance was the tremendous job you had done for us in BYE BYE BIRDIE at the Westchester Dinner Theatre last December.

Even though you had played BIRDIE on Broadway for a year, I think you improved on your performance for us, and you certainly improved our grosses. But in ANNIE you surpassed yourself, both in performance and box office, and I certainly agree with the critics who said:

"ANNIE is easily the best musical that the Westchester Dinner Theatre has done since it was launched fifteen months ago. Gretchen Wyler is just ideal as Annie and as precious as the platinum in her hair. She keeps the show moving with unbelievable vigor."

However, the thing that pleases me the most, and perhaps more important, is the total box office you brought in as the star of ANNIE, only five months after doing the same thing in BYE BYE BIRDIE.

On behalf of Julie Wilsker and myself at the Westchester Dinner Theatre, I want to thank you for seven very profitable weeks, plus seven weeks of completely satisfied customers.

Sincerely,
CARL.

Opera and Concert Reviews

Tannhauser
(PARIS OPERA HOUSE)

Paris, July 8.

Suddenly the Paris Opera House has come alive. For years one of the fabulous operatic theatres of the world, it has continued to draw big audiences with mediocre singing, the emphasis being put entirely on production values. After floundering for more than a year, Georges Auric, the Opera's g.m., proves that he knows his business. With Regine Crespin and Rita Gorr as the lead femmes, and with Andre Cluytens in the pit, the theatre's recent major ailment is exposed—it lacked musicality. But now the report is different.

Auric worked away slowly, patiently. Several minor league productions were disappointing. He took a lot of pain and trouble with a big, fancy production of "Don Carlos." It had everything possible to recommend it but voices. There was, automatically, a great deal of criticism and even his closest friends were disappointed in Auric. But Auric said nothing, publicly. He did not defend himself, nor make any statements. He simply got busy arranging for an interview with Gen. De Gaulle.

No one will ever know, probably, exactly what happened at this interview. It was supposed to last 15 minutes and it stretched to nearly an hour. Surely Auric did not beef to the General about Andre Malraux, the Cultural Minister. He (Auric) is too good a diplomat. His emphasis, apparently, was on the need for greater funds. Which, apparently, he got.

The day after this interview Auric showed that he was not only a diplomat and a showman, but also a musician. Without fanfare, and before doing anything else, he "fixed" "Don Carlos." He recast it overnight. He cut a half hour from the beginning of the show and 15 minutes toward the end. He put Georges Sebastian into the pit in place of Pierre Dervaux. He sent for the critics—in three days he worked a miracle. It was, now, a moving and exciting show. And immediately he got busy building a "Tannhauser," the first (and only) Wagner on the Opera repertoire.

Major applause of the evening went to Miss Crespin, possibly the greatest French singer of the moment, and to Cluytens, who has developed into a sure, firm and knowing conductor. Credit, a lot of it, is also due to the lovely scenery and costumes by Leonor Fini. Jean Lepoulain's stage direction is knowing but Michel Descombey's choreography disturbing and out of key with the rest of the show. Hans Beirer, the German baritone, incidentally, also deserves (and got) a big hand at the opening. Kauf.

Lewisohn Stadium, N.Y.

Ushering in the 46th summer of open air concerts at the City College stadium, Van Cliburn and Alfred Wallenstein drew an almost capacity 14,000 gate Tuesday (25). Climatically the night was perfect and the rival al fresco attraction, Macy's fireworks on the Hudson to the southwest, gave off only slight rumbles of distraction during the tall Texan's showpiece, the Tchaikovsky Piano Concerto No. 1. Wallenstein opened with the swingy Jubilation Overture of Robert Ward and followed with an animated reading of the Mendelssohn "Italian" symphony. Ravel's "La Valse," surely high on this season's classical Hit Parade, followed, but the orchestra and conductor failed to display the verve of the Philharmonic promenades (90% the same men) under Morton Gould, two nights before.

Attendance fell drastically the following night (26) when there was no soloist draw and Schumann and Wagner were featured. Only around 3,000 of the devout showed up and the echoes bounced back and forth among the empty benches. The all-Beethoven program of Thursday (27) lured 8,000 to hear the merry 8th with its tick-tock kidding of Mr. B's friend, Johann Malzel, inventor of the metronome, and the majestic 9th, topped with the choral finale, which featured Kenneth Smith, a spirited bass-baritone, Walter Carringer, tenor, Heidi Krall, soprano, Lili Chookasian, contralto (the ladies had little to do) and a magnificent delegation of about 75 from the Schola Cantorum, directed by Hugh Ross.

Ork, under Wallenstein's deft, ambidexterous direction, had, by Thursday night, shaken down and settled into a homogeneity that gave off the integrated response and unison sound of a smooth-working musical team. Leve.

Cultural Swap Talent To Head UN Anni Concert

Washington, July 9.

U.S. cultural exchange performers will be the featured artists at a special United Nations Anniversary concert here Oct. 21. Washington impresario Patrick Hayes will assist in producing the concert, which is under the patronage of President and Mrs. Kennedy.

Hosting will be Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Rusk and Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Benjamin. He is national chairman of the U.S. Committee for the United Nations.

Gerald Wagner, Washington rep of the U.S. Committee for the UN, will be coordinator for the event.

DAVID BLACK TO ENGLAND

Will View 'Ides of March' In Provincial Breakin

Broadway producer David Black left New York for England with his family last Friday (5) to catch his coproduction with H. M. Tennent Ltd. of "Ides of March" during its pre-London four of the provinces. The Jerome Kilty adaptation of the Thornton Wilder story, in which Sir John Geilgud, Irene Worth and Marie Lohr co-star, is scheduled for an Aug. 8 opening on the West End at the Haymarket Theatre.

Production, directed by Kilty, opened recently in Oxford. A Broadway presentation of the play is planned by Black for next year.

Dance Review

Paul Draper in the Park
With Sophie Maslow Dancers

N. Y. Shakespeare Festival presents the Rebekah Harkness Foundation Dance Festival, July 1. Sophie Maslow Dance Company (Beatrice Seckler, Billie Kirpich, Julie Arenal, Barbara Kirschner, Stanley Berke, Moss Cohen, William Dugan, Morris Peirce, William Louther; Herb Lovell, drummer) and Paul Draper; Eugene Mancini, accompanist.

First of six dance programs this summer at the al fresco, gratis. Delacorte Theatre in Central Park drew a full house on a warm but not oppressive July 1 evening. Maslow company of young modern foot-workers traipsed through two well-choreographed pieces. Sandwiched between was the meat of the evening, Paul Draper and his magic feet.

If tap dancing is a dying art, Paul Draper is the living museum, the Heifetz of hoofers. Like wine (to corn a cliche) he improves with age, growing more subtle, studding his cake with raisins of humor, never trying to make more out of tapping than it is—and, via this restraint, always elevating his chosen craft to an art. He had competition during his 40 minutes from occasional moths that danced in his light, but they were no more graceful or airy than he was, and each soon flew out of sight. The winner wound up with his sure-fire encore: tapping out a series of song requests which ranged that evening, from "Petrouchka" to "12th Street Rag," and included "Afternoon of a Faun," asked for by a tough male voice.

Miss Maslow's group opened with, "Prologue" a dance mime depicting the plague which brought together the people of Boccaccio's "Decameron." Her choreography was better than its execution but the company strove vigorously and the men all wore holes in the knees of their tights before the 32-minute story was told. Second selection, "Poem," was contemporary (music by Ellington) with Morris Peirce reciting from Lawrence Ferlinghetti's "Autobiography," a blank-verse sega of the Lower Village with cracks like "I started to walk around the world, but wound up in Brooklyn. That bridge was too much for me." Accompanying the music and words was Herb Lovell on drums and a chorus of five dancers. Peirce has a good delivery and jived along with the others. Offbeat and appreciated, though Draper was the big hit of the night. Domingo Rodriguez provided the attractive costumes for "Prologue" and Eugene Mancini played piano for Draper, performing the difficult ad lib finale with skill and humor. The Shakespeare Festival setting for the current "Antony and Cleopatra," bare stage with the park for back drop and steps on either side leading to a second-story platform across the rear was left standing for the Monday night dance recital and served handsomely. Leve.

Tucker Back in 'Music Man'

Forrest Tucker, who played the title role in "The Music Man" on the road for over three-and-a-half years and then in stock last year, is repeating that assignment again this summer. He's in the second stanza of a two-week engagement in the tuner at the Melody Tent, Milwaukee, with the stand there to be followed by another outing in the musical at the Melody Top, Chicago, starting next Monday (15).

Tucker, who had played Chicago in "Music" while with the touring company, is scheduled to follow his appearance in that city with an engagement in "The Rainmaker" in Sullivan, Ill. He and his wife, Marilyn Fisk, who's appearing with him in "Music," are then slated to present their nitery act at The Vapors, Hot Springs, Ark., starting Aug. 22.

Millie Slavin has returned to cast of the off-Broadway production of "Riverwind."

GLORIA DE HAVEN PROVES MAGNIFICENT PERFORMER

Saves Music Tent Show for Ailing Dorothy Collins After Just Two Rehearsals

Gloria De Haven is a real trouper in every sense of the word. As a last-minute replacement for ailing Dorothy Collins, this small package of talent went on last night and gave a MAGNIFICENT PORTRAYAL of "Molly Brown."

With only two rehearsals under her belt, and practically no sleep at all, MISS DE HAVEN kept the Storrowton Music Fair's "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" afloat as an ENTERTAINMENT BLOCKBUSTER.

AT TIMES SHE SCORED SO WELL IT WAS ELECTRIFYING.

The "Molly Brown" role is a demanding one. It has to have an actress who can do everything well and Miss De Haven showed she has all the ingredients and then some.

NEW 'MOLLY' CAPTIVATES AUDIENCE IN FIRST START

Facing probably the stiffest challenge of her long theatrical career, Gloria De Haven gave an AUDIENCE-CAPTURING PERFORMANCE in the title role of Storrowton Music Fair's "THE UNSINKABLE MOLLY BROWN," Wednesday night.

Summoned from New York Monday night to quick study the role and replace Dorothy Collins, who bowed out on orders of her physician, Miss De Haven was in full command of the strenuous demanding part of Molly Brown.

THE NEW STAR OF THE SHOW QUICKLY CAPTURED THE FANCY OF THE AUDIENCE WHICH TIME AFTER TIME BROKE IN ON SCENES WITH APPLAUSE.

Miss De Haven, a veteran trouper from a theatrical family, displayed a captivating personality, deported herself on stage with vigor and showed a flair for the comedy that the part requires.

Miss De Haven's opening performance as a singer and actress was a REMARKABLE one.

John Gordon

The Hartford Times

GLORIA DE HAVEN AS 'MOLLY BROWN'

The Molly Brown role is among the most demanding of stage roles. It requires fine acting, dancing, singing, acrobatic wrestling and fine comedy sense. MISS DE HAVEN EXHIBITS EVERY REQUISITE. She is, at once, a pixy, a female rogue, a mimic, and a dramatic actress.

SHE CAME ON WITH THE ENERGY OF THE HIGHEST POWERED SHIP AFLOAT. BATTENED DOWN THE HATCHES AND PROCEEDED TO CAPTURE THE AUDIENCE AND TICKLE THEM WHERE IT COUNTED—IN THE FUNNY BONE.

Theater-goers are rarely privileged to witness the spirited delineation when the petite personality dashes out for her first entrance. SHE GIVES A MAGNIFICENT MOLLY BROWN PORTRAYAL. ONE WE'LL PERSONALLY REMEMBER AS AN ENTERTAINMENT BLOCKBUSTER.

With the final musical downbeat, Miss DeHaven was awarded with acclaim of audience and fellow-performers — the latter a courtesy rarely expressed publicly.

HER ARTISTRY SHOULD BE SEEN BY EVERY STAUNCH ADVOCATE OF LIVE THEATER.

Frisco Ditto

The June issue of Playboy was removed from newsstands in the Burlington, Vt., area by State Atty. John J. Boylan Jr. who said he was "shocked" by the publication's series of photographs entitled "The Nudist Jayne Mansfield."

"I don't like anything that sounds like censorship," he declared, "but I thought those photographs were out of line."

The magazine was banned in Burlington after an agreement had been reached with New York legal counsel for the magazine and through the cooperation of E. J. Murphy, Burlington distributor.

Blushing in shame and averting its eyes, the General Services Administration got around to removing "girlie" magaines from San Francisco Main Post Office newsstand operated by a blind man. The removal inadvertently called attention to a GSA directive issued several months ago—not censoring mags in so many words, but listing publications "acceptable" for sale by newsstands on Government property.

Ban resulted from complaint to Washington last October by a Pacifica (south of Frisco) group calling itself "Citizens for Decent Literature," based on displays at Regional Headquarters of the Internal Revenue Service.

Not on the "acceptable" list — and consequently not available for purchase in Federal buildings — are Playboy, Escapade, Gent, Rogue, Gentleman Jem, Mister, Sir, a nudist publication called Sunshine and Health, and others.

Big furor is being raised in educational and political circles of California over the two-volume "Dictionary of American Slang," which, according to the headlines, consists mostly of four-letter words.

Among educational/political figures mixing it up over this publishing venture are Thomas Braden, president of the State Board of Education, and Max Rafferty, State School Superintendent.

Braden, while he is not necessarily pro-dirty-word or pro-pornography, declares himself vigorously anti-censorship.

Rafferty is anti-nearly-everything, but says he is against burning books. He does not advise school officials to take the book off the shelves, but only says that he considers it unsuitable for schoolchildren and urges them (officials, not children) to read it and judge for themselves.

Some school boards already have ordered the volumes removed from school libraries, including Butte and Santa Clara Counties. The city of Sunnyvale has refused.

The Orange County Board of Supervisors, although refusing to ban the book, ordered it to be kept in reference departments and not allowed in schoolchildren's hands.

'Tropic' OK'd In Calif.

The California Supreme Court has ruled that "Tropic of Cancer" cannot be banned as pornography under California law.

Dealer Jacob Zeitlin and Paul Ferguson, L.A. City College English instructor, had asked the L.A. Superior Court for a declaratory judgment forbidding the City of Los Angeles from prohibiting sale of "Tropic." But the trial judge said he'd read it and it was obscene. The Supreme Court decision reversed this ruling and ordered the Supreme Court to hear the Ferguson-Zeitlin case.

Justice Mathew O. Tobriner, who wrote the unanimous decision, declared that U.S. Supreme Court decisions on the subject of obscenity in literature recognize that "boundary lines for the forbidden sale of obscinity must delimit only the area of hard-core pornography."

This would mean commercial obscenity that is "utterly without redeeming social importance" and therefore lies outside the "protective embrace of the First Amendment."

The court held that if the material has literary value, if it is "a serious work of literature or art," then it possesses redeeming social importance and is protected from censorship.

The way is now open for the L.A. Superior Court to hear the plaintiffs' plea for declaratory judgment and act on it in accordance with the Supreme Court's statement.

John Crosby's 2d Book

N. Y. Herald Tribune tv-radio critic turned roving columnist John Crosby has put between covers a second book of pieces from his bright columns and it's very worthwhile reading. It can be picked up at any place, in any category—travel, Hollywood, Paris, the Riviera, broadcasting, the social scene, the arts etc.—and it can be read "With Love and Loathing" which, it so happens, is the title of this McGraw-Hill ($4.95) anthology of Crosbyana.

Since he swapped spots with Art Buchwald—the latter to the Potomac and Crosby to the Seine environs — he has broadened his canvas and matured in his sense of proportions. Not that Crosby wasn't always an unusually discerning commentator on the passing scene, but the global orbit has given him size and scope. Ever attuned to a sense of values, always inclined to give the back-of-the-hand to the spurious and the shoddy, his perceptions and perspectives seem even more finely drawn, and his way with the words to appraise them is in like proportion.

The reader will have an affection for most of the author's loves and loathings. Abel.

Ban Book on Nazis

Two books by well-known German author Otto Skorzeny have just been banned in West Germany.

They are "Lebe gefaehrlich, Kriegsberichte der Waffen-SS" (Live Dangerously, War Episodes of the Weapons, SS) and "Wir Kaempfen, wir verloren" (We Fight, We Lose), tales of the former SS Storm Troopers and the Mussolini partners.

It has been decided by the court in Cologne that the books will be banned throughout West Germany because their contents are dangerous for the state.

Another volume by Guenter Wartdorf, also dealing with episodes in the lives of the SS men, has also been seized and copies withdrawn.

The court declared that the books stress the "Fuehrer principle" and cite it as an example.

Nostalgia Between Covers

N.Y. Times' Robert Clurman has compiled, edited and written an introduction for "Nick Carter, Detective," the famed Street & Smith hero, and John Tebbel's "From Rags to Riches (Horatio Alger Jr. and the American Dream)" is in the same vein. Both are on Macmillan's list.

Charles Beaumont's "Remember? Remember?" deals with the yesteryear "movie palaces"; as contributing editor to Playboy many of these chapters first appeared there.

Moscow's Conditions

Foreign Press Association Moscow has been granted permission to open a clubroom, including bar, but they have to supply their own booze.

And typewriters, if they want 'em.

Collier's On Amusements

The new 24-volume Collier's Encyclopedia, whose 25,000 articles and 17,000 illustrations (colorplates, photos, sketches, maps and charts) embrace 21,000,000 words, is replete with show biz coverage. A phalanx of authorities have covered all phases of the lively arts among the 400,000 subjects touched upon.

Besides the broad categories of films (by Hollis Alpert), radio-tv (Stan Opotowsky), legit (John Gassner), acting (by Harold Clurman), stage production (Mordecai Gorelik), history of the theatre (Allardyce Nicoll), there are subdivision breakdowns. For example, Bernard Sobel covers burlesque; circus is by Meriwether Stuart and F. Darius Benham; minstrelsy and vaudevile, also by Sobel; Gassner does separate treatments on the Deutsches Theater, English playhouse, Habima and Independent Theatres; with Thomas Ratcliffe, Gassner covers the historic Globe Theatre; Norris Houghton did the pieces on the Little Theatre Movement, and the Old Vic; Denis Johnston on the Abbey Theatre; W. L. Wiley, the Comedie Francaise; American drama by Barrett H. Clark and Robert H. Ball; Russian Drama (Moscow Art) by Henry W. L. Dana and Elizabeth Hapgood.

Harold Shadick covers Chinese Drama; Samuel D. Atkins, Greek Drama; Hoard S. Hibbet, Japanese; and the English drama is by Harold R. Walley, Arthur N. Nethercot and Ivor Brown. Commedia dell-'Arte, masque, melodrama, pantomime, Passion Play, puppets and marionettes all get special coverage.

Maude Adams through Barnum, Cohan, Houdini, Reinhardt, Will Rogers down to Stanislavsky (and his method) are among personalities. Ingmar Bergman, Chaplin, DeMille, Disney, Griffith et al are the film biogs, many by Arthur Knight, Selma Jeanne Cohen covered dance and Walter Terry did ballet, and among the dance biogs are Balanchine and Diaghilev down to Fokin, Nijinsky and Pavlova.

The music coverage is also extensive: folk (Charles Seeger), jazz (Barry Ulanov), musicomedy (David Ewen), opera (Donald J. Grout), operetta (Bernard Grun), Savoy Opera (Reginald Allen). Then follow such music personalities as Beecham and Damrosch down to Toscanini and Bruno Walter; from Satchmo Armstrong and Duke Ellington to Paul Whiteman; Casals, Elman, Heifitz, Horowitz, Iturbi to Paderewski, Rubinstein and Zimbalist; the femmes from Marian Anderson to Lily Pons; the male singers from Caruso and Chaliapin to Robeson and Tibbett.

But apart from the show biz elements, the new Collier's Encyclopedia Yearbook ($299.50 for the 24-volume set) is as topical as the headlines on rocketry, Cuba, Russian, the ECM etc.; withal, a terrific reference work. Abel.

World's 'New Yorkers'

Two New Yorker writers are on World's list. Stanley Edgar Hyman, who teaches at Bennington College and is a staff writer for the NYker, has shifted from Knopf and Athanaeum to World Pub. Co. with "The Promised End (Essays and Reviews, 1942-1962)" due in September. Another staffer on the same weekly, Burton Bernstein, will have his "The Lost Art" under World imprint in August.

Latter firm's ed-in-chief Bill Targ has increased the first printing of O. A. Bushnell's "Molokai" to 35,000. New American Library has the paperback rights and Secker & Warburg snagged it for Great Britain.

Save French-Lingo Daily

Campaign to keep the Moncton (N.B.) French-language newspaper, l'Evangeline, from disappearing under financial ills has succeeded. Not only that but the paper plans new expansion. Aurele Gratton of Ottawa, g.m. of Le Droit and president of the French-Language Daily Newspapers Assn., believed the Moncton publication would up its circulation and show a profit in two years.

Donors were mostly from Ontario and Quebec, including a $15,000 grant from Quebec's provincial government.

SCULLY'S SCRAPBOOK

By Frank Scully

Men to pour oil on troubled waters are in short supply these days.

I found Phil Regan, one of the most successful of them, on a hilltop back of Beaumont, Calif. Barefooted, stripped to swimming trunks, he was supervising a crew of half a dozen road-builders laying black top on the highway to his new home.

His old one is a $150,000 trinket in Palm Springs. He has another adobe hacienda in Pasadena appraised at $200,000. The new place when completed with a swimming pool can't be expected to cost more than $75,000. It is 4,000 feet high and commands views in all directions that even astronauts will not be able to share until they can slow down a bit.

I throw these boxcar figures around to impress those peasants who think that a singing cop, long out of pictures and never in the graft, is either doing bit parts in "Car 54, Where Are You?" or waiting around unemployment offices for musicals to come back.

But not this Philip Joseph Christopher Aloysius Regan. Knowing he had an Irish temper and could swing a fist faster than JFK on a whirlwind European goodwill tour, I have been mystified for years at the way he could calmly mingle with top level GOPos, Demos and leaders of capital and labor. This requires a heaven-sent skill, and apparently heaven handed this once Ferocious Phil the halo.

The Great Catalytic Agent

Still rosy-cheeked, hazel-eyed, blackhaired and handsome, he is the host with the most around Palm Springs and has been for years. They are not parties in the usual sense. If it might help for David McDonald of the Steel Workers to meet Ike on a golf course on account Ike might be nearer to the steel tycoons than President Kennedy, Phil Regan is the catalytic agent that brings off the liaison.

In the widest sense of the term his specialized field today is not singing for his supper but human relations among public figures. He is incredibly diverse in this field in that he represents the steelworkers as one of his clients and Kaiser Steel as another. This must mean that he is a man both sides believe they can trust implicitly.

For years he has been the Grover Whalen of Palm Springs. Presidents, vicepresidents, governors, senators, congressmen and people of show biz and big biz all look upon him as a friend with the most open door policy this side of the free port of Shannon.

In the red-carpeted office of his new summer home, which overlooks Cherry Valley and, with field glasses, overlooks Danny Thomas' million dollar ranch home, Regan has hung only three personally-autographed pictures. One is from Franklin D. Roosevelt, the second from President Kennedy, and the third was from Harry Truman. Truman, a piano player himself, even autographed his picture to Phil as "a great singer."

One-Round Regan

Just how great he was may be open to controversy. At least one vicepresident of a large insurance company in Boston thought he was terrible and demanded in the foulest language that he quit singing those lousy Irish songs.

A Jew in the audience told the insurance tycoon to be quiet, that he had brought his mother to the night club to hear Regan sing "Mother Machree."

A fight started and Regan, who is not very tall, managed to hit the insurance tycoon, who was a giant, right on the button. The disturber of the peace fell flat on his back as if crucified. When cops broke in to break up the melee Regan's defense was self-defense.

Any cop getting such an explanation from an ex-cop who had quit the force to become an Irish tenor and become a friend of Presidents could understand such a defense. Regan was released of all blame.

He didn't always sing Irish songs. At Harry Truman's inaugural he was picked to sing the "Star Spangled Banner" and during a visit years later as Regan's house-guest in Palm Springs Truman confessed he nearly appointed Regan ambassador to Ireland, but at that time figured Phil was hardly as rich as John McCormack and might not have been able to afford the luxury of representing his country abroad. Since that time, however, Regan has done amazingly well.

Golly, He Goes Back That Far?

He started mixing politics and singing in 1929 when Jim Farley asked him to come to Haverstraw, Farley's home town up the Hudson river. Jim wanted Regan to help out in a campaign to elect Franklin D. Roosevelt governor. Regan belonged in the group which included Morton Downey, the Boswell Sisters, Kate Smith, Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor. They all sang at political rallies, benefits, prisons. Regan first sang the "Star Spangled Banner" at the Democratic National Convention in 1940. Political influence. Jim Farley who was then national chairman asked him to do it.

He met President Kennedy when the Prez first ran for the U.S. Senate. In fact Regan was asked to pose with Congressman Kennedy at the Copley Plaza, Boston, as a publicity plug for the candidate.

So he was not a Phil-Come-Lately in his friendship with Presidents. He likes all kinds of people and so it was not surprising that some of the biggest of them were responsive to this peculiar charm of his.

Regan Taps Budweiser And Vice Versa

The first one to tap him for other than a free performance was August Busch of Anheuser-Busch Inc. He wondered if Regan couldn't create good will for Busch's Budweiser beer. That was in 1952. Regan did it so well that by 1955 he was made special sales representative to the president.

He really didn't need the job because he was a millionaire himself by 1948, being one of the lucky ones who plunged in oil and didn't come out with a dry hole. He sunk $90,000 into a Texas field and still has his holdings, though his partners sold out—one for 10 million and the other for 15.

But Regan likes to work and he particularly likes to work at ironing out the frictions that rise between capital and labor. He is really not a public relations man, nor a lobbyist, but a human relations specialist. The steelworkers, whose prez is David McDonald, a man very similar in character to Regan, put him on a fee to represent them. As one of Regan's earliest friends was Ben Fairless of U.S. Steel and more recently Edwin Kaiser, of Kaiser Steel, this is a clue of how skilled Regan has become at seeing both sides of a question. Others among his clients are United Insurance, National Distillers, and Kaiser Steel, and he handles them all from Palm Springs and now Cherry Valley.

But the retainers from these operations are not what permit the Regans to live in such splendor. Neither does it come from royalties on records, though he began singing for CBS after quitting his detective's job on the New York police force a long time ago.

He was born in Brooklyn in 1908 and married Josephine Dwyer when he was 18. Still married, they have four married children and 18 grandchildren.

Hollywood Typed Him But Good

His picture career began at Warners where he appeared in 1934 in "The Key", "Housewife" and "Dames." He also worked for Paramount, First National and Republic. One at Republic was called "Laughing Irish Eyes," which shows how close to larceny these guys could come in snaking a standard title like "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," the Chauncey Olcott topper.

Regan also made "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" which was panned as "pretty as a bowl of wax fruit and just as dull."

In fact, he was pencilled in to a lot of turks but he survived them beautifully and kept at his main objectives which were to sing as well as he could and make friends along the way.

He says he's naming his new hilltop summer home (which is only 35 miles from the flatlands of Palm Springs, 4,000 feet higher and 30 degrees cooler) "A Little Bit of Heaven."

For those who can't read he can still sing it.

decision of the New York Showman Billy Rose to produce a play called 'The Deputy'."

The article continued, "At a time of unprecedented good feeling between Roman Catholics and other Christians and also between Christians and Jews, it is unfortunate that the Broadway stage is to present a play which casts the late Pope Pius XII as a supporter of the Nazis in their anti-Jewish purge."

Rev. Graham, an associate editor of America, a Roman Catholic weekly published by the Society of Jesus, and author of "Vatican Diplomacy," said, "I Feel if it ('The Deputy') were brought here, the average theatregoer would not be interested in this type of old style anti-clerical literature. A fair person would be quite indignant at this injustice to the memory of a Pope, who, by the playwright's own acknowledgment, did a great deal to save the Jews of Europe."

were Dean Martin, Tony Martin, Sammy Cahn, George Englund and Paul F. Webster, all of California, and Adolph Green, New York.

The plaintiffs alleged that Livingstone and his firm failed to carry out an agreement made in December, 1959, to sell the plaintiffs $1,900,00 face value U. S. Treasury 2½% bonds. The plaintiffs said they agreed to make a cash downpayment of 5% of the cost of the bonds, and the defendants agreed to loan them the balance, $1,721,875 at 5% prepaid interest. They said they made the agreed payments through their business manager, Edward Traubner, but that the defendants later refused to buy and make delivery of the bonds.

The defendants contended no binding contract was made. Judge Caffrey ruled that an agreemnt for purchase of the bonds was reached by Traubner and Livingstone on Dec. 29, 1959, and that it was later "wrongfully breached" by Livingstone.

The bonds, if purchased by Livingstone for the plaintiffs, would have been sold by them at a profit in June 1960, as the market price of the bonds had gone up since the time of the purchase agreement, the judge said. He ruled that the plaintiffs thus lost an opportunity to make a profit of $40,663.

pany are happy to be in Minneapolis.

"Personally, I am delighted to be here," replied Campbell. "I feel savage about New York—it's provincial. Off-Broadway is imitative, rather than real and alive."

In Campbell's opinion, as far as the legit stage is concerned, London also is going down-hill. He's British and familiar with the theatre in England as well as on Broadway.

Campbell also answered a number of other questions put to him by audience members.

Among the things that Campbell had to say were that Thornton Wilder and England's John Whiting are among his favorite modern playwrights, contemporary plays tend to be a little too impressionistic, it's unfair to be as abstract in the theatre as you are in painting, a play is for the individual and the theatre should have something for everyone.

He also told the audience that in the case of the Guthrie Theatre the plays to be presented this season were selected after Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy indicated an interest in becoming members of the company. And he expressed the opinion that the theatre's obligation is to stimulate man's mind and spirit—to do the best, not just to fill the seats.

"If the play is a work of art it has a right to be performed," he concluded.

Culture Vs. Landlord

wrecking and reconstruction work and may let contracts this fall.

In the wake of this move, Reps. William Widnall (R.-N. J.) and George Huddleston (D.-Ala.), a pair of culture buffs, introduced legislation prohibiting conversion of the theatre until Congress has been given a chance to act. This bill passed the House by voice vote in the dying days of the last session.

The Widnall-Huddleston bill would require the Press Building Corp. (of which, the National Press Club is principal stockholder to submit financial statements to Congress by Feb. 15, 1964. The theatre would be kept going in the interim.

If Congress doesn't take action within 60 days after the statements are submitted, then the house could be converted.

The bill will likely clear the House. Last year it was tied up in a procedural fight in the Senate and its chances there this year are more doubtful.

If a new act of Congress doesn't save the theatre, maybe an old one will. Rep. Widnall and the legal staff of the Library of Congress, as reported earlier in VARIETY, have said any conversion of the theatre would require a new law from Congress. They reasoned the house was built according to specifications set out in a specific act on Congress and to change the theatre would require specific law.

The upshot of this is that numerous law suits will be brought if and when the Press Building Corp. moves to convert the theatre.

Show Biz Behind Iron Curtain

blessings. At least, it had not been necessary for me to inquire, in my non-existent Polish, where the men's room was located.

However, after many false starts and two trips to wrong hotels, I finally became ensconced at the Bristol Hotel, just a short throw from where Frederic Chopin lived while he was turning out songs for the Polski Hit Parade. I ventured to think that had it been necessary for Chopin to use Orbis for his travel arrangements in those days, he probably never would have made it to France and the inevitable George Sand.

Warsaw is a unique city. World War II demolished 87% of it but today practically all of Warsaw is rebuilt. In rebuilding the city, the Poles stuck to the original plans, so that even though the city is about 18 years old, the buildings still look 100 years old. In fact, an old section of Warsaw, known as the Barbican, was rebuilt so authentically that it looks like a scene right out of "Taras Bulba."

Even though the population of Warsaw was decimated during the last war, today it has a population of 1,100,000, about the same as before the conflict. The main drags of Warsaw are Nowy Swiat (New World) and Krakowskie Przedmiescie (and try that on your typewriter). Because Poland is under the Communist heel, no tipping is allowed, but one soon finds out that most waiters aim for that pourboire. Although Communistic, Warsaw has a slightly better standard of living than Moscow.

Toujours The Twist & Cha-Cha

Very few Americans visit Poland. I didn't find another during my entire stay. Nevertheless, the Twist and cha-cha are done in every dance place and hotel. There are a few American-made cars, dominantly Chevrolets. Hotel rates and meals are inexpensive, about $9 per day takes care of room and three meals. Adversely, tomatoes are $1.60 per pound, chocolate bars are $1 for 4 ounces, cigarets cost $1.40 per pack and a 25c Corona cigar went for $1.50. At night, the street lights are very dim, giving Warsaw a sombre look. It is not a gay town and one notices shortages of food in stores. The only social entertainment consists of dancing at either the Bristol, Europe or Grand Hotels.

The entertainment Warsaw has to offer includes the Opera House, playing a ballet entitled "Red Coat" and "Three Cornered Hat." The Polish Theatre is currently presenting "Cleopatra"—not the picture, but the play. The National Theatre (big one) had "Agamemnon" and "Electra" on the boards while the National Theatre (small house) was presenting a Polish production entitled "Lekkomyslna Siestra." The Wspolczesny Theatre was showing a play in Polish with the English title of "The King Is Dying." The dramatic Theatre was showing a Polish production of "Visit of the Old Lady." The Ateneum Theatre had "Requiem For A Nun" in Polish, while the Rozmatiosci Theatre played "The Diplomats." The Powzechmy Theatre showed Dumas' "The Three Musketeers," the Ludowy had "Adventures In Toyland," the Komedia presented "The Idiot" in Polish, the Zydowskie Jewish Theatre presented "The Heart" in Yiddish, the Syrena had "His Excellency," a musical revue, the Small Opera showed "Plasnik From Tyrol," an operetta, and the Lalka Theatre presented "The Nightingale."

In all the foregoing cases, the highest price of admission was 30 Polish zlotys or $1.20. The Communists believe in giving the people plenty of low-priced entertainment and culture.

In the motion picture division, Warsaw's Kino Theatre displayed UA's "Love In The Afternoon," Wiedza Theatre had a Polish film, Mloda Gwardia Theatre presented "Panorama," which is Russia's Cinerama, and the Moskva Theatre had a German picture entitled "Son of Prisoners." All motion pictures charge a top price of 15 zlotys, or 60c.

Truly Gay Budapest

Budapest, in contrast to Warsaw, is a city of 2,000,000 which still manages to be gay, sophisticated and bubbling with excitement and activity. It was hard to believe that one was behind the Iron Curtain; the people were gay and the city showed evidence of having a decent standard of living.

Whereas Warsaw had few cars in the streets, and few stores stocked to overflowing with food Budapest was a beehive of activity, with plenty of automobiles choking the streets and stores stockhed to overflowing with food —and purchasers ready and able to buy it.

American products in evidence were Revlon, Pall Mall and Gillette. These surely indicate that Hungary has some contact with the outside world and is not too heavily controlled by Khrushchev & Co. However, all the papers (Hungarian, French and German) are Communist-controlled and published. The only English-language newspaper obtainable is the Daily Worker. Consequently, one has no idea of what was going on outside the Iron Curtain.

Budapest is the home of the tzigane (gypsy) orchestra. One can pick from about 50 restaurants that specialize in this fiddle music that is desgned to make you weep while are enjoying your Goulash or chicken paprikash. Hungarians excel at this type of entertainment and the music is a pleasure to listen to. our name does not have to be Gabor or Rakoczi in order to enjoy it.

Another enjoyable thing in Budapest is the food. Hungarians take pride in preparing tasty dishes. The city is actually an amalgamation of two cities; Buda and Pest. Buda is on the west side of the Danube River and Pest is on the east. Together, they make one heck of a quinella; in fact, Budapest has the flavor of Paris.

88 Cinemas—UN of Pix

On the entertainment front in Budapest, here is the rundown: There are 88 movie houses in the city and they play American, Italian, French and Hungarian films.

In summertime, they also have eight open air movies (not drive-ins.) Top prices in theatres is 6 Forints or 25c, which is cheap entertainment for the Hungarian. Downtown theatres were playing the following Corvin Theatre — "Mr. Hobbs Takes a Holiday." Red Star—"Robinson Crusoe." Pushkin —Disney's "Bambi." Vorosmarty— "The Great Maneuver." Urania— "Somewhere In Europe" (Hungarian pic.). Majus—"We Two And The Horse," a French pic. Matra— "Divorce Italian Style." Tunder— "Snow White & The Seven Dwarfs." Szabadsag—Mike Todd's "Around The World In 80 Days." Rege—"Absent Minded Professor" with "View From The Bridge" coming.

Needless to say, from the aforementioned pictures, it is easy to see that the Hungarians love Walt Disney. There favorite stars are Audrey Hepburn, Mel Ferrer, Gregory Peck, Spencer Tracy, Jean Sorrel, Danielle Darrieux, Claudia Cardinale, Jean-Paul Belmondo and Alain Delon.

Budapest also has 13 "legitimate" theatres, and two opera houses. When caught, the State Opera was doing Beethoven's "Fidelio" while the Erkel Opera had "Carmen" on the boards. All the legit houses perform plays in Hungarian, but surprisingly most of the plays performed by repertory companies are by American playwrights. The Madach Theatre had "Streetcar Named Desire," Jozsef Attila Theatre had "Glass Menagerie," Vigszinaz Theatre had "The Rainmaker," while the National Theatre performed "The Crucible," "Death Of A Salesman" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night," all within one week. Great American authors are really appreciated here, although I doubt if they receive royalties from their works. Legit theatres have put on one performance per day with the program changing every day. They use repertory companies and do only seven shows per week, Mondays off, and two performances on Sunday.

Legit prices are inexpensive. Best seats at the opera are 35 forints or $1.40. Best seats at plays are 30 forints, or $1.20, while pix have a top of 10 forints or 40c.

The Twist and cha-cha are very popular here also, and the Times Square of Budapest is Lenin Korut (Ave.)—naturally!

Next stop on the Iron Curtain Circuit, Prague, a city of 1,100,000, differs from Budapest in many respects. No American products are seen in the shops, fewer autos on the streets and more and tighter Red control was evidenced in Prague.

Prague has a fair standard of living and seems to be happiest living under Red domination. It seems as if the average Czech embraced Communism without complaining too much.

Stores in Prague are stocked to overflowing with food and goods.

Tv sets are expensive, about $260 for a 21-inch set.

Prague's Night Life

Prague boasts many cabarets with variety shows that are very inexpensive. Under the Communist plan, Czechs work from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. without a break for lunch. At 2 p.m. they are through for the day and then go out and enjoy life. Prague didn't suffer much damage during the last war.

Prague boasts about 10 good theatres that show dramatic plays and perform Opera. I attended a performance of Dvorak's "Rusalka" or "Water Fairy" at the National Opera and it was well done. The Smetana Theatre had "Studni," a Czech opera by Blodek, while Tylovo Divaldo Theatre performed Shakespeare's "As You Like It." Prices for these performances are 20 koruna, or $1.40.

The Czech Army Theatre was presenting "Anna Karenina" and "Julius Caesar," the Comedy Theatre had "Letters Of G. B. Shaw" by J. Kilty and the Realistic Theatre played Shakespeare's "Othello." Prices had a top of 15 koruna or $1.05. In the symphonic department, Smetana Hall had symphony concerts, the House of Artists also performed different symphonies and the Prague Gardens performed the classics in an outdor setting.

Prague has 17 downtown motion picture houses, playing films produced in the United States, Italy, France, Russia, Yugoslavia, England and Germany. It is truly the United Nations of motion picture exhibition. A sampling of their motion picture fare runs like this: Sevastopol Theatre — Yugoslavian picture "14 Days," with an old Harold Lloyd picture to follow; Alfa Theatre—"Calypso" (French); Blanik — "Captain's Table" English; Hvezda—"Ulicnik," Russian comedy; Yalta Theatre — "Julie, You Are Wonderful," Austrian pic with Charles Boyer; Kotva Theatre—"My School Companion," German; Lucerna—"Please Don't Disturb," a Czech comedy; Metro—a Harold Lloyd comedy; Paris Theatre—UA's "Marty."

Prices for movies have a top of 7 koruna or 50c. In addition to all this, I discovered a new motion picture process that exists only in Prague. It is called Laterna Magica —but more anon about this unique process in a future story.

Salant on Goldwater

correspondence with Sen. Goldwater, who felt he was unfairly treated on the program. "I don't agree with him," says Salant. Prior to the more recent public evidence of the feud, in last December, Sen. Goldwater's ire against CBS News took another turn. The Arizona Senator at that time was addressing a Republican Party group in Oxford, Miss. He refused to address the group until CBS News cameras were turned away from him, a move which drew a protest from CBS News' chieftain Salant.

As to fairness, the latest public incident took place on a CBS News show, Friday (5) night's edition of "Eyewitness," which dealt with the "Goldwater Boom." Out of a welter of taped material from which to select footage, CBS News chose to include a passage taking place at the airport in Prescott, Ariz., as Goldwater exited from a plane. CBS Newsman Murray Fromson, soliciting an interview, was told:

"CBS? Well, I don't know. If this is direct, I'll do it. It's not you—I just don't trust CBS News. You fellows who work in the field, you're all right. But the fellows in New York—you can have them. Throw 'em in the Grand Canyon."

Salant recalls when he sent a letter protesting the blackout of CBS News from the Oxford, Miss., event last winter, Sen. Goldwater was reported to be vacationing in the Grand Canyon.

the comic strips' creators, critics and scholars, with many examples of the art. Thorough-going tome, culled from many sources, should interest show biz readers since large roster of characters from "the funnies" have become subjects for treatment on stage and screen and in broadcasting.

White is a professor at Boston U.; Abel's freelance material has appeared in reviews and magazines. Byliners in this volume include late Heywood Broun, Al Capp, Walt Kelly and Gilbert Seldes. Rodo.

Warren Bower, Marathoner

On July 11th Prof. Warren Bower, assistant dean of the General Education Division of NYU, will make his 1,000th book broadcast over WNYC, New York. To the best of radio records this is the longest run of a sustaining program, having proceeded uninterruptedly since November of 1938. Bower has interviewed some 700 writers, publishers, critics and belles lettres characters in that period.

His commorative guest for the millenium broadcast will be Rex Stout, president of the Authors League of America.

Collaborative In-Laws

Agent Toby Cole and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Helen Krich Chinoy, latter an instructor at Smith College, have updated their "Directing The Play" which Bobbs-Merrill have just brought out. It was first published some 10 years ago and their new material includes coverage on Tyrone Guthrie, Franco Zeffirelli, Joseph Papp and Peter Hall.

They previously collabed on "Actors On Acting;" Miss Cole has also edited "Playwrights On Playwrighting and Acting": A Handbook of the Stanislavsky Method"; and Mrs. Chinoy is presently engaged in a study of the impact of directors on American playwrights, under a fellowship from the American Assn. of University Women.

Ken Hurst's Post

Ken T. Hurst, who helped get Prentice-Hall of India under way, when stationed in New Delhi, has been upped to v.p. and g.m. of Prentice-Hall International, and is now headquartered in the Englewood Cliffs, N. J., homeoffice. He succeeded William de Luca, transferred to another post with P-H. Leo Albert is prez of P-H Intl.

Hurst's sales manager, Bob Donoho, is now also in charge of P-H of India.

Paris Paper Prices Upped

Paris dailies have been facing circulation troubles of late, laid at video's door, but are still planning a rise in prices as of August. It is hoped this will offset circulation drops and lost advertising revenue. The influential Le Monde went from 6c to 7c. last month while most of the rest will go from 5c. per copy to 6c comes August.

The Le Monde hike did not hurt it, so others are a little buoyed about the pending raise.

Benny Rubin's Book

Benny Rubin has put between hard covers the broad panorama of his 49 years in show business with the intriguing title of "Come Backstage With Me." His personal reminiscences touch every base in the entertainment form, with time out for early truancy and stock selling when job calls lagged.

Asked if it was ghosted, Rubin flipped, "No ghost could write what I've been through."

Sig Rock's Setup

The concept of independent production is moving into the publishing field via a group of editorial execs who have set up Sigrid Rock Associates in N. Y. Outfit says it will deliver ideas, writers, research, sales presentations and also "advance quotes" to publishers using its services.

Sigrid Rock was formerly managing editor at Dell Books.

NAL's Hardcover Line

Usually the standard book publishers add paperback editions under subsidiary imprint but New American Library has reversed-field and has gone into the hardcover book line.

NAL's paperback imprimateurs Congress, opened last Thursday are Signet and Monitor.

OBITUARIES

ANDRE MERTENS

Andre Mertens, 59, chairman of Columbia Artists Management, died July 9 near Zurich. Death was due to a fall earlier in Hamburg.

Details in Legit Dept.

ALAN CAMPBELL

Alan Campbell, 58, actor-screen writer and husband of writer Dorothy Parker, died June 14 at his home in West Hollywood, Calif.

He launched his career with the Shubert Brothers, by obtaining a job in their costume department. After a few months, he joined actress Eva La Gallienne's acting company and played small roles. In 1928, he played Laurette Taylor's son in the Broadway production of "The Furies." During the 1930's he and his wife collaborated on several screenplays, including "A Star is Born," "Trade Winds," "Saboteur" and "Sweethearts."

His wife survives.

GILBERT WAKEFIELD

Gilbert Wakefield, 71, dramatist, died July 4 in London. He wrote his first play, "Prelude To A Flat" in 1923. Subsequent works included "Counsel's Opinion," "Husband To A Famous Woman," "Room For Two," "Sweet Sorrow," "Deep Freeze" and a new translation of "Hedda Gabler." He also worked in the '30s with London Film Productions as a writer.

Survived by his wife, actress Isabel Jeans.

GRANT RICHARDS

Grant Richards, 47, radio-tv-film-legit actor, died of leukemia July 4 in Hollywood. Prior to going to Hollywood in 1956, he was in radio in N.Y. He also appeared in "Winged Victory." He played in both films and tv during recent years.

Surviving is a son.

OKITO

Theodore Bamberg, 88, a top ranking magician for 50 years under stage name Okito, died June 28 in Chicago. He helped stage the original Howard Thurston magic show and traveled with that show for a decade.

He was born in Amsterdam into a family whose eldest sons had been magicians for six generations. He gave his first public performance when he was 11 at a birthday party for Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. His father had been court magician to the Dutch royal family.

Bamberg gave his first U. S. performance in 1908 at Chicago's Majestic Theatre, now the Shubert. His best-known illusion was the floating ball trick, in which a ball appears to be suspended in midair.

He is survived by his eldest son, David, a magician in Buenos Aires, another son and a daughter.

PAT FLANAGAN

Pat Flanagan, 70, one of the early play-by-play baseball announcers who developed techniques to make the Western Union ticker tape reports seem an on-the-scene account, died July 2 in Scottsdale, Ariz. where he "retired" some 15 years ago. He continued to work as sports director for radio station KOOL in Phoenix.

Flanagan had spent most of his career in Chicago on stations WBBM and WJJD, starting in 1929. He was known as "the first of the screamers" in ballcasting, and the large following of distaffers he gathered (at one time 80% of his total audience, according to a survey) was attributed to the excitement he projected with his voice.

He was part of the play-by-play team for the first All Star game in 1933 and had broadcast seven World Series. In addition to the Cubs and White Sox games, Flanagan also described Notre Dame and Big Ten football games for the Chicago stations. He is said to have aired 3,000 major league games in his career.

Wife and brother survive.

JACK ECOFF

Jack Ecoff, 65, general sales manager of Mills Music, died of a heart attack July 3 in Rockville Center, N.Y. He joined Mills Music about 30 years ago in Philadelphia and had that city and Atlantic City as his territory in plugging songs to bandleaders and singers. He later came to New York and in 1941 was named general sales manager.

Ecoff was born in Philadelphia and worked as a furniture salesman before turning to music. He also was interested in the educational music field.

Survived by wife and daughter.

ARTHUR SIMON

Arthur Simon, 59, vicepresident and advertising manager of Radio-Television Daily since 1954, died of a heart attack July 1 in his New York office. He also had managed various radio stations including WPEN, Philadelphia; WOV and WLIB, N.Y., and WKBW, Buffalo.

Simon served as president of the N.Y. Chapter of Broadcast Pioneers, and was head of the Broadcasters' Foundation, which aids the needy in the broadcasting field. He was one of the founders of the latter organization which is an affiliate of the Pioneers.

He was also instrumental in starting the Golden Mike Awards for distinguished contributions to the art of broadcasting by a radio or television station. Simon was chairman of the National Assn. of Broadcasters' War Activities Committee in 1942.

Survived by wife and daughter.

MARTIA LEONARD

Martia Leonard, 93, who operated a Greek theatre on her Mt. Kisco, N. Y., estate, died June 29 in Mt. Kisco. She was an occasional novelist, playwright and non-fiction writer as well. She founded the Brookside Open Air Theatre in 1911 with stone seats for 200. There were Sunday performances nearly every week through 1925.

Miss Leonard was born in New York and appeared with Henry Irving at the age of 18 in a tour of England. Her novel, "The Moving Finger," was published in 1930. She presented "The Immortal Beloved" at a Little Theatre Tournament in 1927 with her own company. In 1946, "Brigands Preferred," a comic opera for which she wrote the book, was presented as a benefit for the Edwards Foundation for American Artists.

KATHRYN VINCENT

Kathryn Vincent Mayer, 90, a former actress who became a director and vocal coach in Detroit, died July 2 in that city. As Kathryn Vincent, her first speaking part on Broadway was given her by David Belasco. She also toured the country in many road shows. She had been married to Jake Mayer, a scenery maker who died in 1935.

In Detroit, Mrs. Mayer was affectionately known as "Lady Mayer" by singers as well as the dramatic groups which she coached. Among the groups which she directed were the Fine Arts Society, Twentieth Century Club, Theatre Arts and The Players.

Survived by a niece.

DR. THEODORE HARRIS

Dr. Theodore (Ted) Harris, who together with two brothers, operated the State Theatre, Hartford, and other film houses, died July 2 in Hartford. Dr. Harris and his brother, Dr. Martin Harris, were dentists. With another brother Maurice, a pharmacist, they ultimately gave up their professions to follow the entertainment field.

The trio originally took over several theatres in Passaic, N.J. They later moved to Hartford, where they built the State Theatre. In its heyday, the house played the top bands in the business. For many years the Eddie Sherman Agency booked the State.

Wife and two brothers survive.

DR. HANS SCHUELER

Dr. Hans Schueler, 65, general director of the Mannheim, West Germany, National Theatre for the last 12 years, died June 25 in that city after a long illness.

Born in Berlin, he was general director of the Koenigsberg Opera from 1928 until 1932, and thereafter was with the Leipzig Theatre in a similar capacity until 1947 when he left East Germany and came to the West.

He was credited with many "firsts" in the German theatre. He was the first to bring Erwin Piscator to the drama, and was responsible for the success of the new modern theatre in Mannheim. He often introduced the work of young German playwrights there.

WILLIAM H. HAMILTON

William H. Hamilton, 48 formerly staff announcer with WBNS and WCOL radio, Columbus, O., died June 23 in New York. After radio work in Columbus, he was associated with WING and WHIO, Dayton, O. HOLLYWOOD A HIT—IN MOSCOW!

Even For 'Lady,' The Day Must Come; Tuner to End Tour, Move to Vegas

For the first time in over seven-and-a-half years, the U. S. will be without a production of "My Fair Lady" when the touring edition of the musical closes Aug. 31 in Chicago. It'll be a temporary situation, however, with the road unit to be reactivated after a seven-week layoff for an 18-week engagement at the Riviera Hotel, Las Vegas, starting Oct. 22.

"MFL" is going into the Riviera on a guarantee of $50,000 weekly, which means a total take for the 18 weeks of $900,000. Operating expenses are to be deducted from the guaranteed revenue. The Riviera has the option of extending the engagement. The tuner, co-starring Ronald Drake and Gaylea Byrne, is currently at the Greek Theatre, Los Angeles. It moves from there next Saturday (20) to the Auditorium, Denver, where it begins a four-day stand next Wednesday (24).

Following the Denver booking, the tuner will go into the Shubert Theatre, Chicago, for a return engagement from July 31-Aug. 31. The road company began its travels March 18, 1957, and its itinerary included, besides dates in the U. S.

The French Idea

Paris, July 16.

They tell it with a straight face here, so maybe it actually happened.

A leading French Minister allegedly made an appointment with the head of French Security Sector. "I have a mistress," he allegedly admitted. "I visit her twice a week at suchandsuch an address at suchandsuch hours. In case you hear rumors, well . . . we don't want any Profumo scandals in France, do we?"

15 Films, 10 Plays And Much Else Mark Surge Of Seven Arts Combine

Scope of Seven Arts' burgeoning activities—in films, tv and legit, as well as realestate—is revealed in the annual report to stockholders going out today (Wed.). Report shows 7A will complete 15 theatrical films this year (more than some of the major companies) and has 10 legit plays scheduled for the 1963-64-65 Broadway seasons.

Previously revealed were the company's net earnings of $1,705,793, or $1.08 a share, for the fiscal year ended Jan. 31, 1963. This compared with earnings of $1,100,555, or 85c a share, for the previous year.

Disclosed apparently for the first time in the report is the election of prominent Coast attorney Greggson Bautzer as a vicepresident of Seven Arts. It's understood that Bautzer, who has given up his private law practice, will function primarily in the field of negotia-

Newport, Philly Fests Point Up Folknik Impact

Folkniks are a growing and an increasingly important factor in today's music biz and this has been reflected in many ways including disk sales and nitery bookings. Festivals featuring this genre are also popping up all over with more and more regularity and two such are the upcoming Newport Folk Festival and Philadelphia Folk Festival.

The Newport strumfest will run July 26-28, with George Wein as technical producer and Manuel Greenhill as promotion director. Wein was producer of the recent Newport Jazz Festival, which scored a hefty success over the

E. German Propaganda Films Sold to Cuba

Frankfurt, July 9.

The Castro Commies are going to be treated to some of the East German propaganda films next year. DEFA, the East German film organization, has sold 202 short films plus 30 full-length feature pix and documentaries to Cuba.

Included in the lot, according to the Soviet Zone news agency ADN, is the documentary film about the Russian accomplishments titled, "The Russian Wonder."

MIRISCH BROS. FLEE SPOTLIGHT

By HAROLD MYERS

Moscow, July 16.

Hollywood has accomplished a major breakthrough at the current Moscow film festival. Participating on an unprecedented scale, the United States has had a succession of triumphs which have become one of the major talking themes among the 54 competing nations. And thus, in one swoop, has been erased the dismal memories of the past.

In striking contrast to its attitude towards the first Soviet fest only four years ago when there was an official Yank boycott of the event, the present American delegation is not only impressive by its size, but also by its strength. That is considered all the more significant in view of the 1961 debacle, when the mass walkout on the official U.S. entry, "Sunrise at Campobello," took on the appearance of a stampede.

The top talent that has been recruited to participate this time seems to suggest there is some magic about a Moscow festival. Neither a Cannes nor a Venice would seem to have much hope of getting a star of Danny Kaye's calibre these days, yet he readily and cheerfully came in for the

2d Shubert Will Called 'Forgery'

Charging that a second will of the late John Shubert, scion of the $50,000,000 Shubert theatrical empire, was a "forgery," an array of attorneys appeared before N. Y. Surrogate Samuel S. DiFalco yesterday (Tues.) morning who set two dates for the probate of the will of the 53-year-old showman who died last Nov. 14 on a train while enroute to Clearwater, Fla. On Aug. 1, the legitimacy of his two children—Sara Catherine, 4, and John J. Jr., 2—and the determination of the status of wife No. 2, Nancy Mae Eyerson Shubert, will be determined at this trial. By Aug. 6, affidavits must be filed by both sides on (a) the existence of the original of the second will

Upbeat In Hiring of Negro Actors Cited By H'wood Telefilm Producers

Hollywood, July 16.

There has been a definite increase in the employment of Negro actors in telefilms in the past 18 months to two years, it was asserted by a majority of production company and network execs contacted in a survey regarding the position of the Negro actor in tv today. Various Negro groups, such as the NAACP, have been contending that discrimination exists in the industry against the Negro, but the execs not only denied this; they asserted the upbeat in hiring of Negro actors precedes by many months the campaign recently launched by Negro groups to seek more jobs for those of their race in teevee.

Reasons given for the hike in such employment were diverse, some attributing it to a greater awareness on the part of producers, execs and casting directors; some to the Kennedy Administration's pinpointing the entire area of civil rights; some on the theory if a program is to accurately reflect the American way of life, it should include Negro actors.

A number of execs said they have given orders to producers to utilize Negro thesps wherever possible, and to utilize them in a variety of roles, to shy away from the portrayal of the Negro as a menial or domestic. As a result, in

For 'Integrated' Only

Arthur Miller isn't the only American playwright siding with various British writers in refusing to permit performances of his plays in segregated theatres. Notably affected by this action is South Africa, from which scripts are being withheld because of the racial discrimination practiced there.

Other U.S. playwrights who've put a "for integrated audiences only" stamp on their product include Joseph Stein and Edward Albee, currently represented on Broadway by "Enter Laughing" and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" respectively, as well as Neil Simon, widely represented on the stock circuit this summer by his comedy, "Come Blow Your Horn."

IATSE Knows Of No Negro Charges Vs. Studio Crafts

Hollywood, July 16.

Richard Walsh, prexy of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, stated here last week he has received no complaints on alleged discrimination within the Hollywood shops, and pointed out that IA bylaws specify that "race, creed or color" shall not affect a man's chance for enrollment in union.

Heartburns in Chicago Following 'Cleopatra'; Trib Critic Pushed Aside

Chicago, July 16.

"Cleopatra" is firmly ensconced at the State-Lake Theatre and is doing great business, but its preem of two weeks ago has left some ruffled feathers among the local film critics as result of some internal backbiting at the papers in re the picture.

First wrangle occurred when Chicago Tribune reviewer Anna Nangle was informed that "Cleopatra" would be reviewed for that paper by legit and music critic Claudia Cassidy. When Miss Nangle asked for an explanation, she was told that it was "an editorial decision" and that Miss Cassidy had a contract with the Tribune assuring her that she could write about any subject. Big Business Pins Faith on Modern Industrial Showmanship at '64 Fair

By ABEL GREEN

Industrial showmen, conceding old fears of a "fun-less fair," contend that against such big business exhibition and showmanship has changed so much postwar that perhaps, even without a frolic midway, the N.Y. World's Fair next year will attract those 23,000,000 tickets at $2 a head that Fair Corp. president Robert Moses hopes for, as do we all, including "worried" New York hoteliers, restaurateurs, showmen mentioned last issue.

General Electric's Steven C. Van Voorhis, manager of the N.Y. World's Fair Operation, points to its Walt Disney-created "Progressland," to be presented in a three-story, dome-shaped pavilion and on a six-stage auditorium, where audiences move from stage to stage without leaving their seats, as a prime example of industrial showmanship.

Alfred Stern, of Robinson-Capsis-Stern Associates, who for all his youth (in his 40s), has been in fair and exposition showmanship since he was account executive on entertainment to the departments of exhibits and concessions (under Mike Mermey) at the 1939-40 N.Y. World's Fair (he was only 21 then) points to his "Brightest Show on Earth" which will be the Electric Power & Light Exhibit. (He wrote, with Doris Frankel and Gilbert

Liz Taylor to Hostess 'Night of 100 Stars' Show To Aid London Actors

London, July 16.

Elizabeth Taylor has accepted an invitation to act as hostess of this year's "Night of 100 Stars," which takes place at the Palladium at midnight on Thursday (18). Charles Russell and Lance Hamilton are staging this annual benefit fiesta on behalf of the Actors' Charitable Trust.

The title is not just a slick gimmick. There will be around 100 stars taking part, if only in brief appearances. Laurence Olivier is to introduce "Amateur Dancers," with such stars as Anna Neagle, Leslie Caron, Richard Attenborough, Sheila Sim and Terence Stamp giving demonstrations of the Twist, the bossa nova and other terps.

The John Mills' family will appear in a sketch and the dancing and singing chorus will contain such names as Anna Massey, Peggy Cummins, Miriam Karlin and Fenella Fielding.

Jessie Matthews, Jack Hawkins, Richard Burton, Kenneth More, Tommy Steele, Evelyn Laye, Joan Plowright and Roger Moore are among others who will participate.

Frolicsome Dolphins And Whales For Family Trade; British Plot 'Marineland'

London, July 16.

Inspired by its success in America, British showmen will project the first European Marineland. Billy Smart Ltd. (the circus folk), Butlins (the holiday camp kings) an Associated British Picture Corp. are getting together to provide a new form of entertainment in Britain which should start in 1964. Marineland is to be built on an 11½ acre site at Southsea on the South Coast.

The ocean stadium, which will provide covered seating for 1,800 people, will present daily Marine Revues featuring dolphins and whales going through their salt water antics. There will also be a sea area around which 3,000 people will be able to watch performing seallons and porpoises.

A giant fishbowl, skindiving, a children's zoo and railway are other attractions planned. In line with modern times there will be a motel, a heated swimming pool and picnic areas.

This ambitious scheme is designed to cater for 2,000,000 visitors a year. The new company has not yet been firmly established, according to an ABPC spokesman, so it is not yet possible to name the boss man.

CROSS-RIVER VARIABLE STILL MARKS ST. PAUL

St. Paul, July 16.

Catholic St. Paul's theatres continue shy of Legion of Decency condemned films most, if not all of which, are played in cross-river Minneapolis. However, the local ritzy neighborhood Grandview, in the earliest subsequent-run clearance slot, still is taking chances with an occasional Legion "special classification" picture.

For current example, there's "Divorce Italian Style" (Embassy). This had a long, highly successful Minneapolis engagement in a first-run neighborhood house and then made the rounds of a number of other uptown theatres there to healthy boxoffice returns. As a Legion "special classification" the Grandview has it for its local first-run and it has been coming through excellently at the box-office.

WB's Got Action; Nothing Like It Before On Lot

Warner Bros. has $80,000,000 tied up in new production, involving theatrical pictures completed, shooting and in active preparation. Jack L. Warner's program has the WB Burbank lot, including all 24 sound stages, going capacity either via actual camera work or occupied with sets.

The word from WB is that this kind of activity is unparalleled in studio history.

Major item at Burbank is "My Fair Lady," which started rehearsals in mid-June and starts principal photography Aug. 12, with J. L. Warner personally supervising.

Lineup comprises nine new pictures either already rolling or due to roll before late summer and five projects in preparation.

This obviously amounts to a vast amount of action, particularly considering that all of these films have been at least partially cast with top personalities along with prominent producers, directors, writers, etc.

Potentially strong one currently going is "4 for Texas," with Robert Aldrich as producer-director and players including Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Anita Ekberg and Ursula Andress.

Also current are "Dead Ringer," with Bette Davis and Karl Malden, and "A Distant Trumpet," starring Troy Donahue and Suzanne Pleshette. Futures include Joshua

Travel Agency Gets Met Opera's Exclusive For N.Y. Fair Added Dates

Met Opera's spring tour in 1964 will be broken after first dates in Boston (April 13) and Cleveland (April 20) for a return to Manhattan to play an added fortnight or repertory. This is the Met's reaction to the N.Y. World's Fair. A novelty is appointment of American Express, the travel agency, as exclusive ticket agent of the 16 performances.

Because of the special nature of the Manhattan spring season all the works and casts are already contracted and publicly disclosed —believed unprecedented for the Met so far ahead. Works to be presented include "Falstaff," "Macbeth," "Don Giovanni," "Otello," "Aida," "Il Trovatore," "Manon" and "La Sonnambula."

The World's Fair period roster is unusually standout in terms of celebrity, including, among others, Birgit Nilsson, Renata Tebaldi, Leontyne Price, Joan Sutherland, Eileen Farrell, Rita Gorr, Gabriella Tucci, Cornell MacNeil, Carlo Bergonzo, Ceasare Siepi, James MacCracken, Richard Tucker, Niccolai Gedda, Jerome Hines.

The spring tour resumes after the Exposition fortnight at Atlanta (May 11) with other road dates to follow.

Czechs' Ingenious Magic Lantern Blends Cinema With Live Action

By HOWARD PEARL

Prague, July 16.

It took a trip behind the Iron Curtain to discover an entirely new motion picture process that is probably virtually unknown to Americans. It is called Lanterna Magica and it is presently showing in only one city in the entire world —Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Lanterna Magica, or Magic Lantern in English, is a melange of motion pictures and live grand opera. It is housed in a special theatre constructed for it and encompasses the use of three separate motion picture screens of different sizes serviced by three projection machines, all working simultaneously and showing three different, but plot-connected pictures.

The theatre has only 600 seats, no balcony, and uses live opera singers and ballet dancers who perform onstage while the film unrolls on the three screens. The presentation was Jacques Offenbach's "Tales of Hoffman" and the amalgamation of live talent singing in concert with the action and stereophonic soundtrack of the film made a most impressive and delightful presentation for this oft-done opera. The process is five years old and is a Czech invention. The soundtrack is done in the Czech language.

The three screens are set on stage. The screen at centre stage is a flat oblong. The screen at stage left is square and the screen at stage right is an upright rectangle. "Tales of Hoffman" was done in three acts with intermissions. The first act was in color, the second in black & white and the third act in color.

The immediate impression startles the viewer—it is that outstanding! Actually, Lanterna Magica combines the best features of motion pictures and grand opera and

DeGaulle's TV 'Residuals'

Paris, July 16.

Gen. De Gaulle is a strong believer in television as a medium of communication with the public.

'Outraging Public Decency' Cost Dick Bomont $105; His Nude 'Star' Goes Free

San Francisco, July 16.

Location shots for "The Saucy Aussie," peeler pic now playing at the Gayety here, cost producer Richard W. Bomont $105, which he paid July 8 in Redwood City Municipal Court south of here.

Judge Roy Seagraves also hung a 90-day suspended sentence over the 29-year-old Bomont, who was arrested, along with his shivering, goosepimpled star, Sheree Steiner, 18, and two aides last Nov. 21 as they shot scenes on a windswept public beach near Half Moon Bay.

Charges against Miss Steiner and the two male assistants were dropped. Bomont pled guilty to a charge of "outraging public decency."

The young producer said he finished the film on a private estate.

KRAMER SEZ 111 NOW CAN PLAY CINERAMA

Berlin, July 16.

On his way to the Moscow Film Fest, Stanley Kramer stopped here for two days to tell about his "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" (UA) which is set to open Nov. 3 in Los Angeles. He answered questions about this big-scale Cinerama comedy in Technicolor.

Asked whether there are already sufficient Cinerama houses in the world, Kramer said: "There are now 111 cinemas that can play Cinerama films. And there will be around 600 within the next four years."

Incidentally, here there is the Capitol which is a regular Cinerama house in addition to Sportpalast which occasionally (current pic is "How West Was Won") plays Cinerama pix. Nicolas Reisini, Pres. of Cinerama Inc., just announced that he and Karl Heinz Pepper, wealthy local house owner have begun building two deluxe cinemas here. Opening of the two houses will be in the fall of 1964. One theatre will be opened with "Mad World."

With regard to his "World," he called attention to the fact that he utilized a new technical Cinerama system which doesn't show

Fidel Castro's July 26 celebration planners, preparing in Havana for a 10th anni blowout, have invited 15 New York Negro newsmen to attend, all expenses paid, but it looks as though only one or two will go.

Having invited white American newsmen to an all-expense junket earlier this year with a single exceptance (that by ABC-TV's Lisa Howard, who returned with several news beats), the Instituto Cubano de Amistad con Los Pueblos (Cuban Institute of Friendship with the Peoples) sent invitations to the Negro newsmen, all concentrated in the New York area.

RACE TO FILM RACE ISSUES

Barry Gray Film on Race Riot

Rome, July 16.

Barry Gray, whose WMCA-New York interview stanza is currently emanating from Rome to emphasize Via Veneto—the Hollywood-on-Tiber bit—plans to enter film production in the near future. For the moment, it's a sideline project, but may eventually turn into a new career for Gray.

Interviewer recently purchased Irving Werstein's "July 1863" as a pic property, for $15,000, and expects to bring it to the screen by the end of 1964. As things now stand, pic will probably be made under Joseph E. Levine's Embassy Pictures banner, with Gray acting as executive producer.

Sidney Poitier, Paul Newman, Diahann Carroll, and Eli Wallach are among thesps approved re project, for which Gray is currently seeking a scriptwriter and a director. Pic would be shot in New York city area. Story is described as factual description of one of worst race riots in history, with one of story strains including a North-vs.-South espionage angle. Book was published three years ago, and is currently out in paperback form.

Negroes Included As Trainees At Metro and Revue-Universal; Stress On Qualification For Tasks

Hollywood, July 16.

Metro will soon launch a two-pronged trainee program, one designed to train apprentices under its pact with International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the other a drive aimed at taking care of shortages which exist or are threatened in certain other categories. The MGM program will be similar to that which Revue-Universal has had for some time.

Cognizant of the current campaign by various Negro groups for more jobs in Hollywood, a Metro studio exec said the MGM programs would include Negroes, but pointed out the Culver City lot has been hiring Negroes at all times. At Revue-Universal also, the training programs have always included Negroes.

MGM's program for apprentices under its tie with IBEW will be to train electricians, and it goes into effect shortly. Negroes will be included in that program.

As for the studio's other trainee program, expected to begin next fall, this will cover other areas where a shortage of skilled workers has developed, in the fields of plastering, woodworkers, carpenters, scenic artists, etc. In some areas, actual shortages don't exist yet, but with the current crop of workers in many cases nearing retirement age, with no replacements in sight, the studio seeks to train new men, it was explained.

As far as employment of Negroes is concerned, MGM has even placed ads in the Negro press seeking help, and hires Negroes whenever they find such qualified workers, the exec said. Hiring policies at Metro have nothing to do with race, creed or color, it was added.

The same holds true at Revue-Universal, where Negroes are

Areas of Hazard

Film production-distribution was the key factor behind Metro's loss of $12,338,000 for the 40 weeks ended June 6, 1963. This motion picture activity resulted in a deficit of $31,878,000 for the 40 weeks, compared with a loss of $862,000 for the corresponding period a year ago.

Television earnings were reported at $4,373,000 for the new 40-week period, compared with $6,527,000 a year ago. Net income from records and music dropped to $696,000 in the new period, compared with $1,265,000 the year previous.

Gross tv income for the 1963 and 1962 periods includes $4,972,000 and $6,966,000, respectively, for the licensing of features and shorts to tv stations, and $12,824,000 and $11,289,000, respectively, for series and commercials produced for tv. TV licensing contracts as of June 6 provide for gross income of about $11,000,000 to be earned after that date.

U Calls in All Preferred Stock

Universal Pictures board of directors yesterday (Tues.) voted to call in the company's outstanding preferred stock. There are currently 14,800 shares of U 4¼% preferred cumulative stock on the market, which the company will reclaim at $104 a share, an outlay for U of $1,539,200.

Redemption was authorized after Aug. 30, 1963 and notice of the decision will be mailed to stockholders July 26. The move relieves the company of the burden of paying the quarterly divvy on the stock. Such a regular quarterly dividend was also declared at the meeting, the board voting payment of $1.0625 a share. It's payable Sept. 3 to holders of record Aug. 15, 1963.

In a deal completed earlier in the week, U leased its post-1948 features for tv distribution in a pact with Seven Arts International. The 215 features were purchased by 7A for $21,500,000, plus a percentage split above a certain gross. (See details in tv section).

$273,000 Budget On Reade-Sterling 'Black Like Me'

Plans have now been finalized for the filming of John Howard Griffin's book about Negro life in the South, "Black Like Me." A limited partnership, called Hilltop Productions, has been formed with producer Julius Tannenbaum, exec producer Victor Weingarten and director Carl Lerner as general partners and the Continental Distributing arm of the Walter Reade-Sterling organization in for 22% of the pic and world distribution rights.

Budgeted at $273,000, the film is due to roll Aug. 15, shooting principally in three Southern locations, New Orleans being one of them. Discussing the project last week, Weingarten was reluctant to reveal the other two sites because of the potential problems such revelation might cause the filming, due to the pic's nature.

Griffin's book dealt with his experiences while masquerading as a Negro in and around the deep south. He managed this via various skin treatments to darken his natural white pigment and then traveled around, noting his experiences as he went. In paperback form his book has sold over 400,000 copies and upwards of 15,000 in hardbound edition. So far it has not been determined by the producers who will play the writer but this decision is expected shortly, Weingarten said, noting that there has been considerable interest on the

INDIES REACT TO NEGRO NEWS

By VINCENT CANBY

U.S. indie producers and distribs, if not the majors, appear to be turning to race themes in a big way during this 1963 summer of discontent.

No less than six features, each dealing with the Negro's fight for equality, and/or the more general aspects of Negro-white relations, are in various stages of preparation. In addition, another three such pix are completed and awaiting release.

Since most—if not all—of these features were in the planning stages long before the equal rights fight reached its current peak, the producers involved cannot be accused of trying to capitalize on the daily headlines. Rather it looks like they (the producers) have been building up the courage of their convictions at approximately the same tempo as those fighting the now-hot equal rights battle.

Actually only two of the projected-or-upcoming nine features deal directly with segregation. Most of the pix touch on the subject by in direction via studies of contemporary Negro life which, so often, mean the study of the life of a second class citizen.

One of the most interesting of the projected pix is "Black Like Me," the Julius Tannenbaum-Carl Lerner film adaptation of the book by a Texas newspaperman who masqueraded as a Negro on an odyssey through the U.S. south. Producers are concluding a deal

Detail MGM Loss Data; Also Hopes For Profit Surge

Metro had a loss of $3,622,000, equal to $1.40 per share, for the 12 weeks ended June 6, compared with a profit of $755,000, or 30c per share, for the corresponding period a year previous.

Deficit for the 40 weeks ended June 6 amounted to $12,338,000, or $4.79 per share, compared with a profit of $3,308,000, or $1.30 per share, for the like period a year ago.

But all is not red ink. Robert H. O'Brien, MGM president, declared on Friday (12) that a return to profitable operations in the first quarter of the 1963-64 fiscal year is in view. "The prospects are for a substantial turnaround in the film production-distribution operation," he stated.

Third quarter dividend check in the amount of 37-1/2c per share was sent out to stockholders at the weekend.

Third quarter loss was attributed by the prez to "the low level of film rentals." He acknowledged that several key pictures did poorly and, further, pictures released in prior periods failed to live up to expectations.

Citing such product as "The V.I.P.s," "Twilight of Honor," "Wheeler Dealers," "The Prize" and "Of Human Bondage," O'Brien commented "for the fall and winter seasons we have the strongest lineup of pictures this company has had for many years." Currently, "How the West Was Won" "continues to be a big boxoffice attraction" and an item exciting to O'Brien on the 1964 production schedule is Irving Berlin's "Say It With Music."

On the television front, O'Brien reported, the company has six series now before the cameras for network presentation beginning in September, and in conjunction with ABC-TV is developing a full-hour series titled "Great Stories from the Bible." Henry Denker, latterly a stage playwright wit who wrote and produced "The Greatest Story Ever Told" on ABC radio for 10 years, will be exec producer.

Bronston's New Plant, Enlarges Old; His Productions Blueprinted Well Ahead; L.A. Films? Well, Sure, If—

Madrid, July 16.

Another major studio will break ground here soon, the property of Samuel Bronston, now a veteran of Spain-based production. Some 500 acres of California-like terrain at Las Matas outside the capital is involved in the deal. Half of this was formerly rented land used by Bronston for the Roman Forum sets in "Fall of The Roman Empire" and due to repeat in tanbark sequences for "The Circus" with John Wayne.

Additionally Bronston will continue at and expand his present Charmartin studios, where he is a tenant-turned-landlord. These facilities will be available on rental terms to other producers.

For the new Las Matas plant Bronston now envisions four large stages, with auxiliary services of makeup, wardrobe, technical. Bronston will also build a motel complex adjacent to the studio for maximum convenience of talent.

Bronston speaks, after some five major productions bearing his imprimatur, of his family of filmmaking associates. Quote, "We are not only interested in our own company—but we are pro-industry, the entire film industry. This is an international business. The world has shrunk. If General Motors or General Electric have the rights to expand all over the world why not the motion picture industry? They manufacture all over

'Paramount Weeks'

Paramount has designated July 17-30 as "Paramount Weeks" and has set a goal at having its product in every theatre in the United States during that period, relates Charles Boasberg, president of Par Film Distributing. He said 11,815 theatres already have been booked, representing 92% of the nation's drive-in and conventional houses.

Of particular delight to Boasberg, he said, is the fact that the largest share of the bookings involves features. Detroit was the first branch to achieve 100% penetration.

Residuals Balk N.Y. Comm'l Prod.; Await SAG Pact

Although the filming of features and vidfilms is perking in the New York area, things are not in as good shape for commercial lensers. Biz was off sharply in June and seems going in the same direction in July, both months which normally are brisk for the commercial filmmakers.

Vidtaping is reported rolling along strongly but, since most of the commercial work is done via film, biz has been sagging considerably. One of the reasons for this, commercial film men feel, is the impending negotiations with Screen Actors Guild over a new pact. Deadline for this is mid-November but talks will be in progress shortly. It's felt that agencies and clients are holding back on production to see what form the

Factionalism In Extras Guild Goes to Referee; Deem 89 Ballots Crucial

Hollywood, July 16.

Impartial referee Nathan Cayton opened hearings here Monday regarding the much-challenged Screen Extras Guild election held recently.. Originally, I. Robert Feinberg of N.Y. had been named referee, but he was unable to serve. Cayton, retired chief judge of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, was subsequently named by the SEG board to rule on the five challenges plus other issues in the election.

An indie slate headed by Tony Regan leads in the balloting for five out of six offices, including the presidency — currently occupied by incumbent Jeffrey Sayre, although the incumbent administration retained a majority on the governing body.

Judge Cayton will decide what to do about 89 ballots which were mislaid in the office of the certified public accountant hired to tabulate the votes. They haven't yet been tallied. Those votes were in envelopes opened while no guild observers were present — contrary to bylaws' of the guild. They could affect outcome of the election of three officers and three board members—although not of Regan's election.

Sayre-filed challenges allege the Regan faction accepted financial support from non-guild members in the election drive, which is banned by guild bylaws, and that the group's campaign handbills were misleading. Regan group challenges claim SEG's official notice of election was faulty, and that votes of the Frisco and Hawaii branch members should not be counted.

Step Up Embassy's British Dealings

Embassy Pictures is wheeling and dealing in Britain now. Having concentrated heavily in Italy and somewhat in France in recent years and with plans perking for domestic production, the company's exec v.p., Leonard Lightstone, recently returned from a European trip where he set in motion various deals, most of which center on the U.K.

Tied to the outfit's Anglo-Embassy branch, Lightstone initiated plans for the company to make a pic in England which will be wholly financed by Embassy with participation from the National Film Finance Agency, with Brit body which figures in all quota arrangements. What the property to be produced will be isn't being revealed but it will mark Embassy's first totally-financed venture either at home or abroad.

Lightstone also set in motion a deal for the distribution in England of "The Conjugal Bed" (formerly "Queen Bee") and the four pix being coproduced by Embassy prez Joseph E. Levine and Italo producer Carlo Ponti. These include the recently-completed Brigitte Bardot-Jack Palance starrer, "Ghost at Noon"; the in-production Sophia Loren-Marcello Mastroianni starrer, "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," and the Bette Davis-Horst Buchholz-Catherine Spaak starring "Empty Canvas"; as well as "Casanova," to be made following "Yesterday," with Mastroianni toplined.

While abroad, the exec also furthered deals in Germany for these pix but, as in the case of England, the final papers haven't been signed and so the parties involved aren't revealed.

Elsewhere in England, Embassy also has a deal perking with a Yank company for the production two pix on U.K. soil. Details of this arrangement are also still in the making but it all adds up to considerably stepped-up activity for the company in England, a territory previously controlled, from a Yank standpoint, primarily by Metro and Columbia. Embassy, incidentally, denies that the deal between it and a Yank company to produce in England is with Metro.

Pic Prospects Brighten at UA For Rest of '63 & Into '64: Picker

By EDDIE KALISH

After admitted "disappointment" of United Artists execs at the performance of several of the company's features released during the early part of the year, UA officers are currently crowing about the prospects for the remainder of the year and what lies ahead for 1964.

Pointing to the performance, both at home and abroad, of various pix, v.p. Eugene Picker last week expressed great expectations for the balance of 1963 and outlined plans for upcoming releases in the Gotham and other areas. He particularly cited "Irma la Douce" and "The Great Escape" as big contributors to present and future UA coffers. He also noted the current "Mouse on the Moon" and upcoming "Toys in the Attic," "Caretakers," "McLintock, "Kings of the Sun," "Tom Jones" and, of course, "Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" as potential breadwinners.

In the case of "Irma," the Billy Wilder pic has been stirring mucho action at the nation's boxoffices grossing, in fact, $279,583 in just 17 cities in the five-day period of July 3-7 and still holding up well. Daydating at the DeMille and Baronet Theatres in New York alone, the pic continued to hit a hefty $48,000 pace last week and was turning in numbers like $18,000 in Detroit, $15,000 in Philly, $11,000 in Washington, $16,000 in Boston, $26,000 in San Francisco and so on.

"Escape" is also turning a nifty trick around the nation's wickets, with figures like $21,428 in its first six days in Los Angeles, $18,367 for its first five in Washington, D. C., $15,634 for four in Toronto and others. It will open Aug. 7 in New York, Picker revealed, daydating at the DeMille and an eastside house. That will push "Irma" out of the DeMille and into a Premiere Showcase release at that time.

Other pix which have been performing for the company include "Dr. No" which came close to topping the "Birdman of Alcatraz" Premiere Showcase record in New York and which is perking around the country. Overseas it is also developing with grosses like 279,459 Taiwan dollars, a record for a UA pic in Taipei, and 26,038 rupees in Bombay, India, also a UA record. In Chicago, the pic recently tallied $285,000 in its first week and has been scoring well elsewhere.

Plans are set for upcoming releases in the Gotham area, all of which will utilize the Premiere Showcase multiple-break plan with the exception of "Escape." "Toys in the Attic" is slated to open in the New York area in July and "Caretakers," the title of which will not be changed despite possible confusion between it and the British "Caretaker" filmization of the legit play, will hit the Showcase and other national locales in August.

Stanley Kramer's "Mad World" will arrive in November, playing about ten theatres in key cities at first and spreading into around 30 more in time for Christmas biz. Running time on the film, incidentally, will be three hours, 14 minutes, Picker said.

"McLintock" will be issued in November and "Kings of the Sun" is due to arrive in December, both on Showcase in Gotham. The showcase idea will also be spread into other markets as the year progresses, it was noted. Also arriving in the fall will be Tony Richardson's "Tom Jones," which has been doing sturdy biz in its world preem engagement at the Pavilion Theatre, London, where it completed its first two weeks with a tally of 13,000 pounds last frame.

Other UA pix making the rounds currently include "Call Me Bwana" which is doing okay biz and "Buddha" which is strong in San Francisco. This all points the way to a resurgence for the company which could make up for its earlier drop in earnings and put it over the previous year's earnings as well.

Imports On Campus

Burlington, Vt., July 16.

Two Vermont colleges will present foreign motion pictures this summer at the U. of Vermont here, its fourth annual Foreign Film Festival, open to the public, will have items from France, Italy, Sweden, Germany, India and Africa. There will be a feature-length film and short subject at each showing.

A five-week series to be shown at the Campus Theatre at Middlebury College, under the Summer Language Schools, will include a Russian production, "Lady with a Dog."

Documentary On Love Goddesses

Who is responsible for the evolution of an ordinary, mortal female into the exalted position of motion picture love goddess—the producer or the public?

This is the question to be posed—and presumably answered—in the upcoming feature documentary, "The Love Goddesses," now being put together by Saul J. Turell, prez of Walter Reade-Sterling, and Graeme Ferguson, writer-director. The picture, which Turell and Ferguson fondly hope to be in the (big) boxoffice vein of the recent Italo documentaries, "Mondo Cane" and "Women of The World," is being cofinanced at $250,000 by Reade-Sterling and Paramount, with former having domestic rights and latter the world.

According to Turell, the picture will be something more than a kaleidescope of clips from pictures ranging from the era of Bara to Bardot; it will, rather, be a study of American manners and morals as reflected in those ladies (including Shirley Temple) the public chose to beatify.

Implicit in the theme of "Goddesses," as described by its coproducers, is the idea that, as much as the screen love goddesses influenced the public tastes, they were also created in forms which responded to public needs at any given moment. Thus, says Turell, the vamp, as personified by Theda Bara and Pola Negri, was a popular film figure only as long the ladies in the audience were socially "repressed." Once, however, the ladies of the 1920's began enjoying their own new freedom, the vamp was replaced by other love goddesses such as Gloria Swanson and Clara Bow.

Another point being made by Turell and Ferguson in the picture is that the Hollywood's sudden guilt complex re screen morals in Sinatra Enterprises set "For Those Who Think Young" as new tab for "A Young Man's Fancy," to roll Aug. 14 for UA release . . . Bernard Luber postponed late summer start of "The Achilles Affair" until next Spring, due to 20th-Fox preempting services of Stuart Whitman, set for lead . Annette Funicello signed seven-year nonexclusive pact with American International Pictures, first film to be "Rumble," costarring Frankie Avalon . . . John Hoyt and Chris Crosby, son of Bob, snagged roles in Metro's "Hootenanny" . . . Fernando Lamas to direct and star in "A Place Called Glory," to be produced by Film 4 of Rome starting in September.

Showmen-industrialists Harry Gould and Francis S. Levien got the N.Y. Sunday Times financial page "profile" treatment for their partnership in Universal American, a multimillion dollar holding corporation. Levien is on the board and executive committee of 20th-Fox; both he and Gould have been longtime theatrical backers; latter at one time owned the Belasco and other legit theatres.

The N.Y. Daily News' "Guest Editorial"—a standard feature when some salient quotes are entailed—on Saturday (13) read, "By U.S. movie writer Abby Mann, addressing Soviet moviemakers Thursday at the Moscow Film Festival: 'The artist, if he is to create out of his heart's blood, must be free to assail any institution, any status quo, any sacred cow, and let the chips fall as they may.'"

Jock Mahoney, current Tarzan, on a 40-city, six week tour . . . Joe Levine did a guest shot on the NBC-TV "Tonight" show, which also beamed some footage of some of his current pix, including "8½" and "Women of the World" . . . Stewart Stern, a writer for the past 15 years, signed as associate producer on Sy Bartlett's "A Taste of Glory" at Paramount. And Hal Wallis and Joe Hazen inked Janet Leigh to a five-pic pact . . . Metro in association with NBC to produce a tv series based on Ivan Tors' theatrical production of "Flipper." It's a story about a boy and a dolphin . . . Martin Ransohoff in from London.

United Artists junketing the press to Philadelphia July 25 to peek at the "Ladybug, Ladybug" shooting. It's being done by producer-director Frank Perry and his wife, Eleanor, who turned out the unusually successful "David and Lisa," . . . Metro relays it had a royal turnout for "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" at London's Coliseum. Princess Margaret was among the guests . . . Columbia's Robert Ferguson and Richard Kahn off to London talks with 1st v.p. Mike Frankovich . . . Sy Weintraub here re the release of his "Tarzan's Three Challenges." . . . Anatole de Grunwald came in from London to chat with the Metro heirarchy about "The V. I. P.s".

Bill Zimmerman, Embassy Pictures production v.p., off to Paris next Tuesday (23) to supervise the readying of the English-language version of "Threepenny Opera" (latterday version of the 18th Century "Beggars' Opera") and have a look at Pierre Dominique Gasseau's recently-filmed documentary "Only One New York." He may also get to Rome for a squint at the just-finished Brigitte Bardot-Jack Palance starrer "Ghost at Noon," shortly to be retitled "Contempt."

Nat Rudick planed to London last week and was joined there by Columbia's Bob Ferguson for huddles with Otto Preminger over ad-pub and other thoughts on "The Cardinal" which the producer-director has been editing there . . . E. Jonny Graff, once a tunesmith and now Embassy's tv v.p., penned a tune for boss Joe Levine's upcoming "Zulu" pic but, on first hearing, Levine didn't dig the sounds . . . Euro-International Films of Rome, has the Italian distribution rights to Mickey Spillane's "The Girl Hunters."

Mervyn LeRoy and Ed Muhl togethering last week re the first pic the producer-director will make for Universal under his new deal. Le Roy's indie production company officially took up residence at U on Monday (15) . . . publicity again outranks advertising, geographically at least, at Embassy Pictures as the pub boys moved back to their original quarters on exec row in the company's spread-out Gotham headquarters, while the ad boys, who had moved in on the pubs a few weeks ago, are now in offices across the hall.

Ernest Sands back at his Gotham desk after two weeks in Paris and Rome meeting with Allied Artists foreign distribs and producers, looking at overseas product—and honeymooning with his new bride . . . new "Carpetbaggers" cast members: Larry Bartin, Ruth Packard, Lynn Borden and Bill Meader . . . Miriam Nelson also signed to choreograph some Roaring 20's dances for the Paramount-Embassy pic which, incidentally, had a sequence filmed last week by Norddeutscher Rundfunk, W. German tv company, for a program on Hollywood production.

Vittorio De Sica started filming last week of the Carlo Ponti-Joseph E. Levine coproduction starring Sophia Loren and Marcello Mastroianni, "Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow," to be lensed in Milan, Naples and Rome . . . Ponti & Levine's "Empty Canvas," starring Bette Davis, Horst Buchholz and Catherine Spaak, also started last week under the direction of Damiano Damiani in Rome.

Anthony Perkins awarded France's "Victoires du Cinema" kudo as "Best Foreign Actor" for his performance in Anatole Litvak's "Five Miles to Midnight" . . . into Allied Artists' "Soldier In The Rain" are Rockne Tarkington (replacing Greg Morris who had a conflicting tv commitment), Sam Flint and Adam West . . . Vincent Price in his 66th pic with UA's "Twice Told Tales" which will be released in September . . . Tony Young into Universal's "The Gun Hand" . . . "Divorce—Italian Style" racked up a big $115,514 in its first two weeks in a seven-theatre Long Island break.

Joe Levine and Embassy ad-pub v.p. Bob Weston in Chicago setting promotional groundwork for "8-1/2" and "Women of the World," with Levine chatting with radio-tv-press reps. "Women" opens there next Wednesday (24) at the Michael Todd Theatre and "8-1/2" has its local preem July 26 at the Carnegie . . . UA's Sinatra Enterprises release "For Those Who Think Young" will have a promotional tiein with Pepsi Cola whose ad slogan also just happens to be "for those who think young" . . . "Reflections of New York," a short film produced and edited by Fima Noveck, selected as an official U.S. entry in the feature experimental shorts section of the Venice Film Fest.

Allied Artists has world distribution rights, except in the Philippines, to the Van Heflin-Rita Morena-James MacArthur starrer produced by Joe Steinberg "Cry of Battle," which was filmed in the Philippines under the handle "To Be a Man," directed by Irving Lerner from Bernard Gordon's screenplay adaptation of Benjamin Appel's book . . . "Women of the World" getting lotsa promotional tie-ins, including a disk deal with Gotham retailer Sam Goody, a promotion with Sterns

Russians 'Wildly' Buy Up Tickets For Fest Films

Moscow, July 16.

Moscow Film Festival's claim that it is a "public affair" is borne out by the fact that all seats for all showings in the 3,000-seat Russia and 6,000-seat Palace of Congresses were sold long before the festival opened. (About 600 seats in the first balcony are set aside for press, guests and delegates—the remainder are for the public). The tickets sold at about $1.25. The average admission price for the Russians is around 60c.

That the people of the city are film mad there is no doubt. They crowd around the hotel to catch a glimpse of the vistors, around the Palace and at the entrance to the Kremlin. They read the posters and line-up and almost fight to buy copies of the colorful magazine printed daily about the festival called "Sputnik." The festival is reported on radio and television, visitors are photographed in different sections of the city (but the photographers are never a nuisance) and everyone is asked for his autograph. It's just like old times.

There is no popcorn, but masses of chocolate, candies, fancy cakes of all kinds, lemonade and black coffee, sandwiches and cavier. All served from movable stands or from long tables in the reception hall on the roof. To get so large a number of people back to their seats during intermission the bell rings 15 minutes before the film begins.

E. L. Douglyn Exits Metro For Embassy Sales Post

Erving L. Douglyn has been named western sales rep of Embassy Pictures. The appointment continues the distrib's domestic expansion program, which is aimed at increasing the field sales force with the addition of branches and personnel.

Douglyn, who ankled Metro where he had been Seattle branch manager since 1950 to take the post, will headquarter in Los Angeles, reporting directly to Julius Needleman, western district manager. He'll cover the Los Angeles, Denver and Salt Lake City areas for Embassy.

Abby Mann: 'They Loved My Candor At Moscow Fest'

Oscar-wining screen writer Abby Mann reports himself "very encouraged" by the enthusiastic reaction to his comparatively hard-hitting remarks in Moscow last week re the artist's responsibility to criticize society. Back in New York Monday (15) after attending the opening half of the Moscow film fest, Mann said he had gotten the impression that Russian filmmakers "are determined to hang onto their bit of artistic freedom—and will fight for it," despite governmental pressures.

At an East-West symposium of filmmakers in Moscow last Thursday (11), Mann said that he was afraid that "we have, both in East and West, followed the dictates of our countries, its sentiments and cliches, rather than to point out a new way, or to cry out in anger and passion when the moment dictated . . . An artist, if he is to create out of his life's blood, must be free to assail any institution, any status quo, any sacred cow, and let the chips fall as they may."

In addition, Mann asked the Soviets to make more films "which speak of the world's heritage, rather than of your heritage. More films in the manner of 'Ballad of A Soldier,' 'Nine Days of The Year' and 'Lady With A Dog.'

"Some of us will resolve to give you less films like 'Manchurain Candidate' and 'One, Two, Three,' and try to give you more films in the manner of 'All Quiet On The Western Front,' 'Grapes of Wrath' and 'The Oxbow Incident.'"

In New York Mann reported that his remarks were greeted without emotion by symposium chairman Sergi Gerasinov, a film director and strong supporter of the official Soviet line, but the audience burst in applause for the first time during the meeting.

Asked about his citing of "One,"

Much Showmanship Zing at Moscow Picture Palace But Fest Showings Like Tuning In a Russian Babel

By GERALD PRATLEY

Moscow, July 16.

The modern splendor and beauty of the new magnifcant Palace of Congresses, where all the "competition" films are shown, may be unique in the history of show business. Those who visualize such a structure in New York estimate that it would cost between $10-$15,000,000. But with their Palace the Russians have brought drama and excitement back to film presentation.

Every performance begins with the bell-like call signal of Radio Moscow, the opening notes of "Wide Is My Country." A slim and good-looking young lady dressed in an enticing black dress walks across the great red-carpeted stage and speaks into a slender microphone. There is never any trouble with it, and immediately her soft voice is carried to every part of the auditorium.

She addresses us as "dear friends" and "ladies and gentlemen" and wishes to announce that tonight the film festival will continue with, say, "The Great Escape" and she takes pleasure in presenting the American delegation. The delegation walks on to the applause of the audience, she introduces each member, a short speech follows from the leader, she wishes them success with the cinema art, and they walk up a stairway along the side of the theatre to a special box, illuminated by a spotlight from the opposite side of the auditorium. This little ceremony is carried by closed-circuit television into the many tall and spacious marble lobbies for anyone still outside.

Good Showmanship

While the delegation is wending its way to the box, two curtains have silently lifted and the lights begin to dim, extremely slowly, with the spotlights in the front section of the illuminated ceiling changing into an attractive pattern of oblong frames before blacking out entirely. Just as they fade into darkness the black velvet curtains covering the screen begin to open from the middle to reveal the white expanse behind. By now the lights are out and the special trailer introducing the "Third International Film Festival in Moscow comes on in a burst of movement, color and music.

The timing is perfect, the effect thrilling; it is showmanship to the highest degree of good taste. As one man was heard to remark, "How can we ever go back to ordinary theatres again after this." (Following the showing of the film, the special box is again illuminated and the delegation stands for the audience.

As the Russians (unlike other countries) do not insist on the entries being subtitled, the Tower of Babel now begins. First comes the original sound and dialogue, then the voice of the Russian interpretor (female) over the public address system, and then in the earphones, comes the translator (male) in English—or whatever language is native to the listener.

Its' all rather disconcerting at first, but oddly enough the voices sort themselves out and one's ears get attuned to the necessary commentary. During dull moments it's interesting to see how far behind the Russian translator the English translator gets, and for how long they keep together. If he gets behind too often or for too long it's sometimes difficult to know which dialogue to attribute to which character; the translator himself does not change voices!

Easier Policy Fosters Better Spanish Features

Madrid, July 16.

Change in government film policy initiated last year with the appointment of Minister of Information Fraga Iribarne and his Director General for Cinema, Garcia Escudero, appears to be successfully achieving a major policy aim in restoring Spanish film prestige at international festivals.

Although it won no awards at Cannes, "El buen Amor" was applauded by festgoers and survived a final jury countdown. At San Sebastian, "Rosa al Amarillo" ("From Pink to Yellow") took the second place Silver Seashell as well as the best Spanish-language film prize and vied for interest with the best entries shown. Both pix were first assigned for two among a promising block of new generation film directors.

Reports from Berlin indicate that "The Innocents," by Juan Antonio Bardem, was well received among the contenders for the Golden Bear.

Optimism, however, is reaching its peak as Spain prepares its slate for the Venice Film Fest. Bardem is prepared to submit the Colette Marchand-starrer, "Nothing Ever

Rambling Around Red Square

Moscow, July 16.

Russian filmmakers talking to Stanley Kramer are upset because his new film, "Mad Mad World" is a comedy. They consider him to be abandoning social realism. Kramer replied that it was part of an artist's freedom in Hollywood to experiment and that many serious points could be made under the guise of humor . . . Cynthia and Richard Grenier here from Paris doing a photo story for Playboy on beautiful girls behind the Iron Curtain. There is no lack of them in Moscow; slim, pretty young things, many of them interpreters, nicely if not expensively or stylishly dressed, and denying the old image of the plump tractor girls . . . James Clavell and wife (he wrote the screenplay for "The Great Escape") joined the American delegation, also Tom Brandon from New York . . . Alexander MacKendrick, director of UK entry, "Sammy Going South," arrived from London and renewed old friendship with Tony Curtis whom he directed in "Sweet Smell of Success". . . Also in from London: John Stapleton of the BEPA, Theo Richmond, Jack Worrow and Michael Bromhead of British Lion, whose "Heavens Above" is being shown out of competition together with Rank's "This Sporting Life". . . Also from London, John Gillett of the BFI and Nina Hibbin, film critic for The Daily Worker, the only English-language daily on sale here together with New York's edition.

At the opening of Festival, after being greeted by Russian officials and given flowers the following members of the delegation went on stage: Stanley Kramer, Susan Strasberg, Danny Kaye, Harold Mirisch, Tony Curtis and George Stevens Jr. who introduced them. All were warmly received, particularly Kramer whose films are the kind the Russians believe in . . . Danny Kaye came forward and lightened the the moment with some brief noises in his amusing mock Russian. He then waved the interpretor to the microphone as much to say "now translate that." He jokingly complained that he had only been given one bouquet of flowers whereas at the children's pioneer camps he had been showered with them! "I like films" he said, "but I want to go back with a memory of people in the audience." He then started to sing a Russian children's song and motioning to the audience to join him, he soon had the entire house singing and clapping in unison with him.

Americans retired in triumph, the lights dimmed and the great curtains moved back slowly as the well-known opening to "West Side Story" came on the huge screen. At once the music cast its spell and when the remarkable shots of New York from the air appeared, the audience gasped and clapped again.

Re-Status Dick Kahn

Richard Kahn has been named national coordinator of ad-pub and exploitation at Columbia. Veepee Robert S. Ferguson emphasized that the appointment is in keeping with the Col policy of promotion from within the ranks.

Kahn has been ad-pub head of "Lawrence of Arabia" (Sam Spiegel-David Lean-Col) since February and for five years prior to this was Col's exploitation manager.

Talent Feels Producers Anti-Negro, But Latter Put Blame On Bankers

Hollywood, July 16.

Suggesting a boycott by stars of production companies which "maintain policies of discrimination," Marlon Brando Friday night (12) led a high-powered contingent of industry reps in adopting what is perhaps the most strongly worded anti-discrimination pledge ever to come out of Hollywood. Occasion was meeting of the American Civil Liberties Union Art Division at the BevHilton.

Brando was flanked on the dais by Writers Guild of America West prexy Nate Monaster; director-writer-producer Philip Dunne; attorney and ACLU rep George Slaff; actor James Whitmore; Congress of Racial Equality's Mildred Walters and Nat. Assn. For the Advancement of Colored People's Tom Neusom.

Among reasons forwarded for sketchy use of the Negro thesp, according to actor, are: that people aren't ready for it; that they use the tired alibi, 'we have a moral responsibility to the bankers'; that they also argue with no proof that up to 40% of the market might be lost if more Negro actors are used.

Those who voice such objections, said Brando, are not "necessarily bad men but are ignorant, absolutely ignorant." Some of them "will have to be forced, some demonstrated against" to make them see the light, he contended.

He cited a studio head's avowed policy of blocking any implication of miscegenation in one of his films as prime example of faulty thinking which exists in certain industry quarters. Actors added that 'Sayanora" a film in which he starred, has been his greatest b.o. success, its theme of inter-racial marriage having had no ill effects on the Dixie market, though many had contended that it would.

Brando declared that studio heads could go a long way towards ending discrimination within the industry. He averred that even though they no longer have "artistic autonomy" they can still "refuse to make contracts with independent producers who discriminate."

Actors can also be instrumental in combating discrimination, Brando declared. "We can refuse to work in a picture if the Negro is not represented in it." Actors have sold soup, war bonds, silk stockings, cigars and automobiles, they've sold everything. They should also be able to sell civil rights."

Brando continued, "Actors should stand together and pledge not to support production companies which uphold principles of segregation. There is a lot of muscle represented by stars, if only because of the money involved, and if every star gets together and says 'that's it' that could be the end of the discrimination in our industry."

Next to address the throng of some 300 people was Nate Monaster who noted that the industry was not confronted with "conventional bigotry"; that Hollywood was not some "tree lined southern town" and though bigotry here might not be as vicious, it was "equally heart-breaking to the victims."

During discussion, Charlton Heston was first to be recognized. He contended that SAG's record in area "can be favorably compared to any in the industry" and that it should be used as an example to lead the rest of the industry. He opined that the "bugaboo" about the loss of market is "greatly overemphasized" and that the "dangers of action" was "tremendously exaggerated." Referring to a suggestion that Holywood craft guilds and unions had discriminated against Negroes, Heston stated that "many crafts are closed to anyone—not only Negroes."

Writer Jack Scheuer contended that best way to get action would be to "point out to the stupid: Look you can make money with this. Show them that we need the Negro to make better pictures. We need their strength and creativity."

"The great weight of the problem is on the writer," declared Bill Dana. He noted that in the first 14 scripts of his new TV show which has a hotel backdrop there have been no Negroes depicted because "we didn't want to show them in menial capacities. But had we shown a little ingenuity we could have had a baseball team, or a visiting dignitary could have been worked in." To create more roles for the Negro "the writer could spend 20 minutes more on his script" (Nate Monaster winced perceptibly at this cavalier reference to the creative process.)

Tony Franciosa cited a film of his in which there were no Negroes scheduled to be used in classroom scenes and other similar sequences, but after pressure from some of the cast, Negro thesps were cast.

It's the Producer

Someone suggested that casting directors should be spotlighted in campaign to which producer Sy Bartlett retorted "I have never had a casting director tell me I can't use Negroes, nor have I ever had opposition from studio heads." The implication being that it is the producer who has the real say-so in employment of Negro thesps.

Stewart Stern entered suggestion for creation of an "interguild committee on integration."

Toni Kimmel, an agent with the William Schuller office, reported that she had been trying for five years to get a talented Negro composer "to be allowed the opportunity of composing a film or tv score" and that even though she's gone "to the biggest people in the industry for help" she has failed.

This drew expression of concern from Bennie Green, Negro musician who is on Composers and Lyricists Guild board of directors. He said he had never heard of discrimination in field and would like to hear more about Miss Kimmel's experiences.

Then Albert Saparoff, a musician, commented that it was true that there was no discrimination within the union, noting however, that "the union doesn't do the hiring."

Col Pics Ups Youths; Marv Miller, Otis Greene, Rosenberg to New Jobs

Hollywood, July 16.

Columbia Pictures has initiated a program designed to give new and further opportunities to younger industry members, Col yesterday disclosing as its kickoff of this program, that it has upped a trio of young men all in their 20s or 30s.

Marvin Miller, who has been assistant location manager at Col for the past three years, has been moved up to become assistant to producer-director David Swift, his first assignment with Swift being on latter's film, "Good Neighbor Sam," which rolls in September. Miller was a United Airlines supervisor before joining Col, has also been a stage and film actor.

Otis Greene, who worked in a production capacity during the lensing of the studio's "Under the Yum Yum Tree," a Brisson-Swift film, has been named to a permanent position in Col's production department, headed by studio production manager Ben Hersh. Greene, who will function in all phases of the department, recently completed academic requirements for a Masters Degree in motion picture production at UCLA. He formerly was an actor on stage, in pix and tv.

Third employe to be upped is Rick Rosenberg, who moves from the mailroom to become producer Jerry Bresler's assistant. Rosenberg, a grad of L.A. City College, has co-produced and co-authored the featurette, "One Penny." He was former assistant manager of the Fine Arts theatre in BevHills. He will aid Bresler on latter's next Col release, "Major Dundee," as well as work with the exec on all phases of the indie producer's operation.

Jerry Lewis Whirlwinding

Jerry Lewis winds up his national (back-breaking) tour this week in N.Y., making the 24th city he'll have covered with personals ballying "Nutty Professor." He had to take an emergency "rest" during the tour.

He's skedded to make a stage appearance with a musical group in 25 theatres today (Wed.) through Saturday.

Run With the Devil
(VIA MARGUTTA)

"Run with the Devil," which opened Monday (15) at the Fifth Avenue Cinerama, was reviewed in VARIETY in the Nov. 8, 1960, issue under the Italian title of "Via Margutta." From Rome, Hawk summarized his general idea of the pic by saying that this "fragmentary expose of artists life and troubles along Rome's Via Margutta, local painters' row, often hits the mark but just as often misses its target . . . must rely on a strong, adroit sell . . . for full effect."

Reviewer said that the screenplay denotes the presence of too many different contributors, and generally tries to ring in too many elements and problems. As a result, there is superficial character development, not aided by strangely, uninvolved direction by Mario Camerini. He claimed "a good re-editing job would help . . . acting is better than the material with Alex Nicol walking off with most honors."

34th Street East Opens; Reade Org HQ Moves There

Manhattan's newest art house, Walter Reade-Sterling's 410-seat 34th Street East, opend its doors for the first time last night (Tues.) for the American preem of the British import, "This Sporting Life," a R-S release.

The poshly appointed house, designed by architect John J. MacNamara, occupies the first floor of the new Reade-Sterling Building which, before its remodeling, was a power substation. It's expected that all office of the Reade-Sterling combine, now spread around Manhattan in various locations, will be consolidated in three floors of offices over the theatre by the end of next month.

Cost of acquiring the property and remodeling the building is estimated as being in excess of $1,000,000.

Elmsford Ozoner Files Antitruster

Treble damage action seeking a total of $1,440,000 for alleged violation of antitrust laws was filed last week in New York Federal Court by the Star Drive-In Theatre Corp., which runs the Elmsford Drive-In, Elmsford, N.Y. Defendants named are Paramount, Metro, Loew's Theatres, Warner Bros., Universal, Columbia, RKO Theatres and Suburban Theatre Corp.

Complaint, filed by Harry M. Pimstein, charges that the defendant distribs discriminated against the plaintiff by favoring defendants exhibs in runs, clearances and "splitting" of product. The complaint alleges the distribs refused to offer their product to Star except under a system of clearances and runs requiring plaintiff to conform to the system. It is also alleged that defendant exhibs were granted favorable film rentals, extended runs and other allowances, thereby discriminating against plaintiff's theatre.

In addition to damages, Star is seeking an injunction halting the distribs involved from granting "unreasonable" agreements and otherwise allegedly conspiring in restraint of trade with respect to the licensing of their product.

H. G. Minsky Now Veep

Howard G. Minsky, who joined Cinerama a few weeks ago, has been named a v.p. of the company.

He had been president of Paramount's International Telemeter subsidiary and previous to this held posts with Warners, 20th-Fox and Skouras Theatres.

Producers Jim Nicholson and Lou Rusoff may have put together the perfect summer attraction for the teenage set in "Beach Party." It's a bouncy bit of lightweight fluff, attractively cast (Annette Funicello, Frankie Avalon, et. al.), beautifully set (Malibu Beach), and scored throughout (by Lex Baxter) with a big twist beat. While many adults might find it a frightening manifestation of the culture of our age, "Beach Party" has the kind of direct, simple-minded cheeriness which should prove well nigh irresistible to those teenagers who have no desire to escape the emptiness of their lives. Thus it should swing at the boxoffice.

The comparatively "elderly" Robert Cummings toplines the cast (with Dorothy Malone) and provides the picture with what real comic substance it has. Plot of Rusoff's screenplay is pegged on a study of teenage sex habits undertaken by anthropologist Cummings on the beach at Malibu. As the square professor, Cummings shows himself to be an able farceur and notably at ease in surroundings which might embarass a less professional star. Miss Malone, still lovely, is along just for the ride in a small role as the prof's long-suffering secretary. It's a waste of her talent.

Focus of the picture is on the kids throughout. What plot complications there are centre around the romantic problems of a group of young surfers, principally Avalon and Miss Funicello, each of whom undertakes a campaign to make the other jealous—he with buxom Eva Six, she with the etudite professor. Story is padded out with some lovely surf-riding sequences and a whole string of Les Baxter songs, sung variously by Avalon, Miss Funicello and the combo of Dick Dale and the Del-Tones.

Principal supporting work is handled by Harvey Lembeck, who is responsible for a grin or two as the nitwit head of a motorcycle gang (a la "The Wild Ones"); Jody McCrea, as a not-too-bright surfer, and Morey Amsterdam, the proprietor of a sort of pseudo-beatnik Sugar Bowl, frequented by the kids.

William Asher has carefully directed the picture with an eye on his potential market. It moves quickly and easily and has been dressed with handsome production values, including spankingly clean and crisp (Pathe color and Panavision) camera work by Kay Norton. Anby.

Danny Kaye: As The Russians See Him

(The following story came from the Soviet Union's Embassy in Washington. It reflects the way in which Kaye, one of the delegation of American talent attending this year's Moscow Film Festival, handled himself in the USSR capital.—Ed.).

Danny Kaye, the famous American film actor and director of child films, told a Novosti Press Agency correspondent in Moscow on July 5 that he was very glad to have the opportunity of seeing a children's clinic and a Pioneers' camp.

Speaking of the Pioneers' camp in Podolsk, situation about 40 km. from Moscow, Kaye said that he thought the camp was wonderful. "In spite of the rainy and cold weather—it was only 14 degrees above C.," he stated, "I saw sunshine in the children's faces."

"I do not speak Russian. However, in five minutes I had established contact with 600 boys and girls surrounding me. They had fun and laughed as they listened to me, and then we all danced and sang a fine Soviet song, which I was taught right there and then by the children. "May there always be sunshine, may there always be heaven, may there always be mother . . ."

Kaye arrived in the Soviet Union on June 29. He wants to attend the opening of the Third International Film Festival in Moscow and hopes to see several films during his stay in the Soviet capital.

His film "Knock on Wood" will be shown in Moscow, outside of the festival contest.

"The main purpose of my visit to Moscow," Kaye emphasized, "is not to participate in the International Film Festival, but to get acquainted with at least some children's establishments. For several years I have been working in the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), shooting in different countries documentary films about children. I consider that the activities of this fund are very useful and important for people in all countries.

"In these few days," he continued, "I visited Mosfilm, one of the largest Soviet film studios and had a talk with its director Vladimir Surin, whom I met earlier in the United States.

"While in Moscow I saw 'The Fate of a Man' a very impressive film about the heroism of the Russian people. I enjoyed very much Sergei Bondarchuk in the role of a soldier. No doubt he is a very talented actor and director. I did not understand the language, but this was not important. When one actor watches the performance of another actor, there is no language barrier—mutual understanding is quickly established between the actors.

"Sergei Bondarchuk is now producing the film 'War and Peace' based on Leo Tolstoi's novel. I would like to wish him success in this great undertaking.

"At the Bolshoi Theater," Kaye went on, "I heard the opera 'Troubadour,' performed by the actors from Novosibirsk, one of the largest cities of West Siberia. This was a fabulous production. The decor and the voices of the singers were very good.

"I would like very much to go to the Ukraine and especially of Dniepropetrovsk, the native town to my parents," said Mr. Kaye in conclusion. "But, unfortunately, I have to leave the USSR on July 10, for there is urgent work on a TV show waiting for me in Hollywood."

Kaye's parents lived in the Ukraine before the First World War. In 1911 they emigrated to the United States where a son was born in them. The son became a famous comedian.

FILM 'ADDING MACHINE'

Syd Chaplin, Shelley Winters and Maureen Stapleton Set

Shelley Winters has been added to the cast of the indie film version of Elmer Rice's "The Adding Machine" play of 1922 now being prepped by Jerome L. Epstein and Joel Glickman. She'll costar with Sydney Chaplin and Maureen Stapleton.

Pic, which is to be directed by Epstein and produced by Glickman, is due to be shot on a six-week sked in a Manhattan studio starting in September. It's being privately financed on a $250,000 budget sans distrib.

David Niven, a Succinct Actor

Montreal, July 16.

Actor David Niven breezed in and out of town Wednesday night (10). Interviewed at Montreal International Airport, after arriving from L.A. en route to London, he commented:

(1) On Marlon Brando with whom he has just finished a comedy film, "King of the Mountain:

"He's an amazing even-tempered fellow, a hard worker, and we had the time of our lives making this film. It's a comedy, Brando's first, and he's funny."

(2) On his part in legit (he appeared in stage plays twice in 30 years): "Never again. The only appealing thing about live theatre is opening night because then some disaster might strike and you can have a laugh about it later—much later."

(3) On critics: "The first press notice I ever got was for a part in a film still hangs in my bathroom. The year was 1935, the film 'Splendor,' and the critic, from the Detroit Free Press wrote: 'The only thing that can be said about this new find is he's tall, dark, and not the slightest bit handsome.'"

(4) On opinionating by actors, said Niven, after being asked about the integration strife: It reminds him that many of his colleagues do too much pontificating on subjects they know little about. "All I can add," he said, "is I'm glad I don't have to solve it."

Kalmus, Dead at 81, Founder of And 48 Years With, Technicolor Corp.

Hollywood, July 16.

Herbert T. Kalmus, 81, color pioneer whose name was more closely identified with development of color photography than any other, died of a heart attack at his Bel Air home in Los Angeles July 11. He founded Technicolor Corp. in 1912 and was its prexy until he retired Jan. 1, 1960.

Born in Chelsea, Mass., Nov. 9, 1881, Kalmus, who developed a commercially practical system of color photography which made him the acknowledged leader in the field, was by trade a chemical engineer. A graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology ('04), he developed an early interest in color and all its forms after considerable experience in allied technical fields.

When he set up Technicolor in 1912, he experimented with the process, then a two-strip system, before incorporating the company officially in 1915. His first laboratory was a railroad car, which he took to Florida for better experimentation under the semi-tropical sun. He had perfected only one camera, and this was regarded so precious that it occupied a lower berth in the car while the cameraman slept in the upper.

The first complete reel using the Technicolor process, which in later years became a three-strip proceess, was "The Gulf Between," made in 1917. Kalmus developed his process to the point that to think of a color picture meant "Technicolor," and he had a definite corner on the market. Either a studio used Technicolor or remained in black-and-white.

In the early years of color many films used only certain sequences in tints, and one sequence in the original "Ben-Hur" in 1923 gave Technicolor considerable impetus and prestige. Two years later Lon Chaney created a stir as Mask of the Red Death in "Phantom of the Opera." Tech scored its first major triumph when Douglas Fairbanks used process for his "Black Pirate" as a 100% color film. Kalmus was his own best salesman for his process, and he contribtued to the majority of top technical journals of the day explaining the system and its advantages.

Kalmus' first lab was in Boston where he formed Technicolor, and until as late as 1931 Hollywood producers sent all their color negative there for processing, which required at least a week before it could be returned. In 1931, he built Technicolor's first plant on Seward St., in Hollywood, moving in 1936 to its present site on Romaine.

Most of the big money-makers of the past were filmed in Technicolor, including such films as "Gone With the Wind," "The 10 Commandments," 'Duel in Sun." Walt Disney converted entirely to color, and Technicolor, in 1934, which gave process a decided boost, and in 1935 Kalmus introduced his new Technicolor process in Jock Whitney's production of "Becky Sharp," which many said was too bright but all agreed was the finest color yet seen.

As head of Technicolor, Kalmus directed its operations to become the leading color company for many years. In addition to company's headquarters plant in Hollywood, he established a London lab, used by majority of European producers for their color work, and also an Italian subsidiary. When the fortunes of Technicolor began to wane somewhat with the advent of other color processes, he turned firm's attention to personal service for the individual amateur photographer.

During his 48 years with Technicolor, Kalmus, who developed a commercially practical system of color photography which made him the leader in the field, received innumerable awards and honors. Among these were the Progress Medal for outstanding contributions to motion picture technology and Honorary Life Membership in the Society of Motion Picture & Television Engineers for "unique and pioneering contributions to the motion picture industry over many years." He also received the Samuel L. Warner Award for meritorial achievement in motion picture engineering.

The U.S. Government also presented him with an award from its Office of Scientific Research and Development, "in appreciation of effective service." In addition to his many awards he was a member of many distinguished scientific organizations, including being a director of Stanford Research Institute.

Prior to setting up Technicolor in 1912, and after graduating from M.I.T., Kalmus attended Zurich U in Switzerland, was research associate at M.I.T., 1908-10; held post of professor of physics at Queen's U. Kingston, Ontario, where he later was professor of electro-chemistry and metallurgy, and was director of research for Canadian government's electro-chemical lab.

Natalie M. Kaumus, the pix pioneer's first wife, was color director of Technicolor Corp. for many years and—starting in 1934—got prominent screen credit on all features processed by Technicolor.

Surviving are Kalmus' widow, Eleanor, and two daughters by a previous marriage, Mrs. Terry Mullin and Mrs. Walter Ned Pollock.

MacLaine Will Do One For Wallis-Hazen Subject To Her Approval of Script

Hollywood, July 16.

Out of court agreement ended yesterday (Mon.) the contract wrangle between Shirley MacLaine and production team of Hal Wallis and oJseph H. Hazen. Actress had filed suit in December asking declaratory relief on her 1954 contract she claimed that pact was in violation of California labor statute under which no employment contract can be extended beyond seven years.

Speaking for himself and Wallis, Hazen stated all prior contracts existing between actress and themselves were declared void. It was further agreed, that Miss MacLaine will do one Hazen-Wallis film for which she will have "unqualified script approval."

Actress's original pact with Wallis-Hazen called for $6,000 per film first year, hiking to $20,000 per pic fifth year, with two pix a year required under terms stipulated.

Beef grew out of contrasting interpretations of various amendments to pact and resulted in actress pulling out of Wallis' "First Wife," which was recently lensed as "wives and lovers."

It's Voila Pour 'The Birds'

Universal reports "The Birds" flying high overseas. In the Alfred Hitchcock production's first four openings, two in the far east and two in Latin America, pic is topping the tallies registered by any previous U release including "Spartacus."

In Tokyo at the Picadilly Theatre, "Birds" set a new opening day record for Universal in Japan, grossing upwards of 2,000,000 yen. First week's take at the Universal Theatre in the Philippines was also strong, hitting near the record gross hit there with "Spartacus." In Caracas, the pic topped "Spartacus' 'results in its first weekend as well as those registered in the city by prior U releases. In Panama, at the Bella Vista, the pic also started strongly, even with a tropical storm blowing through the area.

More far eastern and Latin American openings for "Birds" are slated during the next few months, with openings in Europe set for the fall. In the U.S. the Hitchcock pic hasn't performed up to the expectations of U execs but looks to come in strongly abroad.

John F. Murphy Decamps Loew's; Bern Myerson In

John F. Murphy will exit as exec v.p. of Loew's at the end of August. He'll stay as a member of the board but will give up daily operations after a 40-year association with the theatre circuit.

Moving in as exec v.p. is Bernard Myerson, longtime member of the Fabian Theatres organization. Myerson started with Fabian 25 years ago as an office boy and in later years became prominent in exhibition as film buyer and booker.

Myerson's appointment was announced by Arthur M. Tolchin, assistant to the president.

Par Will Pay Divvy

Paramount, in the red last year and not so hot the first six months of this year, but with improvement anticipated, will continue its 50c quarterly dividend rate on the common stock.

Have no fears about a cut, said president Barney Balaban, in effect, to a VARIETY interviewer.

Third Quarter for Par Looks Strong Thanks to Live Current Features

Barney Balaban states he has no new philosophy about picture production—"it's a matter of simply playing your hunches." This translates to application of showmanship savvy "and the big thing is to avoid the mistakes of the past—our mistakes and the mistakes of others."

The Paramount president, interviewed in New York Friday (12), added he had no access to figures pertaining to other companies' productions, but indicated that casting and the production values give him a pretty good idea of expenditure while the boxoffice results are readily apparent.

Par's top man for the past 25 years, who looks in fine shape, is jubilant about matters at Par at the moment. The second quarter (April through June) was fiscally sluggish, he related, but the third quarter will be "strong." This upbeat comes via a flock of new pictures, including "Come Blow Your Horn," "Donovan's Reef," "Hud," "Nutty Professor" and "Duel of the Titans."

Importantly, the studio is cutting costs 20% under last year for comparable pictures by way of more efficient operation, lowered overhead, etc. Still under study is participation with one or more other lots in a production merger operation, such as projected by Columbia, Metro and 20th-Fox.

Par, said Balaban, is continuing high on the prospects for its International Telemeter pay-television system. One of the two major problems has been largely removed, this being a Little Rock court decision which paved the way for deals under which telephone company facilities may be used. Second major item is programming and this is to be coped with as Telemeter establishes its outlets.

Also no decision yet anent licensing of the production library to television. Company has been approached by numerous parties but hasn't come upon a satisfactory arrangement. Rumor, in circulation for some time, that James Aubrey would switch from the CBS presidency to Par was spiked by Balaban. He said he's "only met the man once" and there were no talks about any kind of association.

ALLIED'S FILIPINO PIC

Acquires World Rights On 'Cry of Battle'

Hollywood, July 16.

"Cry of Battle," which Joe Steinberg filmed in the Philippines in Spring of 1962 under title of "To Be a Man," has been acquired for worldwide distribution by Allied Artists. Philippine rights are excluded.

Pic, directed by Irving Lerner, stars Van Heflin, Rita Moreno and James McArthur.

Loud & Clear On Product From Col

Rube Jackter, Columbia v.p.-general sales manager, has called a three-day meeting of homeoffice and field force sales execs beginning July 24 at Manhattan's Savoy Hilton Hotel.

On the agenda are policy discussions concerning the next six months' product which Jackter terms "the most impressive and important lineup of films of any similar period in the history of the company."

This, of course, is one man's enthusiasm, but there is some obvious promise in such properties as Otto Preminger's "The Cardinal," Carl Foreman's "The Victors," Fred Zinnemann's "Behold a Pale Horse" and Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove Or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb."

DID THE FRENCH PUT CASH UP IN ADVANCE?

Paris, July 16.

Twentieth-Fox's "Cleopatra" preems here Oct. 25 at three theatres—the Rex, Normandie and Rotonde. Nothing said here if guarantees had been paid in advance cash. But engagements "involve unprecedented financial arrangements."

Deals were negotiated by David Raphel, 20th's continental division manager, and Jean Hellman, owner of the Rex and Rotonde, and Marcel Richard, operator of the Normandie.

"Cleo" has its European preem in London July 31.

New Englanders Conclave At Groton, Conn. Sept. 9-11 With Nicholson Spieling

Boston, July 16.

For the first time a motion picture producer will be one of the key speakers at a theatre owners convention here. James H. Nicholson, prexy American International Pictures, will deliver a major address at the combined regional convention of Theatre Owners of New England Inc., and Theatre Owners of Connecticut.

The convention, comprising theatre owners from the six New England states, wil be held at Griswold Hotel and Country Club, Groton, Conn., for three days, Sept. 9-11, Carl Goldman, executive secretary TONE, announced here today, Tuesday (16).

"New Concepts of our Business" will be the theme of the convention. Motion picture producer Nicholson was chosen to deliver a key address because of his pioneering efforts on behalf of exhibitors in producing films to help keep the theatres supplied with ample product, the committee in charge said.

Julian Rifkin, prexy TONE, Boston, head of Rifkin Drivein Theatres; and George H. Wilkinson, Jr., prexy of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, MPTOC, are cochairmen for the event with Goldman and Herman M. Levy, coordinators.

George Roberts, Boston Film Row's own Toastmaster-General, will take over at the president's banquet at the convention. Top TOA national figures will join the New England group for discussions of industry problems. An all-day golf tournament has been set up, and the largest attendance of exhibitors, distributors and film people in the history of the New England group is expected because of the combo convention, which is also expected to draw heavily from New York.

Previously the conventions have been held in Massachusetts on Cape Cod.

National Boxoffice Survey

Biz Stout Post-Holiday; 'Cleo' Again No. 1, 'Horn' 2d, 'Irma' 3d, 'West' 4th, Birdie' 5th

This is a post-holiday session but firstrun biz is holding up solidly in current week despite a surplus of holdovers and longruns. Return of unusually hot weather was a downbeat factor though some key cities covered by VARIETY were helped by a rainy weekend.

"Cleopatra" (20th) (4th wk) again is first, same as it's been for last three weeks. In second spot is "Come Blow Your Horn" (Par) (6th wk), the first time this comedy has been this high. It was third a week ago. "Irma La Douce" (UA) (6th wk) is pushing up to third position from fourth of last week.

"How West Was Won" (MGM) (21st wk) is finishng fourth after being on top or second for many weeks. "Bye, Bye Birdie" (Col) (4th wk) is capturing fifth position.

"Lawrence of Arabia" (Col) (27th wk) again is winding up sixth, same as last round. "Great Escape" (UA) (3d wk), which showed promise last week, is taking seventh place, initial time out in circulation to any extent.

"Gathering of Eagles" (U) (3d wk) is winding in eighth, same as a week ago. "PT 109" (WB) (3d wk) is pushing up to ninth. "Spencer's Mountain" (WB) (4th wk will be 10th.

"L-Shaped Room" (Col) (3d wk) is taking 11th spot while "Mutiny on Bounty" (MGM) (34th wk) rounds out the Top 12. "Hud" (Par), "Mouse on Moon" (Indie), "Savage Sam" (BV) and "55 Days at Peking" (AA) are runnerup pix.

"Summer Magic" (BV), one of better newcomers, is big both in St. Louis and Toronto. "Women of World" (Embassy), also new, shapes solid in Detroit, wow in N.Y. but fairish in Philly.

"Mouse on Moon" (Lope), just getting around, looks neat in Boston, big in Chi, great in N.Y. and socko in L.A. "Sparrows Can't Sing" (Janus) also is a very promising newcomer, being loud in Washington and fine in N.Y. Fellini's "8½" (Embassy), great in N.Y. on extended-run, looks boff in L.A.

"Jason and Argonauts" (Col), coming into N.Y. State soon, looks fine in Cincy and good in Washington. "Donovan's Reef" (Par), due into N.Y. Paramount next week, looks fine in Minneapolis, big in Chi and okay in Portland.

"Longest Day" (20th), which has finished its major key city upped scale runs, is doing great on multiple-run showing in K.C. and still is solid in N.Y. on continuous.

Note: The number of weeks out in release for bigger and longrun pix are designated in such cases.

(Complete Boxoffice Reports on Pages 8-9-10).

L.A. Still Sock; 'Sam' Bright $19,000, '8½' Record 14G; 'Cleo' Mighty 72G, 'Irma' Wow 33G, 'Arabia' Huge 30G

Los Angeles, July 16.

Firstruns here continue in the boffo class this week with a mighty $339,400 expected from 28 situations. "Savage Sam," in first general release, looks like brisk $19,000 in four theatres. House record may be broken by "8½" with $14,000 at Fine Arts. "Mouse on Moon" looks socko at the Four Star.

Bulk of strength is coming from potent holdovers. "Cleopatra" still is near-capacity $72,000 or near in fourth Pantages session. "Lawrence of Arabia" also looks near-capacity $31,000 in 30th Warner Beverly week.

'Escape' Great $40,000, K.C.; 'Bounty' Big 50G, 'Day' Whopping $51,000

Kansas City, July 16.

Current session is one of biggest weeks dollar-wise in many months, with three huge multiple-run showings and strong, new holdovers in every first-run situation. Durwood Theatres opened its new Parkway One and Two Theatres in the Ward Parkway shopping center, tossing both into "Great Escape" multiple-run. This made a hookup of seven hardtops and four ozoners for great $40,000 or near. "Come Blow Your Horn" at the Roxy also is socko at this small house on opener. "Longest Day," in six spots and "Mutiny on Bounty" in six other locations are in first regular runs following long stands at downtown cinemas on hardticket. Both will be in the $50,000 bracket, and far ahead of usual firstruns.

"Bye, Bye Birdie," after setting house record at Plaza last week, is sock in second. "Spencer's Mountain" at Paramount in third session is unusually good. "Gathering of Eagles" shapes okay at Brookside after a big opener in two spots.

Estimates for This Week

Brookside (Fox Midwest-Nat. Gen. Corp.) (800; $1.25-$1.50) — "Gathering of Eagles" (U) (2d wk) with "Interns" (U) sub-run added. Okay $3,500; holds. Last week, including Granada (1,217) hep $8,000, and over forecast by $21,000.

Return of hot weather the forepart of the current session and the plenthora of longruns will cut into Broadway deluxer business this round. Heavy rain starting around noon Sunday (14) came too late to help most firstruns as the outdoor crowd already had departed for the shore or other resorts. Two newcomers are vastly different in results, one being big and the other being mild.

"Gathering of Eagles" is heading for a lofty $43,000 on opener, daydating the Palace, RKO 23d Street and Trans-Lux East. Best showing is being made at the Palace. "Greenwich Village Story" looks to wind the initial stanza with a mild $13,000 or less at the Victoria.

Still getting the most money albeit down sharply from the holiday week, "Come Blow Your Horn" with stageshow looks to finish the sixth session at the Music Hall with a big $165,000. Pic holds a seventh week. "Irma La Douce" completed its sixth round with a smash $50,000, daydating the DeMille and Baronet.

Only Slight Eady Changes

London, July 16.

Proposing slight changes to the Cinematograph Film (distribution of levy) Regulations, the Board of Trade has drafted an order decreeing that newsreels, which at present attract the same rate of Eady levy as high cost films, should receive double that amount.

Other changes are minor but designed to improve the effeciency of the levy scheme.

Better Now In France: U.S. Commerce Dept. Reports on Film Trade

Washington, July 16.

The French motion picture industry, in a sick state until the De Gaulle government came to its aid earlier this year, may be able to expand. At the same time, the U.S. is getting a better break in the French market.

This was the report of the Commerce Dept. today (Thurs.) in an asesssment of the French film situation.

The U.S. could send in less than 100 feature films for dubbing in 1962. But under a new agreement between the French government and the Motion Picture Export Assn. of America, member U.S. companies are allotted 140 dubbing permits in 1963 and 150 in 1964.

Production in France in 1962 was down to 90 feature films, with only 46 of them by French companies alone. The rest were co-productions with French majority interests. Most were Franco-Italian co-productions.

"French film producers," the report said, "threatened to suspend all production in January 1963 if the French government did not come to their aid with increased subsidies and detaxation measures. The French government responded sympathetically and, in March 1963, published a decree which allowed film makers 14% of the gross collections in French theatres to be applied to the cost of production. This was an increase from the previous rate of 5.5%."

The Commerce Dept. estimated that French motion pictures have lost 100,000,000 in attendance in the last five years. The number of theatres fell from 5,806 in 1961 to 5,755 in 1962. This represented a loss of 20,000 seats.

The Stick-Around Bunch

Hollywood, July 16.

Sidney P. Solow, veepee-general manger of Consolidated Film Industries, has presented "25 Year" pins to eight men and two femmes on CFI's staff. Total of 26 people now are on firm's payroll with at least 25 years' service.

Latest recipients include: Rosalind Burghardt, John M. Cooper, Ted Fogelman, William Funck, Dane Hansen, Lucile Holt, Job Sanderson, Ben Wolf, Travis Martinelli and William Toney.

'PEKING' 68-HOUSE PACE

Opening Day at $89,500—26 RKOs Included

Samuel Bronston's "55 Days at Peking," being distributed by Allied Artists, got off to a big start last week in a 68-house multiple break in the New York area, grossing $89,500 on its opening day last Wednesday (10). Of this, a nifty $45,200 was tallied at 26 RKO theatres.

Other metropolitan circuits participating in the break include Skouras, Century, Randforce, Interborough and Brandt. The spread follows a four-week limited preem engagement which began May 29 at the RKO Palace, RKO 23d Street, Trans Lux 85th St. and RKO Albee Theatres.

UA's Summer Sked Big Abroad With N.Y. & H'wood Too

United Artists has a busy production schedule this summer, with considerable shooting being done overseas. In all, the company will be lensing five features abroad between now and Labor Day, with a sixth to go around that time, in addition to two films in the Gotham area and two in Hollywood.

Rolling shortly in London, Turkey and Greece will be Martin Ransohoff's production "Man in the Middle," adapted from Eric Ambler's novel "The Light of Day." This will star Melina Mercouri, Peter Ustinov, Maximilian Schell and Robert Morley and will be directed by Jules Dassin. Lensing in Paris will be "The Train," produced by Jules Bricher, directed by Arthur Penn and starring Burt Lancaster.

England will be the location for "Woman of Straw" which will be produced by Michael Relph and directed by Basil Dearden, starring Gina Lollobrigida, Sean Connery and Sir Ralph Richardson. Also in England will be "633 Squadron," produced by Mirisch Films with Lewis Rachmil as exec producer and Walter Grauman as director. Cliff Robertson and George Chakiris star.

Jumping to Yugoslavia, the Corman Bros. will be putting their "Dubious Patriots" into production this summer. All these will roll by Labor Day. Also going into production around that time will be Martin Poll's "Rope of Sand" pic, slated for lensing in Portugal.

Already in progress in the east, in the vicinity of Philadelphia, is Frank & Eleanor Perry's "Ladybug, Ladybug" film, which is being shot completely on location from an original screenplay by Mrs. Perry and under Frank's direction. Slated to roll on Long Island July 29 is the Pan Arts production of "The World of Henry-Orient," starring Peter Sellers, directed by George Roy Hill and produced by Jerry Hellman. Also this summer, in Hollywood, Sinatra Productions' "For Those Who Think Young" will be in progress as will Stuart Millar and Lawrence Turman's production of the filmization of Gore Vidal's Broadway play "The Best Man," with Franklin Schaffner megging.

Also currently lensing for UA are George Stevens' "Greatest Story Ever Told," which is filming in Utah and Tony Richardson's production, lensing in Ireland, of "Take Love Easy," produced by Oscar Lowenstein, directed by Desmond Davis and starring Rita Tushingham and Peter Finch. All of these, plus a hefty list of recently-completed pix, will be giving UA a healthy list of releases for the months ahead and should help ease exhibitor gripes about a shortage of product.

Exhibits & Films of USIA Praised But Its Periodicals Get Cuffed

Aspen, Colo., July 16.

The U.S. Information Agency is doing a good job of "image-building" abroad via its cultural and trade exhibits and its motion picture program, but USIA publications are often "dull, impersonal, or too opulent for their chosen audiences."

This was the consensus of opinion expressed here at the recently concluded 13th annual International Design Conference. Meeting was attended by more than 500 leaders in design, films and journalism who were asked to review USIA activities in various fields. Among film industry attendees were George Stevens Jr., director of the USIA's motion picture service; producer George ("Ugly American") Englund, and Arnold Picker, exec veep of United Artists.

In explaining the USIA workings to the conferees, Donald Wilson, the Agency's deputy director, reported that the USIA's total budget of $122,500,000 a year is only slightly larger than the amount which Russia spends annually to jam the Voice of America. The Agency's objective, he said, is to "make the policies of this nation everywhere intelligible and, wherever possible, palatable." The Agency's five basic themes: (1) need for a nuclear test ban treaty, (2) need for a free Berlin, (3) need for a more effective United Nations, (4) that man's best hope is a world of free choice, and (5) that democracy is consistent with the aspirations of newly developing nations.

Despite the comprehensive USIA programs, Wilson said, independent forces have a far greater role in shaping America's image abroad. Perhaps, he added, Hollywood wields the greatest influence. In this regard, Assistant Secretary of State Lucius D. Battle said that even scenes of violence and racial intolerance are permissible fare for the 80,000,000 people who see Hollywood films overseas each week "because these films are the free expression of a free people, and this fact is definitely not lost on the people who see them."

Conferees here rated USIA films as "more compelling" than the Soviet pictures, which tend to be "too hard-sell" in their propaganda content. Stevens reported that the USIA makes few "pure image" or "Americana" films because of lack of funds. Pix, instead, are primarily dedicated to the five themes reported above. The USIA's motion picture service produces 270 documentaries and 300 newsreels in 52 languages, usually at a cost of from $10,000 to $11,000 each. Pictures are shown around the world, except, of course, in the U.S.

Stevens explained USIA product is not shown in this country so that they cannot be turned into internal propaganda instruments.

Of all the USIA material shown here, the magazines and brochures drew the least enthusiastic response.

Patwant Singh of India, writer, critic and publisher, described himself as "puzzled and distressed" at the USIA magazines. He asked why "Span," a USIA magazine distributed in India, addressed itself in both content and design to the upper classes, a "strata already Western-oriented," rather than to those groups which are indifferent, somewhat cynical or downright hostile to the American way of life."

Look Magazine's art director Allen Hurlburt said he was afraid that USIA magazines "give the impression of a rich Uncle Sam with a button down collar, when they might represent a warm, robust people."

Economy Reported Good In Area By Fed Reserve

Minneapolis, July 16.

Local exhibs are encouraged by the current Minneapolis Federal Reserve bank report that this district's economy is moving along at a "reasonably satisfactory pace." For the first 1963 months, personal income averaged 6.4% above that of the corresponding 1962 period, according to the report. The national rise was only 4.2%, it's pointed out.

Other favorable factors cited in the report include employment growth above normal seasonal improvement, a modest gain in manufacturings' weekly earnings and a decrease in the number of people drawing unemployment insurance.

This is considerable of an agricultural area and the report states that "district farm conditions so far have been seasonally favorable." In all, the survey indicates more business conditions improvement than at any time during a recent 12-month period.

Roanoke's No-No On Desegregating Of Its Theatres

Roanoke, July 16.

Although a Federal Court has held Virginia's segregated seating law to be invalid, Roanoke theatre operators don't interpret the ruling as meaning film houses must be integrated.

Managers are taking their cue from Roanoke Commonwealth's attorney Leroy Moran who interprets the decision handed down by a three-judge court at Alexandria as meaning the State law compelling segregated seating is unconstitutional; it does not deprive the operator of "a privately owned and operated theatre" from making his own decision as to whom he will, or will not, admit.

Henry Scholz, president of the National Theaters Corp., which operates Roanoke's largest film house, the American, quoted Moran's off-hand opinion as justification for continuing refusal admit Negro patrons. But he added: "If and when the law requires desegregation, we will abide by the law."

Three other film houses—the Jefferson, Grandin and Lee—are controlled by Craver Theatres of Charlotte, N.C. A spokesman was noncommittal as to whether they will be desegregated. However, he said, Charlotte theatres were integrated several weeks ago on an experimental basis and the chain may gradually remove restrictions "on a city-to-city basis." For the present, Negroes are not being admitted to the Roanoke three.

Individual Negroes have made efforts to be admitted to the American, but there has been no organized attempt. Until the past week or so, the Roanoke branch of the NAACP had the mistaken belief that all four Roanoke houses were owned by the American management and had tested the segregation ruling only at the larger theatre.

The Rev. R. R. Wilkinson, president of the branch, says his organization has followed a policy of trying to cooperate with local biracial groups rather than staging marches and demonstrations. The NAACP has held out the likelihood of mass efforts to obtain admission, however, if Roanoke houses are not desegregated voluntarily.

Film Shares Rise Since 1957

David Unger, longtime close student of motion picture stocks and investor in various of the pic issues, sends along a chart showing the price increases since 1957—"a poor year." The general market rise since that time has been 70%.

BURTON ROBBINS TO BRIEF NSS STAFF

National Screen Service branch managers will convene in New York next week at which time president Burton Robbins will provide the blow by blow of a new program of expanded activities.

Basic NSS idea is to provide exhibitors with additional promotional material, including the newly adopted Preview Records. Latter represent "coming attractions" in platter form and, along with the music from future bookings, is some dialog about the refreshments on sale.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Jerry Lewis barred tv writers and trade press from his two-day visit in Boston July 10-11 by the simple expedient of having his press agents calling the aforementioned writers and telling them not to come.

Burning question that had the tv writers and other press curious was VARIETY's page one story from Montreal in the July 3 issue indicating Lewis was in favor of pay tv. Educated guesses were that because of this story, Lewis decided to duck tv writers and trades.

Lewis' film "Nutty Professor" nabbed two pans from the Boston Herald and the Boston Globe film reviewers. Said Marjory Adams, film critic, Boston Globe: ". . . It isn't our lovable Lewis as we ever knew him before. I would just as soon not know him again in this kind of dual role . . . I don't know what Lewis has in mind when he makes his final remarks indicating that there's an important moral hidden under the zany doings of 'The Nutty Professor.' It has something to do with valuing yourself high if you want other people to do so. But it doesn't mean very much considering the clumsy language in which it is delivered. Jerry Lewis can do better than this in making people laugh. Next time around I am sure he will."

With an entourage of 15, Lewis made p. a.'s in eight Boston area theatres, Pilgrim, Boston; Granada, Malden; Strand, Dorchester; Oriental, Mattapan; Paramount, Lynn; Paramount, Salem; Cinema, Peabody; Embassy, Waltham; four each in the two days.

"Ours is a luck business and a partnership business." Thus the nature of the motion picture industry today was summed up by a senior officer of a major company.

Earlier this year, he said, "we had four flops in succession; now we have four hits." All eight pictures looked good at the outset—"otherwise we wouldn't have made them."

He added there's just no sure way of telling how a film production will turn out and, upon its completion, how to gauge public acceptance.

Further, said the film official, "we find we have at least one partner with just about all of our pictures." Exceptions are those bought outright, such as from foreign producers. He complained that the partners —including indie producers, stars, writers, etc.—"naturally share in the profits when we have profits, but when there's a loss, we take the loss entirely."

Conflict over film titles develops with a fair amount of frequency and one such case recently arose between Embassy Pictures and Columbia Pictures over the handle for the former's upcoming "L'Ape Regina" which, literally translated, means "Queen Bee."

Seems Embassy won't be able to use this title, however, because Columbia has used it in 1955 for a film of its own, one which is currently playing on tv in some places. So Embassy has decided to use the handle under which the pic is playing in France, "The Conjugal Bed," but the distrib is also thinking of giving it a subtitle which will read "a modern fable of the queen bee" or something to that effect.

Film, which ran into some customs difficulties when entering the States but which has since been released, stars Marina Vlady and Ugo Tognazzi. Miss Vlady won the "best actress" award at the recent Cannes fest for her performance in the pic, which was directed by Marco Ferreri from an original screenplay he wrote in collaboration with Goffredo Parise and Raphael Azcona. It deals with a young wife who places insatiable demands on her older hubby, and the "Queen Bee" handle was figured as perfect for the film because of the nature of the insect which kills its mates after being impregnated.

An "Art of Film" seminar, limited to 36 and costing $90 a head (including bed and board), is being held July 20-26 at Canterbury Hills Residential Centre near Hamilton, Ont. Organized by McMaster U. and Canadian Federation of Film Societies, its lecturers are: James Card, curator of Eastman House, Rochester, N.Y.; Ernest Callenbach, editor of Film Quarterly; Andrew Sarris, freelance writer on films; Peter Morris of Canadian Film Institute, who'll direct the seminar.

A 16mm short will be directed by Richard Ballentyne, president of Inter-Video Productions Ltd., Toronto, with co-operation of National Film Board of Canada. Films shown will include Welles' "Citizen Kane," von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," Joseph Losey's "Concrete Jungle," John Ford's "Informer," a clutch of Charles Chaplins and several from Britain, France, Italy, Sweden and Russia.

Ralph Nelson's "Lilies of the Field," which recently scored impressively at the Berlin Film Festival by copping three awards, is, appropriately enough, playing its premiere engagement in the city of its success. Pic had its world preem Monday (15) in Berlin and will open four weeks later in theatres throughout West Germany. Sidney Poitier won the Berlin fest's "best actor" award for his starring role in the pic and it was also awarded the Catholic film organization prize and the Protestant Inter-film prize. Nelson produced and directed the low-budget effort which also stars Lilia Sakala and Stanley Adams. James Poe wrote the screenplay from William E. Barrett's novel.

In Minneapolis for the local opening of his own and brother's "Captain Sindbad" (MGM), Herman King gave his mother most of the credit for the success of the King Bros. as film producers. "Mother is our best adviser," King told Will Jones of Tribune. "She sees more movies than anybody. She reads more than anybody. She comes to the office, goes through the scripts that have been sent to us, takes them home and tells us which she likes. "We've made 40 pictures and the only two that ever lost money were those that mother didn't like. And now we are pretty much guided by her advice."

Almost like a tradesheet pitch was the N.Y. Mirror's editorial last week (July 10), titled "About Face," reading:

"A Federal district court in New York has approved a petition by National General Corp., which owns 225 theatres in 17 states, to produce and distribute motion pictures.

"Once in the not so long ago, this sort of arrangement was standard practice. Indeed, it was the skeletal structure of the movie industry and logically so.

"All that changed shortly after World War II when the Justice Department, in a misguided rampage of trustbusting, fought and won a bitter battle to separate the major studios from their theatre chains.

"The result was disastrous for the U.S. movie-producing industry, which had led the world and earned dollars everywhere. The industry, drawing top talent here, creating a vast array of jobs and paying vast amounts to Uncle Sam in taxes, began to wither on the vine—a sorry case of Government-created economic blight. The advent of TV made the situation all the worse, with unemployment mounting as the major studios retrenched and theatres closed up by the hundreds.

"Naturally, a shortage of new movies developed. Independents couldn't meet the demand. Exhibitors turned to importing pictures from Europe and Japan—a trend still going on. So it's all too apparent who lost and who benefited from the Justice Department's war with the U.S. movie industry.

"Thus, the about-face in the court's approval of the National General Corp. petition is significant of a revised attitude on the subject. The Justice Department did not oppose the petition.

"If the department has now seen the light, it's an encouraging development. The tragedy is that the awakening has come only after incalculable, irreparable damage has been wantonly inflicted on a great industry."

Multiple Ozoners on Guarantee Altering First-Run Pattern In Dayton Area

By BRAINARD PLATT

Dayton, O., July 16.

The shortage of feature product which has been bothering downtown first run film theatres for some time has grown acute this summer. Suburban drive-ins, previously second runs, have become a major factor in the competition for the big releases.

Downtowners were first dismayed last year when Doris Day and Cary Grant's Universal film, "Touch of Mink," played first run for two weeks in four drive-ins.

This year Dayton Theatre Assn., a chain of 10 drive-in theatres, six of which are located in the immediate area has been getting a number of good ones. Al Levin, secretary, notes the company did $27,000 in one week with four of its local drive-ins on Sandra Dee in "Tammy And the Doctor."

He also estimates the same sort of a schedule brought in about $25,000 each on Bob Hope's "Call Me Bwana," and "Dr. No." John Wayne's "Donovan's Reef" was just under that figure, he points out.

Moreover, four other independents have banded together to close for first runs. Their most recent, which they picked up for two weeks, was "Spencer's Mountain" with Henry Fonda.

Levin's four houses using first runs handle a total of 3,100 cars and he usually shows the main feature twice and the second film once or twice. He confines his presentations to one week, noting that the take on "Touch of Mink" was cut in half the second week.

Levin estimates the season when his drive-ins can attract top quality first run films ranges from April through September.

"We don't bid on the films, just return a form showing we will accept their guarantee figures for the four houses in which we want to play the pictures," he said.

He does admit the big attraction is the multiple theatre deal, recognizing that the distributors probably would not be interested in just a single drive-in.

As things now stand, Levin's company is showing first run films in Springfield, where it has two houses, but not in the single house in Cincinnati or Chicago.

"I doubt if we will get around to that in Chicago," he said, "but I imagine we will be soon in Cincinnati." He estimates he will be running about 20 first run movies in Dayton this summer.

He attributes the trend to drive-in theatres to declining fortunes of downtown houses and the fact the distributors are looking for places where they can make money with their products.

"It is just good business on their part to make the films available to us because we can guarantee they will get the viewers," he said.

'Irma la Douce' To Showcase Aug. 7

"Irma La Douce," United Artists' strong-grossing pic, will be heading onto the company's Premiere Showcase spread of theatres in New York, beginning around Aug. 7. On that date it will exit the DeMille Theatre on Broadway where "Great Escape," another UA film, will make its Gotham bow, daydating with an eastside house not yet determined.

Billy Wilder's "Irma" will continue at the Baronet Theatre, where it has been daydating with the DeMille, when it goes out on the showcase. The pic is in its seventh week at the DeMille where it has been holding to steady biz. "Escape" has been playing to strong biz on the Coast and in other scattered cities. Both pix are looked to by UA execs to be among the company's top grossers for the year.

United Nations Ties For Hope's 'Global Affair'; Star Gets 10% of Gross

Hollywood, July 16.

United Nations has pledged worldwide release privileges in support of Hall Bartlett's production of "A Global Affair," Bob Hope starrer currently filming for MGM. While the UN would not waive its policy of refusing filming permission inside the premises, the world governmental body has agreed to sponsor worldwide premieres of the picture which, Bartlett said, "would probably be as benefits for UNICEF.

Major preem of "Affairs" has been set for the UN building itself in New York, with simultaneous premieres in 12 capitals of the world. Metro is aiming for Easter opening.

Picture, a departure for Hope, is based on the UN Convention (law) stating that every child of the UN member nations (112) would be brought up without want, prejudice or injustice. It concerns question of a child that might be left at the UN building and what would happen to it. Situation has been attempted but has never happened.

Hope has 10% of the gross of "Affair," a joint venture of Bartlett, Seven Arts and Metro. Bartlett's initial deal was with Seven Arts, picture then becoming one of the company's 20-film deal with Metro.

Repping the international employment of the UN, Bartlett has cast Barbara Bouchet, German; Brenda Benet and Francois Ruggerio, French; Inez Pedroza, Spanish; Linda Rogers, English, and Barbara Walden, Negro, in roles of UN employees. Players join Lilo Pulver, Jacques Bergerac, Yvonne DeCarlo, John McGiver, Robert Sterling, Miiko Taka and Elga Anderson in the entirely International cast.

Bartlett will complete "Affair" by Aug. 10 on a $1,600,000 budget. Producer is recreating UN general assembly and lobby on stage 27 at Metro, along with an original painting by George Gibson, Jerry Gebr and Harry Pepker paralleling a famed mural on children given to the UN by Brazil.

Jack Arnold is directing from screenplay by Charles Lederer based on the story by Eugene Vale. Arthur Marx and Bob Fisher also did additional writing.

Following completion of "Affair," Bartlett will go on a month of personal appearances on behalf of "The Caretakers," which he made for United Artists. Producer then wil prep "A Woman of Paris" on new deal now in negotiation.

Bartlett, additionally, has set a development deal with CBS in which he will enter television with an hour filmed series. Producer said he has been developing projects with Jim Aubrey, Robert Lewine and Hunt Stromberg Jr. who will select from several ideas submitted to them.

Lasser's Knowing

Minneapolis, July 16.

Harold Lasser, counsel for National General Corp., appears to have done well in working out the legalistics (with the Dept. of Justice) under which this theatre circuit will be permitted to engage in production and distribution. Entailed are amendments to the antitrust decree under which Nat'l-Gen. operates.

Some 20 years ago Lasser was a Justice attorney who helped press the case which resulted in that same decree.

U's 5 Now, Plus 8 In Next 9 Months

Following its five June-July releases, Universal will issue eight new features in the next nine months the company's v.p.-general sales manager Henry H. "Hi" Martin told a gathering of home-office sales execs and regional sales managers during sessions in a two-day sales meeting in New York last week. The veep characterized the lineup as having one of the strongest grossing potentials in many moons for U.

Company's August release will be the Doris Day-James Garner-Arlene Francis comedy "The Thrill of It All." The Ross Hunter-Arwin production will have its world preem at Radio City Music Hall following the current "Come Blow Your Horn," the exec revealed. Another U comedy, "For Love of Money," is slated for October release but will be given a series of August key city, pre-release openings.

In September, U will have "Kiss of the Vampire," new Hammer chiller-diller. "Dark Purpose," with pre-release openings slated for Thanksgiving, is skedded for December release, starring Shirley Jones, Rossano Brazzi, George Sanders, Micheline Presle and Georgia Moll. U's Christmas release will be Stanley Donen's "Charade," starring Cary Grant and Audrey Hepburn. This one, incidentally, has already been set for the Music Hall as its Xmas pic.

In February, the company will go with another comedy, "Man's Favorite Sport?", a Howard Hawks production starring Rock Hudson, Paula Prentiss and others. The Tony Randall-Burl Ives-Barbara Eden starrer "The Brass Bottle" will be unveiled in March, followed by "Captain Newman, M.D.," staring Gregory Peck, Tony Curtis, Angie Dickenson, Bobby Darin and others.

All of these pic are in color. In the past month, Universal has issued "List of Adrian Messenger," "Tammy and the Doctor," "King Kong vs. Godzilla," "Lancelot and Guinevere" and "A Gathering of Eagles." Of the upcoming releases, "Thrill of It All" and "Charade" are being looked to by the company to turn a good biz trick. So far this year the only big winner U has had is "To Kill a Mockingbird," with "The Birds," "Freud" and "Ugly American" not performing up to the strength hoped for at the time of their release.

As things shape up now, U execs are figuring "Mockingbird" and "Thrill" as their big 1963 breadwinners, with "Charade" not figuring, natch, since it is an Xmas release and most of its loot won't be in the till until 1964.

MORE PIX BOOKED FOR PHILHARMONIC FEST

Four more pix have been added to the program of features to be unspooled at the first New York Film Festival, scheduled to be held at Philharmonic Hall in the Lincoln Center of the Performing Arts.

Films include "Knife in The Water," directed by Roman Polanski (Poland); "Le Joli Mai," directed by Chris Marker (France); "The Sky," directed by Takis Kanelopoulos (Greece), and "Barravento," directed by Glauber Rocha (Brazil). Previously announced was "The Fiances" from Italy.

FALL-WINTER FILMS SOLD AT STATE FAIR

Columbus, O., July 16.

Trailers and featurettes plugging fall and winter film product will be shown in a booth at the Ohio State Fair here Aug. 22-Sept. 1 sponsored by the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio. Ken Prickett, ITOO executive secretary, points out that this is a co-operative deal with the fair. Ohio theatres are asked to show trailers plugging the fair.

Trailers will be circulated to theatres. Prickett urged exhibitors to display them on the days listed and then forward them to the next theatre without delay.

"This is a tradeoff that will be mutually beneficial," said Prickett, "and we hope that we will bet 100% co-operation."

MGM BUYS SMITH NOVEL

Chapel Hill, N.C., July 16.

Betty Smith, Chapel Hill novelist, has sold the screen rights to her new novel, "Joy in the Morning," to MGM.

The purchase price was $100,000 down and an escalator clause on the sales of the book, which could make the figure much higher.

Miss Smith's novel, "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," was made into a picture by 20th Century-Fox.

K's Message to Moscow Film Fest

Moscow, July 16.

On behalf of the Soviet Government and on his own behalf Nikita Khrushchev sent this message of greetings to the participants and guests of the Third Moscow International Film Festival:

"The Third Moscow International Film Festival, in the same way as all others which took place in Moscow, is being held with the motto 'for humanism in cinema art, for peace and friendship among nations,' which conforms to mankind's most vital interests and aspirations. Soviet audiences will meet with approval and gratitude the films, portraying deeply and truthfully the progressive ideas of our time—films imbued with lofty humanism—and a sense of civic duty, affirming the moral and intellectual beauty of men and answering the most urgent questions of our day with the incorruptible truth of artistic images."

Hollywood a Wow In Moscow

opening days, and at his own expense. And it was a case of paying their own way for the rest of the Yank delegation, with, of course, the exception of Stanley Kramer, who is a member of the feature film jury.

Present

The U.S. delegation, under the leadership of George Stevens Jr., of the USIA, also includes Tony Curtis and Christine Kaufman, Susan Strasberg, Elmer Bernstein, screenwriters Abby Mann and James Clavell, Ilya Lopert, Tom Brandon, Sig Shore and Susan Oliver. The Mirisch freres—Walter and Harold—were around for the beginning, but inexplicably left before the presentation last Wednesday (10) of their own film, "The Great Escape," which is the official U.S. entry.

The festival has, indeed, been something of a personal triumph for the Mirisches, yet they declined to share in the glory. For apart from their official contender, they were represented by two of the out-of-competition pix, "West Side Story" and "Some Like It Hot," both of which made sensational impacts. Each pic had several public screenings in the theatres reserved for non-competitive showings, and the ovations increased in their enthusiasm.

Tony Curtis' Surprise

Tony Curtis, who did personals at the "Some Like It Hot" presentations, told this VARIETY reporter that he was astounded at the way which the audience was with the picture. Not a joke was missed, and they were as hip as any audience anywhere in the United States, he commented.

Stanley Kramer did the intro honors for "West Side Story," and explained it was a film about one of our faults—"we have a few," he said. "You will see in this film that we criticize and satirize ourselves as well, or better, than anyone else might have done." Incidentally it's an interesting aside on the Russian attitude towards films and film-makers, that the biggest personal ovation has always gone to Kramer, undoubtedly because of his international reputation as a producer with record for picking subjects with liberal themes.

Two of Kramer's recent successes, "Judgment at Nuremberg" and "The Defiant Ones" are also scheduled for non-competitive showings, as well as "Ben-Hur.' There appears to be little doubt that these will add to the American prestige, and give the keen Moscow cinema-going public an idea of the films that come from the Western world—films which they cannot otherwise see because of the price restriction self-imposed by the Russians. As one member of the U.S. delegation put it, "West Side Story" could gross about $2,000,000 in the Soviet Union, yet they wouldn't consider paying more than $60,000 for it.

A Great Theatre

The newly built Palace of Congress in the Kremlin grounds is the setting for the official competitive screenings, and it is probably the finest motion picture theatre anywhere in the world. The classical glass and concrete frontage harmonizes with the historical architecture of the Kremlin, and the interior is sumptuously decorated in marble. The theatre seats upwards of 5,000, and each chair arm is fitted with a simultaneous translation service for 14 languages, including Chinese, Japanese, Indian and Arabic. The non-competitive screenings are staged in the Rossiya theatre, specially built for the 1961 fest, the Sports Palace and the Cosmos. The latter is a conventional nabe theatre.

Although only on its third time out, the every-other-year Moscow fest has effectively hit the big time, and accomplished more to bring together the film producing nations of the world than any of the other major European festivals. It has established itself as a world film forum, though inevitably that has its drawbacks, inasmuch as there is a resultant flow of inferior product from inexperienced countries. All told, there are 34 features in competition, necessitating a double bill in the afternoons from 3 to 7 p.m. and an evening screening starting at 8:30, and that tight schedule is making it tough sledding for jury and critics alike. On the other hand, only 30 competitive shorts have been entered, so the short film jury is having it comparitively easy.

One big surprise has been the widespread panning of the Soviet film, "Meet Mr. Baluyev," which was the inaugural presentation. Even the London Daily Worker, which is the only English-language newspaper from the West available here—joined in the chorus of criticism, commenting on its "undistinguished quality" and its use of "characters as mouthpieces." There is another Russian film to come, but the grapevine suggests it will not help much to restore the balance.

Such is the recognition accorded the Moscow fest, that most of the Western nations have their top brass around. Britain, which has lavishly supported the two previous fests, again has a strong trade delegation headed by Lord Archibald and Robert Clark, toppers of the two producing organizations, and including Eric Fletcher, MP deputy chairman of Associated British Picture Corp., Michael Bromhead, general manager of Lion International, Theo Richmond, associate producer of "Heaven's Above," the Peter Sellers starrer which has been shown non-competitively, and Jack Worrow, publicity director for Bryanston Films, producers of the official U.K. entry, "Sammy Going South." There is a 75-strong delegation from France, and big turnouts also from Italy and West Germany, as well as the entire block of Eastern European countries. There is so far no sign of a Chinese delegation, though films from Red China are slotted as competitive entries.

Two, Three" and "Manchurian Candidate," Mann said he felt that the issues dividing East and West are too serious to be used as the basis of cheap gags and often phony generalizations. "It's time to call a halt to that sort of thing," he said. "If we're all going to go down (in a nuclear war), let's know what we're going down for and let's not be swayed by a lot of cliches."

Noting President Kennedy's recent statements to the effect that this country should reappraise its policies re the Soviets, Mann suggested that U.S. filmmakers too should seriously explore East-West relations, pointing up those areas in which we agree as well as disagree.

Mann said he felt that "The Great Escape," the Mirisch Co.'s adventure melodrama about Allied p.o.w.s in Germany during World War II, was not a particularly good official U.S. entry for the fest. "It's not a bad picture certainly," but he felt a film of more serious intent would have been appropriate. To this he added, "However, the official Russian entry was a lot sadder than ours."

tions for properties and personalities.

Also detailed for the first time in the report are 7A's increasing production interests in France. Among the pix on the company's completed list is "Les Mystifies," produced by Julian Derode and directed by Jacques Deray. For 7A, Derode also is to produce "The Gentleman's Companion," which will be directed by Phillipe de Broca, who made "The Five-Day Lover" and "The Joker."

Seven Arts also will be associated in the production of Jacques Bar's "Love Cage," to be filmed in France with Jane Fonda and Alain Delon, as the latter's first English-speaking role. In addition, 7A has a pact with French director Serge Bourguignon, who won an Oscar for "Sundays and Cybele," which will cover production in France of "King of Paris" and "Les Platanes."

Notably missing from this year's list of upcoming 7A pix is Elia Kazan's "America, America," which had been included in 7A's last annual report. Producer-director Kazan subsequently made a deal on the picture with Warners, and it's understood Seven Arts is now suing for breach of contract.

Seven Arts' diversification in real estate is via its $5,000,000 investment (or 20.8% interest) in the Grand Bahama Development Co., building a huge resort-residential complex on Grand Bahama Island 76 miles off Palm Beach. Report notes that the corporation's 250-room Lucayan Beach Hotel is to open Dec. 15 and that the corporation has been granted a 10-year exclusive license to run casinos on the island.

The 10 Seven Arts legit properties on tap include:

"One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," starring Kirk Douglas, to be done in October, 1963; John Patrick's "A Candle for St. Jude," to be done next spring in association with David Merrick; Terrence Rattigan's "Heart to Heart," probably 1965; "Howe and Hummel," a musical, 1964; "Casablanca," musical version of the old Warner film, 1964; Norman Krasna's "French Street," to be produced first in England in 1964 in association with Hugh Beaumont; Cy Feuer and Ernie Martin's "Film of Memory," fall of 1963; "The Soft Sell," by Oscar Millard and Warren Duff, 1963-64 season; "The Legendar Mizeners," 1964, and "Mrs 'Arris Goes to Paris," musical based on Paul Gallico novel, 1964.

In addition to the 15 pictures its making this year, and the above legit properties, 7A says it has 51 other properties in various stage of preparation for filming.

Angles To Shopping Centre 'Twins'

Concession Stands Also Sell To Those Outside the Durwood Situations

Kansas City, July 16.

Opening of two theatres side by side in the Ward Parkway Shopping Center last Friday (12) brought a couple of new twists for Durwood Theatres, area circuit which has first runs and drive-ins in Kansas City, St. Joseph, and Jefferson City, Mo., and Leavenworth, Kans.

One twist is an operation as part of a shopping center, one of the area's biggest, according to Stan Durwood, president of the circuit which opened the Parkway One and Parkway Two Theatres. What started out as a promotion engineered by the circuit with KMBC Radio turned into a center-wide promotion with KMBC moving its turntables into the center (covered) promenade, and the center going in for a sidewalk sale that turned into one of the year's biggest promotion events.

Another twist was a steady concession business throughout the evening. Twin concession stands are accessible (without ticket purchase) to the promenade strollers, and they took advantage of the situation greatly to the delight of circuit general manager Robert Goodfriend. Needless to say the two theatres were filled, the Parkway One and its 400 seats for the first showing at 7 p.m., and the Parkway Two and its 300 seats for its first showing at 8 p.m. Both theatres are playing "The Great Escape" opening week.

According to form, the theatres were completed only minutes ahead of the openings, with workmen literally walking out one exit as customers entered past the one boxoffice which serves both theatres.

Patronage at the opening verified trade will be as much from area residents as from Parkway shoppers, judging from dress and acquaintances. A considerable share of the patrons came in casual clothes befitting veteran shoppers, but a noticeable number also came dressed up, supposedly residents of nearby Leawood, one of the tonier residential areas on the southern edge of the city.

Theatres side by side are new, indeed, hereabouts, and theatres in a shopping center are newer still. So plenty of eyes from within the trade are focused on these, with thoughts of which shopping center to invade with theatres next. The area abounds in big centers, all vulnerable to theatre operation.

If this one is a criterion, there will be more in other shopping centers shortly. Reception and interest are high, and the operation is being eyed as a possible forerunner of others.

U.S. Joins in Venice Documentary, Juve Fests

Washington, July 16.

The U.S. is officially participating in the 14th International Exhibition of Documentary Films and the 15th International Exhibition of Films for Children, both of which are now being held in Venice, Italy, through July 20.

Donald E. Baruch, head of motion pictures for the Defense Dept., is chairman of the U.S. delegation. Some 55 U.S. documentary and children's films were selected by CINE (the Committee on International Nontheatrical Events) for entry in competition at the two exhibitions. Of these, 15 are Government films.

New Houses Proliferate; Atlanta's Fourth to Open In Period of Month

Atlanta, July 16.

Atlanta area's latest new conventional motion picture theatre lit up last Thursday (11). Martin's Rialto theatre was the fourth hardtop to unveil within a month. Parade started early in June when H. B. Meiselman opened 900-seat Atlantic, No. 18 in his chain, located in South Side's Atlantic Discount Center, with Bob Hope in "Call Me Bwana." Next to bow was Georgia Theatre Co. circuit's 650-seat de luxe Lenox Square Theatre in regional shopping centre with space to park 6,000 cars with "Come Blow Your Horn."

Third four-waller was Meiselman's No. 19, Cherokee (named for North Side shopping centre), another 900-seater, which started with Samuel Bronston's "55 Days at Peking."

Martin circuit's Rialto, with 1,200 seats, was built on the site of an old 900-seater bearing that name. It is believed to be second theatre in country occupying a second floor.

It will open with $100 per ticket benefit performance sponsored by Atlanta Junior Chamber of Commerce with funds to go to Warren Memorial Boys Club Building Fund.

In addition to new theatres, a wave of renovation, remodeling and refurbishing has been going on in other houses, including Storey Theatre web's flagship, the Rhodes, wrich was given a stem to stern going over prior to opening of "Lawrence of Arabia."

Public Demo Due on Dimension 150; Todd-AO Participating in Process

Hollywood, July 16.

Dimension 150, new wide-screen process developed by L.A. campus faculty members Dr. Richard Vetter and Carl Williams, will be demonstrated for the press and trade early next month in a local theatre being prepared for the purpose. Salah Hassanein, Todd-AO exec, whose company has acquired the process, asserted last week that process has great economic benefits to the entire film industry.

Patents pending on process will belong to corporation being formed in which Vetter and Williams will be partnered with Todd-AO. Team will continue working on process, with future patents also belonging to company.

Louis de Rochemont has a franchise for making first pictures in new process. Producton of first, "All The World's A Stage" will begin in mid-1964. Also on production agenda are "Britannia Waives The Rules," now under preparation in London by John Halas and George Mikes; "Jeg Elsker Deg" (I Love You), to be made in Oslo by Harald Tusberg, based on life of Edvard Grieg; "The Ski Bums," to be filmed at a major ski resort by Don Cowlbeck.

Also planned are a series of 60-min. experimental features, under collective title of "Your World and Mine," which de Rochemont hopes will rival success of "March of Time" series.

Although Todd-AO has acquired rights to process, company does not plan substituting it for, or combining it with its own process, but will offer it to producers with properties particularly adaptable to its use.

Dr. Vetter said process is designed to heighten realism and feeling of participation by audience. "Its unique elements are (1) all of the optics used in the process, from photography to projection, are new, developed for Dimension 150; (2) a deeply curved screen is used which will eliminate cross reflections which tend to wash out pictures on the sides; (3) standard equipment is used without modification. Only the lenses are new; (4) a standard 65m. camera is used as is standard 65m. color negative.

"Four lenses, to give photographers flexibility and economy, are used: (a) a 50 degree field lens; (b) 70 degree; (c) 120 degree; and (d) 150 degree. The latter two come close to seeing images as seen by human binocular vision. The 50 is best for close-ups; the 70 for ordinary still and action scenes; the 120 and 150 for the ultra-wide angle action and spectacle shots.

Printing uses a standard 65m. optical printer. Only the printing lens is new. The image format on 70m. allows space for the 6-track stereophonic sound used by Todd-AO.

Williams added that there were two type prints—one for the deep curved screen, an optical print; and a contact print for other screens. The advantage of their screen is also in a special surface that eliminates cross reflection.

The teams are working now on an all-purpose screen that can be changed adjusted to accommodate all film sizes and processes, with a switch electronically from Dimension 150 to Cinema Scope, for instance, in two or three minutes. Currently in development stage, they hope to have it finalized within six months to a year.

Conversion costs for appropriate theatres presently equipped for 70m. is estimated at $25,000. This would include installation of the deep-curved screen and the new projection optics. The aspect ratio is 2.7 to 1 for a typical screen, 34' high by 92' wide.

Prints can be reduced to 35m. for subsequent runs with no loss of pictorial value, in much same manner present 65m. negatives are reduced to smaller print sizes.

At next month's demonstration, team are proposing to show process in 16m., 35m. spherical print, the deep-curved screen.

"I Love Louisa, the Betty Comden-Adolph Green screenplay to be directed by J. Lee Thompson and coproduced by him with Arthur Jacobs, has been taken over by 20th-Fox, after originally being earmarked for United Artists. UA apparently would not go along with the projected budget and gave the producers the opportunity to peddle the package elsewhere. Shirley MacLaine has title role with Paul Newman, Robert Mitchum, Dean Martin, Gene Kelly and Dick Van Dyke as costars. It starts next month.

Investment banker Robert Lehman, prominent in show business finances, was skippering his cabin cruiser, Bobbilee II, from his Sands Point place to Manhattan, with weekend guests Sam and (Mrs.) Frances Goldwyn, when they apparently got up too much steam. The engine was smoking excessively and the party was rescued by the Albatross, hydrofoil craft on its maiden voyage as a commuter conveyance from Port Washington. Ira E. Dowd, head man of the hydrofoil line, stopped in the East River to inform the Coast Guard about the incident, and tumbled into the briny. He was rescued immediately but his Albatross was 45 minutes late in arriving at its Wall Street destination. Commented Goldwyn: "I've made pictures with less excitement in them."

Documentary on Love Goddesses

the early 1930s was not so much a result of the specific provisions of the Production Code (adopted in 1930), as it was in answer to a depression-ridden public's sudden disenchantment with glossy, celluloid sin during a time of real economic trouble.

In "Goddesses," Turell, who was prez of Sterling TV before its merger with the Reade org, and Ferguson are renewing a collaboration which started when they made "The Legend of Rudolph Valentino" for television. Work on "Goddesses" has been going on for two years, with completion now in sight and a fall release tentatively scheduled.

Much of the footage of the pic will be coming from the Paramount library, but they are also wheeling and dealing with other sources. Among the girls who'll be covered in the pic, in addition to those already mentioned: Lillian Gish, Marlene Dietrich, Nita Naldi, Jean Harlow, Mae West, Greta Garbo, Ginger Rogers, Carole Lombard, Rita Hayworth, Dorothy Lamour, Marilyn Monroe, Sophia Loren and Elizabeth Taylor.

The Exhibitor as Hero

Dallas, July 16.

Lt. Governor Preston Smith, an exhibitor on the side, will be guest at the banquet of the forthcoming International Convention & Seminar of the Women of the Motion Picture Industry, meeting in Dallas, Sept. 13-15. The banquet will be held Saturday night, Sept. 14, in the Regency Room of the Adolphus Hotel, convention headquarters.

Smith will receive the "Distinguished Independent Texas Theatre Owner" (DITTO) award. This is the initial presentation of the Dallas WOMPI DITTO award which was especially created for this occasion. Smith owns and operates a circuit of drive-in theatres in west Texas.

John H. Rowley, prez of Rowley United Theatres in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, will present the award.

Kroll's 'Guns of August' First For Universal's 'New Horizons' Adjunct

Universal's "new horizons" production plan, designed to develop the creative filmmaking talents of young producers, directors, actors, writers, et al, will be inaugurated with filming of Barbara Tuchman's 1963 Pulitzer Prize non-fiction winner, "The Guns of August."

The company has set arrangements with Nathan Kroll and Lawrence White to create the film, with Kroll directing and White serving as exec producer. U will distribute the feature, which is planned for release Aug. 1, 1964, the 15th anni of World War I as chronicled in Mrs. Tuchman's tome which deals with the events leading up to and including the beginning of the war.

Kroll leaves next week for Paris for location filming and to acquire archive footage from governmental sources. This project is the first of what has been projected as a regular production slate of low-budget pix, to be made by developing film talents, and which will augment Universal's regular schedule of major, higher-budget pix. In addition to augmenting the company's release slate, it is also planned that the "new horizons" films will produce creative personnel who can eventually move into U's larger-scale regular features.

N.Y. FILM THEATRES DIRECTORY UPDATED

The 1963 edition of the New York Directory of Motion Picture Theatres, compiled by the N.Y. Film Board of Trade, has just been sent member-companies. Prepared and edited under the direction of Louis Nizer, attorney and executive sec for the N.Y. Film Board of Trade, it is perhaps the most comprehensive compilation of film theatres in the metropolitan area ever put together.

The new volume, just off the presses, contains in alphabetical order all pix houses in the Met territory, comprising N.Y. City, Long Island, all of New York state south of Kingston as well as New Jersey spots north of the city of Trenton. The telephone number, seating capacity, zone number and the name of the theatre owner are listed.

It also has a list of theatre circuits and drive-ins separately indexed, and with similar information on them.

Outside of member-companies, the directories sell for $20 each.

An Altered Topeka

Topeka, July 16.

First-run situation has shifted here from three houses to two with switch of the Jayhawk Theatre from Fox Midwest (National General) to the Dickinson circuit, which has closed the Dickinson Theatre.

This leaves Fox Midwest operating the Grand Theatre first run and the Orpheum Theatre second run. It formerly operated the Jayhawk first run, as Dickinson is now doing. Don Carver, manager of the Dickinson shifted to the Jayhawk in the change of theatres. Jayhawk is 1,000 seater, Dickinson 850 seats.

On Own Dough, Marc Frederick Scouts Europe For Hollywood Museum

Hollywood, July 16.

The International scope of the Hollywood Museum is increasing rapidly, according to Marc Frederic, the Museum's foreign representative at large. Upon his return last week from an April 23-June 18 European tour on behalf of the Museum's "image" abroad, Frederic reported willingness in all areas, from foreign film museums to press, to cooperate with the forthcoming Hollywood project and "an unusual amount of interest in what the Museums will mean for both cinematic educational purposes as well as a people-to-people program between nations."

Significantly, entire cost of Frederic's trip was his own, including hundreds of Museum brochures which he had translated into French, Spanish, German and Italian as well as press photographs and audio-visual material which he took along. Rep, additionally, is on the Museum staff in Hollywood without salary and devoting almost all of his time to the project.

Frederic, film-television producer and financier, in 1950 was exec producer in assn. with Sherman Harris and the TEE VEE Co. on 104 teledramas tagged "Little Theatre." He also produced a number of films, including "Missile to the Moon" and "The Girl in Room 13." Currently, he is involved in extensive real estate ventures. Harris, until recently, was on the administrative staff of the Museum.

Frederic reported full cooperation from the USIA and the MPAA, agencies which set his entire trip. Embassies were alerted and active in promoting press conferences, radio and television appearances and meetings with important national figures in every area he visited. Ken Clark, veepee of MPAA, set initial contacts along with George Stevens Jr. Pair worked with reps in London, Madrid, Rome, Munich, Bern and Paris.

Frederic said the Museum will continue setting everything through the MPAA and noted reps in every foreign Capital he visited have indicated interest in attending the Museum's groundbreaking, skedded for mid-October, and/or the opening the following year. Additionally, a followup meeting to Frederic's trip is now being planned to involve a conference of reps of each area, along with Museum prexy Sol Lesser abroad following the groundbreaking.

Discussions throughout the trip centered on exchange of artifacts and displays with foreign museums, including a list of displays already requested on exchange basis from the French Cinematique, the oldest film museum in history.

COOLERS NOW ROUTINE

Once Big Comeon In Heat—Now They're Everywhere

Minneapolis, July 16.

Too many people nowadays have air conditioners in their homes and they're too much in evidence elsewhere to suit local exhibs. And this explains why the hottest spell locally for this time of the year in many a moon didn't help the boxoffice here.

Whereas a decade ago air conditioning in the showhouses used to bring localites into the movie houses in droves, regardless of the attractions, it's no longer an important b.o. factor, although it may help a little, it's agreed by Bob Hazleton and Ev Seibel, Mann circuit general manager and Minnesota Amusement Co. (United Paramount chain) advertising and publicity head, respectively.

"This extreme heat—it was 99 last Sunday (30)—isn't showgoing weather any more," says Hazleton. "Folks no longer need to go themselves to the showhouses for relief—that is, not enough of them need'nt."

the world. I try to make bankers look at us as an industry—as good as any other. Sure, it has its ups and downs and every 5-10 years it has to make adjustments, too. G.M. and G.E. come up with programs for progress—why shouldn't we?" (Bronston, it is to be noted, has no stockholders, he is the sole owner, but adds, "Banks and distributors are my 'associates'.") . . . "When a picture is good, what difference does it make where it is made?"

Hollywood

He points out his program is no deterrent to Hollywood production — "After all, there is enough space in Hollywood to make at least 200 pictures a year." Will Bronston make any films in Hollywood? "I'll go there to make a picture if I have a story to be made there—and all the studios know it!"

His present program does not indicate such a move to be probable. Next is "Circus," which Henry Hathaway directs here. "Nightrunners of Bengal" to be helmed by Dick Fleischer, will duplicate India in Madrid. "Blue and the Grey On The Nile," story of U. S. Civil War troops as professional soldiers post-war in Egypt, to be lensed on the sands of Spain (his answer to Palm Springs). Then comes "The French Revolution," on Bronston's new stages; "Paris 1900," to be reined by De Sica on the new Madrid lot. Finally "The Great Cyrus" by Harold Lamb rounds out the program—as of this week!

"There is too much juvenile thinking in the business today," Bronston comments. "Making motion pictures must be flexible. Making motion pictures can be fun, too—if you don't suffer!" He obviously is not suffering. In addition to past boxoffice figures, he now estimates "Peking" will recoup its cost in 11 months instead of the expected three years. The cost, eight million dollars, the expected gross—$30 million . . . And, Bronston notes, "We are still learning about making films. Pictures are not made with facilities, but with ingenuity. Time is our greatest economy here—there is no hysteria, we prepare, plan for two-three years before shooting. Our productions are expensive, sure—but what counts is what is on the screen. And forget about those claims of 'slave labor'—it is a complete fallacy. With our new studio plans, our cost of production can be reduced by the concentration, rather than separation. I have no illusions," he added, "—just dreams."

Bronston office in New York states that the producer's "55 Days at Peking" had a theatre gross of $2,000,000 in its first 150 engagements. Allied Artists is the distributor. Film opens in another 127 houses this week, including saturation bookings in the Philadelphia and Boston areas.

Negroes in Vidfilms

that San Francisco Projectionists Local 162, recently hit with a charge of racial discrimination by the State Fair Employment Practices Commission, has been instructed by IA to "desist with discriminatory practices forthwith," if, as charged, such practice has been found to have been in effect.

Charge was filed by Commissioner C. L. Dellums, a veepee of Brotherhood of Sleeping Car, in Frisco on a complaint by Robert McKnight, a 27-year-old Negro, who claimed his application for membership in local was turned down at same time that three white men were admitted, although his qualifications were at least as good, if not better, than their's.

Walsh, who sesssioned three days with local IA reps during visit on Coast, noted that he was a signatory to an agreement with President John F. Kennedy six months ago, along with 100 other union leaders, which pledged no discrimination would be tolerated within signatory shops.

Exec maintained he has had no beefs from the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People and that the organization has not overtured him on possible huddles regarding alleged discrimination. Asked if he would be willing to meet with org if officials requested, he said, "We have nothing to meet about."

Palefaces Rare In N.M.

Albuquerque, July 16.

Something pretty unusual has been experienced in the planning for the location work on Warners' "A Distant Trumpet" now being shot near Gallup, N. M., about 150 miles west of Albuquerque.

In Gallup (known as the Indian capital of the U. S.) film officials are having no trouble locating plenty of redskins to work as extras in the scenes of cavalry versus Indian. But their big problem has been in finding enough palefaces for extra work.

It all resulted in a hurried call to the student employment director at the U. of New Mexico in Albuquerque, asking for names of students with long hair who could ride.

The university official dispatched the names of 96 collegians who were willing to work in the pic.

Film stars Troy Donohue and Suzanne Pleshette, and shooting is due to start in about a week.

Allied States Striking United Nations Slogans At October Convention

Allied States Assn.'s national convention will theme its proceedings to the United Nations when it convenes at the Americana Hotel, N. Y., Oct. 21-24.

Final cocktail reception and banquet of the conclave, to be hosted by National Carbon Co. and Coca-Cola, will be held Oct. 24, which is United Nations Day. Several foreign dignitaries have been invited to participate in the proceedings, which will have a UN decor via flags and such. Nina Rao Cameron, exec director of the Gotham Consular Corps and UN liaison, is assisting with the arrangements.

Also, on Oct. 23, there will be a luncheon for the ladies in the delegates' dining room of the UN and, following the meal, the group will tour the facilities. This is being coordinated with Maurice Liu, chief of the UN visitors services.

Negro Trainees

working in clerical, talent and other departments. Chief problem is in finding qualified people, a problem having nothing to do with race, a studio spokesman said. Revue-Universal has been training workers under the IBEW program, also in various other categories where they can hire without running into union restrictions.

NAACP, the Urban League and other groups interested in the Negro's welfare are well aware of Revue-Universal efforts to employ and develop Negroes, since their reps have had conversations with the studio and been updated on studio policy.

The real problem is not one of discrimination, but of adequate production, a studio exec asserted, pointing out the number of trainees and others hired is obviously contingent on the amount of production at the pix and vidfilm studio.

As far as the IATSE unions are concerned, the studio has not met with any resistance from IA unions regarding any employment of Negroes, the exec said.

There is no preferential treatment for Negroes, since studio policy is to avoid discrimination of any kind. Some Negro trainees have advanced impressively, some from mailroom workers to important positions. Many new Revue-Universal employes begin in the mailroom, and most are college graduates. Studio policy is to observe each worker's capabilities, and if they are found to have potential, the employes are moved up the ladder as availabilities open up in other areas.

Walt Disney studio has what it calls an off-and-on trainee program, depending on production. This program is in conjunction with the Motion Picture Screen Cartoons IA local 839, and new workers must join the union after 30 days. It's a must here that trainees be graduates of art schools, and animators and cartoonists are developed. Negroes have been included in the program which has no color bar, it was emphasized by Ken Sieling, head of personnel at the Burbank lot. There is no training program for apprentices on now because production doesn't warrant it at the present time.

It's Thirdsies On Washington Festival; Government, Industry, Caterers

Washington, July 16.

Sen. Clair Engle (D-Calif.) and several Los Angeles area U. S. House members have introduced identical bills to set the stage for Washington's proposed 1965 film festival.

The bill would create a nine-member commission with egal authority to receive contributions to finance the festival. Estimated cost of it is figured at $750,000.

Backers want the cost split into thirds, with Uncle Sam paying $250,000, and the U. S. film industry and Washington hotels, restaurants, etc., dividing up the remaining $500,000.

The commission would be composed of two Senators, two House members and five Presidential appointees.

CLAIMS SEVERANCE

29 Years As House Mgr. For John Hurley

Minneapolis, July 16.

A $14,025 severance damage suit has been brought in district court here by John Hurley of Minneapolis against two amusement companies which owned and operated theatres in Albert Lea and St. James, Minn.

Hurley was employed by the companies as a theatre manager and dismissed after 29 years of service. Controlling interest in the two houses recently had been sold by the deceased owner's estate to Lyle Carisch who resides in a local suburb.

The plaintiff alleges he had an agreement with the two defendant companies for $200 a year severance pay along with annual bonuses and vacation pay.

SAG

discussions take, especially in the area of residuals.

Residuals take up a big portion of the commercial film budgets, it's pointed out, and what form the demands in this area will take are a major concern to clients and agencies. Resultantly, these parties have become very cost-conscious of late and production has ebbed considerably, reflecting their attitude.

Commercial men are hopeful about the upcoming talks with SAG. It's remembered that the union was "very understanding" of Coast film production problems in its negotiations some months ago. SAG didn't press for wage increases, for one thing, in light of production being off and other industry difficulties. Local commercial producers are hoping that the union will be as cooperative in dealing with them, noting the various problems attendant on commercial lensing, especially as regards residuals paid to actors.

There's no indication as yet as to how these talks will shape up but as the fall approaches, eastern producers, who make upwards of 75% of the commercial film prepared annually, are noticing a growing slackening in work from agencies and clients. Dickers are expected to begin shortly.

On the feature and vidfilm side, however, the story is much the reverse with production moving nicely with Gotham's sunny summer weather. Robert Rossen's "Lilith" is working on Long Island and Jerry Hellman and George Roy Hill's "World of Henry Orient" is due to begin lensing at Long Island Studios July 29. Some local indies are also filming and several major productions have passed through within the past few months with others expected in later periods.

Vidfilm producers like Herbert Brodkin, David Susskind, George Schaffer and others have projects going locally and Gotham-based Ely Landau and others are keeping the New York scene bubbling. In addition to Michael Myerberg's Long Island Studios, other facilities like Filmways, Gold Medal, Hy Brown and Fox Movietone are all occupied.

Between the six or seven tv pilots in work and the few features coming or working, this end of the film biz is moving nicelt. But commercial filmakers, who number quite a few in New York, are caught in a wait and see attitude on the part of agencies and clients that points the way to a dismal summer indeed.

Horowitz Succeeds Gold

Samuel Horowitz has been appointed chairman of Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' exhibitor services division. He succeeds Mel Gold who recently was elected prez of AMPA.

The division was formed last year to stimulate exhibs and distribs in the use of "showmanship" campaigns to sell pix and create a healthy image for the pix industry. Branch will shortly be busied with AMPA's upcoming "Promote the Theatre" drive. Horowitz is the owner of the Mermaid and Tuxedo Theatres, Brooklyn.

Sweden's 'Angels,' 'Mink' Pace W. German Cinema Biz Forepart of '62-'63

Berlin, July 16.

Local statistics reveal that the surprise Swedish comedy, "Angels —Are There Any?" has been the most screened film within the first 10 months of the 1962-'63 season in this country's most important key cities. A close runnerup in Universal's "A Touch of Mink."

Third is the second part of the German documentary, "Dream of the World." "Longest Day" (20th) is currently found on fourth spot. Then comes United Artists' "West Side Story." Rank's "El Cid" is finishing in sixth place.

The Italo-Franco "Boccaccio '70," Metro's "Mutiny On the Bounty," Germany's "Flying Clipper" and Italy's "Mondo Cane" are in seventh to 10th spots.

Filmblaetter, trade organ disclosed that Constantin has been the most successful distributor in the season's first 10 months. Then come United Artists, Gloria, Bavaria, Metro, Universal, Columbia, Rank, Paramount, Euro-Ring, 20th-Fox and Schorcht.

SUNSET FOR STILLMAN; AFTER 'ARABIA,' FINIS

Cleveland, July 16.

Loew's Stillman, a major downtown house here for nearly 50 years, is being torn down after current hard-ticket run of "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col), now in its 14th stanza.

Deluxe 2,700-capacity house was bought last week by Airport Parking Co., which is replacing it with a 360-car parking garage early next spring. Wreckers start razing work on or about Aug. 7. Lobby of Stillman, which opened in 1916, will be turned into auto entrance of the new seven-tier garage.

Loew's State, a 3,459-seater house, and Loew's Ohio, a 1,020-capacity stand now playing "Cleopatra" (20th-Fox) with a $3.50 top, will continue their first-run policies, it was announced by Arthur Tolchin, assistant to president of Loew's Theatres, Inc.

Spanish Pix

Happens." Luis Berlanga, whose "Placido" was among the nominees last year for the best foreign film Oscar, is rushing completion on "The Executioner." Word of mouth on these two candidates is eloquent. Another contender as Spanish entry at Venice is Cesar Ardavin's "Frontier of God," based on a laureled novel. Spain last made its mark at Venice in '56 when Bardem and Berlanga helped win special mention for the best brace of national entries, even though Bardem's producer had to smuggle a print out of Spain in order to compete.

An award at Cannes would go a long way in support of the new film regime's loosened censor reins and encourage further liberalization. Even if Spanish pix do not score at Venice, it will still be significant that this country has participated with worthy contestants this year at all the major film gatherings.

It's Not Just Baseball, But Beer, Too

Big Guzzle at City-Owned Stadium Noted By Film (And Cafe) Showmen

Minneapolis, July 16.

A break for theatreowners' was a threatened ban on bottled beer sales at Metropolitan Stadium in suburban Bloomington where the Minnesota Twins American League baseball team plays its home games. These hurt the area's film boxoffice along with niteries.

This stoppage of bottled beer sales, along with those of cigarettes, was threatened up to the day before the Twins were starting another home stand (10). The reason was that the selling licenses had expired and the Bloomington city council refused to renew them because the city of Minneapolis, claiming that under state laws it isn't liable, wouldn't pay to Bloomington $160,000 in stadium assessments for utilities and improvements.

However, on the night before the home stand was to begin Calvin Griffith's baseball team itself presented a $24,596.23 check to the council holding a special session. It was the first of the installments which Bloomington is determined to collect from this municipality.

The city of Minneapolis is fighting the assessments in the courts now and if it wins the baseball team is expected to get its $24,596.23 back.

Last season 1,098,646 bottles of beer at 40c each were sold at the Twins' home baseball games—two bottles of beer purchased for every three admissions. The latter ran over 1,400,000. Beer sales this season have been running a little ahead of last so far,the attendance also being ahead.

This area's exhibs and nitery owners figure they're not only being hurt badly by the inroads on their biz that competing big league baseball has made ever since its Twin Cities' arrival season before last. They also feel that concession sales at the baseball park, especially those of beer, have been taking a huge slice out of the amusement spending dollar, leaving increasingly less of it for movies and bistros.

Among theatreowners, in fact, there's almost as much complaining about the Metropolitan Stadium competish as that of television. Same goes for nitery owners.

OZONER AT BARSTOW

Los Angeles, July 16.

Western Amusement Co., which operates a chain of hardtops and drive-ins in California and Oregon, will start construction later in summer of a new 600-car ozoner at Barstow, Cal., where circuit already owns the conventional Barstow Theatre.

Plans also call for latter to be renovated with larger screen, new drapes and carpets.

Los Angeles, July 16.

A Kurosawa Film Festival, comprising works of one of Japan's top directors, Akira Kurosawa, will be held at Toho La Brea Theatre here during August and September.

Lineup includes "Rashomon," "Doomed," "Hidden Fortress," "Yojimbo," "Throne of Blood," "Sanjuro" and "Stray Dog." Latter will be American preem of director's 1949 film.

'Cleo' Heartburns

review of the picture was strongly negative.

Miss Nangle has expressed the opinion to friends that she feels that 20 years of reviewing pictures on the Tribune should have qualified her for "Cleopatra." All of the critics were aware that the notices on the 20th epic would be the best-read of many years, and their carefully-considered reviews (one pan, two essentially affirmative and one rave) reflected the heightened interest in the picture.

Another oddity was an editorial page criticism of Chicago Daily News film reviewer Sam Lesner's all-out rave appraisal of "Cleopatra."

"There is a sort of unwritten reconciliation around newspapers," the editorial states, "which provides that the movie reviewer doesn't prescribe for international boils and this department lets him rule unchallenged on the merits of the cinema. But 'Cleopatra' has come to town, and since it is a kind of international incident, we feel entitled to offer an opinion. It is that never before have so many suffered so much before our eyes and evoked so little sympathy. This is acting? Our Mr. Lesner says we will not see a movie queen to surpass La Taylor in anything. We report in some disappointment that it should be easily possible to find one who will surpass her in nothing (sic). But for optical splendor, we opt it among the sights of a lifetime. We are told that it cost $40,000,000 and, given the choice, we'll take the $40,000,000 but we must concede that one can buy a lot of spectacle for that kind of dough."

Lesner told VARIETY that he wasn't particularly upset by the reappraisal, but that he didn't think that the anonymity of the editorial page was quite cricket for a picture review. "After all, one of the accepted hazards of being a critic is that someone might throw rocks at you," he added.

Poaching in other critical purviews is rarely done on the Chicago papers. However, it has not always been disagreement that prompted the switching into other fields. Both Miss Cassidy and Sun-Times legit critic Glenna Syse stepped out of their bailiwicks to add praise to their paper's motion picture reviewers' applause for "Lawrence of Arabia."

General columnist John Justin Smith of the Daily News (who also took a turn at back-seat reviewing to rap "Cleopatra") mounted an in-print campaign on behalf of the stage production of "The Miracle Worker" after it was rapped by Sydney J. Harris, legit critic for the same paper. On the other hand, WGN-TV got the cold shoulder from the theatre critics when it asked them to review "Play of the Week."

TALKS ON TO REPLACE BURNT-OUT RIVIERA

Knoxville, Tenn., July 16.

Negotiations are continuing with property owners and officers of the Riviera Theatre Corp. for reconstruction of the main street house destroyed by fire. Only a shell remains of the structure, which suffered $265,000 in damages.

The marquee remains with little notice of the extensive damage within. On the marque appears a message "We are Down-But Not Whipped." Another sign on the theatre expresses thanks to the patrons, the Knoxville Fire and Police departments for their quick action in containing the huge downtown fire.

Three owners of the Gay Street property are involved in the deal which is being negotiated by Hugh Rainey, Knoxville manager of Simpson Operating Co. of Atlanta. Rainey says it will be at least three weeks before future plans for the Riviera will be finalized. It was the oldest downtown theatre.

Danish 'Weekend' Hits Censor Snag in France But Producer Appeals

Paris, July 16.

Danish filmmakers are not only having censor troubles in the U.S. with the artful but frank look at sex in "A Stranger Knocks," but also here where sex is supposed to be the freest in the world in film themes. French censors nixed a special press showing of "Weekend," a Danish pic which won a top film award, the Bodil.

The French festival selection committee refused the pic for the recent Cannes Film Fest and then also pulled the curtain on producer Bent Christensen's desire to show it to the local press. Film also was not accepted by the Berlin Film Fest and was allowed one showing at a Danish Film Week in Poland but not authorized for commercial distribution.

Christensen expressed surprise that France, with its Brigitte Bardot pix, "Les Liaisons Dangeureuses" and "The Lovers," should suddenly get prudish about his film. Directed by Palle Kjoerulff-Schmidt pic shows the usual maladjusted adolescents and teenagers who have tried to make their peace with life. They are now in their 30s and the film deals with those who have evolved outlets via weekend parties that are orgiastic, frank or just escape mediums.

It's felt here that blue pencil troubles stem from the fact that people are in their 30's and thus do not have the quality of possibly changing which juve delinquent films have. Or it may be that two of the most depraved characters are teachers or that it is the young who look on these activities with disapproval. Christensen intends fighting the bans.

Incidentally, President De Gaulle's governmental policy insistence on promoting so-called French grandeur is also leading to censor cuts on local pix. For example, "Les Jeunes Eilles Des Bonnes Familles" (Girls of Good Families), about shenanigans among the gilded rich youth of today, has been forced to make many cuts, and change its title to "Les Saintes Nitouches" (roughly meaning "The Seeming Innocents"). All this to seemingly avoid impugning the "good families" and show French youth in a different light.

Adds An Extra Toot

The Sam Katzman production at Metro had been called "Hootenanny."

Inspiration set in. It's now titled "Hootenanny Hoot."

Race to Film Race Issues

for Walter Reade-Sterling to partner in the production.

Reade-Sterling also owns the film rights to the 1956 Off-Broadway play, "Me Candido," a comedy which details the adventures of a homeless Puerto Rican lad in East Harlem. Race problem is here, if only by implication. A film version has been scheduled several times in the past, but may well be on again in the near future.

Another disclosed project is Sandy Howard's feature length doeumentary, "Heaven of The Black Muslims." Howard, who has just completed his first feature, "Diary of A Bachelor," reported in New York Friday (12) that he had had to scrap his first outline on "Heaven" (because "the headlines were outrunning me") but expects to have the project rolling again in a month or two. Picture will detail the causes and effects of racial discrimination around the world.

English Vs Africans

A fourth projected "race" pic (though producer-director Fielder Cook would not label it such) is Cook's planned film adaptation of the British adventure yarn, "The Long Winter." Story, laid sometime in the not-too-distant future, tells what happens when a new Ice Age descends upon Europe and causes the position of dominating white Englishman to be reversed with that of the "subjugated, backward" African. It makes a direct, scathing comment on contemporary Negro-white relations.

Also on the planning board is an indie production of "Nothing But A Man," a contemporary love story whose principals happen to be Negro. Package is being put together by the production team of Robert Young and Mike Romer.

The sixth upcoming project is "Strange Victory," an updated version of the 1948 documentary which dealt with the problems of a number of minority groups. Picture has been acquired by David Fine of Victory Films (a subsidiary of the Cameo Theatre in New York), who plans to add new footage placing the emphasis on the current Negro fight for equality. Alfred Drake, Gary Merrill and Muriel Smith are among the narrators. New version is expected to be ready in the fall.

Of Negro Authorship

Already completed and awaiting release are the film version of "Purlie Victorious," Ossie Davis' satirical drama about black-white relations, and Shirley Clarke's film adaptation of the Broadway play, "The Cool World," which deals with Harlem slum-gang life. Both films are New York indie efforts. "Purlie" is unique in that it's the only one of the current crop of pix written by a Negro. Rounding out the completed-but-unreleased list is the Danish import, "World of Strangers," filmed secretly in South Africa and based on a Nadine Gordimer novel.

(For its theatrical release, the title of "Purlie" is being changed to "Gone Are The Days.")

No informed industrite is about the predict the b.o. chances of these various projects, considering the spotty success of recent pix which have tried to deal squarely and sincerely with race themes.

A distinct disappointment was Stanley Kramer's recent "Pressure Point," costarring Sidney Poitier and Bobby Darin. Roger Corman's hard-hitting "Intruder," which had a white supremecist bigot as its protagonist, was a quick flop as a prestige release (it's now getting exploitation handling).

(It's a hard fact of film life that the race pix which have been most successful at the boxoffice have been out-and-out exploitation dramas of rather dubious artistic and social import—the Texas indie-made "Free, White and 21," and the French import, "I Spit on Your Grave.")

Commented one of the producers currently prepping a race pic: "We are budgeting our picture so that, if necessary, we can recoup our costs in just the Negro market, even while aiming at as broad a market as possible."

Ironically, however, as the equal rights fight must continue to succeed, that very hard core "Negro market" must continue to diminish. Thus, to succeed, these projected films must appeal to the new, "desegregated market."

273G Budget

part of various actors to essay the role.

The timely pic will follow closely the "Black Like Me" book, also making use of Griffin's personal diary of the trip. Paul Green, legit and screen writer, has scripted the venture. It will be lensed with actors playing all speaking roles but will use local townsfolk in non-speaking parts. Much of the film's background action will be lensed in documentary style in an attempt to capture the nuances of the racial situation as it is lived daily in rural as well as cosmopolitan communities. No attempt will be made, however to deviate from the locales in the book (mentioned under false names in the tome) to, say, incorporate current hot spots.

No studio work will be included in the footage, all exteriors and interiors to be filmed according to actual landscape situations. Several weeks have been spent by Tannenbaum and Lerner scouting appropriate locales for the filming. So far no problems have developed with local authorities over the project, but then the cameras haven't rolled yet. Between six and seven weeks of shooting are planned on the project with the projected release figured by Weingarten as being around December or January. Producer Tannenbaum will also direct photography.

As far as the actor who will play the pivotal role, Continental has expressed the opinion that he should not be a big b.o. name because this might detract from the impact of the film. Negotiations are presently being concluded with a couple of thesps who are known more for their character acting abilities than their pure star power. The idea in making the film, Weingarten said, is not to preach, although there will obviously be a message derived from it by the viewer, but more to demonstrate, as in Griffin's book, the indignities and discomfort experienced by the southern Negro in his daily life, sans sensationalism.

270 Hardtops Shuttered in Brit. Last Yr., Cinema Patronage Off 13%

London, July 16.

During the year ended last March 31, 1963, it is estimated that some 270 hardtops closed in the UK. compared with about 350 shutterings in the previous year. Boxoffice admissions during the first quarter this year are estimated at 99,000,000 or 13% less than for the same period last year. Figure compares with a fall of about 12% for 1962 as a whole and approximately 10% in 1961.

Statistics are revealed in the 25th annual report of the Cinematograph Films Council. Document also reports a "slight fall" in film production during the period.

Council reports that it has accepted the principle that coproduction deals "should not militate against the production of national films." Board of Trade has been asked to bear in mind, when negotiating formal agreements, suggestions made by union reps about the employment of a third of the country's nationals and the equilibrium of participation.

It is suggested that benefits of levy and state aid payments should be restricted to the producer of the country granting such benefit. However, the Council felt unable to offer any advice on the suggestion for a minimum budget for coproduced films.

After considering a suggestion for the introduction of two levels of quota, an increase for theatres taking two main releases with corresponding reduction for those theatres dependent on the third release, the CFC concluded there was no real justification for an increase in quota especially in view of the shortage of product.

Report retraced steps over such other subjects as the inquiry into the structure of the film biz here, the application of an increased levy on newsreels and a levy on tv exposure on films, which was thumbed down.

Guilds' Selection System For Festivals Working Well, Thinks Zinneman

Pau, France, July 9.

Fred Zinneman, shooting his latest pic "Behold the Pale Horse" (Col) in the Southern French town of Pau, had some words about the U.S. Film Festivals' Selection Committee which he heads. He thinks Hollywood thinking is swinging around to trying to put its best foot forward at fests instead of treating them as necessary evils as of yore.

The system of having Hollywood Guild members pick the films, instead of the desultory rotating system previously, has shown itself effective since its inception last year. If the majors were not too cooperative at the beginning they seem more so of late, says he.

Last year the first film chosen via the Guilds, "Long Day's Journey Into Night," was a non-Hollywood indie but drew no squawks from major reps. It won awards and proved a good prestige item for American films in general. It has yet to bt released abroad.

The idea that France and Italy play footsies at their respective Cannes and Venice Fests, and give themselves the awards, is also beginning to expire if some die-hard Yanks still look askance at all or any fests. For example the Selection Committee wanted to send "Hud" (Par) to a fest but Paramount demurred.

However Zinneman avers that majors are begining to submit their films and two members of the Motion Picture Producer Assn., with one vote, are also now on the Committee to give the producers a voice. He thinks that it is now settling down into a group that will have access to the leading films with full major cooperation and the indies are also interested in getting their worthwhile films festival airings.

The Committee accepts all films, no matter where they are made in the U.S., for consideration for fest entries. Zinneman feels that only in this way can a true face of the American film be presented at all fests. Most fests have realized this and created sections for promising first and independent films which help along the Committee by making more places for unusual American films from all centres of filmaking.

90% of British Cinemas Filled Their Quotas

London, July 16.

Notwithstanding a slight dropoff in the screening of British product, of the 2,000-odd native theatres paged by the Board of Trade, 92% achieved or exceeded their quotas for first features during 1962. This is against 95% in the previous year. Some 97% gained their supporting program (second features, shorts, etc.) quotas against 98% a year earlier.

According to the BOT, the majority of those theatres which failed to achieve their quota did so by only a small margin. And in many cases, this reflected the fact that their competitors had shown more than the prescribed quota of local pix.

Average proportion of British films exhibited at all theatres for first feature films and for supporting programs was 36.6% first features and 44.1% for supporting programs. Standard quotas are 31% for No. 1 pix and 25% for films on supporting program.

Italo Summer Film B.O. Way Off as Usual

Rome, July 9.

The summer season always is a disastrous boxoffice one in Italy, and this year is no exception. Latest figures show key cities firstrun totals to have dropped to some $320,000 for a week, less than half the normal fall-winter-spring average.

Several firstruns here have shuttered for a month to several weeks. The remainder are screening reissues and assorted also-rans which were unable to make the grade when the stronger fare was around. Only a few top-ranking items are still around, the others having been yanked until the fall season starts in September.

One exception is "How the West Was Won" (MGM) which still is playing its first Milan run at the Manzoni while Titanus' "The Leopard" is still doing okay in its initial Rome situation, the Barberini.

Top Rome gross for the week was racked up by the reissue of "Mister Roberts" (WB). Other oldies captured the best coin—such as it was—in Turin, Genoa, Bologna and Florence.

While waiting for the weather to cool and people to come back from vacations, Italo exhibs are also resorting to film "series" or "weeks," dedicated to certain directors or genres, notably crime and detective pix.

Strong Plea for Early Okay of Self-Financing In Italo Pix Industry

Rome, July 9.

Another strong plea for a rapid approval of a self-finance scheme for the Italian film industry has been entered by Italy's official exhibitor weekly, Giornale dello Spettacolo, in a recent editorial. Theatreowners' paper ironically comments on the fact that while Italy was collecting its third major film festival laurel of the year at Berlin, film producers at home were asking the newly-appointed Minister for Finance, Colombo, to intervene and ask local credit sources to loosen their recently tightened reins on film finance coin.

In stating flatly that de-taxation of cinema admissions will not alone suffice to alleviate the current credit crisis, this weekly sets forth its argument in favor of a self-finance scheme based on a slice of boxoffice returns, as in force, for certain European countries.

Exhib weekly also asks that the Italian film industry be placed on an equal-fiscal footing with other industrial production sectors.

Plan 1964 Vienna Fest

Vienna, July 16.

The 1964 Vienna festival weeks will carry out the motto, "Dawn of Our Century—Art and Culture at the Turn of the Century." The 100th birthday anni. of Richard Strauss will be the special event. "Daphne" will be staged in the Theatre an Der Wien under the direction of Rudolf Hartmann.

Leopold Lindtberg will produce the world preem of "Mankind's Last Days," by Karl Kraus. Legit program will include works by Maurice Maeterlinck, August Stindberg, Maxim Gorki, Frank Wedekind and others.

Start Churchill Film in London

London, July 16.

Without a cent being sought from industry sources, producer Jack Le Vien, who today (Tues.) started production here on his $400,000 feature film dealing with the life of Sir Winston Churchill, maintains that the project has been over subscribed three times by people outside the film business. And while it has taken two years to research and set up the production, the financial side was wrapped up within six weeks, he claims.

The pic, skedded for release early in 1964, however, has no distributor at this point. According to Le Vien, he is prepared to lay off settling a distrib until the untitled film is finished. He expects to firm up on a director and the length (undoubtedly in excess of 90 minutes) within the next few weeks. Problem of settling Churchill's "voice" does not become imminent until about October, he says.

Le Vien states that one reason for his easy financial passage so far is that the success of the tele series has underlined the boxoffice potential of Churchill. He stresses that the film will differ from the tv programs inasmuch as it will deal with "Churchill, the man," while the tele pic was about the last World War through Churchill's eyes, and thus way only part of the whole Churchill story.

It is estimated that historic footage will account for about one-third of the production while the remainder will be reconstructed and acted out. It would be shot on actual locations. No one will play Churchill, however. His role will be partly covered by the "subjective camera," actual film and the voice over.

One point that has pleased Le Vien about this project more than anything is that while the British statesman had rights of approval on the tv series, he has elected not to take them on the pic. This move is construed by the producer as a vote of confidence.

Fellini Wins Italian Crix Award for '8½'

Rome, July 16.

A jury of Italian film crix this week has voted Federico Fellini's "8½" its first award, for the best direction of the year. Fellini received the gold cup at Saint Vincent, North Italian resort center, which annually sponsors the contest.

Goffredo Lombardo won in the production category with this year's work, including "The Leopard"; Venice winner, "A Family Chronicle" and the Italian Oscar contender, "Four Days of Naples."

Acting prizes went to Silvana Mangano for "Verona Trial" and to Romolo Valli for "Leopard." "A Man to Burn" won its three directors Valentino Orsini, Paolo Taviani and Vittorio Taviani a Saint Vincent prize for best new effort of year.

New Italian Exhib-Distrib Accord Seems Near Despite Formulation Of Exhib Cartels in Some Italo Keys

Rome, July 9.

There is increased film industry feeling here that a new exhib-distrib accord may be in the offing, and that two sectors will resume formal contacts, interrupted a couple of years ago after pact talks reached a stalemate. Prelim talks in this direction have been held here recently by distrib, exhib and ANICA officials. Both sides appear favorably disposed towards a resumption of talks while ANEC, the exhib group, has sent its distrib opposite a note reaffirming the necessity of resuming normal contacts.

ANEC note also deplored the fact that the lack of a pact linking theatreowners and distributors could result in "unilateral" measures on the part of one or another. The only way to avoid this, this note adds, is to resume regular "discipline," especially in view of possible negative influence—for all—on the coming season.

Exhib-distrib relations have become more and more strained in recent months also because of reported formation of theatre cartels in some Italian centers. One local source speaks of such a group having been formed in Bologna, where exhibs have agreed to stick to a 50% rental top, with only four pix excepted: "Cleopatra" (20th), "The Leopard" (Titanus), "55 Days at Peking" (Bronston-Rank), and "Lawrence of Arabia" (Col). These would go at 60% plus 5% publicity expenses. In addition, a five million Lire ($8,000) bond is said to have been posted by each exhib forming the above against possible violations of pact.

Must Pass Exhib Group

Other pix may be given an "exceptional" okay, but only after submission to a special exhib group set up for that purpose. Holdover figures and other special conditions, the observer reports, also would have been contemplated in the purported Bologna cartel, which is said to have caused considerable debate in industry circles recently.

Part of the above-mentioned ANEC note to distribs would seem to imply a defense of such exhib action when it says, without specifically mentioning Bologna or other touchy areas, that exhibs "have no other alternative" but to "voluntarily limit internal competition, thus tending to contain the phenomenon (of exceptional conditions) within more reasonable and equal proportions."

In short, the reported attempts to work towards new exhib-distrib legislation would be designed to seek a compromise between distrib hard-line rental terms and exhib pools formed "in defense" against the distribs' incursions.

Position of Yank companies in the above hassle—and its possible resolution—still appears unclear. Per the grapevine, there still seems to be a difference of opinion among company reps on the various phases of the fracas, as well as on possible moves towards a solution. Some in fact would be in favor of a conciliatory move 100%. Others would be hesitant in part while others again contrary.

Partial Thaw of Italo Film Finance Setup

Rome, July 16.

Partial thaw in the local film finance situation, which had seen many Rome producers beefing because of the bank freeze on pic production coin, was announced here this week.

Film Credit Section of Rome's Banca del Lavoro disclosed it had voted to give financial aid to 20 different Italo production companies towards the making of 23 feature films. Total coin involved in this grant is $3,200,000 with approximately one third coming from the Banca del Lavoro's special film aid fund.

French New Wave Prod. Planning 6-Episode Pic

Paris, July 16.

French producer Georges De Beauregard, one of those who took a chance on the now defunct New Wave, and scored via Jean-Luc Godard's "Breathless," is a bit nostalgic for Wave days and prepping a pic with young beginners whom he chose through a script contest.

De Beauregard admits the Wave is spent, but he still thinks filmmaking needs new blood here. The Wave gave cheap pix and unveiled new talents and moneymakers. Now he feels a few thousand dollars are worth risking if only one viable talent is unearthed. De Beauregard has chosen six episodes from the many submitted and will bundle them into a pic called, "Le Baiser" (The Kiss). Subject was a kiss, natch, and of 40 would be filmmakers, six were picked.

De Beauregard will give each aspirant $13,000 to make his seg and most will use little known or non-actors. Their wages also will come out of that. They will also benefit if the pic makes money.

De Beauregard thinks that the $75,000 to $80,000 the pic cost will be worth it and there may be enough specialized marts to keep it from ending up in the red. If the film should be a moneymaker, and reveal new hopefuls, so much the better. Pic begins this week and some of the directors, who range from 22 to 30 years in age, have had some film experience, others are just buffs.

One of them, Bertrand Tavernier, has been De Beauregard's press rep for over a year. He starts with "The Judas Kiss."

Charles Bitsch, 27, was a cameraman on some Wave pix and will do "Dear Kiss." It's about a man who preys on country girls coming to Paris but is outwitted by one femme who turns out to be pickpocket.

Actor Claude Berri, 26, will do "Kisses of 16-Year-Olds," concerning three young boys who try to lure a pretty femme tourist to an empty apartment. Another thesp, Maurice Pialat, lenses "First Kiss," dealing with an unwed mother's initial kiss. Jean-Francois Hauduroy and Bernard Toublanc, who have made shorts, will do one about a young girl's affairs with a Martian.

Cameraman Raoul Coutard, a leading cinematographer here, will film all segments.

Curb Non-Pro Spots Showing Pix

Madrid, July 16.

"Give thanks for small favors" is film exhibitor reaction to government edict banning public sale of tickets at windows of film clubs, parochial halls and all other non-commercial hardtops. Complaints from theatremen that over 2,000 non-pro film houses have mushroomed into existence to compete for the film-goer peseta finally brought relief action.

Non-commercial situations flourished via public (non-organizational) sale of tickets. Government move now makes it mandatory that spectators hold membership cards in the private film group to qualify for admission.

N. Scotland Film Houses Losing Fight Vs. Bingo; Some Stop Screenings

Aberdeen, Scot., July 16.

Cinemas in northern Scotland are losing out in the battle against bingo as the gambling instinct continues to hit canny Scots.

The Regal Cinema, Peterhead, has stopped showing films and is now catering only for bingo players. Owners have decided that, because of the bingo craze, only one cinema is sufficient for the present film demand in the town. The owners, J. B. Milne, Dundee, also operate the local Playhouse. By concentrating on the single house, they hope to show more selective films.

The Milne group is also carrying out similar changes at key towns such as Banff, Macduff and Montrose. Another northern Scot town, Invergordon, has given the okay to Caledonian Associated Cinemas to run bingo sessions in the Town Hall.

At Last, Co-Prod. Activity Looms In Britain But Pacts No Nearer

London, July 16.

There are signs at last of activity on the coproduction front, but actual inking of treaties between Britain and other European countries still seems to be some way off.

In the last week, the Anglo-Italian economic mission, meeting in Rome, had the subject of coproduction on its agenda. And it was agreed to refer the matter to a sub-committee for further consideration. It is anticipated in London that this committee will start full negotiations after the summer vacation, and reports should go to the two governments some time in the late fall.

The full mission is scheduled to meet here next November, but it is hoped that the film talks will have been completed ahead of that time.

The Rome development, though delayed, is still ahead of the Anglo-French negotiations. Political and economic experts in London do not anticipate any further progress on these talks until the summer recess is over. A full agreement is hoped for, but is by no means a certainty.

Although there are these prospects of treaties with France and Italy, there is virtually no hope of a pact with Western Germany. The unions in the film industry, which have delayed the European talks, appear to be dead set against any deal with the Germans for the time being, at any rate.

9th Athens Fest Preems July 25

Athens, July 9.

The Athens Festival is opening for its ninth consecutive year running from July 25 to Sept. 20. This festival is sponsored by the State, the main object being to present the best local and international talent in performances worthy of this city where art had its cradle and attract as many tourists as possible. For this reason the committee organizing the program invites the top talents of the world so that the Athens Fest will be a unique display of the Greek and foreign Art.

All presentations of the festival will be in the ancient theatre of Herodus of Attica on the slopes of the Acropolis of Athens. It is a unique background with a seating capacity of 5,000. Those sitting in the upper rows are able to hear as well as those down front and watch a show under the stars in the pleasant Athenian summer nights.

The program this year includes:

1. Three concerts by the Zurich Orch of Chamber Music, batoned by Edmond de Stutch.

2. Two performances of Gallic classics by the Group of Marcel tassancour.

3. A group of famous ballet dancers including Margot Fonteyn, Rudolphe Nureyev, David Blair and Annette Page will present three chorodramas on Aug. 9, 10 and 11.

4. The Frankfurt Opera's Orch will present "Salome" and "Electra," starring Maria Cuba and Inge Borkh.

5. The "Ballets of Twentieth Century" of Maurice Besar will present two chorodramas by the end of August accompanied by the Radio Orch of Berlin conducted by Wolfgang Sawallisch. This orch will give two more concerts also with pianist Gina Bahauer and Grace Babry as soloists.

6. The Vienna Philharmonic will give four concerts conducted by Herbert von Karayan and Aviatoslav Richter. Sviatoslav Richter will give a recital also and perform as soloist with the Athens State Orch and the Philharmonic of Vienna.

Besides these longhair foreign talent the Athens State Orch will give four concerts with local and foreign talent as soloists.

The National Theatre of Greece will open the Festival with "Vacche," by Evripides, with Katina Paxinou in the lead. Three other classics are on the program this year, "Electro" by Euripides with Anna Synodinou and Thanos Kotsopoulos; "The Wasps" by Aristophanes and the "Sacrifice of Abraham," with Katina Paxinou and Alexis Minotis.

'VIP's' to Open Daydate In 750 Key Cities

Berlin, July 9.

On his trip around the world to arrange for the simultaneous release of Metro's "The VIP's" in more than 750 cities, Seymour Mayer, vice president of MGM, was in Berlin this week. In all, 40 German cinemas will join in the mass release on Sept. 19. Total number of cinemas around the world which simultaneously will preem "The VIP's" totals about 2,000, according to the Metro exec. It's said to be the biggest mass release ever in film history.

Berlin's MGM Theatre is one of Metro's three (Hamburg's Waterloo and Frankfurt's MGM are the other two) own cinemas in Germany. In all, Metro has 57 cinemas outside the U.S. "The VIP's" will be called "Hotel International" in Germany. It has already been dubbed into German. Mayers went from Berlin to Stockholm and then to Copenhagen. He will return via Tokyo and Manila to New York.

Elliman Bows Out Of Odeon Setup

Dublin, July 9.

Louis Elliman, managing director of Odeon (Ireland) Ltd., Rank setup here, has bowed out on medical advice. He continues as a member of the board of which Rank prexy John Davis is chairman. Elliman, a former film salesman, moved into exhibition with his father late Maurice Elliman who sold his cinema circuit to Rank in 1945 on a deal which retained Maurice as chairman and Louis as managing director.

Rank's Irish interests include two firstruns in Dublin, first-runs in Cork and Limerick, several nabe houses, a hotel in Dublin and another building in Cork, plus an office block development now under building on the site of the former Theatre Royal and Regal Cinema.

Paid Off Major Portion Of Govt. Loan, British Lion Still Has Profit

London, July 16.

British Lion Films group, which paid off $1,654,800 of its $1,680,000 government loan this year, reported a consolidated profit for the year ended last March 31 of $1,312,948 (before tax) which compares with $1,284,729 for the previous year. Tax for the year amounted to $422,030. A 6% dividend, payable to the National Film Finance Corp., has been recommended for the second year running.

Reorganization of capital structure has taken place subsequent to the repayment of the government loan. Balance of the issued Preferred Shares amounting to $25,200, the issued Deferred Shares of $25,200 and the unissued capital of $1,094,800 were converted into Ordinary Shares and the capital of the company was increased to $2,800,000 by creation of 591,000 Ordinary Shares of $2.80 each. Issued capital of $50,400 was then increased to $1,680,000.

But despite the company's good results this year, Chairman and managing director David Kingsley, in his report, gloomily indicates the continuing closure of independent cinemas has increased the dominance of the major circuits and reduced even further competition in the marketing of individual films. This, of course is a matter of concern to indie producers.

"Furthermore," says Kingsley, "there is no shortage of films for circuit release and a number of British independently-made films are having to wait an excessive time for a release date on one of the two major circuits." He pointed out that some films completed early this year are unlikely to secure a showing until well into 1964.

LEFTIST ROME DAILY RAPS FOREIGN THESPS

Rome, July 16.

Another violent attack on foreign thesps working in Italian films has been launched here by the leftwing Rome daily Paese Sera. Article credits talent agencies—most of them American—with the widescale use of foreign thesps in Italo films, adding that these talentries achieve this success by selling the idea, which the paper terms "crazy," that foreign names mean bigger foreign sales for pix.

While Italian actors of proven worth, Paese Sera continues, languish without work, "unknown" American, French and other performing, recruited by the above agencies, are peddled to Italo filmmakers.

In hitting out against a favorite target — Yank agents — piece suggests an "efficient" Italian Actors Union as a possibly effective countermeasure.

U. S. Film Season At Paris Museum

Paris, July 16.

The French Film Museum, the Cinematheque Francaise, is now in the midst of an American Film Season that will run until October. About 200 films, from their beginnings in the U.S., 1893 to 1961, will be shown. Screenings at the old and new Museum houses are drawing solidly.

It again underlines the constant interest in American pix. In fact, the early Charles Pathe handling here of Edison's Kinetescope, Georges Melies' Star Films in Gotham, Maurice Tourneur's influence on early Yank filmmakers like Clarence Brown and Thomas Ince and the profound effect of D. W. Griffith on French and the world cinema are brought out by the films now unspooling.

Most pix came from the George Eastman House in Rochester with some aid from the British Film Institute and the Yank majors. Since the last World War, the Museum U.S. film showings have aided budding new audiences via the big student attendance and the sending of Yank pix to Film Clubs and special school showings.

Freshness of U.S. Films

An illustrated booklet on the current season, called "Initiation Au Cinema Americain," has been prepared by the Museum with a perceptive forward by curator Henry Langlois. Langlois points out that the main aspect of the eternal freshness and appeal of the American film is in its perpetual movement, feel for outdoors and big spaces.

Series is not chronological in programming but begins with "Fatima's Belly Dance" and then "Execution of Mary Queen of Scots". Then come American Mutoscope and Biograph pix, newsreels and the first story pic by Edwin S. Porter "The Great Train Robbery," followed by D. W. Griffith from his short pix to his "Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

The Early DeMille Pix

The Mack Sennetts, the Theda Bara vamp pix and the early Cecil B. DeMille films are also there as well as Pearl White's "Perils of Pauline," William S. Hart pix and then into the great silent era from 1916 to the talkies in 1929. The silents have Erich Von Stroheim, King Vidor, Frank Borzage, Fred Niblo, Buster Keaton, Harold Lloyd and others well repped while a special pre-Yank season homage to Charles Chaplin had most of his pix screened.

The talking films start with King Vidor's "Hallelujah" (MGM) and then "Little Caesar" (WB), "Cimarron," "Her Man," "Anna Christie," "All Quiet on Western Front," "Dracula" and "Grand Hotel."

Frank Capra's comedies, Ernst Lubitsch, Frank Borzage's dramas followed by William Wyler, Henry King, Henry Hathaway, George Cukor, Edmund Goulding, Leo McCarey, Josef Von Sternberg, King Vidor, Charles Vidor, De Mille, John Cromwell, the Marx Bros., Mae West, W. C. Fields and many others pass in review.

This looms as an important look-see at a cross-section of the American film from its beginnings to recent days. Its popularity makes this also an important bridge to the new and commercial pix.

TV'S NEW BATCH OF STARS

Newton Minow Revisited

Chicago, July 17.

It was his first day at his new job as general counsel for Encyclopedia Brittanica, but Newton Minow hadn't, in spirit, left his old job yet. By a coincidence he found himself seated next to a VARIETY reporter at a Michigan Ave. short order joint last Monday (8), and his reflections on his two and a half years as FCC chairman went something like this:

—"We were starting to get repetitious on the Commission, going over the same old ground, and I began to realize that I had done about as much as I could do as chairman. That's when I decided it was time for me to leave. I think that one of the problems with bureaucrats in Washington is that they stay there too long, and they start worrying about hanging on to their jobs, and that becomes more important than the work itself."

—"The networks could have done a better job of arguing their case. Instead of crying censorship and government regulation, they might have explained calmly that good creative talent is limited and that there are limits to how much you can tax such talent. They should have said, 'If we can come up with two hours a week of distinguished work that should redeem all the rest. How much more can you ask for?' That argument would have been understood."

—"For all their protestations about Government interference with free enterprise, when a number of television executives were sampled just in conversation with the question, 'Which would you prefer, more government regulation or more competition?'—only one had strong enough convictions to say, 'more competition.'"

—"I would still like to see the networks use UHF to rerun their schedules for the people that missed it the first time. But of course that doesn't meet with network economics; they'd only be going into competition with themselves. Maybe some day a UHF operator will test it in the courts."

—"When word got out that I was leaving the FCC, you know where the bulk of my mail came from? From religious groups in Chicago. They wrote that they have never been given better treatment by the stations than since those public hearings that were held here. They were grateful, and I felt gratified."

—"My new boss, Mitch (Maurice B. Mitchell, prexy of Encyclopaedia Britannica), was once with the NAB and they still use the sales approach he established. They call it 'Mitch's Pitch.' You know, he'd probably have made a better FCC chairman than I was."

—"Just before I left the Commission I re-read that first speech I made. I can't understand all the shouting. I still think it was a conciliatory speech."

Fielder Cook Laments Tape Dramas' U.S. Demise vs. Britain's 300 Hours

Producer-director Fielder Cook is back from England a thoroughly brainwashed Anglophile when it comes to tv dramatic production.

Partnered with Franklin Schaffner in Producers Co., Cook went to England to make the final vidtape hour drama for the NBC-TV-DuPont "Show of the Week" titled, "To Bury Caesar," a meller about infidelity and double-dealing in English political life (aired July 7 here). Show was a coproduction with Associated Rediffusion, British commercial programmer, which will present the show in England this fall. Production tab was split with the English taking below-the-line costs and the Americans taking the above—talent script, direction etc. Production divvy allowed him to bring the show in at 45% of the cost of a similar U. S. production (British script tab was comparable and talent costs were 20% above domestic, but only because of the double fee for U. S. and English airing). And Cook considers "Caesar" the best in production quality of all DuPont dramas last season.

English producers, says Cook, have developed vidtaped dramatic Britannica TV Buy Minow-Inspired?

Could it be that former FCC chairman Newton Minow has something to do with this putting of money where his mouth was in the "wasteland" speech days?

Encyclopedia Britannica, where Minow is now a chief mouthpiece, has negotiated its first buy of network television. The show: NBC-TV's kidvid hour, "Exploring" (coming back in the fall on Saturdays from 12:30 to 1:30), one of network shows originally inspired by Minow's call for an upgrading of moppet video.

Encyclopedia Britannica is in for half in the interest of its kid line of books. As an added dramatic touch to the negotiations, deal has been handled by Sylvester "Pat" Weaver, former NBC president now media chief of McCann-Erickson.

Monash's New Ticket

Hollywood, July 16.

Paul Monash, exec producer in charge of dramatic shows for 20th-Fox TV, has had his pact picked up for another year by production chief Bill Self.

Monash is developing "Peyton Place" as a co-production with ABC-TV, is also working on two other series.

ABC Banking On Benkoil to Ad Lib Liston-Patterson

The tensest man at Las Vegas' Convention Hall when Sonny Liston and Floyd Patterson square off for their championship bout next Monday night (22) will probably be Maury Benkoil. He's the producer for ABC Radio's coverage of the fight who has a terrifying memory of Liston's first-round kayo of Patterson in their first encounter, also covered by ABC Radio.

Although theoretically prepared for any eventuality, Benkoil was as appalled as Patterson by the brevity of the first bout and had to spring into lightning action to fill out the 40 or so minutes needed to honor the web's commercial commitments. This time, Benkoil is also emotionally prepared for a possible early end to the fight, buttressed about a half-dozen alternate scenarios to supplement the number of rounds that the fight will go.

If the fight goes a full seven rounds, then ABC Radio is in the clear with respect to the commercial positions bought by Mennen, Wynn Oil and Pontiac Motors. If it goes less than seven rounds, Benkoil is geared to fill the time with in-ring and dressing-room interviews and a replay of the knockout round. If the fight goes more than seven rounds, the

FRESH TALENT VS. '9 LIVES OF CBS'

By GEORGE ROSEN

For some time now there's been increasing concern as to where television's new stars are coming from. Invariably the refrain goes like this: "Show biz can no longer look to vaudeville, niteries or burlesk as the incubating ground for the tv personalities of tomorrow." And counterpointing the lament is the realization that sooner or later, on law of averages, it'll be the end of the line for the Sid Caesers, the Red Skeltons, the Danny Kayes, the Jackie Gleasons, the Lucille Balls, the Jack Bennys, the Danny Thomases, the Phil Silvers, the Andy Griffiths and the Garry Moores.

Yet oddly enough, it's tv itself that is already in process of nurturing tomorrow's top personalities. Just as the past couple of seasons brought forth undisputed candidates for the bigtime, as for example a Vince Edwards ("Ben Casey") and a Dick Chamberlain ("Dr. Kildare"), the upcoming '63-'64 semester will be watched most intently toward sizing up the potentialities of all the young leads that will dominate the schedules.

In the area of the still-young-to-tv comics, the future of a Joey Bishop and a Dick Van Dyke, to cite but two examples, is already assured. Even now they can write their own video meal tickets. But its notably in the area of the new "romantic leads," particularly in their competitive slotting opposite the top vet personalities, that the trade (and the public) will be watching keenly for telltale evidence of the old making way for the new.

Obviously there was method in ABC's madness in pitting "Ben Casey" opposite "Beverly Hillbillies" next season, since for all the Nielsen popularity of the CBS comedy series, ABC is convinced that in terms of spelling out tv's future there's more meaning (and durable payoff) for a Vince Edwards.

However, the intriguing aspect of '63-'64 lies primarily in the NBC vs CBS shapeup—the school of NBC "romantic leads" as opposed to the "nine lives of CBS," namely the aforementioned Skelton, Gleason, Lucy, Silvers, Kaye, Benny, Thomas, Griffith and Moore. (Collectively over the years they've spelled out Fort Knox to Bill Paley & Co.; yet in spite of—or perhaps because of—their umpteenth return, there's an awareness that CBS could have a giant-size headache a year hence depending on how many survive or care to continue into '64-'65).

Meanwhile NBC is champing at the bit with its new wave of young leads who will be tossed into the competitive frays. For example, both James Franciscus ("Mr. Novak") and Richard Egan ("Redigo") will slug it out Tuesday nights vs. Skelton. (NBC points to a 1963 Study of Performer Popularity by the Home Testing Institute crediting Egan with a higher degree of popularity than nine out of 10 performers in show biz, outranking such stars as Robert Mitchum, Henry Fonda, James Cagney, Rock Hudson, Paul Newman and William Holden).

It'll be Jack Ging ("11th Hour") vs. Danny Kaye Wednesday nights; the "Richard Boone Repertory" quintet comprising Guy Stockwell, Lloyd Bochner, Warren Stevens, Bob Blake and Frank Sinatra Jr. going against Jack Benny Tuesday nights. It'll be Gary Lockwood ("The Lieutenant") vs. Jackie Gleason on Saturdays; plus Joey Bishop going opposite Phil Silvers Saturday nights.
